To Clemency he was much enclined, especially in Matters of Blood, and most especially if it were for Religion; a Virtue so much His Clemence. the more effeemed, by how much it had been lefs used before; infomuch that albeit he was most earnestly affected to that Religion wherein he had been brought up: Yet none were executed in his time for other Religion, but only two blafphemous Hereticks, Joan Butcher and George a Dutchman.

And when Joan Butcher was to be burned, all the Council could not procure him to fet his Hand to the Warrant: Wherefore they employed Thomas Cranmer, Archbifliop of Canterbury, to deal privately with him for his Subfcription. But the King remained firm both in Reason and Resolution, affirming, That he would not drive her headlong to the Devil: But because Hereticks for the most part have a Strain of Madness, he thought it best to apply her with some Corporal Chastisements, which with Respit of Time might happily reduce her to good Order. The Archbishop was violent both by Perswasions and Entreaties; and when with meer Importunity he had prevailed, the King in subscribing his Name said, That he would lay all the Charge thereof upon the Archbishop before God. Not many Years passed, but this Archbishop also felt the Smart of the Fire: And, it may be, that by his ceeded from the Goodness of his Disposition, Importunity for Blood he did offend; for a

and Diriges fung and faid every Day; Norvey each Day flanding at the Choir Door, and beginning with these Words, pronounced aleud, of your Charity, Pray for the Sml of the High and Mighty Prince, our late Severage Lard and King, HENRY VIII. February the 14th the Corps was removed, and lodged that Night at 59m, with the Mourners and Company; and the next Day arrived at Windfor: And the next Day, being Rebruary the 16th, the Corps was interred. Stephen Bishop of Windersfor preached the Sermon, on that Text, Bission are the Dead which die in the Lorde Where he declared the Frailty of Man, and the Community of Death, both to High and Low he the Lorde that all had suitained by the Death of so Gracious a King: Yet comforting them again by the Resurrection in the Live to come. And exhorted them all to rejove and give Thanks to Almighty God for having for to rowardly and vertuous a Prince to Reign after him; destring all Men to continue in Obedience and Duty: With many other Fxbortations, notably fet forth, and with great Learning.

The Corps being let down by a Vice, with the Help of 16 tall Yeomen of the Guard, the same Bishop, finding at the Head of the Vault, proceeded in the Service of the Burial; and about the tame should the Head Officers of the Houthold, as, the Lord Great Master, and after the Corps with their Staves and Rods in their Hands; and when the Mold was brought and cast into the Grave by the Prelate executing, at the Words Preton Pulvers, Construction, first the Lord Great Master, and after the Lord Chamberlain, and all the reft, brake their Staves in Shives upon their Heeds, and east them after the Corps within the Ptr, with executing Soriow and Heavineck, not without grievous Sighs and cast them after the Corps within the Pit, with exceeding Sorrow and Heavines, not without grievous Sighs and Tears.

After this finished, and De Profundis faid, and the Grave covered again with Planks, Gorter stood in the midst of the Choir, accompanied with all them of his Office in their Coats of Arms, and with a loud Voice proclaimed, Admiglery God, of his Infrast Goodney, given good Life and long to the midst light and Mighty Printe, our Severage Lord, King E. D.W.A.R.D. VI. by the Grave of G.D.D. Eng of England, France, and Ireland, Defender of the Easth, and in Earth, under G.D. of the Church of England and Ireland the supream Head, and Severagin of the miss Robble Order of the Gatte, and with that he cried, VIVE L.E.N. OB BLE R.O.Y. E.D.W.A.R.D.; and the rest of the Officers of Arms cried the same three several times after him.

Than the Transpart Sended with great Metalwand Courses, to the Confort of all them that were three.

Then the Trumpets founded with great Melody and Courage, to the Comfort of all them that were there

(k) This Verbatim from Polingfied: But both he and our Author must be warily understood here; so as not to mean that the Earl was removed from being a Privy Councellor, but from the Authority he had at the Board before: For this Earl was not removed from being a Connecllor till the 4th of the King at Conditional, when he and the Earl of Journald were both put out, as Indivigited himself writes. What the Crime of the Lord Chancellor was, and the Proceedings thereupon, may be seen at large in Bishop Purva's History of the Reformation; the Account when the Irems to have from the Council Book.

1547. good Thing is not good, if it be immoderately [poor Mens Causes, without redious Attendance Anno 1547. defired or done. (1)

His Counage did appear in the great Delight he took in Reprefentations of Battels, Skirmishes, Assaults, and of all kind of Military Mis Courage. Exercifes; his Judgment was great, either for Errors, or fine Contrivances in the Field: And no Actions of Arms were executed in his Time, but he would perfectly understand by what Advantages on the one side, or Oversights on the other, the Event succeeded. He took great Pleasure in Exercises of Activity, whereto he much trained his Servants; and to that end he often appointed Challenges among them, for Wreftling, Leaping, Running, Riding, Shooting at Rovers and at Rounds, and fuch like Games; and at Riding and Shooting would fometimes be of one of the Sides. He had 100 Archers of his ordinary Guard, who once mustering before him, shot two Arrows every Man together through an Inch Board of well-feafon'd Timber: All stroke through the Board, and their Arrows stuck in another Board behind; and divers peaced both the Boards generally. None might be of his Guard but befides of tall and comely Stature, fuch as were either good Archers or Wreftlers, or Casters of the Bar, or Leapers or Runners, or of some other Man-like Quality. He was exceeding skilful in Fortifications; and beflowed great Cost in strengthening Calais, Berwick, and other Parts thereabout. He knew all the principal Ports in England, Scotland, Ireland, France, and other Countries not far di-flant, how they lay, when the Tide ferved, what Veffels of Burthen they could receive, and what Winds ferved for Entrance.

Touching his Care and Knowledge in Affairs His Care and Touching his care was more conspicuous in Affairs of him. He was much conversant amongst his Council, and could well understand what Matters paffed their Judgments, and upon what Grounds. In Matters discoursed by them, he would often encounter their Reasons, and add most lively Reasons of his own; infomuch that at last they made an Order, That no Matters of Weight should be debated, unless he were present. Admirable he was to collect the Speeches and Opinions of many; and to draw their Differences to a true head, always bended himself rather Judiciously to resolve, than by Doubs and Diffinctions to perplex a Bufi-nefs. He had a Cheft, whereof he always carried the Key about him, for keeping Re-cord of fuch Matters as were concluded by cord of fuch Matters as were concluded by King, he should be informed by Sir Frances his Council: And embracing Business for part Bryan of the whole State of that Business, of his Solace, he appointed fet Times with and wait Opportunity to put the Emperor in Dr. Coxe, Master of his Requests, for speeding Remembrance, That it had been covenanced or Delay. Of all the Magistrates, Justices, and Gendemen of Sort, within his Realm, he knew their Names, their Housekeeping, their Religion, and Manner of Life. He was skilful in the Exchange beyond the Seas, and in all the Circumstances and Practices thereof; and so was he both skilful and provident in Matters of the Mint at home. To Ambassadors he would give Answer upon the suddain. and touch both orderly and fully upon every Part of their Orations, to the Delight and Admiration of all the Hearers. He much frequented Sermons, and penned Notes with his own Hand; his Notes he cypher'd with Greek Characters, to the end that they who waited on him should not read them. His Disports His Sports, were ingenuous and man-like, whereby he always learned fomewhat. And yet, as well from these as his Businesses of State, he daily referved some Hours for his private Studies and His Studies. Exercifes with his Teachers. These Endeavours fell upon fo excellent a Capacity, that in every fhort Distance of Time he made incredible Encrease both in Learning and Experience of Affairs, and confequently in Love of all Men.

Prefuntly after that he was fettled in his Go-Dr. Wotton vernment, Dr. Wotton the King's Ambaffader, Ambaffader Refident with the Queen Dowager of Hung-ry, with the Em-Regent of the Low Countries under the Em-Parer. peror, was discharged of that Attendance, and addressed to the Emperor's Court, there to reside Ambassador for the King, instead of Dr. Bonner Bishop of London and of Sir Franch Bryan, who were called home. He was furnished with Instructions, that being sirst His Instructions informed from the former Ambaifadors, as well #ions of the general State of the Emperor's Court, as of fuch particular Intelligences as might ferve to advance the King's Intentions, he should deal with the Emperor to declare all Scots for his Enemies, except fuch as should be Friends to the King, which should appear by his safe Conduct: That because it had been agreed between the Emperor and the late King of England, that the Year next enfuing they fhould with Joint-Forces, invade the Territories of the French King, he should move the Emperor to advise of some Order and Form for those Proceedings: That whereas the Duke of Lorrain had been late before at the Emperor's Court, and made fome Overture for Peace or Truce between the Emperor and the French

between

⁽¹⁾ This fevere Charge laid upon Archbifthop Crommer, a good Man, whether it be true or not, I cannot tell. The King mentioneth nothing of it in his Journal, only that Josh was burnt for her Oblinacy in her Herefy: And the Character here given to the Archbifthop is utterly disgreeing to his Temper: For none was more tender of Blood than he; none more pitful and compatitionate: Nor was he a Man of rigorous Methods and violent Courles. Indeed Rx mentions, that the Council put Grommer upon moving the King to fign the Warrant; which was a Sign he had no great Forwardnets to it himself: And, in Obedience to them, he did labour with the King about it, and obtained it. And though he did this, it neither argued Fielmer, nor Imperiantly for Blood: For as he was not prefent at her Condemnation, as appears by the Council Book; for may be concluded thence to have no Defire of this Perfon's Death. And it was needful at this time, that Proteflants should shew that they were no Friends to Herefy; which, it is likely might have confirmed the Papils to believe they were, if at this Junctive the chief Prelar and Patron of the Proteflant Religion should have shewn any Partiality towards such an Heretick. And the Archbifthey's Thoughts, I am apt to be believe, were, that this Fear of Death which this Woman side to near, when the Warrant was figned for her Execution, might serve to reclaim her from her Error, though his and other Learned, Mens Redonings with her, being both ignorant and obthinate, were ineffectual. This seemed fire horted here, to vindicate the Chief Instrument of our Reformation, against our Author's Pen. who bore no Good-will to Churchmen.

The King on-

Treaty with Preparation

Scotland

MARY

STEW-

Herrefs of Scotland.

ART

tertains a

France.

neither of them should treat of Peace or Truce with the French King, or any other common Enemy, without Confent of the other; and that the King of England had well observed that Article, in refuling to give ear to the French Ambassador making Overture for such a Treaty: That whereas it had been agreed between him and the King of England, that either of them should send certain Ships to Sea, well mann'd and apparell'd for Fight, which all that Year had been performed by the King, whereas the Emperor shifted the Default upon his Officers; in case he should not cause the faid Navy to be forthwith furnished, he should wait Occasion to solicite the same. Laftly, That he should carry a nimble Ear, as well touching any Variation in all these Mat-ters, as for other Occurrencies in France, Spain, Italy, Almain, and thereof advertise the King.

But notwithstanding all these Cautions and Preventions of Peace or Truce between the Emperor and the French, the King of England finding the Emperor flow in his Performances, and much fuspecting his secret Ends, enter-English upon the French, or by the French upon the English, fince the Beginning of that Treaty, should be freely discharged. And albeit the English had great Advantage in Value of Reprilats, as being always both more firong and active at Sea; yet the King by his Proclamation commanded, that forthwith Reslitution fhould be made.

Hosfility being thus suspended with France, for War with Preparation was made for Wars against Scotland, the Occasion whereof did thus arise:

MARY STEWART, fole Daughter and

Heir to Fames V. King of Scots, began her Reign over the Realm of Seviland upon the 18th of December, 1542, being then not above 7 Days old, so as the Sun no sooner almost faw her an Infant, than a Queen; and no fooner was fhe a Queen, but fhe was defired of Henry, then King of England, to be affured in Marriage to Prince Edward his only Son, being then not much above 6 Years of Age. Upon this Overture the Governor of Scotland affembled the Nobility of the Realm at Edinburgh, where, after much Debatement of the Commodities or Discommodities like to ensue, they concluded in the End, That in March then next enfuing a Parliament should be held, to give Perfection and Form to that Bufiness.

In the mean time Sir Ralph Sadler Kt. was fent Ambaffador from England to the Governor and other Lords of Scotland, who followed his Charge with fo good Diligence and Advice, that in the fame Parliament Authority was given to William Earl of Glancorne, Sir George Douglasse, Sir William Hamilton, Sir James Leirmenth, Kts. and to one of the Secretaries of State, to conclude this Marriage. These Commissioners came into End of mith when the missioners came into England, with whom be-fore the End of July, the same Year, all Covenants were concluded, Instruments of the Contract of Marriage interchangeably sealed and fworn, and a Peace established for Ten Qualities to be joined in Marriage, and there-Years, which Time expired, both the Prince by to knit both Realms into one: That this

1547 between him and the King of England, that I and the Queen should be of Age to con-4mm 1547

The French King all this Time was fo enter- practices of tained with Wars against the Emperor, that he the French had no Sense of these Proceedings; but when with Scorhe underflood that these Agreements were land against passed as well for Marriage as for Peace, he the English. bent his best Endeavour to dissolve them both: First with Intention to impeach both the Greatness and Strength of the English Nation; after with Defire to win this Marriage for Francis, who afterwards was King of France. To this purpose the French King sent for Matthew Earl of Levenox, who then ferved under his Pay in Italy and furnished him with Money, Forces, and Friends; and, above all, with many Encouragements to take upon him bravely the Honour of his House and Ancestors, to remove the Earl of Arran from the Regency of Scotland, and to reverse such Pactions as he had made. The Earl at his first Arrival in Scotland was joyfully received, as a Man most engaged in Domestical Factions. He always used Courtely and Modesty disliked of none, fomerimes Sociableness and Fellowship well liked by matained a Treaty of Peace with France, but fe-cretly and afar off, and to be governed as Oc-and well reputed by Strangers: In Favour of creary and and on, and to egove he were from the Pope for the Patriarch of Apulia his Agreement was made, That all Ships and Legate into Scarland, who, in the Pope SName, Goods which had been furprifed at Sea by the did faithfully affure, That both Forces and Money should be fent into Scotland to resist the England. He drew the greatest of the Clergy on his fide, who were most powerful to draw on others. On the other fide, the King was no regligent to support his Parry with Sup-plies, whereby great Troubles ensued in Sect-land, which fell not within the Times that I have in hand.

In the End the Earl of Arran abandoned the King of England, and applied himfelf only to the French; by reason whereof the Regency was confirmed to him, which otherwise he had been upon Adventure to lofe. And as the Earl of Arran did forfake the English, and adjoin to the French; fo the Earl of Levenex, being forfaken by the French, applied his Service wholly to the English, which did not only continue, but much encreafe, the Calamities of Sectland, during the Time of King Hemry's Reign. King Hemry, at the Time of his Death, gave a special Charge to the Lords of his Council, That they should omit no Endeavours, whereby the faid Marriage might be procured to take Effect: Herenpon they pursued this Quarrel in the fame State that the King left it. But before they attempted any thing by Arms, the Lord Protector affailed the Scotch The Prote. Nobility with a friendly Letter; herein he re- ar's Letter membred them of the Promifes, Seals and to the Scotch Oaths, which by publick Authority had paffed Natility. for concluding this Marriage, That these being Religious Bonds betwirt God and their Souls, could not by any politick Act of State be diffolved, until their Queen should attain unto Years of Dissent. He farther added, unto Years of Diffent. He farther added, That the Providence of God did then mani-felly declare it felf, in that the Male Princes of Scotland failing, the Kingdom was left to a Daughter, and in that King Henry left only one Son to succeed: That these two Princes were agreable both for Years and Princely

Union

Sadler fen Ambaffador 1547. Union, as it was like to be both eafily done, and of firm Continuance, fo would it be both profitable and honourable to both the Realms: That both the Easiness and Firmness might be conjectured, for that both People are of the fame Language, of like Habit and Fashion, of like Quality and Condition of Life, of one Climate, not only annexed entirely together, but fevered from all the World befides: For as these are sure Arguments, that both descended from one Original, and had been under one Government, fo (by reason that Likeness is a great Cause of Liking, and of Love) they would be most forcible Means both to join and to hold them in one Body again: That the Profit would rife by extinguishing Wars between the Two Nations; by reason whereof, in former Times, Victories abroad have been impeached; Invasions and Seditions ocea-sioned; the Confines of both Realms laid wafte, or else made a Nursery of Rapines, Robbers and Murthers; the inner Parts often deeply pierced, and made a werched Specta-cle to all Eyes of Humanity and Pity: That the Honour of both Realms would encrease, as well in regard of the Country's sufficient to furnish, not only the Necessicies, but the moto furnish, not only the Necessics, but the inderate Pleasures of this Life; as also of the People, great in Multitude, in Bodies able, affured in Mind, not only for the Safety, but the Glory of their Common State: That hereby would follow, Affurance of Defence, Strength to Enterprise, Ease in sustaining publick Burthens and Charge: That herein the English defired no Preheminence, but offered Equality both in Liberty and Privilege, and in Capacity of Offices and Employments; and to that end, the Name of Britains should be affumed indifferent to both Nations: That this would be the Accomplishment of their common Felicity, in case by their evil, either Defliny or Advice, they fuffered not the Occasion to be loft.

The Authority and Reasons of this Letter weighed much with Persons of most weighty Judgments; but others more powerful in that State, partly upon vain Hope, in regard of the young Years of the King, partly upon Fear of Alteracion in Religion, and partly in favour of their ancient Amity with the French; and doubting to be brought under by the English, were altogether carried another way: Yet they dispatched an Ambassador into England; but neither was any thing done, neither do I find what was propounded to have

tween the

Hereupon divers Hostilities began to be Histilities bepractifed; and first, a small Ship of the King's. Two Nations. called the Penfy, hovering at Sea, was affailed by the Lyon, a principal Ship of Scotland. The Fight began afar off and flow; but when they approached, it grew very furious, wherein the lat Solome Mosse, whereof divers of the Social Pensy so Oar-loop was broken, her Sails and next after, he and the Earl of Warwick, with Tacklings torn; and lastly, she was boarded Anno 1547 and taken: But as fhe was brought for England, fhe was cast away by Tempest and Negligence near Harwich Haven, and most of her Men perished with her. I would not have stay'd upon this finall Adventure, but that it feemed a Prefage to the succeeding War, wherein the English acquired a glorious Victory, but lost the Fruit thereof, by reason of their stormy Disorders at home.

Many fuch finall Actions were enterprifed Preparations daily, which were but scattering Drops in re-against Scotgard of the great Tempest which did ensue: land. For in the mean Season an Army was prepaand Command of Scotland, under the Fortune and Command of the Lord Protector. The Soldiers first affembled at Newcastle, and were there mustered by the Earl of Warwick. Here they fojourned three Days, in which time the King's Fleet arrived, confifting of 65 Bortoms, whereof one Galley and 34 tall ships were well appointed for Fight; the refidue ferved for Carriage of Ammunition and Victuals. Of this Fleet, Edward Lord Clinton was Admiral, and Sir William Woodbousehis Vice-Admiral: In this Time also a general Muster was taken, and Order appointed for the March.

In the whole Army were between 12 and 13000 Foot, 1300 Men at Arms, 2800 Light Horfe, being fuch Men for their goodly Perfonages, their ready Horfes, their brave Apparel, their Armour and Weapons, as never before was an Army fet forth into those Parts in all Points better appointed. The Lord Protector, being General, represented the Person and Majesty of the King: The Earl of Warwick was Lieutenant-General; the Lord Gray of Wilton was Marshal of the Field, and Captain-General of the Horsemen; Sir Ralph Vane Lieutenant of all the Men at Arms and Dimilances; Sir Ralph Sadler was General Treasurer: Other Gentlemen had their particular Charges. But upon the General, and the Earl of Warwick, both the Hopes and the Hazards of the main Adventure did wholly turn. And because much shall be faid of these two hereafter, because during the Reign of King Edward they were the principal Actors in every Scene, I will briefly declare both what Perfons and of what Demerits at that time they

Edward Seymer, Duke of Somerset, Lord Ge-Edward neral, was a Man little efteemed either for Wif- Duke of Sodom or Personage, or Courage in Arms: (m) merset's Character. But being in Favour with King Henry, and by him much employed, was always observed to be bothFaithful and Fortunate, as well in giving Advice, as in managing a Charge. About 5 Years before, he being Warden of the Marches against Scotland, the Invasion of James V. was by his Direction encountred and broken

(m) The Wrong the Author hath done the Name of this Good Duke (for so was he commonly fill'd) to Posterity, is intersperfed through his Book: Bur he that shall but read forward through this Paragraph, where these under-valuing Words are bestow'd upon the Duke, will find the Author in a great measure conturing himself. Hat there not been an Opinion in the Nobility and Great Men of the Court, of the Duke's Parts and Abilities, his Wildom and Courage, they would never have consented, that he should have been not only Governor of the King's Person, and Protector of his Realms, but Lieutenant-General of his Armies both by Sea and Land, and Lord High Treasurer and Earl-Marshal of England, and Governor of the Isles of Guernsty and Jersty.

ders, wasted Trechale and the Marches, and deformed the Country with Ruin and Spoil. The Year then next following, being appointed to view the Fortifications upon the Marches of Calais, he not only did that, but with hearty Approach of 7000 English Men, raifed an Array of 21000 French, encamped over the River before Bulleine, won their Oct. over the River before Bulleine, won their Ord-nance, Carriage, Treasure, and Tents, with the Loss only of one Man, and returned from the Lols only of one Man, and returned from thence by Land to Guefuer, won in his Way, within Shot and Refene of Arde, the Caffle of Outing, commonly called the Red Pile. The Year next enfuing this he invaded and fpoiled Pieurdy, began the Forces of Newbaven, Blackness, and Bullinberge, and so well applied his Endeavours, that in a few Weeks, and before his Departure, they were made tenable: Upon these and other like Successes his succeeding Fortunes were efteemed always rather new than ftrange, and his only Presence was reputed a fufficient Surety for an Army; and yet did he never rife hereby, either into Haughtiness in himfelf, or Contempt of others, but remained Courteous and Affable, choosing a Course least subject to Envy, between stiff Stubborness and filthy Flattery, never afpiring higher than to be the fecond Perfon in State.

Chareller of John Dudley, Earl of Warwick, was a Man Dudley of ancient Nobility, comely in Stature and Earl of War Countenance, but of little Gravity or Absti-mence in Pleasures, yea, sometimes almost disfolute, which was not much regarded, if in a time when Vices began to grow into Fashion, a great Man was not over fevere. He was of a great Spirit, and highly aspiring, not for-bearing to make any Mischief the Means of attaining his ambitious Ends. Hereto his good Wit and pleafant Speeches were altogether fer-viceable, having the Art alfo, by empty Pro-mifes and Threats, to draw others to his Purpose: In Matters of Arms he was both skilful and industrious, and as well in Foresight as Refolution present and great. Being made Lord Lieutenant of Bulloine, when it was first taken by the English, the Walls fore beaten and taken, and in very Truth scarce maintainable, he defended the Place against the Dauphin, whose Army was accounted to confift of 52000 Men: And when the Dauphin had entred the base Town, not without Slaughter of divers of the English, by a brave Sally, he caft out the French English, by a brave Sally, he caft out the French English, by a brave Sally, he caft out the French English, by a brave Sally, he caft out the French English E Town, not without Slaughter of divers of the he atchieved with Honour, which made him as to give good Contentment to all the Soldiers. These also were of good Confidence and Chear, as well out of their own Courage, as for the Skill, Valour, and Fortune, of their Commanders. And first, every Soldier was commanded to take with him Provision for four Days, and fo were let out of Berwick, and encamped about two flight Shoot off the Town upon the Sea-fide towards Scotland. The Lord Clinton also put to Sea with his Fleet, always holding his Course with the Army, to relieve them if need should require. Here Proclamation was made in three Parts of the Field, declaring the Caufes of his Journey. and offering not only Peace, but Love and Rewards,to all fuch as would either advance or favour the Marriage between the two Princes. Hereof it was conceived, that the Scott had good Intelligence, having fome Factors, doubtless, at this Mart; albeit, (as Wisdom was) they did not openly Trade.

The next day they began to march, wherein the Lord Gray and Sir Francis Bryan led about 800 Light-Horsemen as a Scout a Mile or two before the Army, as well to give Adver-tifement of Appearance or Approach of Enemies, as to provide Lodging both Commodious and Safe. Sir Francis Bryan was fo regardful of his Charge, as he never disposed any Matter of Weight, but first he acquainted the General therewith; neither did he at any time forfake his Saddle, until the Army were quar-tered, and feated in fuch Order, as, if any Alarm fhould be given, the Horfe-men might iffue forth without diffurbance of the Foot, and the Avant-guard without shuffling with the Battail or Arrier; next to the Light Horse-men followed the Avaunt-guard, in number between 3 and 4000 Foot, 100 Men at Arms, and 600 Light Horse-men, led by the Earl of Warwick. The Battel followed, consisting of about 6000 Foot, 600 Men at Arms, and about 1000 Light Horse-men, conducted by the Lord General himself. Lastly, followed the Arrier, wherein were between 3 and 4000 Foot, 100

lish Army enter Scot-

In this order, both beautiful and firm, they borough, with convenient provision of Victuals march'd two days using no Hostility, left Peace with them.

The fe-Hercupon they flock'd to the place in 65 cond day they arriv'd at a place call'd the Peathes, a Valley firstehing towards the Sea fix Miles in length, about twenty score in breadth above, and five score in the bottom, wherein runs a little River. The Banks are fo steep on either side, that the Passage is not direct, but by Paths leading slopewise; which being many, the Place is thereupon call'd the Peathes. It was given forth in the Army, that here the Scots prepar'd to refift them: howbeit no Forces appear'd, only the Paths were cut in divers places with traverse Trenches, which much encumbred the Carriages till the Pioneers had level'd them again; assuredly a small Power join'd to the advantage of the Place might have troubled the English very much: For albeit no Resistance was made, yet the English had much to do in furmounting the natural Difficulties of the Place the greatest part of one day.

Passage being made, the General summon'd three Caftles that were near; one desperate of Succour, and not defirous to difpute the Defence, prefently yielded; but two flood upon their Adventure. So the Cannon was planted, a Breach made, and the Place enter'd: but then the Moderation of the General was both unufual and unexpected, in fparing the Defendants Lives; for it hath been a long observ'd Law of the Field, That if a Small Company, of better Courage than Judgment, will, contrary to all military Discipline, maintain a scelle Place a-gainst Royal Forces; if they will offer to impeach the Purposes of an Army, which they have no rea-fon to think themselves able to resist, after Batjon to think themselves aute to rejot, after Bat-tery presented, they put themselves out of all ordi-nary expectation of Mercy: And so Cesar an-swer'd the Adviatici, Civitatem conservaturium, si priusquam aries murum attigisset se dedissent. And so the Duke d' Alva much blam'd Prosper Columnus for receiving a Castle upon Conditions, after he had beaten it with the Can-And in this Cafe I conceive the Law of non.

Deut. 20. God to be understood, which spareth not those Citys that will not yield until they be be-fieg'd; meaning doubtlefs, when the Defendants have little reason to think themselves able to made defence. I will not involve in filence with what a fudden Stratagem of Wit, the Defendants of one of these Places escap'd Extremities: when they understood both that they were not able to defend themselves, and that their Obfinacy had excluded all hope of they made Petition that they might not prefently be flain, but have some time to recommend their Souls to God, and afterwards be hang'd: This Respit being first obtain'd, their Pardon did more cafily enfue.

Upon the first News of the Approaches of the English, and all Truths enlarg'd by Report, refill the the Governor of Scotland was somewhat ap-English at paled, as neither furnish'd at that time with rough Foreign Aid, nor much trusting his Forces at Firecrofs. home: yet refuming his accustom'd Courage, well acquainted with both Fortunes, he fent his Heralds through all parts of the Realm, and commanded the Fire-crofs to be carried (an antient Custom in cases of Importance) namely, two Fire-brands fet in fashion of a Crofs, and pitch'd upon the point of a Spear; therewith Proclamation to be made, that all Men above fixteen Years of Age, and under fixty, fhould refort forthwith to Mufcle-great Multitudes, that it was thought fit not only to flay further Refort, but making choice of the most serviceable, to discharge divers of the reft.

Now as the English directed their way towards the Place where they understood the Scots affembled, they came to a River call'd Lynne, crofs'd with a Bridg of Stone. Horfemen and Carriages pass'd through the Water, the Footmen over the Bridg, which because it was narrow, the Army was long in fetting over: The Avaunt-guard marched forth, and the Battail follow'd; but as the Arrier was passing over, a very thick Mist did arise. The Earl of Warmick having before efpy'd certain plumps of Scottijh Horkmen ranging the Field, return'd towards the Ar-rier to prevent fuch Danger as the thickness of the Mift, the nearness of the Enemy, and the Difarray occasion'd by the narrowness of the Bridg might cast upon them. The Scots conjecturing (as it was) that some Personage of Honour Staid to have a view of the Arrier, call'd to the English to know if any Noble-man were near, for that one whom they nam'd (well known to be of honourable Condition) would prefent himfelf to the General in case he might fafely be conducted. Certain young Soldiers not us'd to fuch Trains, made rash and fudden answer, that the Earl of Warrick was near, under whose Protection he might be affur'd. Hereupon they pass'd the Water, placed two hundred of their Prickers behind a Hillock, and with forty more cast about to find the Earl. Now the Earl espying fix or feven of them fcatter'd near the Army, and taking them to be of the English, fent one to command them to their Array, and to that end himfelf rode an eafy pace towards them, follow'd only with ten or twelve on Horfeback: He that had been fent before was fo heedlefs, either to observe or advertise what they were, that the Earl did not discover them to be Enemies until he was in the mid'st among Certainly a Commander should not carelesty cast himself into danger; but when either upon necoffery or misadventure he falleth into it, it much advanceth both his Reputation and Enterprife if bravely he behave himfelf. Now the Earl effying where he was, gave fo rude a Charge upon a Captain of the Seets, nam'd Dandy Care, that he forc'd him to turn, and chafed him above twelve fcore at the Lance's point. Herewith the refidue retir'd deceitfully towards the place of their Ambush, from whence issued about fixty more. Then the Earl gather'd his fmall Company about him, and with good Countenance maintain'd the Fight. But the Enemy in the end, whether perceiving fome Succours advancing from the Army where the Alarm was then taken, or whether intending to draw the English further into their Ambush, turn'd away an easy pace. The Earl forbad his Men from following, fearing a greater Ambush behind the Hill, as in truth there was-At his return he was receiv'd with great Ap plause by the English Soldiers, for that he did so well acquit lumfels in the Danger, whereinto by Error and not by Rashness he had been carry'd. One of his Men was flain, another hurt in the Buttock, a third nam'd Vine for grievously hewn, that many thousands have the Scots three were taken Prisoners and prefented to the General by the Earl, of whom one had receiv'd many great Entertainments and Courtefies in England.

Cæf. 2. Gallic Conest.5.

The Scots

I may happily be thought tedious in fetting down these Occurrences which may seem small. But besides that in Actions of Arms small Matters are many times of very great Moment, especially when they serve to raise an opinion of Commanders, I intend to describe this Battel fully, not to derogate thereby any thing from the one Nation, or to arrogate to the trom the one Nation, or to arrogate to the Audience the Herald began, That he was fear other. For what Honour rifeth upon event from the Lord Governor of Scotland parity to of a Battel, when oftentimes the smallest inquire of Prisoners, but chiefly to make Offer, Accident overthroweth a side; and when that because he was destrous to avoid not only Pro-Victory doth more often fall, by Errour of the suspense he was destrous to avoid not only Pro-Victory doth more often fall, by Errour of the suspense has the least Essistant of Christian Blood, and vanquished than by Valour of the victorious. For that the English had not done on y unmanishe But my Purpose is to make it appear what Ourrage or Spoil, bewas content they might return, " Miferies both Nations have avoided, and " what Quietness and Security they have at-" tain'd by their peaceable Union, when as " either of them being able to bring such For-" ces into the Field for their mutual Ruin, " they may now do the like for their common "cither Glory or Necessity. Again, this Bat-tel being partially describ'd heretofore by the Writers of either Nation, and not without uncivil Terms, I will now fet it forth as in-differently and fairly as I can. Lastly, this Battel is not flightly to be flip'd over, being the laft (wherein I pray that I may prophefy truly) that was or ever shall be struck between the two Nations. But I return to my Purpofe.

A Fight at

Now the Scottish Horsemen began to hover Salt-Pref much upon the English Army, and to come pricking about them fometimes within the length of their staves, using some Liberty of Language to draw the English from their strength. But the General of the English knowing right well, that the Scots were expert in tumultuous Fights, reftrain'd his Horse from falling forth, and maintain'd a close March until they came to Salt Preston by the Frith. Here they incamp'd within View of the Scottish Army, little more than two Miles distant from them. About a Mile from the English another way, the Scottish Horsemen were very bufy upon a Hill, and embolden'd much partly upon their former Approaches, and partly by the nearners of their Army, but chiefly upon an Opinion which they concciv'd, that the English Horsemen were young and unskilful, and easy to be dealt with, came upon the English with increas'd Troops, to the Number of 1200 belides 500 Foot which lay in ambush behind the Hill. The Lord Gray and Sir Francis Brian impatient of Braveries obtain'd leave of the General a little to affay them; and fo as they came featter'd upon the fpur within a stones cast of the English and were beginning to wheel about, the Lord Gray with some Troops of Lighthorsemen charg'd them home. These were forthwith seconded by certain numbers of Demilances, and both back'd with about a thousand Men at Arms. The Scots meant not to depart before they had done their Errand; wherefore turning their Faces, boildly maintain'd the Fight, three Hours and more. In the end overlaid with Numbers they were put to flight, and chas'd almost to the Edge of their Camp: in this Fight the a great Charge in the Army, which upon a private chiefest Force of the Scottiff Horsemen was Man's Challenge you must not abandon. But, He-1547. dy'dof less than half his Hurts, whereof not- wards. The Lord Hume by a fall from his 1547 withstanding, he was cur'd afterwards. Of Horse lost his Life. His Son and Heir with two Priests and fix Gentlemen were taken Prifoners, and about 1300 flain. Of the English one Spanish Hackbutter was hurt, and three Captains of the Light-horse, by unadvis'd Purfuit, were taken Prifoners.

The day next following the Lord General A Herald and the Earl of Warnick rode towards the fent from Place where the Sectific Army lay to view the the Scots. Place where the Scottish Army lay, to view the manner of their encamping: as they were return'd an Herald and a Trumpeter from the Scots overtook them, and having obtain'd Audience the Herald began, That he was fent

Outrage or Spoil, he was content they might return, and fhould have his fafe Conduct for their peaceable Paffage.

Then the Trumpeter, that the Lord Humly L.Hundley his Mafter fent Meslage by him, that as well challengesh for brief Expedition, as to spare Expence of the finish. Christian Blood, he would fight upon the whole peter. Quarrel either with 20 against 20, or with 10 against 10, or more particularly by fingle Combate between the Lord General and himfelf; which in regard the Scots had Advantage both for Number and Freshness of Men, in regard also that for Supply, both for Provision and Succors they were at home, he esteem'd an honourable and charitable Offer.

To the Herald the Lord General answer'd, The Lord That as his coming was not with Purpose or Desire General's to endamage their Reading, as he was there, he the He-would neither intrest nor accept of him leave to rath, &c. depart, but would measure his Marches in advancing or retiring, as his own Judgment, guided by Advice of his Council, should deem expedient.

To the Trumpeter he return'd answer, That To the the Lord Huntley his Mafter was a young Gentle-Trumpeter. man full of free Courage, but more desirous of Glory than Judicious, as it seem'd, how to win it. That for number of Combatants it was not in his Power to conclude a Bargain, but was to employ all the Forces put under his Charge to the best Advan-tage that he could: that in case this were a particular Quarrel between the Governour and him, he would not refuse a particular Combate, but being a difference between the two Kingdoms, it was neither fit, nor in his Power either to undertake the Adventure upon his own Fortune, or bearing a publick Charge to hazard himself against a Man of private Condition.

Then the Earl of Warwick faid, I marvel, Trumpeter, that thy Master would make his Challenge so fond, as he might well know it could not be accepted. For tell me, Trumpeter, can he think it ft, that he, to whose Charge is committed the Command of all this Army abroad, and at home the King's Person and Protection of all his Realms, should undertake a Combate with a particular Man? But he might have found others his equals amongst us, by whom he might have been afford that he foodd be answer'd. And (therewith turning his Speech to the Lord General) under your Grace's favour, Laccept the Challenge. And bring me word, Trumpeter, that thy Maffer will perform with me as thou haft faid, and thou shalt have a thouland Cowns for thy Travel.

Nay, answer'd the Lord General, you have defeated, to their great Disadvantage after- rald, tell the Lord Governor, and the Lord Huntley, 1547. That we have entred your Country with a fober Company (for so the Scots term a thing that is mean) your Army is both great and fresh, but let them appear upon indifferent ground, and afforedly they shall have fighting enough. And bring me word, Herald, that they will so do, and I will reward thee with a thousand Crowns.

This Earl of Huntley was a Man young, bold, adventurous, of very good Resolution and Skill in Arms. But this Challenge was so far beyond the Point both of Discretion and Honour, that the English that knew his noble Spirit, did believe that his Name was therein abus'd, which he manifested to be true by difavowing it openly afterwards. For it is not fit that a Man should abandon his publick Charge to undertake both the Office and Danger of a private Soldier. And therefore the like Challenge of Tullus was refus'd by the Commander of the Albanes, for that the Contention was not between their Perfons, but between the Cities of Alba and Rome. So Sertorius Was refus'd by Metellus, Antonius by Augustus, and John Emperor of Constantinople by a King of Seythia: fo Antonius Caracalla by reason of his often Challenges, was esteem'd not to be so valiant as vain. And hereupon the Histories of our times forbear not to blame Charles the Fifth, Emperor, Henry the Eighth, King of England, and Francis the First, King of France, for that they often adventur'd rather as Soldiers than as Commanders.

But doubtless the Lord Governor made a most honourable Offer, and the rather for that it was conceiv'd by the English, that he held himself no less assur'd of Victory than he was of his own Refolution to fight, whereto it feem'd that he wanted not good Reafon, chiefly upon Confidence of his own Forces, and partly upon Expectation of twelve Gallies and fifty Ships well appointed out of France to affail the English at their backs. All the chief Captains yielded to the same Advice of giving Battel, as out of their own Judgments, because they faw it agreeable to that which the Lord Go-vernor had determin'd. To these the Residue attributed fo much, that albeit diverse were of a different Opinion, yet they chose rather to condemn their own Understanding than to question theirs. During this Enterparlance the Scots dif-

charg'd four great shots against the English Camp, without harm as it happen'd, but not without breach of the Laws of the Field. whereby not only publick Messengers are pri-' viledg'd to pass without either Danger or ' Scorn, but until they have discharg'd their The Gene- Meilage all hoftility should furcease. How-ral of the foever this happen'd the General of the Englishin & English Army unwilling to be behind in any Mellage to equal or honourable Offer, fent Letters to the Scotch the Lord Governor of Scotland: Wherein ' Nobility to confider, That both Armies confided of Christians, to whom nothing fnould be more dear than Peace, nothing more detestable than Essusion of humans 6 Blood. That the Caufe of this War did not proceed from Ambition, Avarice, or Hate, but from defire of perpetual Peace between their People and Nations, which could no way fo firmly be knit as by knitting was fuch a Marriage for their Queen, that a 1547 more convenient could not be found; that in case all the Nobility of Scotland were not of one Mind, the English would be content that their Queen should be brought up amongst them, until fhe should be of Age to make her own choice; provided that in the mean time fhe should not be transported to any foreign Country, or any Agreement made for any other Marriage. That upon this Condition there should be an Abstinence of Hostility for all that time; and they would in quiet manner withdraw their Army, and repair all Damages which indifferent Commissioners should adjudg.

No Answer was hereto return'd, but Rumors ran freshly among the Scottish Soldiers, that the Intention of the English was to take away their Queen by force, and under pretence of Marriage to reduce the Kingdom under their Dominion: and verily it may feem almost incredible that all thefe fair Overtures, made by Men well efteem'd for honest dealing, could take no place; that nothing could move the Scots to forfake their diffant and heavy helps, and to embrace Friends, both ready and at hand. But besides that the long continu'd Wars between the English and the Scots, had then rais'd invincible Jealousies and Hate, which long continu'd Peace had since abolish'd, I do herein admire the unfearchable working and will of God, by whose inflexible Decree the Union between the two Realms did not then take effect, when by the Death of King Edward it should have been of short continuance (as by the Death of Francis the Second, the Union between France and Scotland did fuddenly diffolve) but was referv'd unto a more peaceable and friendly time, fo for a Perfon in whole Progeny it hath taken deep and durable root. And fo for that time no Conditions of Peace being regarded, both fides address'd themselves to their Adven-

The Places where the two Armies lay en- The places camp'd, were divided by the River Eske, the of the two Banks whereof were almost as deep as the Banks of the Peathes mention'd before. Scots lay fomewhat near the one fide, and the English about two miles from the other. The English first rais'd their Camp, and began to march towards the River Eske, intending to posless a Hill call'd Onder-Eske, which commanded the Place where their Enemies lay. The Seess conjecturing so much, cast their Tents stat upon the ground, pass'd the River and mounted the Hill before the English could come near. Hereupon the English turn'd aside to another Hill call'd Pinkenclench, which afterwards fell much to their Advantage, as well for that they were then in Place to be aided by their Ships which rode near in Edinburg Prith, as also for that they gain'd thereby the Advantage both of Wind and Sun, a great part of the strength of an Army, and lastly for that their Enemies were thereby cast into a cruel Errour.

For no fooner did they espy the English turning from them, but forthwith they were of Opinion that they fled towards their ship-ving. This furmife was first occasion'd for that the English Ships remov'd the day before from their Princes together in Marriage. That Leib to Andleleborough Frih, which was con-emany other respects set aside, their King, for his Birth, his Years, his Royal Estate, his riages, that the Horsemen might with less " Princely Perfonage, Education, and Qualities, incumbrance and more halt return back upon Vol. II.

154-. the fpur. Hercupon they had appointed the encreas'd the Fear) to have given a Camifado upon the English. But understanding that they were well entrench'd, having good Scouts abroad, and fure Watch within, they brake that purpose; but upon this declining of the English from them, the Conceit did again revive, not only as a thing defir'd, but because the English were inferior to them in number, and had travel'd far, and were well known to grow thort in their Provisions. Yea when they were difcern'd to make fland upon the first afcent of Pinkencleach Hill, the Conjecture ran that their Flight was only defer'd, until they might cover their Diforders, by the dead Darkness of the Night. Marvellous Security and always dangerous, when Men will not believe any Bees to be in a Hive, until they have a sharp Tenfe of their Stings.

And thus the Scors heav'd up into high hope of Victory, took the English fallen, for foolish Birds fallen into their Net; and feeming to fear nothing more than that they should escape, for look their Hill and march'd into the Plain, directly towards the English. Here the Lord Governow put them in remem-brance, how they could never yet be brought under by the English, but were always able either to beat them back, or to weary them away. He bid them look upon themselves and upon their Enemies, themselves dreadful, their Enemies gorgeous and brave; on their side, Men, on the o-ther, Spoil, in case either through Slowness or Cowardice, they did not permit them to escape, who (lo now) already have began their Fight.

The whole Army confifted of 35 or 36000 Men, of whom they made three Batta-lions. In the Vanguard commanded by the Earl of Angus, about 15000 were plac'd, about 10000 in the Battail, over whom was the Lord Governour, and fo many in the Rear, led by the valiant Gordone Earl of Huntley. Hackbutters they had none, no Men at Arms but about 2000 Horsemen, Prickers as they are term'd, fitter to make Excursions and to chafe, than to fuftain any strong Charge. The residue were on Foot well furnish'd, with Jack and Skull, Pike, Dagger, Bucklers made of Board, and Skill, Fisc, Dagger, Dackers Hade of Board, and Slicing Swords, broad, thin and of an excellent Temper. Every Man had a large Kerchief folded twice or thrice about the Neck, and many of them had Chains of Latten, drawn three or four times along their Hofes and doublet Sleeves; they had also to affright the Enemies Horses, big Rattles cover'd with Parchment or Paper, and fmall Stones within, put upon Staves about three Ells long. But doubtlefs the rattling of Shot might have done better Service.

The Earl of Angus led the Vanguard with a well meafur'd march; whereupon the Lord Governour commanded him by a Messenger to double his Pace, thereby to firike fome Terror into the Enemy. Himfelf follow'd with the Battail a good distance behind, and after came them on head. the Rear well nigh even with the Battail on the left fide: the Vanguard was flank'd on the right fide with four or five Pieces of Artillery drawn by Men, and with 400 Horfemen Prickers on the lift. The Battail and Rear were likewife guarded with Artillery, in like fort drawn; and about 4000 Irith Archers, brought by the Earl of Argyle, ferr'd as a traverse, so as the English must cross them in Wing to them both, rightly to term'd as be-presenting the Charge. Two other disadvaning the fuft who began the Flight.

The General of the English and the Earl of 15-7 Warrick were together, when the Sear that The Harrick were together, when the Sear that The England abandon'd the Hill; which they elpying, gave The England Thanks to God, holding themfelves in good hope of the Event: forthwith they order'd the Artillery, and taking a loving leave de-parted to their feveral Charge, the General to the Battail, where the King's Standard was born, the Earl to the Vanguard, both on Foot, protesting that they would live or die with the Soldiers, whom also with bold Counternance and Speech (which ferve Soldiers for the best Eloquence) they put in mind of the Honor their Ancesters had acquired, of their own extreme Disgrace and Danger if they fought not well, that the Justice of their Quarrel should not so much encourage as enrage them, being to revenge the Dishonor done to their King, and to chaftife the deceitful dealings of their Eremies; that the multitude of their Enemies should nething diffnay them, because they who come to maintain their own Breach of Faith, besides that the Check of their Consciences much breaketh their Spirit, have the omnipotent Arm of God most furious against them.

Herewith arofe a buzzing noise among them, as if it had been the rulling found of the Sea afar off, every Man addressing himself to his Office, and encouraging those who were nearest unto them. The Earl rang'd his Vanguard in array, upon the fide of the Hill, expecting until the Enemy should more nearly approach. The General after he had order'd this Battail, part upon the Hill, and part upon the Plain, fomewhat distant from the Van-guard on the right side, mounted the Hill to the great Artillery, to take a view of both the Armies, and to give directions as occasion flould change. The Rear stood wide of the Battail, upon the same side, but altogether upon the Plain. The Lord Oray Captain of the Men at Arms, was appointed to fland fomewhat diffant from the Vanguard on the left fide, in fach a fort as he might take the Flank of the Enemy, but was forbidden to charge, until the Foot of the Vanguard were buckled with them in Front, and until the Battail should be near enough for his relief.

Now after that the Scots were well advanc'd in the Field, marching more than an ordinary pace, the great Shot from the English Ships, and especially from the Gally, began furiously to fcour among them, whereby the Mafter of Grime, and divers others about were torn in pieces; especially the Wing of the Irish was so grievously either gall'd or fear'd therewith, that (being Strangers and in a manner Neutrals) they had neither good heart to go forward, nor good liking to stand still, nor good affurance to run away. The Lord Gray per-ceiv'd this Amazement, and conceiv'd thereby occasion to be ripe; whereupon when the Enemy was not above two flight shot from the English Vanguard, suddenly and against direction with his Men at Arms, he charg'd

The Scots were then in a fallow Field, whereinto the English could not enter, but over a cross Ditch and a Slough, in paling whereof, many of the English Horse were plung'd, and some mir'd: when with some difficulty and much diforder they had pass'd this Ditch, the Ridges of the fallow Field lay tages they had, the Enemy's Pikes were longer day, few regarded to put them on.

The Scots

The Scots confident both in their Number, ner of the Order, and good Appointment, did not only Engage abide the English, but with fome biting Terms meet of the provok'd them to charge. They clos'd, and in a manner lock'd themselves together, Shoulder to Shoulder, so near as possibly they could; their Pikes they strain'd in both Hands, and therewith their Buckler in the left, the one end of the Pike against the right Foot, the other Breaft high against the Enemy. The fore Rank stoop'd so low, as they seem'd to kneel; the second Rank close at their Backs, cross'd their Pikes over their Shoulders, and the Men at Arms to have recover'd their Arfo did the third and the rest in their order, fo as they appear'd like the thorny Skin of a Hedghog, and it might be thought impoffible to break them. Notwithstanding the Charge was given with fo well govern'd Fury, Charge was given with 60 well govern'd Fury, upon the Earl of Warnick address'd his Men to that the left Corner of the Scots Batalion was take the Flank. The Vanguard of the Scots beenfore'd to give in; but the Scots did fo brave- ing thus upon, and befet with Enemies, began ly recover and acquit themselves, that divers of the English Horsemen were overthrown, either to be in place to be reliev'd by them, and the relidue fo diforder d as they could or happily to draw the English more separate not conveniently fight or fly, and not only and apart. The Leish Archers esping this, justled and bare down one another, but in their confus'd tumbling back, brake a part of the Vanguard on Foot. In this encounter Six the Vanguard on Foot. In this encounter on and Twenty of the English were flain, most part Gentlemen of the best Esteem. Divers others lost their Horses, and carry'd away Marks that they had been there. The Lord Gray was dangerously hurt with a Pike in the Mouth, which ftruck two Inches into his Neck. The Lord Edward Scymour Son to the Lord General loft his Horse, and the English Standard was almost lost. Affuredly albeit Encounters between Horfemen on the one fide, and Foot on the other, are feldom with the Extremity of Danger, because as Horsemen can hardly break a Battail on Foot, fo Nien on Foot cannot possibly chase Horsemen: Yet hereupon so great was the Tumult and Fear among the English, that had not the Commanders been Men both of approv'd Courage and Skill, or happily had the Scots been well furnished with Men at Arms, the Army had that day been utterly undone. For an Army is commonly like a Flock of Fowls. when fome begin to fly all will follow. But the Lord Gray to repair his Error endeavour'd with all Industry to rally his Horse: The Lord General also mounted on Horseback and came amongst them, both by his Presence and Advice, to reduce them into order. Sir Ralph Pane and Sir Ralph Sadler did memorable Service. But effecially the Earl of Warmick, who was in greatest Danger, declar'd his Re-folution and Judgment, to be most present in retaining his Men both in Order and in Heart. And having clear'd his Foot from Difturbance by the Horsemen, he fent forth before the Front of his Vanguard Sir Peter Memcas Captain of all the Hackbutters on Foot, and Sir moloa, a Spaniard, Captain of two hun-ackbutters Spanish and Italians on These brought their Men to the the Execution had been too cruel, and far Stangher mention'd before, who discharging exceeding the Bounds of ordinary Hostility, of Scots. Peter Gamboa, a Spaniard, Captain of two hundred Hackbutters Spanish and Iralians on Slough mention'd before, who discharging

1547. than their Staves, and their Horses were nabrought Barbs out of England, yet because Wing of the Vanguard, and then sent such they expected not in the morning to fight that Showers of Shot over the Hackbutters Heads, that many Bodies of their Enemies being but half arm'd, were beaten down and bury'd therewith. And besides, the Master of the Artillery did visit them sharply, with murthering Hail-shot from the Pieces mounted towards the Top of the Hill; also the Artillery which flank'd the Rear executed hotly. Laitly the Ships were not idle, but especially the Gally did play upon them, and plague them

The Scots being thus apply'd with Shot, and perceiving the Vanguard of the English to be in good Order, nearly to approach, and ray, turn'd their Vanguard fomewhat towards the South, to win, as it was thought, fome advantage of ground. By this means they fell directly on the head of the English Battail, wherea little to retire towards their great Battail, and furmifing the Danger to be greater than it was, fuddenly broke up, and committed the Safety of their Lives to their nimble Footmanship. After whose example, all the rest threw away their Weapons, and in headlong haft abandon'd the Field, not one froke having been given by the English on foot. But then the Horsemen coming furiously forward, had them very cheap.

The Flight was made three Ways, some the Scott running to Edinburgh, some along the Sands the towards Leith, but the most towards Dalkeith, which way, by reason of the Marsh the Eng-lish Horse were least able to pursue. The Chase was given from One of the Clock in the Afternoon, till almost Six. It reach'd five Miles in length, and four in breadth, all which Ways the Scots fcatter'd in their Flight Jacks, Swords, Bucklers, Daggers, or whatfoever was either cumberform, or of weight to impeach their haft; yea fome caft off their Shoes and Dublets, and fled in their Shirts. Divers other Devices were practis'd to avoid or defer the prefent Danger. Some intreated and offer'd large Ranfoms, fome being purfu'd only by one, fuddenly turn'd Head and made Reliftance, by whom many Horses were difabled, and fome of their Horses either slain or hurt. The Earl of Angus, a Man of assur'd both Hardiness and Understanding, couch'd in a Furrow, and was pass'd over for dead, until a Horse was brought for his Escape. Two thousand others lying all the Day as dead, departed in the Night, divers others plung'd into the River Eske, and cover'd themselves under Roots and Branches of Trees, many so strain'd themselves in their Race, that they fell down breathless and dead, whereby they feem'd in running from their

Slough mention defore, who calculating exceeding the Bounds of ordinary Educatively almost close to the Face of the Enemy which happily was a Cause in the fecret Judgdid much amaze them, being also difordered by the late partial of the English Horsemen, of their Victory. The dead Bodies lay all the way scattered for thick, as a Man may see the way feathered for thick, as a Man may see the see the second of the second o

Swords; and fearce credible it is how foon they were strip'd and laid naked upon the Ground. But then again the Eyes of all Men were fastned upon them with pity and admiration to behold fo many naked Bodys, as for talness of Stature, whiteness of Skin, largeness and due proportion of Limbs, could hardly be equal'd in any one Country. The Ground where their feveral Battalions first brake, lay strew'd with Pikes so thick as a Floor is usually ftrew'd with Rushes, whereby the places could hardly be pass'd over either by Horse or by Foot: The River Eskeran red with Blood, to as they who perish'd therein might almost be faid to be drown'd in their Fellows Blood.

On the other lide, when they came to the place where the Englishmen at Arms had been defeated, many of their Horses were found grievonsly gash'd or goar'd to death. The English who there perish'd were so deeply wounded of second the asset of the English who there were second to be a second to the second to t cd, especially on the Head, that not one could be differn'd by his Face. Brave Edward Shellie, who was the first Man that charg'd, was known only by his Beard; Little Preston, for that both his Hands were cut off, being known to have worn Bracelets of Gold about his Wrists; others were brought to knowledg by some such particular Marks. Hereby appeareth (as I faid before) what Bleffing is grown to both Nations by their late happy Union, when before they were like two rude encountring Rams, whereof he that escapes best is sure of a Blow.

Divers of the Nobility of Scotland were Scots flain here flain, and many Gentlemen both of and taken Prisoner.

Worth and noble Birth; of the inferior fort about 10000, and as some say 14000 lost their Lives. Of the English were flain 51 Horsemen and one Footman, but a far greater number hurt. The Scottifb Prisoners accounted by the Marshal's Book were about 1500. The chief whereof were the Earl of Huntley, the Lords Teffer, Hoblie and Hamilton, the Mr. of Sampoole, and the Lord of Wimmes. A Herauld was also taken, but discharg'd forthwith. The Execution was much maintain'd by the Scots own Swords featter'd in every place: for no fooner had an English Horseman broke his Sword, but forthwith he might take up another; infomuch that many of them broke three or four before their return. So apparent is the Hand of God against violation of Faith, that it is often chaftis'd by the Means appointed to defend it.

Kirkmenin

of the

Of all other the Englishmen were least fathe Scots vourable to the Priests and Monks, by the Scots call'd Kirkmen, who had been equally troublefom in Peace, and unprofitable in War. To whom many, as well English as Scots, imputed the Calamity of that Day; these made a Band of three or four thousand, as it was said, but they were not altogether fo many. Howbeit many Bishops and Abbots were among them; from these divers Scots feared more Harm by Victory, than they found among their Enemies by their Overthrow. After the Field a Banner was found of white Sarfenet, whereon a Woman was painted, her Hair about her Shoulders, kneeling before a Crucifix, on her right Hand a Church, and along the Banner in fair Letters written, Afflista Ecclesia ne obliviscaris. This was suppos'd to have been the Kirkmens Banner. But could this Crucifix have spoken, as one is faid to have fpoken to St. Francis, and 1547. Sheep grazing in a well-stor'd Pasture, most another to St. Thomas, it might happily have 1547 flain in the Head or Neck, for that the Horsemen could not well touch lower with their Men for Arms, nor Arms sit Means either to establish or advance Religion.

I must not forget the Fidelity of a Scottish Earl of Soldier towards the Earl of Huntley. He find- Huntley. ing the Earlaffaulted by the English, and without his Helmet, took off his own Headpiece and put it on the Earl's Head. The Earl was therewith taken Prisoner, but the Soldier for want thereof was prefently itruck down-This Earl was of great Courage, and for this Caufe much loved of his Soldiers, to whom he was no lefs loving again. This he manifested by his great Care for such Scottish Pritioners as were either wounded or poor, providing at his proper Charge, Cure for the one, and Relief for the other. This Earl being ask'd whilft he for the other. This Earl being ask'd whilft he was Prifoner, how he flood affected to the Marriage? answer'd, That he was well-affected to favour the Marriage, but he nothing liked that kind of Wooing.

Certain of those who escap'd by slight excus'd their Dishonor, not without a sharp Jest against some of their Leaders, affirming, That as they had follow'd them into the Field, so it was good reason they should follow them out-Those bitter Jests, the more Touth they carry, the more biting Memory they leave behind.

The Day of this Fight being the 10th of Sep- The Scots tember, seemeth to be a most disastrous Day to feated, the Scots, not only in regard of this Over-Sept. 10. throw, but for that upon the same Day 34 Years before, they were in like fort defeated by the English at Flodden Field. The Victory rais'd exceeding Joy among the English, partly because it came so Cheap, and partly by reason of the great Danger and greater Terror that had been cast upon them by reason of the Repulse and Difarray of their Men at Arms.

Now as feldom one Accident, either pro- Another fperous or adverse, cometh unaccompany'd Success of with the like, fo this Calamity hapned not to lifth againgt the Scots alone: For whilst the English Army the Scots. had thus drawn both the Preparations and Intentions of the Seots wholly upon them, the Lord Wharton, and the Earl of Lenox, entred Scotland on the West Marches with 5000 Men, and having marched two Miles they won the Church of Anan, a strong Place, and always much annoying the English; there they took fixty two Prifoners, fir'd most part of the Spoil, and overthrew the Fort with Powder: Pailing fixteen Miles further, they took the Castle of Milk, which they fortify'd strong-ly, and planted a Garison therein; and after much spoil and wast of the Country, return'd fafely into England. These Successes did strike such a Terror into Many many of the Scots, that the Earl Bothwell, and Scots subdivers chief Gentlemen of Tivedale and Meers, King, fuppoling to find more easy Conditions by yielding than by ftriving, fubmitted themfelves to the King of England, and were receiv'd by the Lord General into protection. But it is most certain that the English made not their best Improvements of these fortunate Events, and that especially by two miserable Errors, Cunctation in prosecuting, and Hast in departure. But doubtlefs the Union of these two Realms was a Work most proper to God's Omnipotent Arm, which afterwards effected the fame, as by milder Means, fo in a more durable Manner than they could have been united by Arms. This high Appointment of God we must reverence and ad-

1547. mire, but not omit to observe the Errors com-

First therefore after the Retreat, the Enghis lodg'd the fame Night in the Place where the Battle had been fought. Where, and in the Villages not far diffant, they fojourn'd five Days without doing any thing; in the mean time the English search'd the Rivers and Havens where the Scottifb Ships were retir'd, in fuch fort as they left few Ships of War unfpoiled or untaken: The Army also gather'd aponed of directors. The Army allo gather'd the Spoil of the Field, whereof 30000 Jacks and Swords, and thirty Pieces of great Artillery were flip'd for England.

The English having thus long breath'd, and thereby given breathing to their Enemies, fir'd The Engmany Pla-Leith, took St. Colmes, Broughticragge, Rockefberough, Himes Caffle, Amousto, Fial Caffle, Dunglufs, Kilucombe, and divers other final Places, whereof part they ruin'd, part they enlarg d and fortify'd, and furnifi'd them with able Soldiers, accustom'd with often and profperous Success. Herewith, as if they had And depart been weary of their fair Fortunes, they fuddenly brake off the Enterprife, and return'd another way into England, having staid not above five and twenty Days in Scotland, and loft under fixty Men. The Pretence of their departure was worse than the Departure it felf, namely, for that the Year and their Provisions were far spent, and the Country afforded little Forage. Assuredly, as Nature taketh least care for those things which she formeth in halt, fo violent and storm-like Fortunes, how terrible for ever, are seldom durable.

Now the Lord Governor of Scotland being of great Courage, and fober Judgment, as a Governour. Man might well read in his Face; as he had amply perform'd his Duty, both before the Battel and in the Field; fo especially after the Fight he declar'd himself to be of a stout and unbroken Spirit: For, first, he assembled the dispersed Forces of the Scottish Army, albeit not in sufficient manner to give a fresh Battel, by reason that much of their Armour was lost, yet able to keep the English from ranging at large. Then he presented the English with divers offers of Treaty touching Matters in dif-ference, until the Country was discharg'd of them. Lastly, Knowing right-well that Counfels are commonly centured by Events, and that in Matters of Arms, albeit the praise of prosperous Success is shar'd amongst many, yet the blame of Misadventures is charged upon one; and fearing hereby Mutinies among his own People, and contempt of others, having first assured the young Queen in place of good Defence, he assembled the Scottish Nobility, and us'd words to this effect.

The Gover- 4 nour of Scotland's Speech to lity.

home.

Affure my felf that many of you, my Lords, and more of the Vulgar, are much difpleas'd with me, for that I have advis'd this War whereof fo fad Events have follow'd. For this Caufe I have affembled you together to reduce you to a better Opinion, or to blame you deeply, either if you remain offended, or if you cast down your Courage through Fear, the betrayer of all Succours which Reason can afford. For tell ' me, if you are discontented with me for ad-' vising this War, do you not condemn your felves for following the Advice? It is cer-tain that at the first you were all of my Opi-nion, and that I did nothing without your Approvement. If now upon one Misadventure you change your Judgments, and charge 1547 the Fault only upon me, you do me wrong to and discover your own Weakness, in being unable to endure those things which you knew were cafual, and which you were re-folv'd to endure. But I make no doubt but the fame Reafons which induc'd you to entertain this War, will induce you also to profecute the fame, howfoever fudden and un-expected Events difmay your Judgments for the prefent.

Touching my felf I was always of Opinion, and shall never change, that it is better the Kingdom should be in good Estate, with particular Loss to many of the People, than that all the People should be well, and the State of the Kingdomaltogether lost or dishonourably impair'd; even as it is better that a Ship should be preserv'd with some discommodity to the Sailers, than that the Sailers being in health the Ship should perish; or as it is less dangerous when divers parts of a Tower are decay'd, and the Foundation firm, than when the Foundation is ruinous, albeit the Parts remain entire: For the common Estate is but weakned by Calamities of particular Persons, but the Ruin of the State involveth all in a general Destruction. And therefore they are to be blam'd alike, both who move and who decline War upon particular respects, the common either Honour or Necessity must be the true Measure of

But the Caufe of this War is no other, ' than that we will not incontinently fubmit our felves to do what our Neighbours require; that is, because at the first word we are not forward to thrust our Necks under the Girdles of our Enemies, yea our old Enemies, yea our only Enemies of any account for many Years, who in their gluttenous Hope have devour'd our Kingdom; who by the bloody Execution of their late Victories, have shewn what Courtesy we may expect at their hands. In doing whereof we shall a-bandon our antient and approved Friends, who as they never fail'd us in our Extremities, fo are they now prepar'd with large Aids to relieve us, who will not fear or paule at the leaft, before he leap upon this fudden Changer, who will forfake long try'd Friends to rely upon those who always have been ready by Arms to infest us: Not at all times upon defire either of Revenge or Spoil, but to bring us under their ambitious Dominion. Which of us had not rather die this Day, than fee our Enemies in our strongest Castles, and Yoaks of Garifons cast upon our Necks? Who will not prefer a Death for Liberty, before a Life without it?

'Their Promises are fair and large indeed, I must fay, but of what Affurance? What Affurance can we have, but that when we have lifted them into the Chair of State, we shall not be compelled to be their Footmen! If our Prince were a Man, and should marry an Inheritrix of England, we should happily have no cause to fear but that he would maintain the Liberty of his native Country; but being a Woman, and defir'd in marriage of a King of England, under whose Power and Custody she must abide, how shall we be able against his Mind either to benefit or preserve us? Verily, as Men hate those that affect that Honour by Ambition which pertaineth not to them, fo are they much more odious which they have.

'Now, my Lords, if any furmife, either that this War will be long, or that we shall have the worst in the End, his Error is great; for removing whereof I must tell you, that which many of you seem either little to remember, or never to have known:
Do you suppose the State of this Realm (of the Valour whereof the Enemy hath often woful proof) to be now fo feeble that it cannot bear off a greater Blow than this? It hath often done it, and is able of it felf to do it again, if our Endeavours be answerable to our Means. Our Ancestors have suf-· tain'd many greater Dangers, and yet retaining their Liberty, have left both it and their · Honour entire to us; what are we of lefs Heart than they? For of lefs Ability we are not: Shall we shew our selves unworthy of our Succession from them? Assuredly it is more shame for a Man to lose that which he holdeth, than to fail in getting that which he never had.

· But suppose our Forces to be nearer driven than they are; our antient Allies the French are upon the Seas and near approaching for our Relief, also our Friends in Italy, and other Parts have fent us Mony to Supply our Wants: wherefore, Lords, it is meet that we refume our antient Courage, and address our selves for new Preparation, not only upon those hopes both from our selves and our Friends, but in Contempt of our Enemies. For often it happeneth that a Prosperity unexpected maketh Men careless and remiss if they be not ' very wife; whereas they who have receiv'd ' that Wound become more vigilant and col-" lected, especially when they see not only the common Honour and Liberty, but their particular both Seigniories and Safeties to be at the stake.

' And albeit the Enemy hath done that " which it was to be believ'd they would endeavour to do, in case we would not yield unto them, yet as those things must be endur'd upon necessity, which happen by the hand of God, fo those which come from Enemies must be born by Virtue. And fince it is a Cuffom of our Country fo to do, fith our People are famous for being nothing abafh'd at crofs Events, take we heed this Virtue fail not inus. If it doth, if we shew our felves heartlefs and faint, we shall ut-· Memory, both of our Ancestors and of our State.

As for those who have yielded to our Ene-' mies, let us esteem them as Fugitives and "Traitors, who endeavour to cast themselves and their Country into Subjection; but let us stand affur'd, that they who leaft shrink at the storms of Fortune, whether in pub-· lick or private Affairs, are always most virtuous and victorious in the end.

On the other fide King Edward added to his Proteflor Glory, Courtefy and Liberality; shewing himremarded felf most gracious in Countenance to all, and giving Rewards futable to every Mans Perfor- like Change before; I aufwer, the Example was mance or Place. The Lord Protector he rewarded with Lands of the yearly Value of who, cither through Negligence or through rather because he was discern'd to be much 154 fearching both into the Counsels and after the Events of all his Affairs, and likewise into the Condition and State both of his own Strength and of the Countries near unto

But these prosperous Proceedings were not Some too only hinder'd, in their faireft Courfe, but all forward in together flay'd, and in fome measure turn'd making alback by reason of the unadvis'd Forwardness in two of divers chief Counfellors, in making both things, viz. fudden and unfeafonable Alterations in Matters of State, whose greedy desires of having their Wills in all they lik'd, bred both trouble to the Realm and to themselves danger. For great and fudden Changes are never without danger, unless the Prince be both well fettl'd in Government and able to bear out his Actions by Power; but whilft King Edward was both unripe in years and new in Government, to attempt a Change both fudden and great, could not but be accompany'd with many Mifchiefs. The great Matters wherein Alteration was wrought were especially two, Religion, and Inclofures

Now for that Religion is of fo high and Religion. noble a Nature, of so absolute necessity in a Commonwealth, that it is efteene'd the Foundation of Laws, and the common band of human Society, no fudden Alteration can al-most be made therein, but many will be induc'd thereby to attempt fome Alteration in Rule, whence (faith Dio) Confpiracies and Seditions are often occasion'd. For Religion being feated in the high Throne of Conscience, is a most powerful Ruler of the Soul, and far prefer'd before Estimation of Life, or any other worldly respect; for this advanceth Man to the highest Happiness, it leadeth him to his last End; all other things are but Instruments, this is the Hand; all other things are but Accoffirmes, this is the Principal. And therefore as all Men are naturally mov'd by Religion, fo when they are violently thrusted forward by those who (as Livy speaketh) make it their purpose to possess Souls by Superstition, then do they break all bands of Reason and of Rule, no Perfuation of the one, no Command of the other can then restrain them. Multitudo ubi religione captaest, melius vatibus quam ducibus suis paret. Curt. lib. 4.

I will not deny but that some Change in Religion is often expedient and fometimes necessary; because, more in that than in any other thing, it is hard to contain Men from running into one of these Extremes, either of vain Superstition, or of careless Contempt. But this must be done with a foft and tender hand, and as Ciccro speaketh, Ut quum minimo fonitu orbis in republica convertatur. Some Respect should also have been given to those green times, to the monstrous Multitude muffl'd with two great Plagues and Corruptions of Judgment, Custom and Ignorance, whereto may be added Grief at their own Wants, and Envy at the Prosperity of others, especially for that many bold Spirits were buly'd, not only to incense, but to lead them into much Variety of Mischief. And if it be said that King Honry the Eighth had quietly pafs'd the not then to be follow'd, the Kings were not equal either in Spirit or in Power. Even as it Soot. and certain it is that thefe first Fortunes is in the Fable, that albeit an Eagle did bear raised unto him a great Respect both in other away a Lamb in her Talons with full flight, Countries and among his own People, and the yet a Raven endeavouring to do the like was held entangl'd and fetter'd in the Fleece. Touching Inclosures, I am not ignorant Incloquees. what a profitable Purchase is made thereby, not only to particular Perfons, but generally to the whole Commonwealth, in case it be without Depopulation, because a Company of Lands inclosed are thereby improved in worth Lanus muos a are thereby improved in worth two or three parts at the leaft; hereby two great Commodities enfac, Riches and Multitude of People, because the more Riches are rais'd out of Lands, the more People are thereby maintain'd. This doth plainly appear by two Shires along out best in the proper per two Shires. pear by two Shires, almost equal both in Greatness and in Goodness of Soil: Northampton much Champain, and Somerfet altogether Inclos'd. For if Estimation may be made by Musters, and by Subfidies, Tenths, and Fifteens, Inclosure hath made the one County more than ! double to exceed the other, both in People and in Wealth. (n)

forbidding

ners fent abroad with Injuntlions

for Religion.

The Pro- Notwithstanding the Lord Protector gaping tellor center the freitless Breath of the Multitude, and more delirous to please the most than the best, caused a Proclamation to be set forth against Inclosures, commanding that they who had inclos'd any Lands accustom'd to lie open, fhould upon (0) a certain Pain before a day affign'd lay them open again. This Proclamation, whilft few were forward to obey, gave occasion to the mutinous Multitude, in-flable in Judgment, and temperatuous when they are Itir'd, all carry'd with a headlong Rafhness, and one following another, as wifer than himself, immoderately bot' in Defire and Hope to be eafily drawn by others who had deeper Reaches than themselves, to matters which at the first they least intended. Commillio-

And again, foon after the beginning of the

efteem'd but honour'd before, and for abolifi- 1547 ing or altering fome other antient Observations in the Church. Hereupon Commissioners were dispatch'd into all parts of the Realm to fee those Injunctions to be executed: with those divers Preachers were fent, furnish'd with Inftructions to perfuade the People from praying to Saints and for the dead, from adoring Images, from use of Beads, Ashes and Processions, from Mass, Dirges, praying in an unknown Language; and from some other like things. whereunto long Cuftom had wrought a religious Observation. And for Defect of Preachers, Homilies were appointed to be publickly read in Churches, aiming at the very

Some others offering to maintain these Ce-Some Bi remonies, were either punish'd or fore'd to re-first dycant. Edmund Bonner (q) Bishop of London was prijord. committed Prisoner to the Fleet, for refusing to receive these Injunctions. Stephen Gardiner was likewife committed first to the Fleet, afterwards to the Tower, for that he had openly preach'd, that it were well these Changes in Religion should be stay'd, until the King were of years to govern by himfelf. This the People apprehending worse than it was either spoken or meant, a Question began to be rais'd among them, whether during the King's Minority fuch Alterations might lawfully be made or no. For the like Causes Toustal Bishop of Durchne, and Heath Bishop of Rochefter, were in like manner committed to Prifen: all these being then and still continuing famous for Learning and Judgment, were difpossess'd of their Bishopricks; but no Man was touch'd in Life.

Hereupon a Parliament was held in the first A Parlia-And again, soon after the beginning of the young King's Reign, certain Injunctions (p) were set forth for removing Images out of Churches, which had been highly, not only free Chappels, Fraternities, Guildes, & Religion.

of Tumbles. The Proclamation was but just and reationable, to redrefs fuch Wrongs done to the poor Subjects. 3.5.

(b) The Author feems to disapprove the fetting forth of the Injunctions in the beginning of the King's Reign, for remving Inages and 5 the Charles, and for abelighing plome Gerominics, because the People Bad an Homes and Ellewing them. If then Regard was to be had to the People, why thould they not be as well regarded in their Complaints of Inclodinces, which experted is himself much for? But herein, whatelever of a Politician, our Author flowed himself furly but an indifferent Proceding. If it were ground furficient not to reform Religion, because it would give Diffail to the desprehibions People, Religion must never be reformed. But in ruth, valf were the Numbers of People, throughout the Land, especially the most civilized Parts of it, that at this time of day did Heartily expect a Retormation from the Worfling of Images, and lipperfitious Geromonies. 3.5.

(g) He placeth here, in the first year of the King, the Commitment of Bishop Bomer, Bishop Gardiner, Bishop Gardiner, Bishop Gardiner, Bishop Gardiner, Bishop Gardiner, Bishop Gardiner, and Confidence of the King's Proceeding of the Market Research of the Archivolation of the Special State of the Spec both kinds, Oc.

both kinds, 47c.

Neither was the Caule of Gardiner's Impriforment this first year of the Ring, because he had preached against making Changes in Religion till the King was of years, as it is here faid, but for his Retractorines to the King's Proceedings. His fectord Impriforment indeed was occasioned by a Sermon which he preached on St. Peter's day, in the fector depart of the King's yet not for preaching that the Changes in Religion isball be flaged, but for omitting to place of textral Plateres committed to him in Writing, by Command of the Council, as concerning the ultraped Power of the Elitiop of Rose, the Superstitions used towards St. Niellar, and other Saines; concerning the authority of the Ring in his Minarity; concerning auricular Confession, and some other things.

Hadd was committed for refusing to fasher the new Book of Ordinations: Nor was Heath now Elithop of Roseheller, as our Author filles him, but of Worseller, whom he might have mentioned among the rest of Elithops committed. The Cause of whole Restraint was , because he refused to obey an Order from the King, to take away Altars out of his Diocest. 7.5.

Diocefs. J.S.

Vol. II.

with

1547. with all their Lands and Goods were put into the actual Poffession of the King: part of the Goods and Lands being fold at a low Value, enrich'd many, and ennobl'd fome, and thereby made them firm in maintaining the Change; also that no Man should speak against receiving the Eucharift under both kinds (r), which had been restrain'd in times before; and that Bifhops fhould be plac'd by Collation of the King under his Letters Patent, without any precedent Election or Confirmation enfuing, and that all Processes Ecclesiastical should be made in the King's Name, as in Writs at the common Law; and that all Perfons exercifing Ec-clefiaftical Jurifdiction, should have the King's Arms in their Seals of Office: and further the Statute of the fix Articles, and other Statutes con-cerning Punishment of Lollards were repeal'd, and fo was another Statute restraining the Use of Scriptures in the English Tongue, and the King's Supremacy over the Church of England was confirm'd. Herewith a Book was fet forth for publick Prayers by Proclamation, and for Administration of the Sacraments, and other Rites and Offices of the Church (f); and diverse Punishments were appointed by Proclamation, either for not using the Forms prefcrib'd in that Book, or for depraying any thing therein contain'd.

I forbear to rehearfe other Acts of this Parliament, albeit a noble Writer in our time effeems it to be a main in History that the Acts of Parliament should not be recited: which I conceive fo far to be true, as they occasion Tumults or Division, or some remarkable Alteration in State; otherwise as I find them not regarded by most imitable Writers, so I account the Relation of them both fruitless and improper for a true carry'd Hiftory.

Now in this mean time the Commissioners the second for the se had been done in Hoftility against them. Hereat many did express a Sense of Distast, some for religious Respects, others in regard of the excellent Artifice of some of their Pieces, affirming that albeit religious Reverence might happily have been either taken away or moderated, yet the civil Regard which all Men do not only afford but affect, in maintaining the Memory of those whom they honour or love, might be indur'd without Offence.

Certainly albeit the Religion of the Romans 15: indur'd 170 Years according to the Law of t Numa Pompilius without any Images; albeit the Persians had neither Images nor Temples nor Altars, being of Opinion that God could be represented by no Device, that he had no Temple but the World, no Altar but the Heart of Man; albeit Eufebius writeth that the People of Asia, call'd Seres, by express Law forbad Adoration of Images; albeit that Images were torbidden of Lycurgus as drawing Men from the true Worship of that which cannot be seen; albeit the antient Germans, and from them the Britans, and the Gauls had neither Images nor Temples; albeit the Jews, and in imitation of them, the Saracens and Turks, abhor nothing more than Images, either in their Temples, or in their Houses; because the Law of God forbiddeth not only to adore, but to make any Image: Albeit the Christians continu'd a long time without Images in their Churches, yet were they never entertain'd into any Religion, but prefently they took deep root in the Hearts and Confeinces of the common People. When Leo Haurieus furnam'd Iconomadius affembl'd a Council at Constantinople, wherein it was decreed that lmages should be cast out of Churches and burnt, the West part of his Empire did thereupon first rebel, and afterwards re-A.1548.

And yet while these Proceedings were but Hadding-in the Bud, Affairs of State without the conforma-Realm were maintained in good Condition fird by the of Honour, but feem'd rather to stand at a Lord Gray. flay, than either to advance or decline. Ĭπ Scotland the Wars were maintain'd by the Exploits in Lord Gray of Wilson, Licutenant of the North, Scotland. with variable Success. He fortify'd Haddington, fir'd Dalkeith, and won the Castle where fourteen Scors were flain, and three hundred taken Prifoners; he fpoil'd much of the Country about Edinburg, Lowthian, and Meers, fir'd Misselsonough, and fortify'd Lowder, and took Tester, at the yielding whereof he granted Life to all, except to one who had us'd vile Speeches against King Edward. Those Speeches were commonly east upon one Newton, but he charg'd them upon one Hamilton; hereupon A Chal-Hamilton challeng'd Newton to the Combate, lenge. which he did readily accept, and the Lord Gray confented to the Trial: to this purpose Lists were creeted in the Market Place at Haddington, whereinto at the time appointed,

The Com.

(r) This Act was not againft fuch as should speak againft receiving the Eucharist under both kinds; but againft fuch as should deprace or despite the Eletical surrament: which further appears by the Preamble to that Act, the wind how some bad dippated and respined, and more lift of that mell buly highery, and called it by fich vide and amformly be odd, as Christian Ears did abbor. The Act too bear the mention of them. They were Round Robin, Jack in a Br., Sc., because the Water was round, and they died to keep it an a Pix or Box. The fame Act in the last Paragraph of it did enjoin the faid tholy Sucrament to be delivered and ministruced unto the People in both kinds of Bread and Wire, as being more conformable to the common O've and Prablice of the Apifles and Frimitive Charles, by the Space of five building and are after Chilfs Ajecujón. J. S.

(f) Our Autor Free Conformable to the common O've and Prablice of the Apifles and Frimitive Charles, by the Space of five bunded years and more after Chilfs Ajecujón. J. S.

(f) Our Autor Free Conformable to the Conformation of the Apifles and Frimitive Charles of Free Apifles and Frim

(f) Our Author here confounded to the Books that were to be publickly ufed for Divine Service; and both belonging nor to this, but the next Year. For there was first a new office for the Communion only, and was injoined by Proclamation in the Month of March, 154°, to be generally used at Easter following. This was pursuant to the Adt. 1. Edn. 6. for the Administration of the Sacrament in both kinds. The fecond Book was fet forth the latter and of that year 1548, by Act of Parliament, 2 and 3 Edn. and was a complete Liturgy, or Form of publick Prayer, intitled, The Book of the Common Prayer, and Administration of the Sacraments, and other Rites and Coremons of the Charch, after the Vicos the charch of England. This Book was grain, by the Care of Architect Committee of England. This Book was grain, by the Care of Architect Committee of England and Corrected in the Year 1550, and see forth for Publick Ute. And this was called King Edward's Book. 7. S.

(1) If by these Committee the mean the King's Visitors, which he fent for the lavely and a Royal Visitation all over England and Bastes, they indeed inclined the Curats to take down fach Images as they knew were abused by Pligin mages or Officings to them; but that private Perfons flould not do it, no doubt to preven Gratinon and Diffurbance. And they also injoined the Ordinaries, to take care that all Monumens of Idolatin Brudde be rem. wed out of the Walls, and Windows of Churches; as may apprear by the Injunctions. By which is ferm that the Visitors them Idves removed not, now public down any Images; but only left Order, both with the Ordinaries and Curats of fee it done. Wherein there was 10 much Eackwardness, that he next year, 1542, the Proceeder and Privy Councel fent Committee and to the Archibility of Camerbusy, and he by the fame Order to the refl of the Ethops, to fee that a Busages be taken away out of the Churches. 7. S.

1548. both the Combatants enter'd, apparel'd only · in their Doublets and Hoses, and weapon'd with Sword, Buckler, and Dagger. At the first Encounter Hamilton drave Neuron almost to the end of the Lifts, which if he had fully done he had thereby remain'd victorious; but Newton on the sudden gave him such a gassi on the Leg that therewith he fell to the Ground, and Newton forthwith dispatch'd him with his Dagger: certain Gentlemen then prefent offer'd to have fought with Newton upon the fame point, but this was adjudg'd to be against the Lawsof Combate; wherefore Newton was not only acquitted but rewarded with a Chain of Gold, and with the Gown which the Lord Gray did then wear: howbeit many were perfuaded that he was faulty, and happily neither of them was free; but he enjoy'd neither his Escape nor his Honour long, for soon after he was hewn in pieces by Hamilton's Friends.

The Scots take Broughticrage.

On the other fide, the Scots came before Broughtierage, with 8000 Men and eight pieces of Artillery; but it was for that time well defended by the English, who by often Sallies enforc'd their Enemies with lofs of their Artillery to abandon the Attempt. After this divers other Enterprizes were made upon that Fort; at the last it was taken, where the Scots flew all except Sir John Lutterel the Captain, who was taken Prifoner.

Hadding- And now Henry the Second of France having ton belieg- newly fucceeded Francis the First, who dy'd ed by Fr. the last of March 1547. sent Monsieur Dassie and Scots, his Lieutenant into Scotland, with an Army of about 10000 French and Almanes, who joining with the Scots belieg'd Haddington, and that with 6 good earneft, as fix pieces of Artillery discharg'd 340 shot in one day, and in another 200 within fixty Paces of the Wall: they lodg'd so near within the very Ditches, that the English slew divers of them with Plummets of Lead to'd to a Trunchion or Staff by a Cord. The Place was but weak, and the Brackes fair; but the Defendants by Refolution supply'd all the Defects, making divers Sallies with fuch lively Spirit, that the Affailants were thereby discourag'd from making Aslault: the English from Berwick with about 1500 Horse did often relieve the Defendants, by breaking thro the midst of their Enemies. But at the last they were so strongly both encounter'd and inclos'd between the French, Almanes, and Scots, that Sir Thomas Palmer the chief Leader and about 400 were taken Prifoners, and divers flain. Hereupon the Earl of Shrewsbury was fent with an Army of about 15000 Men, whereof ry relieves 3000 were Almanes; but upon notice of his them. Approach the French rais'd the Field, retir'd fo far as Muscleborough and there encamp'd, attributing much Honour to the English for their Valour, in regard of the small strength of the Place which they defended. When the Earl had victual'd and reinforc'd the Town, he march'd forth towards the Enemies, and encamp'd near unto them; and first a few of the English Horse approach'd near the Army of the French, who sent forth some Troops of their Horse to encounter them : but the English retir'd until they had drawn the French into an Ambush laid for the purpose, and then charging together they had them cheap, amongst which two Captains of Account were taken Prisoners.

Earl of Shrewsbu-

And floer

The next day the Earl prefented his Army Lord Deputy of Freland, first with great Dilitektench in plain Field before the Enemy's Camp, gence and Care, then Credit and Reputation, cloyd in three Bodies, and rang'd ready to especially gain'd by that Service, took Ocanor abide Battef. The French had newly receiv'd 1548. abide Battel. Supply of 1407 15000 Seens, but yet remain'd within their Strength, holding it no Wifdom to venture on Men 12folv'd to fight, who being forthwith to depart the Realm could neither long endanger nor endamage them much. So the Earl, after that he had remain'd about an Hour, and perceiving that the French intended not to for fake their Strength, return'd unto his Camp, and afterwards to England, destroying Dunbar and some other which stood near his Passage: The Army being dissolv'd, and the Scots thought fecure, the Lord Gray L. Gray enwith his Horsemen enter'd Scotland, did great to Scat-Wast in Trvedale and Liddesdale for the space land. of 20 Miles, and return'd without Encounter. Also a Navy was apointed to coast along with English the Army before mention'd: This Fleet coming Natur in the Coult. to Brent Illand, fir'd four Ships, then attempting upon S. Minnes, were repuls'd by the Lord Dun, and fo without either Glory or Gain return'd into England.

Not long after the departure of the English TheFr. fur-Army, Monfieur Daffie with his French and Prize HadAlmanes, attempted fuddenly to furprize Hadbut are dington. The Enterprize was govern'd in so beaten fecret manner, that the French had flain the back, English Scouts, and entred the Base Court, and approach'd the main Gates before any Alarm was taken; but then the Townsinen came forth, many in their Shirts, who with the help of the Watch sustain'd the Assault, until the Soldiers in better appointment came to their Aid. These issued into the Base Court through a privy Postern, and sharply visited the Assailants with Halberts and Swords. Here the Fight grew hot, the Darkness and Danger terrifying fome and animating others: Blows flew at all adventures, Wounds and Deaths given and taken unexpected, many scarce knowing their Enemies from their Friends: But shame wrought such Life and Courage in the English, as very few of the Enemies who enter'd the Court escap'd alive, leaving their Fellows bleeding in their deadly Wounds; yet Monfieur Daffie not discourag'd herewith, gave three lively Assaults more that Moraing, but was repelled with fo great lofs, that 16 Carts and Waggons were charg'd with carrying away their dead and dying Bodies, belides 300 left in the Base Court.

After divers like Adventures, the English The Engl. perceiving that the Town could not be kept demolish without danger, nor lost without dillonour, the Town. without danger, nor lost without dishonour; the Earl of Rutland was sent with 3000 Almanes, and as many Borderers, to demolifi Berwick. The Earl not only accomplish'd his Charge, but made wide wast in his passage by ruin and spoil. Herewith the Castle of Hume Hume was fuddenly furpriz'd by the Scots, and all the Caffle English therein either taken or Ilain. This was taken by effected by means of certain Scots who us'd to bring Victuals to the English, and were re-puted their affured Friends; these both ob-serving the Weakness of the Place and Orders of the Garison, discover'd them to their Fellows, and gave entertainment for the Surprize. Giving also warning to others, never to trust either the Courtesses or Services of those whom they have provoked to be their Ene-

About these Times Sir Edward Bellingham Success in Lord Deputy of Ireland, first with great Dili- Ireland. Vol. II. Pp 2

A Skirmifb

1548, and Omor, and reduc'd the other feditious Lords to good Subjection Ocanor and Omor guided by overlate Counfel, of Necessity left their Lordships, and had a yearly Pension of 100 L affign'd to either of them.

And now the French supposing that by rea-fon, partly of suspence of Hostility between Bulling-berge at tempted by tempted by ion, partly of infection of the English the French England and France, and partly of the English but beaten Affairs in other Places, Matters with them would be neglected, determin'd to attempt a fudden Surprize of the Fortress of Bullingberge; to this end 7000 Men were appointed, under the Gonduct of Mr. Chastilion, furnish'd with Ladders and other Preparations for the Surprize. They marched fecretly in the dead time of the Night; and when they approach'd within a quarter of a League, one Carter who had been discharg'd of his Pay by the English, for taking a French Woman to Wife, and then ferv'd under the French, ran privily before and gave the Alarm to those in the Fort. The English drew him up the Walls between two Pikes, and understanding the Danger, address'd themselves to their Defence. By reafon whereof the French at their approach had fo warm a Welcome, every of the English contending that his Valour might be noted for fome Help in the Fight, that at their departure they laded fifteen Waggons with their Dead. Carter himself adventur'd bravely in Places of greatest danger, and receiv'd two great Hurts in his Body. Sir Nicholas Arnault the Captain was likewise hurt with a Pike in the Face; divers others were wounded, and about 25 flain. The Affault continu'd with great Obstinacy from midnight until somewhat after break of day.

Shortly after 300 English on Foot, and 25 between Horsemen, were appointed to go to a Wood the French about two Leagues from Bullingberge, having about two Leagues from buttingers, having Carriages with them, for bringing certain Timber for mounting great Artillery, and fome other uses: When they approached near the edg of the Wood, about 500 French Horsemen iffu'd forth and gave three sharp Charges upon them; the English impal'd themselves with their Pikes, and therewith bare off their Enemies; and being lin'd with Shot (the cruel plague of Horsemen) the French were in fuch fort galled with Arrows that many were wounded, Mr. Cauret and divers others llain, 70 great Horfes lay dead in the Field, and one Cornet was taken. The English fearing greater Forces, began to retire; and therewith appear'd about 2000 French and Almanes on foot. But the English maintain'd an orderly Retreat, until they came within favour of the Shot of Bullingberge, and then the Enemy adventured no further: And in this manner the old Wounds of War began freshly to open and bleed between England and France.

But in this mean time fuch Tempests of Sedition tumbled in England, more by default of Governors, than the peoples Impatience to live in Subjection, that not only the Honour but the Safety of the State was thereby endanger'd. For as the Commissioners before-mention'd pass'd to divers Places for establiffing of their new Injunctions, many unfavory Scorns were cast upon them; and the further they went from London, as the People were more uncivil, fo did they more rife into Infolency and Contempt. At the laft, as one Mr. Body a Commissioner was pulling down Images in Cornwal, he was fuddenly stab'd into the Body by a Priest with a Knife.

Hereupon the People more regarding Com- 1549. motioners than Commissioners, flock'd toge in Infar-ther in divers Parts of the Shire, as Clouds rection in cluster against a Storm: And albeit Justice Cornwal. was afterwards done upon the Offenders, the Principal being hang'd and quarter'd in Smith-field, and divers of his chief Complices exe-cuted in divers parts of the Realm; albeit fo ample a Pardon was proclaim'd for all others within that Shire touching any Action or Speech tending to Treason; yet could not the Boldness be beaten down either with that Severity, or with this Lenity be abated. For the Mischief forthwith spread into Wiltshire and Somersetshire, where the People supposing that a Commonwealth could not stand with out Commons, beat down Enclosures, laid Parks and Fields Champain. But Sir William Herbert, afterwards Earl of Pembroke, with a well arm'd and order'd Company, fet sharply upon them, and opprefling some of the for-wardest of them by Death, supprest all the Residue of them by fear. But their Duty depending upon Fear, the one was of no greater continuance than the other.

The like Motions follow'd in Suffex, Hamp- And in mashire, Kent, Glocestershire, Warnickshire, Essex, nothing Hartfordshire, Leicestershire, Worcestershire and Courties, Rutlandshire. But being neither in Numbers nor in Courage great, partly by Authority of Gentlemen, and partly by Entreaty and Advice of honest Persons, they were reduc'd to fome good Appealement; as with People more guided by Rage than by Right, yet not altoge-ther mad, it was not uneafy. But herein hap-pily fome Error was committed, that being only brought to a Countenance of Quiet, regard was not had to diftinguish the Rebellion fully: for foon after they broke forth more dangerously than before, for no part could content them who aim'd at all.

After this the People in Oxfordshire, Devonfhire, Norfolk and Yorkshire, fell into the same madness, incens'd by such who being in themfelves base and degenerate, and dangerous to the State, had no hope but in troublesom Times. To Oxfordshire the Lord Gray of Wil-ton was sent with 1500 Horse and Foct, to whom the Gentlemen of the Country reforted, drawing many Followers with them: The very Name of the Lord Gray, being known to be a Man of great Valour and Fortune, fo terrify'd the Seditious, that upon the very Report of his Approach, more than half fell away and differred; of the Refidue, who being either more defperate or more fottish, did abide in the Field, many were prefently flain, many taken and forthwith executed.

To Devonshire was sent John Lord Russel, the Muti-Lord of the Privy Seal, whose Forces being ness in De-indeed, or being by him distrusted to be infe- vonthire. rior to the Importance of the Service, he fat down at Honington, whilst the Seditious did almost what they would: Upon this heaviness of the King's Forces going forward, interpreted to be Fear and want of Mettle, divers, either of the most audacious, or such as Po-verty or fear of Punishment might easily plunge into any Mischief, reforted to the seditions daily from Cornwal and other Parts; as bad Humours gather to a Bile, or as divers Kennels flow to one Sink, fo in short time their Numbers increas'd to 10000 tall and able Bodys. They were chiefly guided by Hum-phrey Arundel, a Man well elecm'd for Milita-ry Services. About fix others of inferior Note were bold Actors with him. Many Priests, un-worthy to be nam'd, were also impetuous and importunate Incenfors of the Rage; Men of some Academical Learning in Discourse, but their Minds not feafon'd with any virtuous or religious Thoughts.

Affuredly the vulgar Multitude is not unfit-ly term'd a Beaft, with many Heads not guided, I will not fay with any proportion but portion of Reason: Violence and Obstinacy, like two untam'd Horses, draw their Desire in a blindfold Carrier. They intend most foo-lishly what they never put in action, and often act most madly what they never intended; all that they know to do, is that they know not what to do; all that they mean to determine, proves a Determination and Meaning to do nothing. They attribute more to others Judgments than to their own, esteeming bold Obstinacy for bravest Courage, and impudent Prating for soundest Wisdom. And now being assembled into one Company, rather without a Lord than at Liberty, to accomplify their Mifery they fall to Division, of all Calamities the worst, and so broken in their Desires, that many could not learn either wherefore they came, or what they would have done. Some were Commonwealth Mutiners, and fome did mutiny for Religion. They who were for the Commonwealth, could agree upon no certain Thing, but it was certain they could agree upon nothing: Some would have no Justices, some no Gentlemen, fome no Lawyers nor ordinary Courts of Justice; and above all Inclosures must down: but whether all, or which, or how to be employ'd, none could tell, every Man regarding what he follow'd, but not what might follow thereof. All would have the State transform'd, but whether reform'd or deform'd, they neither car'd nor knew. They concurred only in confus'd Clamours, every Man thinking it no less reasonable that his Opinion should be heard, than that his Body should be adventur'd.

The religious Mutiners were not altogether fo various in their Voices, as having fome few Spirits among them by whom they were both ftirred and guided: thefe in the name of the People, hammer'd up the Articles following, and fent them to the King; upon granting of which they professed that both their Bodys and Goods should be absolutely at the King's Devotion.

Their Demands

1. That Curats should administer Baptism at all times of Necessity, as well on Week-days as on Holy-days.

2. That their Children might be confirm'd by the Bishop, whensoever they should within the Dio-cess resort unto him.

3. Forasmuch as they believ'd, that after the words of Confecration no Substance of Bread remained but the real Body and Blood of Christ: That the Mass should be celebrated without any Man communicating with the Priest, for that many put no difference between the Lord's Body and other Meat, some saying that it is Bread be-fore and after, some saying that it is prositable to none except he receives it.

4. That they might have refervation of the 1540. Lord's Body in their Charches. 5. That they might have holy Bread and holy

Water, in remembrance of Christ's precious Body and Blood.

6. That God's Service might be faid or fano with an audible Voice in the Quire, and not forth like a Christmass Play.

7. That Priests live chast (as St. Paul did) without marriage, who faid to all honest Priests, Be ye followers of me.

Be ye jouwers of me.

S. That the fix Articles fet forth by King Henry the Eighth be fo used as they were in his Time, at least until the King should accomplish his full Age. (v)

Now albeit the King knew right well that The Anno Reasons would ferve for denial, and that the service yielding to them in any thing would profit therets, him nothing, but rather make them rise to more infolent Demands; yet he return'd an Anfwer in writing, and therewith his general Pardon, in cafe they would defift, and open their Eyes to differ how their uncircumfpect Simplicity had been abus'd, efpecially in Matters of Religion: for that as fome Virtues re-femble fome Vices fo near, as the one is often taken for the other; fo Religion and Superfition do fo nearly refemble, that it was eafy for Men to difguife the one under the Mask of the other. First, therefore he reprov'd them fairly for their diforderly Assemblies, against the peaceable People of the Realm, and against the Honour of his Estate, fearing much that by reason of their Disobedience, his Lenity should appear to be lefs than he would have it; also for that they us'd his Name in all their Writings, not only without his Authority. even against himself, abusing thereby the Weakness of many, and drawing them into society of their Evil. Then he pitied their Ignorance and the Errors thence arifing, whereby they were allur'd to new Hopes by fome, who could not thrive so well by their honest Endeavours as by Rapine and Spoil; who ftop'd all Course of Law and Discourse of Reason. to open the Floodgate of their unmeasurable Madness; who to overthrow the State pretend Liberty, but if they should overthrow it all Liberty were lost.

For, faith he, who hath born you in hand that Children even in case of necessity cannot be baptiz'd but upon Holidays? whereas there is no Day nor Hour wherein the Minister is not only permitted but commanded to baptize. By like abufe you are perfuaded that many hold that the bleffed Sacrament of Christ's Body doth nothing differ from common Bread; whereas Laws, Statutes, Proclamations, common Practice agree, that common Bread is only to fustain the Body, but this blessed Bread is Food for the Soul. Touching Confirmation, as root for the soul. Touching Confirmation, doth any believe that a Child baptiz'd is damn'd unless it be confirm'd? If it be baptiz'd and also confirm'd is it fav'd only by Confirmation, and not by Baptis'n? Or is it the more sav'd by Confirmation? Children are confirm'd at the Age of Discretion, to teach them what they receiv'd in their Infancy; they

(v) The full and whole Answers made to these Articles of the Rebels are set down in Holling shed's Chronicle; whereof

our Author hath given here fome imperfect Additact things of the King, confifting in faffeen Articles more, the first whereof was, the will have all the General Commits, and thisy Decrees of our Fore-fathers observed, kept and performed.
And whospewer shall again for them, we hold them as thereticky. To this and the rest, Archbishop Crammer wrote excellent are taught by Confirmation to continue in that where to they were baptiz'd. Oh how much do they need who will never be content! what may fatisfy those who have no Limits to their Defires!
Answers, which are published in the Appendix to the Memorials of his Vie. J. S.

with their own Estate, or by wast of Villages, 1540-they afpir'd to the Spoil and Subjection of They Lay and they are they better with their own Estate, or by wast of Villages, 1540-they apply they will their own Estate, or by wast of Villages, 1540-they apply they apply they are they better with their own Estate, or by wast of Villages, 1540-they apply they apply they apply they apply they are they better where they better t Defires!

As for the Order of Service and Use thereof in the English Tongue, which you esteem new, it is no other than the old, the same Words in English which were in Latin, except a few things omitted so fond, that it had been a Shame to have heard them in English. And how can any reasonable Man be offended to underftand what God by his Word speaketh unto them, what they by their Prayers speak unto God? If the Service were good in Latin, it remains fo in English, for nothing is alter'd but to make you understand what is said. In like fort the Mass with great Judgment and Care was reduc'd to the fame manner as Christ left it, as the Apostles us'd it, as the antient

Fathers receiv'd, practis'd and left it.

But you would in sober earnest have the six Articles again reviv'd: Do you understand what you would have, or are you Mafters of your own Judgment? If you understand them and yet desire them, it is not long since they were enacted, and have fince drawn much Blood from the Subjects: As would you have bloody Laws again in Life, or would they any long time be endur'd? Upon pity they were taken away, upon Ignorance they are again demanded: Verily that in the Gospel may truly be said of you, ye ask ye know not what, for ye neither know what Good ye shall have by receiving them, nor what Evil you have lost by their abolishing: our Intention is to have our Laws written with Milk, but you would have them written with Blood. They were establish'd by Law and fo observ'd, altho with much Expence of Blood; they are abolish'd by Law with sparing of Blood, and that also must be obferv'd: for unless Laws be duly observ'd, neither the Authority of the Prince, or Safety of the Peo-ple can be preferv'd.

And whereas you would have them remain in force until our full Age, if you had known what you fpeak, you never would have given breath to fuch an unfeafon'd thought: for what is our Authority the less for our Age, or shall we be more King hereafter than now? or are you less Subjects now than in future times you shall be? Verily as a natural Man we have now Youth, and by God's Sufferance expect Age; but as a King we have no difference in Years, we are rightful King by God's Ordinance, and by Descent from our Royal Ancestors, and not by any set Number of Years: and much it is to be fear'd, that they who mov'd you to require this Suspence of time, would absolutely deny our Royal Power, if they durst so plainly express themselves.

The feditious, as Men always dangerous, when they have once broken Awe, interpreted this or any other mild Dealing to proceed from fome faining or fainting Disposition, either doubting or daring most when they are most fairly intreated: and the more to inflame the Popular Rage, fresh Rumours were devis'd and divulg'd, that the People should be constrain'd to pay a ratable Tax for their Sheep and other Cattle, and an Excife for every thing which they should eat or drink; by which and other like Reports the simple were blinded, the malicious edg'd, all hardned from applying to any peaceable Perfuafion.

advis'd, and therefore clos'd their Gates, and refus'd to have any Intercourse with the seditious, but either by common Obedience, or else by Hostility and Arms. The popular Fury being thus ftop'd, fwell'd the more. Where-upon they refolv'd to apply their Endeavours for taking the City, and either by defroying it to increase Terrour, or else by sparing it to win an Opinion of Moderation: they had no great Artillery to open a Breach, and yet without Reason they gave an Assault, and us'd divers Means to mount the Walls: but the more Madness they shew'd in their Attempt, with the greater Loss they were driven back. Then they fir'd the Gates at two feveral times, but the Citizens at both times by casting in Wood maintain'd the fire, until they had caft up a Half Moon within; upon which when the Seditious attempted to enter, they were flain from the Corners like Dogs. After this they min'd the Walls, laid the Pouder and ramm'd the Mouth; but the Citizens made a Countermine, whereinto they pour'd fuch Plenty of Water, that the wet Powder could not be fir'd. In the mean time the Lord Privy-Seal lay The Lord

at Honington expecting more firength: and Privy-knowing right well that as the Multitude are counters to flow to danger, fo are they most desperate worsteth when they are ftir'd, but whilft he expected them. more Company, many of those he had slip'd away from him; hereupon he refolv'd for retaining the rest, to entertain some present Enterprize, and first he assay'd by a by-way to enter and relieve the City, but the feditious for prevention hereof had fell'd all the Trees between S. Mary Ourry and Exeter, and laid them crofs the way, in such fort as they im-peach'd his Passage. Hereupon siring such Places as he thought might ferve either for use or ease to the seditious, he determin'd to return to Honington. But the feditions forelaid a Bridg, over which he should pass, call'd Fenington Bridg; and in a great fair Meddow behind the Bridg plac'd a great number under Banners difplay'd. The Lord Privy-Seal had but a finall Company in regard of the feditious. Yet with good Order and Courage he attempted the Bridg, but could not force it: at the last finding the River to be fordable at the foot of the Bridg, he there fet over his Horfe, whereupon the Guards appointed to defend the Bridg forfook their Charge, and retir'd to their Strength in the Meddow. Then the King's Forces charg'd lively upon them, and they again as stoutly receiv'd the Charge; but being an untrain'd Multitude without either Soldier or Guide, they were foon broken and put to flight: yet they rally'd themfelves and tumultuoufly charg'd upon the King's Forces, but were prefently routed and cast out of the Field; the Chase was not far pursu'd for fear of fresh Succours from before the City. standing the seditions lost 600 of their Men, and the Lord Privy-Seal return'd without Loss to Honington.

At this time the Seditious liv'd by Rapine A Famine and Ruin of all the Country, omitting no- in Exerciting of that which Savages enrag'd in the height of their unruly Behaviour do commit; And now unable to support themselves either | but the Citizens driven to great Distress for

Bran moulded in Cloths, for that otherwise alty and of his Love. it would not cleave together: Their finest Flesh was of their own Horses, especially for twelve days they endur'd most extreme Famine. During this time they were much encourag'd by an aged Citizen, who brought forth all his Provisions, and faid, that as he did com-municate unto them his Store, so would he participate of their Wants; and that for his part he would feed on the one Arm, and fight with the other, before he would confent to put the City into the feditious hands. Herewith the Lord Privy Seal, for want of Power to perform any Services, was about to rife and return to London. But in good time the TheL.Gray Lord Gray came to him with Supply of For-

comes with ees most Almane Horsemen, and with him a Supply-came Spinola with his Band of Italians, consisting of 300 Shot, purposed for Scotland, also 200 Men were sent unto him from Reading; fo being in all not much above 1000 ftrong, he made head against the Seditious. So departing from Honington, he came to a little Village, from whence lay two ways towards Exeter, both which were block'd up with two Bulwarks of Earth made by the Seditious; hither they had driven 2000 Men from before Exeter, whom they divided into four Companies. In either of the Bulwarks they lodg'd one; at the Bridg near the Back of one of the Forts a third Company was plac'd; the fourth was laid in ambush behind a Hedg on the Highway, at the back of the other Fortress. The Arrier of the King's Forces led by Captain Wavers fet upon one of the Forts, the Vaward and Battail upon the other; Spinola with his Shot did bear upon those within, who offer'd to appear upon the Walls. At length Captain Wavers won the Fort which he affail'd. and drave the Defendants to the Bridg, where one of their Companies made stand. Herewith the other two Companies did forthwith refort unto them, one from the fecond Fort, the other from the Amboth. These casting a strong guard upon the Bridg, marshal'd the Residue upon a plain ground behind the Bridg. The King's Forces coming forward, drave the Guard from the Bridg; and making profit of the fresh Terror, set upon those who were The Sediti. upon the Plain. The King's Pootmen were our coated firmly rank'd, the Troops of Horse in good our readed litting talk of, the Troops of Lora in good and flain. Array; whereas the Seditions had neither Weapons, Order, or Counfel, but being in all things unprovided, were flain like Beafts.

> fparing one. This fad Blow abated much the Courage and Hope of the Seditious; and yet the next day about 2000 of them affronted the King's Forces at the entrance of a Highway, whom when they found both ready and resolute to fight, they defir'd Enterparlance, and in the mean time began to fortify. But understanding that their Intention was known, more like Slaves than Soldiers they furiously ran away. The same night the Seditious before Exeter rais'd their Siege, and therewith discharg'd the City from many Miseries and

They took their Flight towards St. Maryeliffe;

but the Soldiers, upon difdain of their unworthy Actions, fill'd themselves with Revenge and Blood, and slew of them above 900, not

549. want of Victuals, Bread they made of coarfest a perpetual Remembrance both of their Loy-

Now the Seditious driven almost to a dead Tempton defpair, and supported only by the Vehemency again at of Defire, brought forth their Forces to Clifton heath. Heath, to whom many of the most vile Vulgars reforted hourly, which much inlarg'd their Numbers but nothing their Strength But what Measure have Men in the increase of Madness, if they keep not themselves from falling into it? They brought with them a Crucifix upon a Cart cover'd with a Canopy, and beset with Crosses, Tapers, Banners, Holy Bread and Holy Water, as a Representation of those things for which they fought. The Lord Gray incourag'd his Men to fet fharply upon the vague Villains, good neither to live peaceably nor to fight, and to win at once both Quiet to the Realm, and to themselves Glory: fo he brought the King's Forces upon them, rather as to a Carnage than to a Fight, infomuch as without any great either loss or danger to themselves, the greatest part of the But stain seditions were slain, diverse also were taken, and taken. of whom the common fort were forthwith executed by martial Law, the chiefest Leaders were sent to receive Justice at London; some escap'd and fail'd to Bridgmater, who taking Dangers to be the only Remedy against Dangers, endeavour'd to fet up the Sedition again, but they were speedily repress'd, and thereby the Sedition suppress'd whosly.

The Sedition thus broken and beaten down, The Major

Sir Anthony Kingson Provost Marshal of the of Edmin King's Army was deem'd by many not only lang'd by cruel but uncivil, and inhumane in his Execu-One Boyer Mayor of Bodmin in Cornwall was observ'd to have been among the seditious, but by abfolute Inforcement as many others The Marshal wrote to him a Letter that he would dine at his House upon a day which he appointed; the Mayor feem'd glad, and made for him the best Provision that he could: upon the day he came, and a large Company with him, and was receiv'd with many Ceremonies of Entertainment. A little before Dinner he took the Mayor afide, and whifper'd him in the Ear, that Execution must that day be done in the Town, and therefore requir'd him that a pair of Gallows should be fram'd and erected against the time that Dinner should end. The Mayor was diligent to accomplish his Demand, and no fooner was Dinner ended, but he demanded of the Mayor whether the Work was finish'd; the Mayor answer'd that all was ready. I pray you, faid the Provoft, bring me to the Place; and therewith he took him friendly by the Hand. Here, heholding the Gallows, he ask'd the Mayor whether he thought then to be strong enough; yes, said the Mayor, doubtles they are: Weil, said the Provost, get you up speedily, for they are prepar'd for you; I hope, answer'd the Mayor, you mean not as you fpeak; in faith, faid the Provost, there is no Remedy, for you have been a bufy Rebel, and so without Respite or Defence he was strangl'd to

Near the faid Place dwelt a Miller, who had And a Milbeen a bufy Actor in that Rebellion; and fear-ler's Man, ing the Approach of the Provost Marshal, told a fturdy tall Fellow his Servant that he had occasion to go from home, and therefore gave Despairs. The King afterwards enlarg'd the Directions that if any one should inquire after constant Obedience of the City, with Enlarge-the Miller, he should not speak of him, but ment both of Liberties and of Revenues; he gave unto them the Mannor of Eurland, for so he had been for three years before: So the 15.49. Provost came and call'd for the Miller, his Ser-The Provoft demanded how long he had kept the Mill; thefe three years answer'd the Servant : then the Provoft commanded his Men to lay hold on him, and to hang him on the nearest Tree: then the Fellow cry'd out that he was not the Miller but the Miller's Man; nay Sir, answer'd the Provost, I will take thee at thy word, and if thou beeft the Miller thou art a bufy Knave, if thou beeft not, thou art a false lying Knave, whatsoever thou art that the Fellow was but the Miller's Man, and what then faid he? could he ever have done his Mafter a better Service than to hang for him? and fo without more to do he was dispatch'd. Affuredly this might have pass'd for a tolerable left if it had not been in case of Life.

The Siege of Exeter

Diverse others were executed by Martial Law, and a great part of the Country was abandon'd to the Spoil of the Soldiers, who not troubling themselves to discern between a Subject and a Rebel, whilst their Liberty lasted, made indifferently Profit of both.

A rfolk. dangerous, both because their Strength was greater, as also because the City of Normich was a Friend unto them, or at least wish'd them no great harm, and being faithful to neither them alive. fide, was always ready to entertain the Attleborough, where they threw down the Fences of one Green of Wilby, who was suppos'd to have inclos'd a part of Attleborough Common adjoining to the Common Pasture of Harlham. Afterward they affembl'd at a Play accustom'd yearly to be kept at Wimondham, and from thence went to Morley a Mile distant, and there cast down the Ditches of one Hubbard, next by Incitement of John Flowerdew of Nethelet, a Gentleman of good Estate: but never expressing Desire of Quiet, they did the like to certain Inclofures of Robert Ket a Tanner in Wimondham, and receiv'd of him thirty eight Shillings and four pence for their Labor. This Ket, who hath made his obscure beginning well an Army. known by his mischievous Attempts to requite Flowerder, carry'd them to Nethefet, where they caft down all the inclos'd Pafture of Flowerdem, and not ftaying there he led them indiffe-rently to diverse other Places, laying all Inclofures where he came rather wast than open.

keth the gaint Gen-

And the rather to train them to his Allure, he told them both often and with vehement Voice, how they were overtop'd and trodden down by Gentlemen, and other their good Mafters, and put out of Possibility ever to recover foot; how whilft Rivers of Riches ran into their Landlords Coffers, they were par'd to the quick, and fed upon Pease and Oats like Beasts; how being sleec'd by these for private Benefit, they were flay'd by publick Burthens of State, wherein whilft the richer fort favour'd themselves, they were gnawn to the very Bones; how the more to terrify and forture them to their Minds, and wind their Necks more furely under their Arm, their tyrannous Mafter did often implead, arreft, caft them into Prison, and thereby consume them to worfe than nothing; how they did palliate these Pillaries with the fair Pretence of Authority and of Law, fine Workmen I of Ships, and any other Furniture of War out warrant you, who can fo closely carry their of Houses where it could be found. This Tree

Dealings, that then Men only diffcover them, 1549 how harmlefs Counfels were fit for tame Fools. but for them who had already ftir'd there was no Hope but in adventuring boldly.

The Likeness of Affection and the masking of Vices under pleafant Terms, procur'd not only Affent, but Applause to all that he faid: and fo by often and carneft repeating of these and the like Speeches, and by bearing a confident Countenance in all his Actions, the Vulgars took him to be both valiant and wife, and a fit Man to be their Commander, being glad they had found any Capt iin to follow.

Their Numbers increas'd daily, and therewith their Boldness and Power to do barm: They were largely fupply'd at the first both with Victuals and Arms, albeit not with open Confent of the Places adjoining, yet with much private Good-will; for many did not only fecretly favour, but openly approve their Deligns. Generally every good Man was much griev'd; many upon fome diflikes before rejoic'd in their greater Harms, and not regarding in what Liberty they flood, were ready to run into any Bondage. The Sheriff fted, made indifferently Profit of both.

The feditious in Northfolk were fomewhat clamation in the King's Name, that forthwith they should peaceably depart; and had he not been ready, and his House swift to depart in time, he should hardly have departed from

After this they drew towards Normich, and They draw

feated themselves at Morshold near Mount Norwich. Surrey, and upon St. Leonhards, which hangeth over Norwich: Another Company feated at Rifing near Lynne, but they were diflodg'd by the Gentlemen of the Country, and fored to draw to their Fellows at Monlhold. Here the main Body encamp'd, and fent divers light Companies forth to terrify and rove. To this place many reforted out of Suffolk, and from all places of Norfolk, many for want, but most upon a turbulent mind; and in all places thereabout Beacons were fir'd and Bells rung, as a roaring Furtherance to his Uproar; fo as in fhort time the Multitude increas'd to 16000. and yet rather to be efteem'd a Number than

Their Actions were cover'd and difguis'd Coniers with Mantles, very usual in time of Disorder, Lain. of Religion and Justice; for they had one Coniers for their Chaplain, a Man brought up in idle and dead Studies, who both Morning and Evening read folemu Prayers: many Sermons they also had either by Intreaty or Inforcement. But Dr. Parker, afterwards Archbishop of Canterbury, in his Sermon before them, touch'd them for their living fo near, that they went near to touch him for his Life. As for Juftice, they had a Benchunder a Tree, where Ket ufually fat, and with him two of every Hundred whence their Companies had been rais'd. Here Complaints were exhibited and examin'd as well against those of their own Company, who receiv'd Judgment for their Offences, as against any Gentleman or other in the Country: by Commandment from hence many were very violently pull'd from their Houses, of whom some were enforc'd to follow them, others were cast into Prison, and haply fetter'd with Irons, and not a few rudely and dangerously en-treated: From hence also Warrants were fent forth in the King's Name, whereby Ordnance, Pouder and Shot were commanded out was ever fince term'd the Oak of Reformat 549.

Require the King to fend an

Herald to

And now the Seditious being advanc'd unto the height both of their Power and of their Pride, presented certain Complaints to the King, and delir'd that a Herald or fome other Messenger of Credit may be sent unto them to receive Articles of all those Matters wherewith they concern'd themselves to be griev'd. The King took it for a great Indignity that base Traitors and Thieves should offer to capitulate with him as Enemies Law, fully holding the Field; and yet knowing right well, that as good Counfels gather Strength by time, fo upon a little Respite evil Advices either vanish or grow weaker to win some Advantage of The King's time, return'd an Answer: That seeing he was ready always to receive and relieve the quiet Complaints of any of his Subjects, he marvel'd much either upon what Opinion of Necessity in themselves or of Injustice in him, they should first put themselves into Arms, as a Party against him, and then present him with their bold Petitions, especially at such a time, when having fully reform'd many other Mat-ters, he had lately fet forth a Proclamation against excessive Prices of Victuals, and had also appointed Commissioners with ample Authority for divers other things, whereof many doubtless had been by that time redress'd, had not these Disorders given impediment to his Deligns, generally when they might well differn both his Care and Endeavours to fet all Matters in a right Frame of Reformation, as might belt fland both with his Honour and their Sureties, and with Justice and Providence towards all. Touching their particular Complaint for reducing Lands and Farms to their antient Rents, altho it could not be done by his ordinary Power without a Parliament, yet he would fo far extend his Authority Royal and Absolute as to give Charge to his Commissioners to travel with all Perfons within their Counties, to reduce Lands to their former Rents whereat they were farm'd forty years before, and that Rents should be paid at Afichelmas then next enfuing according to that Rate, and that fuch as would not prefently yield to his Commissioners for that redress, fhould at the Parliament which he would forth-

> Concerning their Complaint for Price of Wools, he would forthwith give Order that his Commissioners should cause Clothiers take Wools, paying only two parts of the Price whereat they were commonly fold the year next before; and for the other third part, the Owner and Buyer should stand to such Order as the Parliament should appoint. At which time also he would give Order, that landed Men to a certain Proportion should be neither Clothiers nor Farmers, and farther that one Man should not use divers Occupations, nor have Plurality of Benefices, nor of Farms; and generally that he would then give Order for all the Residue of their Requests, in such fort as they should have good Cause not only to remain quiet, but to pray for him, and to adventure their Lives in his Service.

with fummon be overul'd.

This Parliament he promis'd fhould begin in the beginning of October then next enfuing, against which time they should appoint four or fix of their County, to present Bills of their Defires; and in the mean feafon apply to Necessity (whereof he would be forry) by tharper Means to maintain both his own Dignity and the Common Quiet.

These Letters carrying the King's Name in And a gethe front, and the Protector's with the King's need Par Signature at the foot, were fent by a Herald dom. to Monshold, a Place guarded with great, but confus'd and diforder'd Strength of the Seditions. Herewith also the King fent his general Pardon, in cafe they would quietly delift and diffolve. But the Seditious were fo far from accepting these or any other Offers of Accord, that hereupon they discharg'd the first shot against the City; and because their Artillery being planted on a Hill, could little or nothing endamage the Walls, they remov'd their Battery to a lower ground: but because the City was weak, and the Citizens but weakly dil pos'd against them, with no Danger, and little Travel, they made themfelves Mafters thereof. Here they imprison'd the Mayor and many other of the chief Citizens, and order'd all things at their Pleasure, but maintain'd the chief Seat at Monshold, where it was before. The Mayor of Norwich and some other Gentlemen of Credit they constrain'd to be present at all their Counfels, with Intention to countenance their Actions with fome Authority. but in no fort to be guided by them. All this time the King's Forces advanc'd but flowly, being imploy'd in appealing the like Diforders more near the Heart of the Kingdom. So that it is most certain, that had these Seditious been fo mischievously bent as in Number they were great, they might have prov'd more dangerous than they were; but they aim'd not at ambitious Ends, their rude Earthly Spirits were never feafon'd with any manly adventurous thought, and therefore they were content with a licentious and idle Life, wherein they might fill their Bellies with Spoil rather than by Labour: to this fide their Companies rang'd in all parts thereabouts, and took away for their Housholdstuff and Goods; but especially they brought to their Stations many Droves of Cattle; for belides Decrout of Parks, befides Beeves, befides Fowls of all kinds, t few days were brought out of the Country 2000 Muttons; fuch Numbersof Sheep were daily brought in, that a fat Weather was fold for four Pence. This was interpreted for a prefent Plenty, but it made fuch Scarcity afterwards, as could not in many years be repair'd. Sir Edmund Knevet Kt. with fuch Company as he could affemble, charg'd upon one of their Watches by night; but he was fo far inferior unto them, that it was efteem'd a great For-tune that he departed from them with his

But foon after the Lord William Parre Mar- Marquiss of Northampton was fent against them with of Northampton and a small Band of Indian thampton 1500 Horsemen, and a small Band of Italians, jentaganjt under a Captain nam'd Malatesta: he was actiem. company'd with the Lord Sheffield, the Lord Wentworth, with divers Knights and Gentlemen of Principal Estimation. When he approach'd within a Mile of the City, the Magistrates and chief Citizens upon Summons reforted to his Standard, yielded unto him the City Sword, and profess'd their own Loyalty, and excus'd others of inferior force, who either by Igno-rance favour'd the Seditions, or thro fear durft not declare against them; with these the Lord Marquifs enter'd the City at St. Scephens Gate, themselves to their Harves, and other peace- the City Sword being born before him, and able business at home, and not to drive him therewith caus'd the chief Citizens to assemble in the Market Place, both to give Advice and to take Direction how the City might best be defended.

Vol. II.

In the mean time the Strangers who came with him, whether by Appointment or by Adventure, islu'd forth of the City, to view both the Numbers and Orders of the Seditious. They again first put forth their Archers, then their Horsemen, lastly a Company ran furiously forth without either Direction of others or Judgment in themselves, intending to have inclos'd the Italians: but here might have been a great Difference between Men practis'd to fight, and Men accustom'd only to spoil. For the Italians in so well advis'd Order receiv'd the Editious coming rashly upon them without cither Fear or Skill, that divers of the tumultuous Numbers were flain: at the last the Italians perceiving themselves almost inviron'd, cast themselves into a Ring and retir'd back into the City. But they left one Gentleman of their Company behind, who being over-thrown from his Horse fellinto the Hands of the Seditions, who like Savages spoil'd him of his Armour, and of his Apparel, and hang'd him over the Walls of Mount Surry.

They aj sault the

This caus'd the Seditious to remain the first part of the Night within their Station, which by reason of the Nastiness of the beattly Multitude, might more fitly be term'd a Kennel than a Camp. Within the City diligent Watch was kept, which was often visited and The Soldiers remain'd in their reliev'd. Armour all Night, and kept fo great a Fire in the Market place, that all Parts of the City were lighted therewith. The Seditious about Midnight began to floot off their great Artillery very lively and thick: hereupon the Lord Marquis directed part of his Forces to rampart the Gates and ruinous Places of the Walls, which the Seditious efpying, with a hideous Roaring and Rage they pour'd themfelves upon the City, some endeavour'd to fire the Gates, some to mount over the Walls, and fome to pass the River: the fight continu'd three hours, and it is almost incredible with what rude Rage the Seditious maintain'd their Affault; fome being almost disabled to hold up their Weapons would strive what they could to strike their Enemies; others being thrust the three heart methods, colors being must thro the Body with a Spear, would run them-felves further to reach those who gave them that deadly Wound; at the last their Ob-flinacy was overcome, and they return'd to their Cabbins with loss of 300 of their Com-

The Refidue of the Night which was not much, the Soldiers within the City apply'd in refreshing themselves; but the next Morning the Seditious both with greater Strength and better Order enter'd the City by the Hofpital, and began a most desperate Surprize. The Forces of the Marquis, albeit inferior in Numbers, yet by reason of the Freshness of the Place might have been sufficient, if they had charg'd in order, and together; but being scatter'd in the streets, they were not able to make Reliftance: herewith they were much endamag'd by the Citizens from their Houses, so as 100 of them perish'd, many were hurt, and the Refidue driven to forfake the City; the Lord Sheffields Horfe fell with him into a Ditch, whereby he fell into the Power of the Seditious, and as he pull'd of his Heltlemen to the Number of 30 were taken and 1549 committed to fireight Prifon, where they were vex'd alike with Scarcity and Scorn. The Seditious lost about seven score of their Company; and yet much flesh'd with this Success they spoil'd many Parts of the City, and fir'd the Houses of those whom they esteem'd not to be their Friends: but the Rage of the Fire was at first binder'd, and then appeas'd by fall of a fudden Shower of Rain; whereupon many prefag'd that the Flames of this Sedition should neither spread far nor long endure. The Report of this Repulse flying to London, the most was made of that which was true, and many Falfities added thereto. The Earl of Warmick was The Earl of fent with fuch Forces both English and Stran-Warwick gers, wherewith he had appointed for Service fent. in Scotland: when he came to Cambridge, the in Seatund: when he came to Cambridge, the Lord Marquiß reforted unto him, and allo the Lord Willoughly, Powers and Bray, his two Sons Ambrofe and Robert, and many Knights and Gentlemen of Name; with these he march'd somewhat leisurely, because the Importance of the Danger might make the Service the more efteem'd. At length he prefented his Forces, consisting of 6000 Foot, and 1500 Horse, before the City upon the Plain, and forthwish four to surrough the Sections. forthwith fent to fummon the Seditious, and to offer Pardon if it would be accepted; but neither Summons nor Pardon was any thing regarded. Infomuch as when the King's Pardon was offer'd by a Herald, a lewd Boy turn'd towards him his naked Breech, andus'd Words futable to that Gesture: one standing by and mov'd with this barbarous Behaviour, charg'd a Harquebur upon the Boy, and stroke him with a Shot a little above the Reins. Hereat those Seditious that seem'd moderate before became desperate, and those who were desperate seem'd stark mad; whence such Tu-mults, such confus'd Hollowings and Howlings enfu'd, that the Herald was glad to withdraw

Then the Earl planted his Cannon against St. Stephen's Gate, and fet Pioneers to work against the Brazen Gate. The Cannon against St. Suppen's Gate executed fo well, that in fhort time the Portcullis and Gate were broken. and Entry open'd into the City; others enter'd at the brazen Gate, but in that Entrance fome were flain. Also the Mayor's Deputy open'd Westwick Gate, where the Earl himself enter'd without Reliftance, and polless'd himfelf of the Market Place; at these Entrances 130 of the seditious were slain, 60 were taken and forthwith executed by Martial Law. As the Earl's Carriages were brought into the City, neither guarded nor regarded as they should, divers of them were surprized by the Seditious, and driven to Monshold. At this Booty they were more joyful than griev'd at the Lofs, either of the City or of their Companions, especially for that they were supply'd thereby with good store of Pouder and Shot, wherein their Want did most consist.

himfelf.

The Earl being in possession of the City, rampar'd all the Gates, except those which open'd towards Monthold, wherein he planted good Artillery. But the Seditious, the more terrible by reason of their more desperate Fury, fell upon those Gates, albeit without order, yet with fuch rude and carcless Courage and Cries, that they beat back the Guards, flew the principal Gunners, carmet to shew them who he was, a Butcher slew ry'd away their Artillery, and therewith him with the Strole of a Club. Divers Gencertain Carts laden with Munition: here were Boys observed to be so desperately re- | The Seditions ranged themselves for the Fight, folv'd, as to pull Arrows out of their own Flesh, and deliver them to be shot again by the Archers on their side: Hereupon the Earl was enforced to block up those Gates as he had done the rest, but the City was so weak that it could hardly be defended.

And enter

For the Seditious being now furnish'd with Artillery, Powder and Shot, batter'd Bishopsgate, and calt down a great part of the Walls upon that fide of the City. They afterwards palled the River likewife, and affail'd the Earl's Men upon Advantage in the Streets, of whom many they flew, and fir'd divers Places, proftrating two Parishes almost entirely; fo they did mischief, they little car'd what they did, or to what End: And in such fort the Danger increas'd, that many perswaded the Earl to submit Courage to Rage, and for a time to abandon the City. But he not easily vincible in Spirit, and well affur'd that having ftop'd all Passages for Relief, thortness of Provision would in very short time draw the Obflinacy of the Seditions to fhorter Limits, drew his Sword, and caus'd others to do the like, and (according to a Soldiery Cuftom in Cases of Extremity) by enterchange of a Kifs by every of them upon the Swords of others, fealed a Refolution to maintain the Place.

Affuredly as it is advantageable to a Physician to be call'd to the Cure of a declining Disease, so it is for a Commander to suppress a Sedition which hath pass'd the height; for in both alike the noxious Humour doth first weaken, and afterwards waft and wear to nothing; and befides it is scarce possible that a rude and ruinous Multitude should continue long together, if any Prevention be apply'd, but they will fall into irrepairable Wants: And fo it hapned to these Seditious, who after three days, finding their Provision to fail, fired their Cabbins built of Timber and cover'd with Bushes, and with a broken Noise between certain Questions and doubtful An-fwers, dislodg'd from their Hill, and en-trench'd them at the foot thereof, in a Valley call'd Duffendale, where they invited the Earl to a prefent Encounter. And as there hath feldom hapned any Sedition within this Realm, but the chief Actors therein have been abus'd with fome Prophecies of doubtful Construction, fo the Seditious were moved to remove to this Place, upon a Prophecy much credited among them, that they should fill it with flaughter'd Bodys; but whether of their Enemies or of their own it was left uncertain: The Words of the Prophecy were thefe;

A Prophecy which the Seditions depend on.

The Country Knuffs, Heb, Dick and Hick, With Clubs and clouted Shoon, Shall fill up Duffendale
With flaughter'd Bodies foon-

The Earl being newly supply'd with 1400 Horse, was glad that the Scditious had for faken their Hill, for that his Horfemen, in whom confifted his greatest Strength, could there perform but little Service: So the next Morning he fent forth all his Horfemen, of whom 1000 were ducing Prophets, a third was a most excellent Almanes, as accustom'd, so adventrous in Arms; his Foothe retain'd within the Town did much endammage the Forces of the King.

placing all the Gentlemen whom they had taken in Front, every two couple together, to make them fure from flarting away. The Earl, before he would charge, fent to them an Offer of a General Pardon, one or two of the Principal excepted. But this more chased the Rage of those who were resolved either to live or die together; and what cared they for Pardon who have nothing but a vile and fervile Life to lofe. For no more could be gotten from their Estates than from the shaving of an Egg; wherefore in a proud Scorn they answer'd this Offer with a great Shot, that strook the King's Standard-bearer on the Thigh, and his Horse on the Shoulder.

Hereupon the Earl commanded his Artille- The Earl ry to be applyed; the Almanes alfo, and Capensasteth tain Droop with his Troops, give a refolute Fam. Charge, and yet with find differeion, that most of the Captive Gentlemen who were placed in the Front escap'd without harm; these were fo well feconded by the Light-horfe, that in a fhort time they brake the Seditious, chafed them above three Miles, and filled themselves with Blood until Night: There died of them 2000, as King Edward took the Number, but our Histories report more than 3500. (10)

In the mean time they who guarded the Artillery and Baggage, inclosed themselves with Carriage and a Trench, and pitched Stakes to bear off the approach of Horses, determining to stand stifly upon their Defence. The Earl returning from the Execution, did certify them by Meflage, that because the King his Master was defirous to establish Peace, rather by Benighity than by Blood, he did assure them their Pardon if they would submit, otherwise they might expect nothing but Death. Anfiver was made, that they expected nothing but Death, and that they respected nothing at all, but it was by the Sword if they stood upon Defence, and by the Halter if they should yield; wherefore they made choice to die rather as Soldiers, than as Dogs.

The Earl fent again to know if they would The Rebels entertain their Pardon in case he should come accept a in Person and assure it? They answer'd, they did conceive him to be so Honourable, that from himself they would most thankfully embrace it. So he rode and caus'd their Pardon that it flould be perform'd. Then feeming to respect Life more than any other thing, they threw away their Weapons and Difloyalty together, and with Voices fo lowd as before they were lewd, wished all Joy and Prosperity to

the King

The Commander Ket having a good Horse, Ket is the fled away with the first; and the next day was ken. taken with his Brother William in a Barn, and brought with a Guard of twenty Horsemen to Normich, both of them having made good proof, that they were no lefs able to guide an Army in War, than they were to govern themselves in Peace.

Nine of the Principal were hang'd upon the Tree of Reformation, of whom two were fe-

Vol. II.

 $Q \neq 3$

Robert

⁽a) During this dangerous Infurrection. Six John Cheek, a very learned Man, and the King's Preceptor, wrote and published a Tract to them, intitled, The true Subject to the Rebel: Where in an expositulatory Address to them, he thewed ident the great Milchels of Sedition. This is princed at large in Inflinghed, and by it felf. J. 5.

it other kaneed.

and from thence return'd to be executed in Norfolk. Robert Ket was hang'd in Chains upon Normich-Callle, his Brother William was in like fort executed upon Wimondham Steeple, but not without fome murmuring, that that Church, dedicated to the Service of God, and which is polluted by violent Death, should be made a place of publick Execution. The day of this Defeat of the Seditions was a lone, time after yearly obferv'd for a feftival Day by the tabalitants of Normich, as well by cellation from Labour, as by reforting to Church to give publick Thanks for their deliverance. About the fame time another Sedition was

Another

Rifing in rais'd at Semer in the North-riding of Yorlfhire, vocahire whereof the chief Movers were William On-Hor a Gentleman, Thomas Dale a Parith Clark, and Stevenson a Post. They took encouragement from a dark and deceivable Prophecy, a common Law both of Obedience and Peace, Art glay, which did foretel that the Time flould arrive when there flould be no King, when the Nobility and Gentry flould be deftroy'd, when the Realm thould be ruled by four Governors elected by the Commons, holding a Parliament in Commotion, which flould begin at the South and North Seas of England 5 and that prefent they underflood to be the Time, and that the Rebellious in Devenshire, Norfolk, and Yorkshire, should draw together to accomplish this Prophecy. The Prefences were to reflore the Church to her antient Rights (for that was always one Note in their Mulick) to relieve the Poor, to abate the Rich, and generally to disburden the Realm of all Grievances, a feemly task for fach Undertakers.

> And now for execution hereof, first by firing of Beacons and ringing of Bells (as if the Coall had been affail'd by Enemies) they af-fembled about 3000 in Arms, whom they drew to be applyable to their purpose. Then to begin their great Work of Reformation, they flew one White a Gentleman, Savage a Merchant, and two others of meaner quality and left their Bodies naked upon the Wild near Semor. After this they pass'd to the Eaglriding in Yorkshire, their Company daily increating like a Snow-ball in rowling; and many they took with them much against their But no fooner was the King's Pardon prefented, but most of them fell off and di-· Iperfed, leaving Onbler and Dale almost alone. Thefe, as they were riding like Madmen from Town to Town, charging People in the King's Name to affemble at Thummanby, were ap prehended, and with four others of the moll funultuous, foon after executed at Tork; whole speedy Punishment Haid others who were thought to waver between Obedience and Revolt.

7% brench Now the French King supposing to make his break out hand by thefe rude Ravages in England, brake off his Treaty of Peace, proclaim'd Hoffility, and denounc'd the fame by his Embaffador to the King. Hereupon all French men in Fno-Land not Denizons were taken Prifoners, and all their Goods feiz'd for the King. The French King underflanding that certain English Ships lay at Yerlay, let forth a Fleet of Gallies and Ships, intending to furprize them as they lay at Anchor. But the Lighth being both vigi-lant and well appointed, in fuch fort did entertain them, that their Ships departed terribly torn, with loss of a thouland Men at the

Robert Ket and his Brother were fent to London, | leaft. The Trench King fearing left that the 1549. bad Success of this first Enterprize, might both U difcourage his People, and bring Difreputation ontoining its reope, and oring Priceputation to himself, forbad any Report to be made, not only of the Event, but of the Journey.

After this the Fronth King levy'd an Army He talget

by Land, wherewith marching towards Bul-two For laine, he took Blueknels and Newhaven, two rear Bul-Forts of the English near unto Bulloine. This laine. he did effect chiefly by the Freafon of one Sturton, a Ballard Son of Lord Sturton's, and by Revolt of divers Almanes who ferr'd in the Garifons, who being merely Mercenary, did eatily encline to the flrongetl. From whence the French King marched towards Eulloine; upon whose approach Sir Xi-cholas Annalt Captain of Eullingberge, holding the Place not of Strength to be held, with-drew all the Ordinance and Matters of Worth into High Bullvine, and with Ganpowder blew up the Fort. So the French King brought his Army before Bullvine; but because the Plague rag'd amongst his Soldiers, and the Weather was unfeationable by reason of much fall of Rain, he departed from his Army and left Cha-

Hilion Governor in his flead.

Chaftilion bent his Siege against the Pierre, Lays Siege which was creeted in Bulloine Haven, and af- to Butter battery of 20000 Shot or more, the toine. Breach was thought reafonable, and thereupon the Allault was given. But the fame was fo well encountred by the Valour of the Defendants, help'd with advantage of Place, that the Obitinacy of the Alfailants did nothing but increase their loss; so as the first Fury being broken and fpent, the French refolv'd to attempt the Place no more by Aflault, notwithstanding they continu'd the Siege, presented divers Skirmithes and false Attempts; but they theat both their Labour and Shot without putting the Defendants in any fear. Then they planted their Artillery against the Mouth of the Haven, to impeach supply of Victuals to the Fown. Yet the English Victualers fur-ceased not at the King's Adventure to bring all things necessary, until the end the Soldiers of the Town fer upon the French fuddenly by Night, flew many of them, and difinounted their Picces.

Then the French apply'd their Battery again, wherein they fometimes frent 1500 Shot in one day. But finding this to be a fruitlefs Fury, they afterwards us'd it more sparingly, and rather upon a flew of Hoffility, than upon any hope thereby to prevail. In the mean Seafon they charg'd a Galley with Gravel and Stones, and prepar'd to fink it in the midft of the Haven. But the Inglish took the Galley before it funk and drew it to the Shore, and us'd the Stones to reinforce the Pierre. After this they made Faggots of light Matter mixt with Pitch, Far, Fallow, Rolin, Pow-der and Wildfire, with intention to fire the Ships in the Haven; but that Enterprize was defeated by the Bulleauis, and their Baggots taken from the French. During thefe Enterfeits divers Skirmilhes paffed between the English and the French about the Frontiers of Calais, which as they were but light, to most of them ended with diladvantage to the French

And now if all thefe Froubles had not been fullicient to travail the Realm of Frydaid, at once a great Division fell among the Kobility; to much the more dangerous, by how much the Spirits were more active and high. And albeit the Heat thereof was much appear'd for

of the King, yet did it break forth in the end to tragical Events, not upon particular Persons but did much overflow, and almost overwhelm the whole Realm with difquiet, and hereof the most apparent Original was

The King's The King had two Uncles, Brounds to Uncles Jane his deceased Mother, Edward Duke of And Thomas Lord The King had two Uncles, Brothers to Queen Somerfet Lord Protector, and Thomas Lord Seymer Baron of Sudley, High Admiral of England. As the Duke was elder in Years, fo was he more flaid in Behaviour. The Lord Sudley was fierce in Courage, courtly in Fashion, in Personage starely, in Voice magnificent, but somewhat empty of Matter: Both were so faithfully affected to the King, that the one might well be termed his Sword, the other his Target. The Duke was greatest in favour with the People, the Lord Sudley most respected by the Nobility; both highly esteem'd by the King; both fortunate alike in their Advance-ments, both ruin'd alike by their own Vanity and Folly. Whilft thefe two Brothers held in Amity, they were like two Arms, the one defending the other, and both of them the King. But many things did move together to dissolve their Love, and bring them to ruin: First, their contrary Disposition, the one being tractable and mild, the other stiff and impatient of a Superior, whereby they liv'd but in cunning Concord, as Brothers glew'd together, but not united in grain: Then much fecret Envy was born against them, for that their new Luftre did dim the Light of Men honour'd with antient Nobility. Lastly, They were openly minded, as hafty and foon mov'd, fo uncircumfpect and easy to be minded. By these the Knot, not only of Love but of Nature, be- or participate of the other.

tween them was disfolv'd; so much the more pitty, for that the first Cause proceeded from the Pride, the haughty Hate, the unquiet Vanity of a mannish or rather of a devilish

For the Lord Sudley had taken to Wife Kit-Their therine Parre Queen Dowager, last Wife to Witers. King Henry the Eighth; a Woman beautify'd with many excellent Virtues, especially with Humility the Beauty of all other Virtues. The Duke had taken to Wife Anne Stanbope, a Woman for many Imperfections intolerable, but for Pride monftrons: She was exceeding both fubtle and violent in accomplishing her Ends, for which the fpurn'd over all respects both of Conficience and of Shane. This Woman did bear fuch invincible Hate, first against the Queen Dowager, for light Causes and womens Quarrels, especially for that she had precedency of place (w) before her, being Wife to the greatest Peer in the Land, then to the Lord Sudley for her fake; that albeit the Queen Dowager died by Childbirth, yet would not her Malice either die or decrease; but continually she rubbed into the Duke's duil Capacity, that the Lord Sudley differing from him in Opinion of Religion (y), fought nothing more than to take away his Life, as well in regard of the common Cause of Religion, as thereby happily to attain his Place. Many other things she boldly feign'd, being assur'd of easy belief in her heedless Hearer, always fearful and suspicious (as of feeble Spirit) but then more than ever, by reason of some late Opposition against him. Her Perfwasions she cunningly intermix'd with Tears, affirming, that the would depart from him, as willing rather to hear both of his Difgraces and Dangers, than either to fee the one

(z) This Story of the Dutchefs's Quarrel with the Queen about taking place, Hapward had neither from Stow, nor Hellingfled, nor yet from King Edward's Journal; none of which Writers Speak a word of ir. So that he must have from Sandors', who was the first Loroache of that Fable; and who thus relates it, "That there arofe a very great Conneil *De Sobija's between Queen Katherine Parte, and the Protector's Wite, who liould have the Precedency. And the Conteil refled mat, Am. to not in the Women, but patied to the Wen: And when the Emulation continually increaft, the Protector's Wite would glicken. • not let lier Hurband alone, till at laft it came to pafs, that the ProceCor (who aftho he ruled the King, yet was ruled by his Wile) must cut off this Brother, that nothing might be an inindance to the Will. Thus and an Author of fuels a profilest Character; it became not a just Bifforian and a good English man, to borrow any thing an Author of Iuch a proffigate Character, it became not a juft Bittorian and a good Englishman, to borrow any thing from unles confirmed with better Authority. J. S.

(1) The Author fuggefts, that this Lord Stadley differed from his Brother the Duke in Religion; that is, in other words, that he was a Lipith. No fuch thing appears in Hiffory, but rather that he was of the Religion now protefted and countenanced: For one of his laft Requests, when the Medfage was brought him to prepare for Death, was, that his Eaughter might be committed to the Care of the Dutches of Staffish, a laft Proteflant; and another was, that Mr. Lathor might be fent to him, no affish him with his Council and Prayers. Who would not have been a Child Father in for his Turn, had he been of a Religion different from Latymer. And here our Author different from Stadlers, who can be considered to the Prayers.

other times he too much follows; who faith, that the Admital was tainted with the fame Herefy with his Brother the Protector.

Procedor.

Here the Author Ilkewife will fearcely obtain Credit in other of his Reflexions upon the Duke, when he makes the first Cause of disfolving the Knot of these two Erothers Love to proceed from the Dutches; and that the rubbed into the The Probley shall Capacity (as he unhanslonely and radely treats with his Words that great Vere) that his Brother longle to testion take away his Life, and to artain his Place. — And that the Duke at length yielding bimself to her, did devise his Bro-detated in their Duschman and the bind great length yielding bimself to her, did devise his Bro-detated for their Duschman and the problem of the Brother Schollen bimself to the Control of the Brother Schollen bimself to the Control of the Brother Schollen bimself to the Control of the Lord's Fall, he is represented to come unjustily by his Death, by the unnutual adding of his Brother against many the him. And that he was tet on it all this Mischief, like a weak Man, by his Wise. This, if it were true, layeth a most Admiral, heavy Imparation upon the Duke. Eut furely he was no fuch Man as he shere delivered down to be, then able the Morals, and more Religion than this came to. The Admiral was certainly an evil San, turbulent, and till of ambitious Defens from the bestoning of this Kine's Resion. And his Procher the Duke observation and can did often advictions and care. Morals, and more Religion than this came to. The Admiral was certainly an evil stan, turbolent, and full of ambitious Deligns from the beginning of this Ring's Reign. And his Brother the Dikke observing it, did often advise him, and carnefly diffuade him from his dangerous Couries, using all the fairest Means with him; pardoning what was past: and that he might meet with his Brother's high Mind, grativing him with Posses dides the high and honourable Office of Lord High Admiral. Yet was be continually practifing after this: He raide Soldiers, and threatted, he wested make the blackest Parliament that ever was in England. He is suspected to have postened his Wite, that excellent Woman, Queen Kabbering; that heigh single, he might make his Addrestes to the Lady Elizabeth the Kings Sister, and one of the Heirs to the Grown. So that in fine, the Parliament did judg these Things to be a trainerous aspiring to the Grown. And firstly Sist so the May Brother's that Lord was artained, to term his Acquasitions to be firedous and pittiful Matters. The Writer of the History of the Responsable of the Chareb of England hath, from the Vol. 2. in Council Book, exemplifyed the Articles against him to the Namer of Thirty three: which will show what heavy the Collect, Crimes he was charged with. And which, althe he was urged by the Lords of the Privy Council, and that upon his Name, 31. Allegiance, to make Answer to the this Humber to them. Now would he feel this Hand to them.

but no more. Nor would he fet his Hand to them.

And how hirly he was judged and deale with in the Parliament, will appear by this Account, as it fainds in the Journals of both Houses: viz. February the 25th, was read in the House of Lords the first time, the Bill of Attaindor of the Lord Admiral. Febr. the 25th read the second time. Febr. the 27th read the shirl; and concluded with the

The Duke embracing this Woman's Counfel indeed, and nothing the better) yielded himself both to advise and the better) yielded himself both to advise and evise for Destruction of his Brother. The Earl of Warmick had his finger in the bufiness, and drew others also to give either furtherance or way to her violent Defires; being well content fhe should have her mind, fo as the Duke might thereby incur Infamy and Hate. Hereupon the Lord Sudley was arrested, and sent and in fear.

the Duke, whereby his Head was deliver'd to the Ax. His own fierce Courage haften'd his Death, because equally ballanc'd between Doubt and Disdain, he was desirous rather to die at once, than to linger long upon Curtesy common Aifent of all the Peers. The fame Day, being Wednefday, the Bill was fent down to the Commons; when it was thought good by them to fend down certain Members of their Houle, to declare unto the Commons the Manner after which the Lords had proceeded in that matter; and further to declare unto them, that in calle by sere minded to proceed in like fort, certain Noblemen who had given evidence againft the faid Lord Admiral, flould be torn unto them to declare by Mouth and Prefence facil Maters, as by their Writing flould in the mean rune appear unto them. The Malter of the Rolls, Sif "James Hales, and Sergeant Maltimea were the Perfors tent by the Lords.

Mouth the 2d, they were fent again to the Lower Houle, with the like Committion in effect, as they were fent when they would with effect in the Wednefday before. Aniver was made, that they would confult rogether, and thereupon they would with freed lend up their Refelaction. But no Haife having been made therein by them of the Nether Houle, the Lords having lar 15 long it was thought the Tune now far fight, they concluded to depart; defining the Lord Proceedor, that it would pleafe lum to receive fuch Aniwer as flould be fent reaching that Purpole, and to make report thereof at their next Allembly, which flould be the next Monday.

bly, which should be the next Monday.

March the 5th, the Bill was brought from the Commons for the Attaindor of the L. Sudley. Thus it is related in the lournal of the House of Lords.

By the Journal of the Houle of Commons it appears, That this Bill was read there the laft Day of February the first time. Match the 1st, read again. And Match the 2st, the Master of the Rolls, Sergeant Mollineux, Sergeant Hales, and the Ring's Sollicitoris, were four from the Lords, to know the Pleasture of this Houle, it is thould be reduced there, to puls upon the Atraindor of the Admiral in fach Order as was passed in the Higher House. Whereupon it was ordered, pais upon the retainment thereof be four to the Lords by fome of that bloufe; That is was reflect, that the value is the behavior of the control to the cont come intuer, and declare it was user. And this to be delivered to the Lord Protector by Part Speaker, and other the King's Mighty's Pleafure to be, that the Admiral's Prefence was not neceffary in this Court. And therefore not to be there. And further declared, that if the Houfe would require to have the Lords to come, and to facisify the Houfe for the Evidence againft the Admiral's the Lords would ecture. Then it was ordered, that Mafter Comptroler [and others] of the King's Privy Council flowald hear the Lords and require, that if it were judged neceffary to have the Lords come down, that upon any further Suit they might come down to the Houfe. And the Bill for the Attaindor of High Treafon of Sit Tho. Seymour, L. Sudley, was read the third time.

third time.

This Lerd was fent to the Tower the 16th of January, according to Stow; and the Bill for his Attaindor was not finithed cill the 5th of March. Which shews that his Condemnation was not to very short a time after his Commitment, as our Author here writerly. And he was executed the 20th Day of March.

The ground then of the Admiral's Fall was his apparent Treaton. But that the Cause should spring from an Envy the Dutche's of Someyfer had against the L. Admiral, because his Wife, Queen Katheine, took place of her, is bether trilling and incredible; and the lefts to be credited, because it is a Surmite taken from Sandare's Book of the Buglish Schifm, that abounds with Malice and Lyes, and Ill-will to all the Transactions of this Reign.

Scropin, that abounds with bilance and Lyes, and Ill-will to all the Frankittons of this Regn.

The Author ipeaks of the Admiral's Protedition at his Death; and that the open Courte and Carriage of his Life cleared him in the Opinion of many. What his Proteflation was, Stow rells us, vir, that he never committed or meant any Treason against the King or Realm. The contrary to which his Deeds declared, and the Act for the Attaindor abundantly sheweth; and also that the Courfe and Carriage of his Life was, during this King's Reign, victous and turbulent; and in the preceding King's Reign he was very dissolute. A Woman going to her Execution for a Robberty, considered that Sir Ibl. Stomar first descinately. He feldom or never came to Common Trayer, which the Queen his wife had faild daily in her Family; and was reported to disbelieve the Immortality of the Soul. This, and a great dail more. Latture in Secropin searched before the King like latter his Execution, related upon his court Knowledge. deal more, Littings in a Sermon preached before the King a little after his Execution, related upon his son Knowledg or upon good Evidence, to fairify all People of the Manners of the Man, and how well he deferved his Punithment. Then the Author hath a moft vile Infiniacion against the Proceeding, and the fair Reverend Father and Martyr Hage Latence and the house for the behavior of the behavior

Laymer

Then the Auditor hath a molt vile Infiniation against the Proceeding, and the Isid Reverend Father and Marty Plugher eleased as Latymer, viz. that he was fer up by the Proceeding all the Proceeding, and the Isid Reverend Father and Marty Plugher board Plad. The Oddining of the Admiral's beach; and that the proceeding all the Gravity and Sincerity of a projection Divine, yet content jugg in his to be fervicedule to great mine Ends, declared in a Sermon before the King, the White the L. Sadley was a Prifoner in Sermonaich the Owner, he works to the Lady May and the Lady Elizabeth, that they flood revenge bis Death. He adds, that Latymer corning the east forther many other Imputations, might doubted, many known to be untrue. And then from this Story the Author takes addinial, accident to experted his cankered Mind against Horn in Holy Orders in these words: Some Theologians have been employed to defile Places credied only for Religion and Trinth, by definding Oppelfors and Edition, dishating their Profession, and the good Astro which they have learned, by publishing almos Untrustual spot report and credit of others. As to they were a mercenary base for on Men, that however Sacred their Office is, would be hired to be Trumpers of other mensiving Inventions, for the easier deceiving of the People. This Author going thus out of the Bood of an Historian, that he might give a Last to the Treedogians, as he calls them, herrays only the Good will be had to that Order, and leaves upon record his Malice:

and particularly his inventical Pains to render (as much as by in his power) that grave and good Man, Edithop, and constant Marryl for Religion and Truth, to be a published Lyar in the Public, to do a piece of Service to the Proceeding fuch a mercenary Warech, as willfully and openly to promulgate, and that before fo folem an Alfembly, Uncertainties fuch a mercenary Warech, as wellfully and openly to promulgate, and that before fo folems an Alfembly, Uncertainties fuch a mercenary Wretch, as willfully and openly to promulgate, and that before fo folemn an Affembly, Uncertainties and downright Lyes.

and downright Lyes.

Mossard here again goeth hand in hand with Sanders to defame this Reverend Man, who, fleaking of Latymer, giveth him this broad Complement (because he was commonly filled the Applle of England) bis Applleship confilled in Applle. And testle dis Serry of him; That after the Durchesh had invented the Michief against the Actinization of the Applle of England) bis Applleship confilled in Applle of England) bis Applleship confilled in Applle of England) bis Applleship confilled in Applle of England in Applleship confilled in Applleship and the Applleship confilled in Applleship and the Applleship a

His Accufations.

ing to get into his Cuftody the Person of the King, and Government of the Realm; for making much Provision of Mony and of Victuals; for endeavouring to marry the Lady Elizabeth the King's Sifter; for perfuading Elizabeth the King's Sifter; for perfunding the King in his tender Age to take upon him the Rule and Order of himself. The Proofs might eafily be made, because he was never hear for certain, others making question of any Truths, Posterity enlarging both. Dr. Lawmer pretending all the Gravity and Sincerity of a profess'd Divine, yet content to be serviceable to Great Mens ends, declar'd in a King's Sifters, that they should revenge his Death; which indeed the Lady Mary afterwards more truly did, by executing the Earl of Warnick, than either the was, or at that time could in particular be required. Many other Imputations he cast forth, besides most doubted, many known to be untrue: And fo whereas Papinian a Civil Lawyer, but a Hea-then, chose rather to die than to defend the Murder which the Emperor Caracalla had done upon his Brother Geta, fome Theologians have been imployed to defile Places crected only for Religion and Truth, by defending Oppressions and Factions, staining their Professions and the good Arts which they had learn'd, by publishing odious Untruths upon report and credit of others.

O Wives! the most fweet Poison, the O Wres! the most weet Poston, the most defir'd Evil in the world! Certainly as it is true as, Syracides faith, that there is no Malice like the Malice of a Woman, to no Michief wanteth, where a malicious Woman beareth sway. A Woman was first given to Dearen 1993. A Volum was first given to Man for a Comforter, but not for a Counfellor, much less a Controler and Director; and therefore in the first Sentence against Man this Cause is expressed, becarde thou obeyelf the Voice of thy Wife. And doubtless the Protector by being thus rul'd to the Death of his Brother, feem'd with his left Hand to have cut off his right: For hereupon many of the Nobility cry'd our upon him, that he was a 18 of the (z) Privy Council to knit with him frivolous Matter, or term them Pittiful, if you lain, and that it was not fit the King floudd please. The Act of Parliament expresses be under the Protection of fuch a ravenous their Caufes of his Artainder: For attempt- Wolf. Soon after it was given forth, and The King for the Caufes of the Artainder of the Ring for the Rin Wolf. Soon after it was given forth, and The Kin-believ'd by many, that the King was dead ? Ale, te-whereupon he pass'd in great. State thro the row Lon-don. City of London, to manifest that he was both alive and in good health. Whether this Speech were fipread either by Adventure or by Art, it is uncertain; certain it is, it did

The Accufations againft him contain'd much Bloodfucker, a Murderer, a Patricide, a Vil- 1540.

fomething shake the Strength of the King's

Affection towards the Protector.

Besides, many well-dispos'd Minds conceiv'd The Promight early be made, became he was never call'd to his Anfwer. But as well the Proteffations at the point of his Death, as the open Courfe and Carriage of his Life, clear'd him in opinion of many. So doubtful are all they lightly matters, whill fome take all they lightly matters, whill fome take all they lightly matters, whill fome take all they lightly matters, whill form the all they lightly matters and him and lightly matters and him and h Bones of many, who had been there bury'd, were cast up, and carry'd into the Fields: and because the Stones of those Houses and the Church did nothing fuffice for his Work, the Steeple and more part of the Countries of Sermon before the King, that whilft the Lord Sermon before the King, that whilft the Lord Sermon before the King, that whilft the Lord Sermon before the King, that the little that the strength of the Lady May and the Lady Elizabeth the Doerny, Prior of that Church, was min'd and overthrown with Pouder, and the Stones are stones and the Stones and the Stones are stones and the Stones and the Stones are stones and the Stones are stones and the Stones are stones and the Stones and the Stones are stones are stones and the Stones are stones and the Stones are stones the Steeple and most part of the Church of ply'd to this fpacious Building. And because the Work could not be therewith finish'd, the Cloifter of Paul's on the North-fide of the Church, in a place call'd Pardon Churchyard, and the Dance of Death, very curiously wrought about the Coliter, and a Chappel that flood in the midft of the Churchyard; also the Charnel-house that flood upon the South-side of Panl's (now a Carpenter's Yard) with the Chappel, Tombs, and Monuments therein, Chappel, Tombs, and Monuments therein, were beaten down, the Bones of the Dead carry'd into Finding Fields, and the Stones converted to his Building. It is conftantly affirm'd, that for the fame purpose he intended to pull down the Church of St. Alargaret in Westminster, and that the standing there-of was preserv'd only by his Fall. Assuredly as there Actions were in a high degree impious, fo did they draw with them both open Dillike from Men, and much foret Revenge from God.

And now hath the Lord Protector play'd the first Act of the Tragedy of his Life, namely his high and prosperous Estate; he is now frepping into the focond Act, wherein he begins mainly to decline.

Degins manny to exerine.

For the Earl of Warwick efpying opportur A Plat of nity, shewing himself, and knowing that in warwick troublesom Times the Obedience of Great againshim. Persons is most easily shaken, drew about Man to convey them privately to the faid Ladies. Which Praftice nevertheless came to light by his Man's own Confeils in. The Subflance of which Papers (bewraying his implicable Malice to the Infl.) was to excite them to a Jealouty of the L. Pretedor, that they might join their intereffs to overthrow him. The Radion why Latjour flaske their hings of the Admiral in this Additory, was to judity the Authority that put him to death, against Which fome (perhaps of his own Parry) had uttered unbecoming Words. Therefore that Holy Man warned and charged his Auditors not to judg shole that were in Authority, but to party for them, Jaying, that it became not them to judg grant Magilitates, nor to condomn their Doings, unlefs their Deeds were openly and apparently wicked. And that their Imputations, whatever Hibburd wires, were neither doubted nor uturue, nor taken upon vain Report, the Reverend Preacher averred at the fame time, that he himfult fav those two Letters, and thewed that he was an Eye and Eurometes of the refl of the Matters he related. And what Latjoure Jake in the Pulpis, and that upon his was flowledge, I know no reasion why we may not conclude true, because to just and honeft a Man Istake it; who was above the being hird to figelat a Fallbood, or to ferve a basic Turn. And in a word, it we may depend upon the Protestation of fisch a vereanus Person, we have him making it publickly before the King and the reit of his Noble Auditical and his Writing, he spake it of a good zeal and on good ground, and that he neither reigned nor lyed "a jiet. J.S."

against the Lord Protector. These he did so vour'd with fitting Graces?
wind up to his purpose, that they withdrew these Defects might have been from the Court, fell to fecret Confultations, and walk'd in the City with many Servants weapon'd, and in new Liverys: the Causes thereof many conjectur'd, but few knew. They were all defirous that the Protector's Greatness should be taken lower, but none conceiv'd that the Earl's Malice did extend unto Death. But the Lord Protector, as humble then as he had been haughty before, fent Secretary Petre to them in the King's Name, to understand the Causes of their Affembly, and to declare unto them that he would thank them for hating him, in cafe they did it in love to the King (a); intreating them for the King's fake, if not for his Safety, yet for his Quiet, that they would forbear open fixed of Hoftility, and refort unto him peaceably, that they might commune together as Friends. In the mean time he arm'd five hundred Men, part of the King's, and part his own; the Court-gates were rampard, and People rais'd both by Letters and Proclamation to aid the King: and the more to in-crease the present Terror, he remov'd the King by might from Hampton-Court to Windfor, with a Company more refembling an Army than a Train.

The Lords with the

L. Rich's

Speech a-gainst the

On the other fide, the Lords at London first taking possession of the Tower, sent for the London. Here they prefented themically finite of the Earl wick at of Warmick, lodging at Ely House in Holbern-Here they prefented themselves secretly arm'd; and the Lord Rich, then Lord Chancellor of England, a Man of quick and lively Delivery of Speech, in this manner spake unto them (b)

Am not ignorant into what Adventure I now plunge my felf, in fpeaking against a Man both high in Honour and great in Favor, Protettor. both with the King and many of the People. But my Duty prevailing against respect of Danger, I will plainly declare the Discontentments which the Lords of his Majesty's Council have already conceiv'd against the Actions past of the Lord Protector, as also their Fears touching matters to enfue; that with your Aid they may in good time happily remedy the one, and remove the other: affuring you all, that as I will not utter any

And first to touch upon his open Ambition; with what good reason or purpose, think we, did he, being a Man of many Imperfections, as want of Eloquence, Per-

And albeit 1549 ' these Defects might have been well supply'd 'by Sufficiency of others of the Council, yet was he fo peevishly opinionative and proud, that he would neither ask nor hear the Ad-' vice of any, but was abfolutely rul'd by that ć obstinate and imperious Woman his Wife, whose ambitious and mischievous Will so guided him in the most weighty Affairs of the Realm, that albeit he was counfel'd by others what was best, yet would be do quite contrary, left he should seem to need their Advice. And yet this was not enough, as Avarice and Ambition have never enough; but to add Dignity to Authority, and to make fure that as no Man should as in Power fo in Title surmount him, he would be ad-vaned to the Degree of Duke of Somerfet, which hath always been a Title for one of the King's Sons inheritable to the Crown.

And albeit it may feem a light matter to fpeak of Bribery and Extortion against him, yet his Robberies and Oppressions have been such, that no Man would willingly have adventur'd to commit them, unless he thought by Treason so to assure himself, as he could not be call'd to answer for them. For he hath laid his ravenous hands upon the King's Treasure and Jewels left by his Father, which were known to be of an ineftimable Value; that it might well be faid, even as he had given forth, that King Henry died a very poor Prince, and had been utterly fhamed, in case he had liv'd one quarter of a Year longer.

'Then also what havock hath he made of the King's Lands and Inheritance? What Sales and Exchanges, upon pretence of neceffity? And yet what a high deal hath he transported to himself, without regard of others, who have employ'd their Travels and Estates in service of the King and of his deceas'd Father? What Arts hath he us'd to fpend those, and spare himself against the time of his michievous Purpoie? How greedily, how infatiably bath he never ceas'd the whilft to rake and glean Mony together? What shameful Sale of Offices and Preferments bath he made, nothing regarding the Worthiness of the Person, but the Worth and Weight of the Gift? betraving thing falily, fo will I forbear to tell many thereby the Administration of the Realm into the Hands both of worthless and corrupt Men: To speak nothing the whilst of his Mint at Dureline Place, erected and us'd Mint at for his private Profit; to speak nothing Durham for his private Profit; to speak nothing Durha of the great Boutifale of Colleges and Chan-Place. fonge, Learning, or good Wit, afpire to tries; to fpeak nothing of all his other the great Offices of governing all Affairs of particular Pillages. All which were fo far State, fit for none but whom God hath fa-

Marquits of Northampton, Earl of Annalel, L. Chamberlain, the Earls of Shrenyshory and Southampton, Sir Tho. Cheinor, Treafurer of the King's House and Lord Warden of the Gioque Ports, Sir John Cage Conflable of the Tower, Sir Edwa North, Sir Edwa Morth, Sir Edward Wotton, Dr. Watton Dean of Confedery, and Sir Richard Southows! J. S. (a) There was no such word patied from the Protector; nor is the reft truly represented. The Letter the Protector fient to their Lords by Secretary Petrs, is extant in our Hildries, which speak him of no fach timorous Spirit, He wrote in the King's Name and his own, and the other Lords with him; 'That they marvelled to fee the manner of those Lords Domes, bent with force of Violence to bring the King's Morthy and him into Extremities to those Lords Domes, bent with force of Violence to bring the King's Morthy and him the Extremity of Death, and to put it offs offs and himself with Extremity of Death, and to put it offs offs and himself with Extremity of Death, and to put it offs offs hand. Dut that if they fought no hurt to the King, as stouching other private Matters, to avoid Effation of Christian Blood, and to preferve the King's Petron, his Realms and Subjects, they thould find him agreeable unto any reasonable Conditions. And his put after them to fend their final Antwer. J. S.

(3) This large Speech entiting, attributed to the L. Chancellor Rich, is nowhere to be met with in our Histories, nor tone word of it. Only stow writeth, that the L. Chancellor and others of the King's Council being affembled at the L. Barnetic's Hace, declared to the Mayor and Girizens the Abufes of the King's Council being affembled at the L. Barnetic's Hace, declared to the Mayor and Girizens the Abufes of the L. Protector, Gr. So that the Harangue is wholly framed out of the Hara

549. ' that he proceeded to fleece the whole Com- ' he did under pretence of fach matters as all 1549 " monwealth, to cut and pare it to the very

For under colour of War, which either his Negligence drew on, or his false Practices procur'd, he levy'd fuch a Subsidy upon the whole Realm, as never was ask'd a greater at once; which should not have needed, albeit the Wars had been just, in case he had not imberel'd the King's Treasure as he did: for besides he extorted Mony by way 6 of Loan from all Men who were supposed to have it, and yet left the King's Soldiers and Servants unpaid. But in all these pretended Necessities, how profuse was he in his private Expences? carrying himfelf rather as fitting his own Greatness, than the common Good. How did he riot, furfeit upon vain hopes, as if new Supply for walte would never want? What Treasures did he bury in his fumptuous Buildings? And how foolish and fanciful were they? A fit Man forfooth to govern a Realm, who had 6 fo goodly Government in his own Estate. All these things, as there are but few but know, fo we may be affur'd that he never dunft have committed half of them with a e mind to have remain'd a Subject under the Law, and to be answerable for his Actions afterwards; but did manifestly intend to heap his Mifchiefs with fo high a Treafon, as he might climb above his Sovereign, and frand fure beyond reach of Law.

And for inducement to this his traitorous " Defign, he fuborn'd his Servants and certain · Preachers to spread abroad the Praises of his Government, with as much abasing the Noble King Hurry, as without Impudence they could devise: Following therein the Practices of King Richard the Tyrant, by depraving the Father to honour the Son, to extinguish the Love of the People to the young King, by remembring fome Imper-fections of his Father; which Example, 6 both traitorous and unnatural, who doubts but his Heart was ready to follow? Whose Heart was ready to defame his Father, and fet nought by his Mother (as it is well known) and to produce, yea labour the Death of his Brother; whom albeit the Law and Confent of many had condemn'd upon his own speeches, yet his earneft Endeavour therein did well declare what Thoughts can for into his unwatural Breaff, and what foul fink into his unnatural Breast, and what foul shifts he would have made, rather than that his Brother should have escap'd Death, to that end that he might remove at once both an Impeachment to his poisonous Purpofes, and a Surety to the King's Life and Effate. To this end he alfo practis'd to diffratch fach of the Robility as were like to oppose his mischievous Drift, and in such fort either to encumber and weaken the reft, that they should be no impediments to him. In the mean time he endeavour'd to win the common People both by ftrain'd ' Courtefy and by Loofeness of Life, whereto and Means. ' And the better to advance his Intents, he deviseth to intangle the Realm not only with outward War, that with rumor thereof his dangerous Devices night be obfen'd; but with inward Sedition, by ftirring and nou-

' Men defir'd might be redrefed more gladly than he, but in a more quiet and fettled time. But the time feem'd most convenient for him, when, under the fweet Pretence or Releafe and Liberty to the People, he might have deftroy'd the Nobility and Gentry, who are the Defence and Safety of the Peo ple; and io at pleasure have reduc'd all under his tyrannous Subjection.

Which, how insupportable it would have been, may well be conjectured by his Actions already past. What Pride and Infolency of his Men made up of nought? What Inframents had he in every shire to work his Purpoles, to fpread his Rumors, to hearken and to carry Yales? And those, what Flatterers? What Lyars? How greedily gaping for other mens Livings ! How vigilant to grope mens I houghts, and to pick out formewhat whereof they might complain? And fuch vile Vermin, how And fuch vile Vermin, how compann! And men wire vectoms, now dear were they to him? And namely John Bonham his one Hand in Willibre, six Miles Parvidge his other Hand in Glocefeeshire, his Cultomer in Wells, Pier's Country, his National in Parvision healths may be in Parvision. Minister in Devonshire; besides many his bad-condition'd Minions in Court: what Monsters were they? How esteem'd they his Favour above all mortal respects?

ins Favour above an more arripees:

And further to accomplish his ambitious Eads, he devis'd to make the French King his Friend, by betraying unto him the 6 King's Fortresses beyond the Seas, which the late Noble King Henry with great Charge, Courage and Glory, had brought under his power; which Practice was fo carry'd, that no Man, but fuch as differri'd nothing, but did perceive it: And that as well by his often private Conference with the French Embasfadors and their Secretaries, as by failing to furnish those Pieces with necessary Supplies, as also by the Speeches which himfelf and his Servants caft abroad, that Bulloine and the Fortreffes about it were an unprofitable Burden to the Realm. But for the Charge no Man will conceive that he wanted Mony to keep them, who undertook fo great a Charge as the Conquest of Scotland, and waited every day a hundred pounds on his fantastical Building.

' Besides, it hath been often heard from his own Communication, how he intended to procure a Refignation of the Rights of the King's Majesty's Sifters, and others who are entitled to the Possession of the Crown, and to have entail'd the fame upon his own Iffue; which when he had effected, and having the King's Perfon in his power the Chain of Sovereignty could not long have ty'd him fhort, he might have atchiev'd all his ambitious Intentions at will-

' Wherefore furely he hath thus put on the Performed only of a Robber and of a Murderer, but of a Traitor to the State, fince we have evidently difcover'd both his lofty and bloody Mind. It behoveth you to join he gave not only Licence, but Encouragement ' in aid with the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, as in extinguisting a raging Fire, as in repelling a cruel Enemy; for affaredly we must either weakly yield to his Rule and Command, or elfe the ambitious Author ' must be taken away.

the Lord Gir registry, and Commons of the Realm. This Mayor affembled a Common Council in Guide-retts jed Vol. 11.

Rr bally, Stiders.

Vol. 11.

half, where two Letters arriv'd almost in one inflant, one from the King and the L. Protector of the top top one of the for 1000 Men to be arm'd for Defence of the forth. For albeit there be many Hands in King's Person, another from the Lords at London, for 2000 Men to aid them in defence of the Adm, for 2000 Men to aid them in deterce of the Ming's Person; both Parties pretending alike, albeit the Pretences given forth are always fair, and for the publick Good, yet are the fecret Intentions commonly ambitious, and only aim at private Ends. Yea many times the End is worse than the first Intention to the End is worse than the first Intention. were inclinable to favour their fide. But one nam'd George Stadlowe, femewhat better advis'd,

Speech in Common Council

Activen's Stept up and spake unto them as followeth. This Bufiness (Right honourable Lord ' Mayor and the Refidue of this Court) as it ' is a very high Passage of State, so it is wor-' thy of ferious Confideration; and that upon fudden Advice nothing be done or determin'd therein, left happily by being ferviceable to the Deligns of other Men whose Purposes we know not, we cast our selves into the throat of danger, which hitherto we do not fee, two things I much fear in cafe we afford present Aid to the Lords, either of which should cast upon us a Bridle rather for stopping a while, than for stepping or stir-' ring too foon or too fast at their Incitement. One is the certain Dangers of the City, the o-ther the uncertain Adventure of all the Realm. First then if we adjoin to the Lords, whe-' ther they prevailor not we ingulph our felves ' into affired Danger, an Example whereof I find in Edbian, whose report I intreat you all to observe. In the time of Henry the Third, the Lords in a good Caule, for Maintenance of divers beneficial Laws, delir'd Aid of the City against the King. Aid was granted, and the Quarrel brought to the Arbitriment of the Sword. In this Battel the King and his Son were taken Prifoners, and upon their · Inlargement free Pardon was granted, not only to the Lords but the Citizens of Lonwhich was afterwards confirm'd both by Oath and by Act of Parliament. But what follow'd? Was the Displeasure forgotten? No verily, nor ever forgotten during that King's Life; for afterwards the Liberties of the City were taken away, Strangers were ap-pointed Governours, and the Citizens perpetually vex'd, both in their Persons and in their Eftates. So heavy and durable is the W rath of Kings, that Solomon faith, The Indignation of the King is death. For it is natural for Princes to uphold their Sovereignty, and to hold it in highest esteem, in no case to indure their Supreme Authority to be forceably either oppress'd or dispress'd by their Subjects; infomuch as they hate fuch Subjects as have once attempted either to overrule them by Power, or to cast any Terrour upon them. And howsoever they may be either conftrain'd or content to bear Sail for a time, yet are they fo fure Pay-mafters in the end, that few have held out their Lives, I will not fay prosperously but fafely, who have offer'd Inforcements against

> ' Now touching my Fear for the Commonwealth, I much suspect these Considerations. ' I always expect from them some lurking Mis- London, with some secret Instructions fent their King.

this Action, yet one is the Head, who doubt-less hath Skill to play his own Game: and ' caufe when a Subject hath obtain'd the Hand against his Prince, I will not fay, he will be loth, but doubtless it is not fafe for him to give over his Advantage: wherefore I am of Opinion, that for the present we will not be fo uncourteous as to delay, and fulpend

'be to uncourteous as to usuay, and supera-our giving Aid to the Lords for a time. (e) ' Upon this Advice the Court refolv'd to The City's arm a hundred Horfemen, and four hundred way dis-Foot for Defence of the City. To the King Ring, and they return'd Answer, that they would be ready to the upon any Necessity to apply all their Forces Lords. either for his Defence or for his Honour. But they intreated him to be pleas'd to hear fuch Complaints as were objected against the Lord Protector before he assembl'd Forces in the Field, which in those tempestuous times, as it could not be done without great Danger, fo without great Cause it should not. To the Lords they answer'd, that they were ready to join with them in any dutiful Petition to the King, but to join with them in Arms, they could not upon the fudden re-

The next day, the Lords at London dif-The Lords patch'd a Letter to the Lords at Windfor, require subsection that charged the Protector with many that the wherein they charg'd the Protector with many that the Protector with many protector Diforders both in his private Actions, and in withdraw his manner of Government, requiring that he from the would disperse the Forces which he had rais'd, King. and withdraw himfelf from the King, and be content to be order'd by Juffice and Reafon. That this done, they would gladly commune with the refl of the Council for the Surety of the King's Perfon, and for ordering of his Estate, otherwise they would make no other Account of them than they might trust to find Cause, and would assuredly charge them according to their Demerits.

The King all this time was so far from

governing his Lords, that he was scarce at his own Liberty: and confidering that the late Rebellions had but newly weary'd themselves into Quiet, and fearing new Rages among the unftable People daily threatned, and upon fuch occasion not unlike to take Flame; conceiving also that the Confederacy trench'd no deeper, or that the only Remedy was to feem fo to conceive, diffold'd his Companies except only his Guard, but charg'd them upon warn-ing to be ready; fo it is most certain, that the troublesome times were a great Advantage to the Lords. Had the People been well fettl'd in Subjection, or the Protector a Man of Spirit enough, they had been in danger to have been undone: but the Protector, inftead of uling his Authority, fent Secretary Petre (who under pretence of Gravity, cover'd much Untruffines of Heart) (d) to the Lords at

(c) This Speech of the judicious Civizen is in Fox, and Hollingfied, but much flourished, augmented and inlarged by

(e) In September the footbook officers in the second of th

Secretary

The Pro-neffes might be laid afide. But neither did tetar finds he return to Windfor, neither was any Answer Pette to return'd from the Lords. After this he wrote the Lords, two Letters, one in his own Name to the Earl of Warwick, the other in the Name of the Lords at Windfor to the Lords at London; in both which he fo weakly complain'd, expoftulated, intreated, yielded under their Hand, as it was sufficient to have breath'd Courage into any Enemy once declar'd against him.

The Lords publickly by Procla-

And indeed, hereupon the Lords forthwith publish'd a Proclamation under the Hands of seventeen Persons, either for Nobility or Aumation thority of Office well regarded: wherein the Protedor. Caufes of fuch Calamities and Losses as had lately before happen'd, not only by inward Divisions which had cost the Lives of many thousands of the King's Subjects, and threatned more, but also by the Loss of divers Pieces beyond the Seas, which had been won by great Adventure of the late King's Perfon and Con-fumption of his Treasure; they perceiv'd that the only Root from whence those Mischiefs fprung, was the evil Government of the Lord Protector, whose Pride, Covetousness and Ambition cover'd only his private Ends, and therefore he was deeply busy'd in his spatious and specious Buildings in the hottest times of War against France and Scotland, whilst the poor Soldiers and Servitors of the King were unpaid, and labour'd to make himfelf ftrong in all Countries, whilft within the Realm Laws, Justice, and good Order per-verted, Provisions for the Forts beyond the Seas neglected, and the King's Subjects by most dangerous Divisions (by his means either rais'd or occasion'd) much Disquiet. That hereupon the Lords of the Council for preventing as well prefeat Dangers to the King's Perfon, as the utter Subversion of the State of the Realm, concluded to have talk'd to him quietly, without Dif-turbance to the King, or to the People, for reducing him to live within reasonable Limirs, and for putting Order for Safety of the King's Person, and Preservation of the Commonwealth of the Realm, and so to have pass'd over his most unnatural and traiterous Defervings without further Extremities. But he knowing that he was unable to answer for any part of his Demeanour, began forthwith to spread false Rumours, that certain Lords had confpir'd againft the Southampton and of Humington, and was fol-King's Person; under pretence whereof he low'd with Lords and Gentlemen, to the num-levy'd Forces in a disorder'd Uproar, albeit Treason rested in him and some other his Complices. Wherefore feeing he troubl'd the whole Realm for accomplishing his traiterous Ends, and us'd the King in his tender Age for an Instrument against himself, caufing him to put his Hand to many of his own Devices, and to fpeak things tending to the Destruction of himself, they desir'd, and in the King's Name charg'd all Subjects not to obey any Precepts, Licenses or Proclama-tions, whereunto the Protector's Hand should common both Aid and Applause concur'd in tions, whereunt the Protector's Hand should common both be set, albeit he should abuse the King's his Restraint. Hand and Seal unto them, but to quit especially to persuade them, that for a publick themselves upon such Proclamation as should 1548 proceed from the Body of the Council, protefting therewith their faithful Hearts to the King, and their Loyalty towards the Feople.

Instantly after publishing of this Proclamation the Lords directed their Letters to Windfor, and addrefs'd one to the King, another to the Protector, the third to the Houdhold which was openly read. The Letter to the Protector was guilded over with many smooth Words, intimating fair Promifes and full of Hope; but the other two did fully and foully fet forth his Obstinacy, his Avarice, his Ambition, his rash Engagements into Wars, in the King's unserted both Age and Estate, his Negligencies, his Deceits, and all other Infufficiencies mention'd before. Herewith Sir Robert Wingfield Captain of the Guard was sent from the Lords to Windfor, who so well per-fuaded the King both of the Loyal Assection of the Lords towards him, and of their moderate Defires against the Protector (who then was in Prefence) that partly thereby, but chiefly in regard of the turbulent times, the A Guard Protector was remov'd from the King's Person, the Proand a Guard fet upon him until the next day, testor's when the Lordsat London were appointed to be Perfon. there.

So the next day diverse of the Council rode The Lords from London to Windfor, but the Earl of War- come to Windfor. wick rode not with them, for he was a perfect Master of his Craft: he had well learn'd to put others before him in dangerous Actions, and in Matters of Mischief to be scen to do leaft, when in very deed all mov'd from him. He had well learn'd of the Ape to take Nuts out of the Fire with the Faw of the Cat. These Lords coming before the King, did again run over their Complaints against the Pro-tector, and also under Colour of Love and Duty, adviseth the King to beware of such as were both powerful, ambitious, mischievous and rich: Affirming that it would be better Surety unto him, if this great Authority should be committed to many, who cannot fo readily knit in Will or in Action, as when the whole Manage resideth in one. In the end the Duke Manage relideth in one. of Somerfer (for hereafter he must be no otherwise call'd) was committed into their Power, and committed to Custody in Beauchamp Tower within the Castle.

The next day he was brought to London, as The Pro-if he had been a Captive carry'd in Triumph. brought to He rode thro Holborn between the Earls of the Tower. Bridg certain Aldermen attended on Horseback, and the Citizens Housholders stood with Halbeards on all fides of the Streets, thro which he país'd. At Sopherlain he was receiv'd by the Mayor, Sheriffs, Recorder, and divers Knights of especial note, who with a great Train of Officers and Attendants bearing Halbeards carry'd him forthwith to the Tower. All this was to bear in flew, both that the

Vol. II.

Forthwith the King was brought to Hampton

for not recurning back to Windjor, but remaining with the Lords, fince he was detained by them, which occasioned a Letter of the Lord Protector to them exposulating with them for flaying him with them, when the King had feet him with such a weighty Message, and expected their Answer by him. This true, I find, that while they keet him with them, he signed a Proclamation against the Lord Protector with the rest, but that might well be out of sear of some great Langer if he had refused. 3.5.

1549. Court, where all things being born as done Theking at the Lords of the Council and four Knights were appointed by turns to attend the King's Person. The Lords were the Marquis Northampton, the Earls of Warwick and Arundel, the Lords Ruffel, St. John, and Wentworth; the Knights were thefe, Sir Andrew Dudley, Sir Edward Rogers, Sir Thomas Darcy, and Sir Thomas Worth. As for Affairs of State, the Government of them was refer'd to the whole Body of the Council. Soon after the King rode to his House in Southwark (then call'd Suffolk Place) and there din'd: after Dinner he rode in great Estate thro the City to Westminster, as if the People should be given to understand, that nothing was diminish'd either from the Safety or Glory of the King, by Imprisonment of the Duke.

Articles bu MiG

And now when the Duke had breath'd a brought to finall time in the Tower, certain Lords of the Pro- the Council were fent unto him, who after a short Preface in such terms as Hate and Dissidemeanors, mulation could temper together, remembring how great the Amity had been between them, and of what Continuance : Then acknowledging what Offices and Services he had done for the Commonwealth, and yet interlacing some Errours and Defects, wherewith they feem'd to reproach him. Lastly they presented him certain Articles as from the Residue of the Privy Council, desiring his present Answer, whether he would acknowledg them to be true, or elfe stand upon his Justification. ticles objected against him were these.

> 1. That he took upon him the Office of Protector upon express Condition that he should do nothing in the King's Affairs, but by Assent of the late King's Executors, or the greatest part of them.
>
> 2. That contrary to this Condition he did hinder imprison'd for Treason, Murther, Manslaughter, and Felony, to be discharg'd against the Laws and Statutes of the Realm.

4. That he appointed Lieutenants for Armies, and other Officers for the meighty Affairs of the King, under his own Writing and Seal.

5. That he commun'd with Embassadors of other

Realms alone, of the weighty Matters of the Realm. 6. That he would taum and reprove divers of the King's most honourable Counsellors, for de-claring their Advice in the King's weighty Affairs against his Opinion; sometimes telling them that they were not worthy to sit in Council, and that they were not worrny to per in commen, and fometimes that he needed not to open weighty Matters to them, and that if they were not agreeable to his Opinion, he would different ethem.

That againft Law he beld a Court of Request in his House, and did inforce divers to answer them.

swer there for their Freehold and Goods, and did determine of the same.

8. That being no Officer, without the Advice of the Council, or most part of them, he did dispose Offices of the King's Gift for Mony, grant Leases, and Wards, and Presentations of Benefices pertaining to the King, gave Bishopricks, and made Silles of the King's Lands.

9. That he commanded Alchimy, and Multiplica-tion to be practised, thereby to abase the King's Coin.

10. That divers times he openly faid, that the Nobility and Gentry were the only Cause of Dearth. Whereupon the People rose to reform Matters of themselves.

11. That against the Mind of the whole Coun-cil he caus'd Proclamation to be made concerning Inclosures, whereupon the People made divers Infurrettions, and destroy'd many of the King's Subjects.

12. That he fent forth a Commission with Articles annex'd concerning Inclosures, Commons, High-ways, Cottages, and such like Matters; giving the Commissioners Authority to hear and determine those Causes, whereby the Laws and Statutes of the Realm were subverted, and much Rebellion rais'd.

13. That he suffer'd Rebels to affemble and lie arm'd in Camp against the Nobility and Gentry of the Realm, without speedy repressing of them. 14. That he did comfort and incourage divers Rebels by giving them Mony, and by promising them Fees, Rewards and Services.

15. That he caused a Proclamation to be made against Law, and in savour of the Rebels, that none of them should be vexed or sued by any for their Offences in their Rebellion.

16. That in time of Rebellion he faid that he lik'd well the Actions of the Rebels, and that the Avarice of Gentlemen gave occasion for the People torisc, and that it was better for them to die than to perish for Want.

17. That he said, The Lords of the Parliament were loth to reform Inclosures and other things, therefore the People had good Cause to reform them themselves.

18. That after Declaration of the Defaults of Bulloin and the Pieces there by such as did surview them, he would never amend the fame.

19. That he would not Suffer the King's Pieces of Newhaven, and Blackness, tobe furnish'd with Men and Provision; albeit he was advertis'd of the Defaults, and advis'd thereto by the King's Council, whereby the French King was emboldned

20. That he would neither give Authority, nor suffer Noblemen and Gentlemen to suppress Re-

King's Luccusors, or the greately part of them.

That conversely to this Condition be did hinder fuffice, and fulvers Laws, of his own Authority, as well by Letters, as by other Command.

3. That he caused divers Perform arrefted and impriford for Treafon, Murther, Manflaughter, private Causes, be procured seditions Bills to be written in Counterfeit Hands, and sceretly to be dispers'd into divers parts of the Realm, beginning thus, Good People, intending thereby to raife the King's Subjects to Rebellion and open War.

22. That the King's Privy Council did confult at London to come to him, and move him to reform his Government; but he hearing of their Affembly, declar'd by his Letters in diverse Places, that they were high Traitors to the King.

23. That he declar'd untruly as well to the King as to other young Lords attending his Person, that the Lords at London intended to destroy the King, and desir'd the King never to sorget, but to revenge it; and requir'd the young Lords to put the King in remembrance thereof, with intent to make Se dition and Discord between the King and his Nobles.

24. That at diverse times and places he said, the Lords of the Council at London intend to kill me, but if I die the King shall die, and if they famish me, they shall famish him. 25. That of his own Head he removed the King

So Suddenly from Hampton Court to Windfor, without any Provision there made, that he was thereby not only in great Fear, but cast into a dangerous Difeafe.

26. That by his Letters he caus'd the King's People to affemble in great Numbers in Armour after the manner of War, to his Aid and Defence. 27. That he caus'd his Servants and Friends at

Hampton Court and Windfor to be apparell'd in 1549. the King's Armour, when the King's Servants and Judgment, than from any mulicious Meaning; and that he was therefore was the second and t

28. That he intended to fly to Jersey or Wales, and laid Post-horses and Men, and a Boat to that purpose. (e)

To which the Duke subscribed.

his great Offices, Goods and Lands.

Submits

himself to the Lords.

Now albeit there is little doubt but that fome of these Articles were merely devis'd, others inlarg'd or wrested, or otherwise enforc'd by odious Interpretation, yet the Duke fubfcribed with his own Hand, that he did acknowledg his Offences contain'd in them, and humbly upon his Knees fubmitted himfelf to the King's Mercy. That in like manner he intreated the Lords to be a means to the King that he would conceive that his Offences did proceed rather from Negligence, Rashness, or other Indiscretion, than from any malicious Thought tending to Treafon; and also that he would take fome gracious way with him, his Wife and Children, not according to extremity of Laws, but after his great Clemency and Mercy. Written with my own Hand Decemb.

Loses all

23. Anno 3 Edw. Regis.

To this I make no other Defence, but intreat the Reader not to condemn him for perishing fo weakly, and for that he, who should have lost his Life to preferve his Honour, cast away both his Life and Honour together. Affuredly he was a Man of a feeble Stomach, unable to concoct any great Fortune, prosperous or adverse (f). But as the Judgment of God, and Malice of a Man concur often in one Act, altho it be eafy to difcern between them; fo it is little to be marvelled, that he who thirsted after his Brother's Blood, should find others to thirst after his. Notwithstanding for that prefent his Blood was respited, but he was stripped of his great Offices of being Protestor, Treasurer and Marshal, lost all his Goods, and near Two thousand Pound Land; in which Estate if he had continu'd, the longer he had liv'd, the more Punishment he should endure: Herewith it was scossingly said, that he had eaten the King's Goose, and did then regorge the Feathers.

After this he fent Letters to the Lords of the Council, wherein he acknowledg'd himfelf much favour'd by them, in that they had brought his Cause to be finable; which altho it was to him importable, yet as he did never intend to contend with them, nor any Action to justify himself, as well for that he was none of the wifest, and might easily err, as for that it is fcarce possible for any Man in great Place fo to bear himself, that all his Actions in the Eye of Justice shall be blameless; so he did then fubmit himfelf wholly to the King's Mercy and their Difcretions for fome Moderation; defi-

1549. and that he was therefore ready both to do and fuffer what they would appoint. Finally, He did again most humbly upon his Knees intreat Pardon and Favour, and they should ever find him so lowly to their Honours, and obedient to their Orders, as he would thereby make amends for his former Follies.

These Subjections, Objections, Dejections of A. 155. the Duke, made an heavenly Harmony in his The Duke Enemies Ears. But they wrought fuch Com- of Somerpaffion with the King, that forthwith he was fet reffered releafed out of the Tower, his Fines difcharged, "Parenthis Goods and Lands reftor"d, except fuch as Apr. 8. had been given away; either the Malice of the Lords being fomewhat appeafed, or their Creditions of the Control of the Con dit not of fufficient ftrength to relift. Within a short time after he was entertain'd and feasted by the King with great shew of Favour, and fworn again of the Privy Council; at which time, between him and the Lords, perfect Amity was made, or elfe a diffembling Hate. And that all might appear to be knit up in a comical Conclusion, the Duke's Daughter was afterwards joined in Marriage to the Lord Leifle, Son and Heir to the Earl of Warnick; and the Earl also was made Lord Admiral or England: yet many doubted whether the Earl retained not fome fecret Offence against the Duke, which if he did it was most cunningly supprest. Doubtless of all his Virtues, he made best Vice of Dissimulation. And as this Friendship was drawn together by Fear on both sides, fo it was not like to be more durable than was the Fear.

And thus the fecond Act ended of the Tragedy of the Duke, the third shall follow in the proper place.

In the mean time the Earl of Warmick, for what mischievous Contrivance it was not certainly known, but conceiv'd to be against the Duke, joined to him the Earl of Arundel late Lord Chamberlain, and the Earl of South-hampton fometimes Lord Chancellor, Men of their own Nature circumspect and slow, but at that time discountenanced and discontent; whom therefore the Earl of Warmick fingled as fittest for his purpose. Many secret Conferences they had at their feveral Houses, which often held the greatest part of the Night. But they, accustomed to afford at other times, either filence, or fhort affent to what he did propose, did then fall off and forsake him, procuring thereby Danger to themselves without doing Good to any other. For when Southampthe Earl of Warmick could by no means draw ton and A them to his Defires, he found means that both rundel dif-of them were discharged from the Council, and Council. commanded to their Houses.

ring them to conceive that what he did amifs, Against the Earl of Arundel, Objections Earl of Awas rather through rudeness, and for want of were framed, that he took away Bolts and since the state of the state of that made him fubmit as he did.

(e) There is one Article more in Stow's Chronicle (whence our Author hath all this) but here omitted; and is to come in next after the 27th, oir, Item, Tou caufed at Windfor your own Perfon in the Night time to be quanted in harnefs by many Perfons, leaving the King's Misjlies Perfon inquarded; and would not fuffer his own Guard and Servants to be next the King's Perfon, but appointed your Servants and Friends to keep the Gates. 1.5.

As for his thirfling after his Brothet's Blood, as is mentioned most uncharitably afterwards, it was a groundless Calumny, as I have fixewn before. J. S.

be next the King's Perjing, but appointed year Servanis and Friends to keep the Order, J.S.

(f) Would a Man of a cooler Temper than our Author have prefently judged the Duke fo imporent and feeble, and unable to govern himself? Would he not rather have confidered the Circumflances wherein he flood, and what powerful lenniles combined together againft him, and thirfted for his Ruin? The Duke might have been formewhat to hafty, it Sr. fybin Haward had been his Counfellor, to have prefendy taken up Arms, and ventured Life and flootout rogether: and fo might have left both, in all probability he would, being 60 inferior in Strength to his Adverfaires, who were in effect all the Council except one or two. The Duke undoubtedly confidered this, and allo the Dunger the King his Nephew wastad would be in, if this Eroyl bad proceeded further, and the Danger of the Starte of Religion too, to which many of the other Side had no great Evour. It was not his Feeblenes therefore, but rather his Caution and Wildom that made his flowing in the library and the Danger of the Starte of Religion too, to which many of the other Side had no great Evour. It was not his Feeblenes therefore, but rather his Caution and Wildom that made him thom: as he did.

Sire ma-

red reain

10001. yearly. But doutbless the Earl of Warmick had good reason to suspect, that they who had the honesty not to approve his Purpose, would not want the Heart to oppose against it.

During these Combats among the Nobility, in Surfolk, many popular Infurrections were affayled, and other One Bell was put to death at Tyburn for moving a new Rebellion in Suffolk and in Effex; he was a Man nittily needy, and therefore adven-trous; efteem'd but an idle Fellow, until he found opportunity to fnew his Rashness. Divers like Attempts were made in other Places, but the Authors were not fo readily follow'd by the People as others had done before: partly because Multitudes do not easily move. but chiefly because Misadventures of others in like Attempts had taught them to be more warily advis'd.

A Parlia-

About this time a Parliament was held at ment. Westminster, wherein one Act was made against fpreading of Prophecies, the first Motive of Rebellions; and another against unlawful Affemblies, the first apparent acting of them. But for tear of new Tumults, the Parliament was untimely dissolv'd, and Gentlemen charg'd to retire to their Country Habitations, being furnish'd with such Forces and Commissions as were held fufficient to hold in Bridle, either the Malice or Rage of reasonless People: Yea fo great grew the doubt of new Infurrections, that Trinity Term did not hold, left Gentlemen should by that occasion be drawn out of the Country where they were efteem'd to do good Service, by keeping the Commons from Commotions. All these Movements seem'd to be pretended by moving of the Earth in divers Places of Suffex.

Siv Tho Chevnie

The Affairs of England beyond the Seas all this time, were carry'd with variable Success: leve is the Sir Thomas Cheynie was fent to the Emperor to Emperor. treat with him, that his Forces might join with the Forces of England against the common Enemies of them both, according to the Articles formerly concluded. These Articles had been well observ'd for a time, especially against the French. But afterwards the Emperor being diverted about other Preparations, and therewith much follicited by the Scots not to be a help to ruin their Kingdom, fell by degrees from the King of England, filling his Embassadors with empty Hopes at the first, wherein also be daily fainted and failed in the end.

In France the King placed the Rhinegrave with divers Regiments of Almans, Lance-France of queness, and certain Enfigns of French, to the Number of four or five thousand, at the Town of Morguifon, midway between Bulloine and Calais, to impeach all Intercourse between those two Places. Whereupon the King of England caused all the Strangers that had served the Year against the Rebels to the Number of 2000 to be transported to Calais; to them were added 3000 Englist, under the Command of Francis Earl of Huntingdon, and Sir Edward Histings his Brother, to dislodg the French, or otherwise to annoy them. But the French perceiving that the Troubles in England were perfectly appeas'd, and that the King thereby was much strengthen'd in his Estate, for that 1550. Locks at II eliminiter, and gave away the King's corrected or fpent; finding also that he daily 1550. Stuff: He was fined at 12000 l. to be paid grew rather into Admiration than Love, as grew rather into Admiration than Love, as well for that it was apparent, that he had fo well improv'd that little Stock which his Father left, as he was like to prove a Thriver in the end; also weary in maintaining Wars with Scotland, as well in regard of the Charge, as for that his People were nothing desirous of Service in that diftant Country.

Laftly, Having try'd as well the Strength as Courtefy of the English Nation, and doubtful of the Estates of the Empire and of Spain, by whom not only the Wings of his Kingdom had been clipped on every fide, but the whole Body thereof dangerously attempted, he re-folved to fasten Peace with England if he could.

Hereupon he dispatched to the English Court Guidotti an Italian born in Florence, many Overtures to the Lords of the Council, but all as from the Constable of France; and efpying with a nimble Eye that Matters of Council were chiefly fway'd by the Earl of Warmick, by great Gifts and greater Hopes he wrought him to be appliable to his Defires. In the end it was concluded that four Embaffadors should be fent from the King of England into France, and four from the Franch King to treat with them; that the English Commissioners should come to Guishes, and the French to Ardes, and that their Meeting should be chiefly at Guisnes: The English yielding to all with sincerity of Mind, the French accepting all, but with Intentions referv'd to themfelves. Lords appointed by the English were John Earl of Bedford, William Lord Paget, Sir William Peter, and Sir John Muson Secretary (g) of State. On the French fide were appointed Mon-State. On the remonder were appearance last fieur Rochpott, Montieur Chastilion, Guillant de Mortier, and Rochetele de Dassie. In short time Warwick after the Earl of Warmick was made Lord made great Great Mafter, another Feather to his mounting Mafter. Mind.

The day wherein the English Embassadors The Place The day wherein the Engine Emonators arriv'd at Calais, Guidotti relotted unto them of Meeting with a Letter from Monsieur Rochpott, whereby of the French of the Calais and the Calais an he fignify'd that the French intended not to English come to Ardes, but desired that the English Embassa. would go to Bulloine, and that the Meeting dors. might be besides the Town. For this he alledg'd that he was fo weakly disposed in Health that he could not travel far, and that he being Governor of Picardie and Chaftilion of Newhaven, they might not depart fuch diftance from their Charge; and further, that there must be much wast of time if the English should lie at Guifnes and the French at Ardes; and that the Equality would be more, and the Dishonour to one of the sides less, if the Interview should be upon the Frontiers, than if one part should be drawn into the Territory of the other.

Upon this rub the English Embassadors thought fit to demur, and fo fent into England to receive Directions from the Lords of the Council. They again referr'd the Matter wholly to the Judgment of the Embassadors, affirming, that it was a Circumstance not much to be stood upon, in case it were not upon fome finencis, but for eafe and commodity of them and their Train, which indeed they might better find near Bolloine than at Arthe vicious Humors against him were either des; in case also they could discern no deep

The Condition of Bulloyn.

Eulloyn.

1550. inconvenience which might hinder the good the reftitution of Bulloyn, and other Pitter of Iffue of the good Bufiness in hand, which they effected dufficient, if in substance it might be effected; albeit in all Points they had not formuch of their Minds as they then defired, and as at another time they would expect; and fo the English Commissioners went to Bulloine, and the French came to one of their Forts nearest to Bulloine.

Not long before the Emperor had been af-Adiled by the King of England to aid him in defence of Bulloine against the French; which he expresly refused, alledging, that he was not bound so to do by Conditions of the League; for that Bullon was a piece of new Conquelt acquir'd by the English lines the League was made. Then the King offer'd to yield the Town absolutely into his hands, in case he would maintain it against the French; which offer also he refus'd to accept. At the arrival of the English Embassadors, the Soldiers were sharply askall'd with Wants; there was not one drop of Beer in the Town; the Bread and Bread-corn sufficed not for fix days. Hereupon the Soldiers entred into proportion, and to give them Example, the Lord Clinton being Lord Deputy, limited himself to a Loaf a

The King was indebted in those Parts above 14000 l. belides for the Earl of Huntingdon's Numbers, which were about 1300 Foot; be-fides also the Increases daily rising, for the monthly pay of English and Strangers amounted to 6000 l. besides Allowance for Officers. Hereof the Band of Horsemen out of Germany, took little lefs than 800 1. the Month; and the Almanes on Foot 40001. accounting the Gulden at 3.6.41. but accounting it more, as without a higher Valuation little Service and happily some Mischief might be expected, the monthly Pay to Strangers amounted higher. Hereby a great Error was discover'd, in that the Strangers for desence of Bulloyn, were of greater strength than were the English.

Now the English Commissioners having first procur'd fome Relief both for Victuals and Pay, prepar'd a Tent without the Town for meeting with the French. But they erected a House on the further side of the Water within their own Territory, in a manner half way between their Fort and the Town. The Englifb perfuaded the French to furcease their Building, pretending (but for their Fantaly) it was not necessary, because neither their Treaty was like to continue long, neither was it by folema Meeting that the Bufiness in hand must be effected. But in truth they feared left if Peace should not follow, the French might in short time, either with filling or massing the House, or else by fortifying, make such a Piece as might annoy the Haven or the Town. Notwithstanding the French not only proceeded, but refused any other place of Interview.

The French At their first meeting much time was spent treat about in Geremony of Salutation. Then the Commissions were read: then Monsieur de Mortier in a fharp Speech declar'd, that the French King their Mafter had upon just Grounds entred the War for recovery of his Right, and defence of his Allies; yet was he well minded for an honourable Peace, fo as the things for which the War began, might be brought to some reasonable Appointment; and hearing of the like Disposition of the Kinz of Englind, he had fent them to treat of those Affairs, nothing doubting but that the English would accord to the relitution of Bullays, and other Piece or their late Conquelts, which fo land as they flould keep, fo long they may be effect in the War would continue. He further add a ther Bullays was but a bare ruino is Tewn, without Territory, or any other commodie, to be lance the Charge of defending it a did the Power of Figure. Laftly, He iail there if high want no good Will in them to bring, it was to good Apopintment, howing to find the leg of the cool of the property of the p to good Appointment, hoping to find the !. Affection in the Engl. fb.

After that the English Commissioners had The Lord conferred a while, the Lord Proget answered, Paget That the Canes of the War, both with them and their Allies (whom he took to be the Scots) being just and honourable, the Town of Bulloyn, and other Pieces sebdu'd, as well by their late great Mafter against them, as by the King their then Mafter against their Allies, were acquir'd by just Title of Victory; and therefore in keeping of them no Injury was offer'd, either to the French King or to the Scots. But the further declaration he left off until their next meeting, because both the Time was spent, and the Tide summon'd them to depart. Touching the good Inclination of the King their Mafter, he had declared it well by fending them thither, in whom they should find fitch good Conformity, that if good Success ensued not, the Fault should be, which they expected not, in the French. Nothing clie was done faving a furcease of Hoffility concluded for 15 Days, which was proclaim'd in both the Frontiers.

At the next meeting the Lord Pager Spent L. Pager much Speech in tetting forth the King of Eng- feets Land's Title to Bulloyn, and to his Debts and Pension from the French King, with all Arrea-rages; together with the justice of his War against the Scots.

The French were as earnest in maintaining TheFrench the contrary, wanting no Words whatfover of Retheir Reafons were: For between great Printempered ces, the greateff Strength carrieth the greateft for EdReafon. At the laft Monfieur de Mortie. roundly faid, that to cut off all Contentions of Words, he would propose two Means for Peace; All that for old Matters of Pensions, Debts and Arrearages, the English should make white Books and never mention them more; but for Bulloyn to fet the higher Value; or elfe, faid he, let old Quarrels remain, fo as your Right may be referved to claim, and ours to defend; and let us speak frankly of some Recompence for Bulloyn. As for the Scottish Scottish Queen (for this had been also mention'd be-Queen fore) our King is refolv'd to keep her for his son; and therefore we defire you to speak thereof no more, but of what other Points you please, so as we may draw shortly to an end.

The Lord Paget answer'd for the other Com- L. Paget The Lord right answer ator the don't come dependent millioners, that t'ey had greateff Reafon to involve upon defire a speedy End; but the Matters where—the kindle upon they stood were of greater Importance the kindle property of the stood than to be determin'd upon the fuddain. For land. faid he, you may make Doubts as you pleafe. But if the Debt to our King be not just, being confess'd, judg'd, fworn, and by many Treaties confirm'd, we know not what may be deemed just; neither is it a Sum to be flenderly regarded, being 2000000 Crowns clear Debt, belides 12000 Crowns resting in dispute. The Justice of the Wars against Scotland he maintain'd, as well in regard of Breach of Treaties with themselves, as for that, contrary to 550, their Comprehension in the last Treaty of France, they had invaded England in these Intercourses. The whole Afternoon being spent, it was agreed that both Parties should advise upon fuch Matters as had been propounded until the next meeting.

But the French either having, or supposing that they had Advantage over the English; The French Hiff. partly by reason of their sirm Intelligence in the English Court, and partly because they found the English Commissioners much yielding to their Dehres, as first in coming into France, then to Bulloign, lastly to a House of their own crecting, began to be stiff and almost intractable, fharply preffing both for speedy Resolution, and fhort Times for meetings. dotti continually travel'd to draw both Parties to conformity, the French being willing to be entreated by their Friend to their most dislembled defires. Guidotti instead of the Queen of Scots, propounded that the French King's The French Daughter should be joyn'd in Marriage to the King of England, affirming, that if it were a dry Peace, it would hardly be durable; but Daughter officied for hereto the English gave no inclinable ear. Then E.Edward he deliver'd 17 Reasons in writing, for which he faid it was necessary for the English to con-clude a Peace. The English demanded how many Reasons he had for the French; he anfiver'd, that he had also his Reasons for them, which he intended likewise to deliver in writ-

Commissio-

At the next meeting the French shew'd themfelver, as before, peremptory and precife, flanding flifly upon their own Overtures, which they had they faid no Commission to exceed: and therefore they refus'd to treat either of the Pension or the Debt demanded by the Engtiff, and declar'd themselves rather desirous than willing to break off the Treaty. The English answer'd, that before their coming Guidotti had declar'd from the French King, that fo as Esdwign might be reftor'd, all that was owing from him to the King of England should be paid, which Guidotti being present affirmed to be true. Well, said they, what our King told Guidotti we know not, but to us he hath given no other Commission than you have heard, which in no cafe we must exceed. As for the Pension whereof you speak, think you that a King of France will be tributary to any? No, no, affure you he will not; and touching the Debt, because the King of Eng-Lind gave occasion to the Wars, wasted the French King's Country, and thereby caus'd him to expend fuch Sums of Mony as exceeded the Debt, he took himself to be acquitted thereof.

Hereto the English answer'd, that the French King might take Matters as he pleas'd, but in Honour, Justice, and Conscience, no Debt was more due: And the Wars being made for de-nial thereof, he could not be for that Caufe acquitted. That the Penfion was also granted upon divers Carfes both weighty and just, and amongst other by reason of the King of Eng-Land's uncontroulable Title to Normandy, Gafcoine, and other Parts of France. Here they were interrupted by Monfieur Rochpott, who brake forth into warm Words, and was again as warmly answer'd; but the French would nothing move from their own Overtures, which they flood upon by way of Conclusions.

At last the English said, that they might do well to report these Differences to their Ma-

might therein be known. Hereto the French answer'd, that they knew their King's Plea-c fure so well, that if they should fend to him again, he would and might think them of fmall Discretion; and herewith they offer'd to break. The English told them, that if they would break they might, but they intended to conclude nothing until they had further Instructions from England; which they would procure as foon as they could. To this the French did eafily incline.

These Matters advertis'd into England, much troubled the Council, and the rather for that the Earl of Warmick was at that time retir'd, pretending much Infirmity in his Health. Hereupon many finister Surmises began to fpring up among fome of the Council, partly probable, and part happily devifed: for as they knew not whether he were more dangerous present or away; so, as the nature of all Fear is, they suspected that which happen'd to be the worst. From hence divers of the Council began in this manner to murmur against him.

What, faid they, is he never fick but when Affairs of greatest Weight are in debating? Or where-fore else doth he withdraw himself from the Company of those who are not well affured of his Love? Wherefore doth he not now come forth and openly over-rule, as in other Matters he is accustom'd? Would he have us imagine by his absence that he atteth nothing? Or knowing that all moveth from him, Shall we not think that he fecketh to enjoy his own Ends, without bearing blame for any Event? Go to then; let him come forth and declare himfelf, for it is better that he should find fault with all things whilst they are doing, than condemn all things when they are done.

With those and the like Speeches he came to Council more than ordinary before; and at last, partly by his Reasons, and partly by his Authority, Peace with France was efteem'd for necessary, that new Instructions were fent to the English Embassadors, according whereto Peace was concluded upon these Articles.

1. That all Titles and Claims on the one Instructions fide, and Defences on the other, flould remain to the Emto either Party as they were before.

2. That the Fault of one Man (except he for delivery were unpunished) should not break the Peace.

3. That Prisoners should be deliver'd on both fides.

4. That Bulloign, and other pieces of the new Conquests, with all the Ordnance, except such as had been brought in by the English, should be deliver'd to the French within fix Months after the Peace proclaim'd.

5. That Ships of Merchandise might fasely pass, and Ships of War be call'd in.
6. That the French should pay for the same 200000 Crowns of the Sum, every Crown valued at 6 s. 8 d. within three Days after the delivery of the Town, and 200000 like Crowns more upon the 5th day of August then next enfuing.

7. That the English shouldmake no new Wars upon Scotland, unjets new Occasions should be given.

8. That if the Scots razed Lords and Dun-gluss, the English should raze Roxborough and Aymouth, and no Fortification to be afterward made in any of those Places.

To these Articles the French King was sworn The Kings at Amiens, the King of England at London; sworn to the fters on both fides, and that their Pleafures Commissioners being especially appointed to Articles.

lith Commi Jimers Fa_bland

take orders.

take their Oaths, and for further Assurance six Hostages were deliver'd for the French at Ardes, and fix for the English at Guisnes: and it was agreed that at the Delivery of Bulloine, the English Hostages should be discharg'd, and that upon the Payment of the first 200000 Crowns, three of the French Hostages should be difcharg'd, and other three upon Payment The Emper of the last 200000 Crowns. In the Peace the rer inclu- Emperor was comprized, in case he would confent. And further to cut off future Contentions, Commissioners were appointed both by the English and French, to make certain the Limits between both Territories. Other Commillioners were appointed fummarily to expedite and determine all matters of Piracy and Depredation between the Subjects of both Kingdoms, whereby many had not only liv'd, but thriv'd many years before.

So the Lord Clinton, Governour of Bulloine, L. Clinton delivereth having receiv'd his Warrant, discharg'd all

The Fr.

Hoftages come into paid for

Loloyn, how dif-

ap Boloyn, his Men except 1800, and with them issued Apr. 25. out of the Town, and deliver'd it to Monf. Chaffilion, having first receiv'd of him the fix English Hostages, and an Acquittance for Delivery of the Town, and fafe Conduct for his Passage to Calsis. These 1800 Men were Passage to Calais. afterwards plac'd upon the Frontiers between the Emperor and the English. Soon after the first Payment of Mony was made by the French to certain English Commissioners, whereupon three of their Hollages were discharg'd: The other three, namely Count de Anguien next Heir to the Crown of France after the King's England. Children, the Marquiss de Mesuw Brother to the Scotish Queen, and Montmoreney the Conthe Affairs of France, came into England. Court, and order taken that no Man should They were honourably accompany'd, and with have any Benefice from the King, but first he great State brought to London, where every of them kept house by himfelf. Of the Monies of the first Payment 100001.

The Monies was appointed for Calais, 8000 l. for Ireland, 10000 l. for the North, and 2000 l. for the Navy: the Refidue was carefully laid up in the Tower. Likewise of the second Payment (whereupon the Hoftages aforenam'd return'd into France) 8000 l. was appointed for Calais, 5000 l. for the North, 10000 l. was employ'd for increase towards outward Payments, certain Perfons undertaking that the Mony should * Or biply be doubled every * Month: the Refidue was

And now it remain'd that the chief Actors Guidet. the India- in this Peace (whatfoever their Aims were) must be both honour'd and enrich'd with great thu Peace, Rewards: and first Guidorti the first Mover of the Treaty was recompens'd with Knighthood, 1000 Crowns reward, 1000 Crowns Penfion, and 250 Crowns Penfion to his Son. Places and The Earl of Warnick was made general War-Honors be-den of the North, had 1000 Marks Land flood on granted to him, and 100 Horfemen of the certain be King's Charge. Mr. Herbert his chief Infrument was made Prefident of Wales, and had a Grant of 500 L Land. And thus whether immoderate Favours breed first Unthankfulness and afterwards Hate, and therewith ambitious Delires; or whether God fo punisheth immoderate Affections; it often happens that Men are prone to raise those most, who work their Ruin in the end. Also the Lord Clinton, who had been Deputy at Bulloine, was made Lord Admiral of England. The Captains and Officers were rewarded with Lands, Leafes, Offices and Annuities; the ordinary Soldiers having all their Pay, and a month's Pay over, I were fent into their Countries, and great charge given that they should be well obferv'd, until they were quietly fettled at home. The Light Horfemen and Men at Arms were put under the Marquifs of Northampton Captain of the Pensioners. All the Guard of Bulloine were committed to the Lord Admiral. The chief Captains with 600 Ordinaries were fent to strengthen the Frontiers of Scotland. Lastly, Strangers were difpatch'd out of the Realm, who after fome idle Expence of their Monies and Time, were likeft to be forward either in beginning or in maintaining Dif-

Prefently after this Agreement of Peace, The Duke the Duke of Brunfwick fent to the King of of Brunt-England to offer his Service in the King's Warr by checking with the Only May of his Paul and the Service to the King. with 10000 Men of his Band, and to entreat a Marriage with the Lady Mary the King's eldeft Sifter. Answer was made touching his Offer of Aid, that the King's Wars were ended; and touching Marriage with the Lady Mary, that the King was in speech for her Marriage with the Infanta of Portug d, which being determin'd without effect, he should favourably be heard. Upon this also the Em- The Emperer's Embassadors did expostulate with the rais Em-King, that he had broken his League with the balladir. To this the King aufwer'd, that about Emperor. because the Emperor fail'd in his Performances, Peace, the King was enforced to provide for himfelf. The Embalfador delivous, as it feem'd, to make a Breach, demanded boldly that the Lady Many thould have the free Exercise of the Mafs. This did the King not only constantly Court, and order taken that no Man should have any Benefice from the King, but first he should preach before him. And in short time after, under pretence of preparing for Seamatters, 5000 /. were fent to relieve Protestants beyond the Seas: And further, because the Emperor made divers strait Laws against those of the Religion, Merchants were charg'd to forbear their Trade into Flanders so much as they could. So as it appears, had fome of the English Nobility been either less powerful or more faithful than they were, the King had Ears enough and Hands enough as well at home as among good Friends abroad, either to have maintain'd Wars againft the French, or to have reduc'd them to a more honourable Peace. Wars being thus at good Appointment, An Embajpeaceable Bulinefs was more ferioufly regarded, fador from and whereas an Emballador arriv'd from Guft at the King of Sweden to knit Amity with the King of Sweden, April 24. King for Intercourse of Merchants, at last these Articles were concluded.

1. That if the King of Sweden fent Bullion into England, he might carry away English Commodities without Cultom.

2. That he should carry Bullion to no other

3. That if he fent Ozimus, Steel, Copper, &c. he should pay Custom for English Commodities as an English Man

4. That if he fent other Merchandize, he should have free Intercourse, paying Custom as a Stranger.

The Mint was fet to work fo as it gain'd The Mint-24000 /. yearly to the King, which should bear his Charges in Ireland, and bring 100001. Vol. II.

made.

People from thence for fervice in his Wars, who haply would not have remain'd quiet at home; the Governors at that time were Men of fuch choice, that neither the Nobility difdain'd to endure their Command, nor the inferior fort were oppress'd to supply their Wants.

Further 200001. weight was appointed to Base Coin be made fo much baser, as the King might gain thereby 160000 l. Agreement was also made with Tork, Master of one of the Mints, that he should receive the Profit of all the Bullion which himfelf fhould bring, and pay the King's Debts to the value of 1200001. and remain accountable for the rest, paying six Shillings and eight pence (b) the Ounce until the Exchange were equal in Flanders, and afterwards fix shillings and eight pence (i). And further, that he should declare his Bargain to any that fhould be appointed to overfee him, and leave off when the King should please. That for this the King should give him 15000 L in prest, and license to transport 8000 L beyond the Seas to abase the Exchange. Herewith the base Monies sormerly coin'd were cry'd down.

Now it is certain that by reason of the long Hoffility which England held against Scotland and France, Peace was not fo hardly concluded as kept. But albeit Occasions of Breach were often offer'd, yet the Judgment and Moderation of both parts fuffic'd either to avoid or appeale them. The Bishop of Glasco coming into England without fafe Conduct, was taken Prisoner. The French Embassador made means to the King for his Discharge, but answer was made that the Scots had no tuch Peace with the English, that they might pass without safe Conduct. This was not deny'd by the Mr. of Erskine; whereupon the Archbishop was retain'd Prisoner, but after a short time remitted to his Liberty. After this the Queen

2. Dowa- Dowager of Scotland going from France to her ger of Scot- Country, pass'd thro England, but the French land passes Embassador first obtain'd her safe Conduct. thro Eng- She arriv'd at Portsmouth, and was there encounter'd by divers of the English Nobility of highest Quality and Estimation, as well for doing her Honour, as for that having such Pledges she need not fear. At London she sojourn'd four days, being lodg'd in the Bishop's Palace, and defray'd at the charge of the City, in which time she was royally feasted by the King at Whitehall. At her departure she was attended out of the City with all Ceremonies pretending to State. The Sheriffs of every Shire thro which she pass'd, receiv'd her accompany'd with the chief Gentlemen of the Country; as also they convey'd her from one Shire to another (making always Provinon for her Entertainment) till fine came into the

The Earl of Maxmell came with a strong dition of Defence. And whereas one Stymard

to the Treasure. 400 Men were sent into Band to the Borders (1) of England against 155 Families did often skirmish with the Earl's in boilite Men, and slew many of them, yet were they income? never therein aided by the Fretish, neither would they affail him upon any advantage. But when any of these Gentlemen were distress'd by the Earl, the English did then encounter him by Arms. Generally the English would not offer to offend the Scots, but only in defending their Friends. About this time the French King fent Mon- A.1551.

ficur Lanfat to request of the King of England, that the fishing of Twede, Edvington, the debatable Ground, and the Senish Hostages which king jends Datable Ground, and the Scotlib Holtages which King Jends had been fent into E yland in the time of Lantat to King Henry VIII. might be reftor'd to the England-Scots; and that the English Prifoners who were bound to pay their Ranfoms before the Peace, should not be comprised in the Conditions thereof. The King sent Sir William Febr. 20. Fickering to declare to the French King, that 8h Will. to the last Demand he agreed without excep- Pickering tion; and albeit he had a right to the Places goes into requir'd, yet he was content as well for them as for other Demands, to perform whatfoever should be agreed on by Commissioners on both fides: So Commissioners were appointed, and the Matters fettled in quiet Agreement.

In the mean time the King fent new Supply of Forces and other Provisions into the North Parts of the Realm; whereupon the French King fent a Navy of 160 Sail into Scotland, laden with Grain, Powder, and Ordnance: of these fixteen of the greatest perish'd upon the Coast of Ireland, two charg'd with Artillery and fourteen with Grain; the Residue so fhaken and torn, that it gave a main check to their further Deligns: But because many fav'd themselves in the Harbours of Ireland, The King the King fent thither four Ships, four Barks, fets out a four Pinnaces, and twelve Victuallers. These Fleet. posses'd themselves of three Havens, two on the South fide toward France, and one towards Scotland. The Lord Cobham was appointed General Lieutenant, who fortify'd those Havens, and drew down the chiefest Forces of the Country towards the South Parts thereof. And thus even in Peace either of the Kings fo vigilantly observ'd every Motion of the other, if they had liv'd upon the Alarm. Will of Friends is best assur'd when they have no power to do hurt. In France a difference did rife about a place call'd Fine (wood, whether it pertain'd to the English or to the French. On the French part 800 Men affembled at Arms upon this Quarrel, on the English 1000. But the readiness of the English to fight, mov'd the French to abitain from blows, and to permit the English to enjoy their ground. Hereupon the King fortify'd C.d.is and his other Pieces in France, in fuch fort as they had never been in like con-

land.

Borders of Scotland.

⁽b) Six Shillings and Sixpence the Ounce. K. Edward's Journ. Vid. Collect. Hift. Reform. Part 2. p. 21.
(i) Six Shillings and Twopence. K. Edw. Journ. ubi fupr. J. S.
(j) Theie Borders were the North Borders, and thefe Families, or rather only one Family, was that of the Grimes, or Grabbars. The Encouncer of Earl Macovel and them was on the 16th of Augalt. The Alfiftance of the L. Dace was only that he fiood before Macovel's face with a good Band of Men; and so put him from his Purpote: As this Affair start down to K. Edward's Journal. And thence it also appears, that in the Skirmish, not many, but certain of the Earl's men were slain. J. S.

tends to poison the

Mary to 1551. a Scot was apprehended in England, and ima Scot in the young Q. of Scots; the King as well to manifest his Justice as his Love and Respect towards possion the young Queen, deliver'd him to the French of Scots. King upon the Frontiers of Caluis to be jus-tic'd by him at his pleasure.

And yet this Advice was not approv'd by many; for albeit it be both honourable and just, that they who offend against their proper Prince, should be deliver'd to him to be punift'd, yet is it grown out of common use.

And for this cause the Condition is often exprefs'd in Leagues, that the Subjects of one Prince should be deliver'd by the other in case they be requir'd; the contrary Cultom may haply hold reasonable in ordinary Offences, in which case the Scripture forbiddeth to deliver a Slave to his angry Lord: but in grievous and inhuman Crimes, in fuch as overthrow the Foundation of the State, in fuch as lhake the Surety of human Society, I conceive it more fit that Offenders should be remitted to their Prince to be punish'd in the place where they have offended.

But of all other the King's Amity with the Emperor was leaft affur'd, being as fulleft both of Practice and Diffruft, fo in danger every Intentions hour to diffolve. Certain Ships were apto transport pointed in the Low Countrys, with Men and Furniture futable to the Attempts, to tranf-Mary to Answerp. port the Lady Mary either by violence or by frealth, out of England to Autwerp. Divers of her Gentlemen departed thither before, and certain Shippers (as they are term'd) were discover'd to view the English Coast. Hereupon Sir John Gates was fent with Forces into Effex where the Lady then lay; and besides the Duke of Somerset was sont with 200 Men, the Lord Privy Seal with other 200, and Mr. Sentlegier with 400 Men more, to feveral Coasts upon the Sea. Divers of the King's Ships were addresd'd to be in readiness for the Sea. Mr. Chamberlain, Embaffador for the Queen of Hungary in the Low Countries, advertis'd by his Letters, that it 1551 was intended by this means to taife an outward War to join with fome Sedition within doors, and that the Queen of Hungary had openly faid, that the Shippers were towards, who for fear of one Gentleman durft not proceed in their Attempt. Upon these either Dangers or Fears, the Lord Chancellor and Secretary Petre were fent to the Lady Mary, who after some Conference brought her to the Lord Chancellor's House at Leez in Essex, and from thence to Hunfdon, and from thence to the King at Westminster. Here the Council March 18. declar'd unto her, how long the King had per-Shi nor mitted her the use of the Mass, and per-permitted ceiving by her Letters how unmovable the to have was, he was refoly'd no longer to cudure it, hads, unless the would put him in hope of forme Conformity within a fhort time. To this the answerd, that her Soul was God's, and touching her Baith as the could not above the second of th her Faith, as she could not change, so she would not dissemble it. Reply was made, that the King intended not to constrain her Faith, but to reftrain the outward Profession thereof, in regard of the Danger the Example might draw. After some other like interchange of Speeches, the Lady was appointed to remain with the King; but Dr. Mallet her Chaplain was committed Prisoner to the Fleet. And almost herewith arriv'd an Embassador from the Emperor, with a menacing Message From the Emperer, with a menacing Menage of War, in case his Cousin the Lady Many should not be admitted the free Exercise of the Mass. The King presently advis'd with the (1) Archbishop of Contrebuy, and with the Bishops of London and Rockesser, who gave their Opinion, that to give licence to Sin was Sin, but to connive at Sin might be allow'd, in cafe it were neither too long, nor without hope of Reformation. Then was answer given to the Embassador, that the King would fend to the Emperor within a month or two, to give him what Satisfaction should be fit.

In

(1) This the Author had from the King's Pen in his Journal; where he hath not faithfully transferibed. For 1be Transfer with wink affirms (1) and the Author had from the fings ten in his journal; where he hath not faithfully trafficiled. For the Traffiche Words of the King are thefe; "The fillipps did condider that to give theenee to Sin was sin: To fuffer and wink Aribins "art it poor at Sin, but as the Lady Mary's Mals in her Houthfold) might be born, fo all hathe politible might be the did, with the The King's Notes are flore, and muft be injusted: that is, all hathe was to be tited, to take away field in Occasion Lady Mars of Sin. Dut as Maymard fets down the Words, he would make those excellent billiops very bad. Cafuiths: as tho sycencern comive at Sin might be allowed, in case if were not too long, and in loye of Reparation. This thereth again, how the foliage fluidous this Author was to expose Protestant Eithops.

Mals in the Company of the Mars of the Company of the Mars of Sin Mars o

fludious this Author was to expole Protestant Ethiops.

There was indeed fome Promitie past by the Ring for the Lady Mary's hearing Maß. Which stood thus, as ap-ker Eamily, peared in one of the Council's Letters to her: That upon the Emperor's Request to the King, that she might have the Liberry to use the Maß in her House, and to be exempt from the Danger of the Statute, thus much was granteed, that for he siske, and the Lady Mary's coo, it should be fuffered and winked at, if the hat the private Maß used in her Cleffee for a teation, until the might be better informed; whereof was some hope: having only with her a few of her own Chamber. So that for all the refer of her Household the Service of the Realm flouid be used. Further than this the Promise exceeded not. After this Grant in Words, the Emperor defired some Writing, as a Witness of the fame; but that was ever denyed.

Tame; but that was even the same of the Lady Many's Family againft the Law that abolished it, many notable Letters past between the King, the Procedor, the Privy Council, and the Isid Lady: Which are preferred to us in John Pres's Treatury, I mean, his Mantprology. This Busines, was in hand a great while, is order to the inducing of Park Treatury, I mean his Maryorlogy. This Eufines was in hand a great while, in order to the inducing of the Lady Many and her Houthold to conform to the late Act for Uniformity of public Prayer. For it lafted from June 15440. to August or Spirtment 1541. Und a Deference was given to her Quality. Dat this Lady was fo refoliute in her Adherence to the Mats, that she had like to have embroiled the Kingdom in a War with the Emperor: whom she Adherence to the Bals, that file had like to have embroiled the Kingdom in a War with the Emperor: whom feedaged folia, that he required by his Amhaldory yet a fector dring, that the flouded neity het betry in that behalt, contrary coa Law made, which abolithed the Maß, and enjoined a Book of Common Prayer inflead thereof. They proceeded with her in this nature with all due Reflect; as I finall flow briefly, partly from the Letters that pull between them, partly from the Council-Book, the King's Journal, or other MSS. In the Maß, and unit to the Maß, and unit to the Maß, and unit to the Letters that Plant, the L. Procedora. Council wrote their Letters to her; and that file would find the Comptroller of her Houfe and Let. Hyban her Clappian to them, to receive executed fording either: I have to the Maß, and under the made of Jame to be from Reinhand their Author in Writing to he former Letter, anilvering it Article by Article. They all feer a state they have the Comptroller, her Chapitan and Mr. Englished, to repair immediately to them. Then the would be the content of the Procedor and the Council dated Jame to 2.1, tall of very haughty Language, experimental the content of the Procedor at their Inferiors hands.

Vol. II.

An Ambaj- the Subjects should lose their Trade in Flanders, fador fent that the Flemmings had Cloth for a year in their hands, that the King had 500 Quintals of Pouder, and much Armour in Flanders, and the Merchants much Goods at the Wool Fleet, they advis'd the King to fend an Ambassador

In the mean time the Council confidering win time, thereby both to prepare a Mart in 1551 how prejudicial it would be to the Realm if England and to withdraw their Goods out of 1551 and 1552 a Flanders. So Mr. Wotton was dispatch'd with particular Instructions to desire the Emperor to be less violent in his Requests: And to advertise him that the Lady Mary, as she was his Cousin, so was she the King's Sister, and which is more, his Subject; that feeing the King was a Legier to the Emperor, as well to fatisfy Sovereign Frince without Dependancy upon him for other Matters by him required, as to any but God, it was not reason that the Em-

After all this, Maß was continued in her Family, to the open Affront of the King and his Privy Council, and the Laws. Whereupon Procefs was awarded againft two of her Chaplains, and delivered to the Sheriff of Effex. Thefe were Malket and Berklet. Which the Council gave her Notice of December 2. Whereas the wrote them an angrey perfulating Letter; urging them with the Promite made to the Emperor the laft year, that the should never be troubled or disquieted for having Maß faid in her House; and that the Emperor's Ambaltador, that then was deed, told her fo. But that nevertheless to be plain with them, however they should use her, or those that belonged to he, would be never vary from her Opinion; and as the had been minded always to have Maß faid to her, to she ever would be. To this Letter they wrote her again, Decemb, 5.s. a large Antiwer: Shewing her, that the Promise made to the Emperor's Ambaltador was only temporary, until the were better informed, there being then daily hope of her for the Emperor's Antibaltador was only temporary, until the were better informed, there being then daily hope of her Grace Resociation, and that the most that was told the Ambaltador was, that the King might, upon hope of her Grace Resociation of, the state of the Ambaltador was, that the King might, upon hope of her Grace Resociation of, the world was only temporary. The Jaw, 24, 4m. 1551, following, the King, observing by her Letters how shiffly the perfisted in her own Wav Then Jaw, 24, 4m. 1551, following, the King, observing by her Letters how shiffly the perfisted in her own United the Ambaltador was that for a Scasson.

Dats were used in ner own Clote only, and mat for a scatton.

Then Jan. 24. An. 1551. following, the Ring, observing by her Letters how fiiffly the perfifted in her own Way, wroe her a loving Letter upon the lame Argument; arguing excellently well with her, pretermitting (as he faid) his Estate as King, and talking with her as her Erother. To which Letter the gave Answer Estate 3, teem Beaulies:

Institute 28 king, and taking with the above the remaining fill unmoveable.

Feb. 16. The Emperour's Ambaffador prefs'd the Council to observe their Promise made to him for Permission to the Lady Marg of the Exercise of her Religion, till the King should come to Age.

March 18. The King related in his Journal, that he sent for her to Wellminster, and told her that he could not any longer bear her Practite. Upon the next day (according to the Journal) the Emperor's Ambaffador declar'd War to the King, if he continued not to her the Liberty of her Religion. March 18. (according to the Council Book) the the King, if he continued not to her the Liberry of her Refigion. March 18. (according to the Conneil Book) the Late Improver's Ambatiation had Access to the Council.

All Emprover's Ambatiation had Access to the Council.

All Emprover's Ambatiation had Access to the Council.

March 2s, Limmer, Ridler and Propert discoursed with the King about the Lawfulness of the Permission.

March 2s, The Council Book of the Permission of the Emprover (who was not disprached till the Leth of April), and in the mean time to punish the Offenders; first the King's Servans that heard Mars, next hers.

March 2s, According to the Journal St Anthony Brown and Servicines. Morgan, were fen to the Fleet for hearing Mars. The Council Book placeth the Commitment of the latter March 19. and of the former at March 2s, and the Council Book placeth the Commitment of the Procurement States. affigns the Caufe more at large, viz. for hearing Mafs in her Company, when by the King's Order he attended her from Essex to London.

Effect to Lonarm.

Match 23. Or rather the 18. It was refolved to punish her Servants, hearing or faying Mafs. The day before, the Lady Mary's Comptroller Mr. Rochefter, was examined how many Chaplains she had. Who answered four, viz. Mallet, Lady Mary's Compression of Rechefter, was examined how many Chaplains file had. Who answered four, viz, Mallet, Hipton, Backley, and Richards.

April 29, Dr. Mallet was brought before the Council, and being examind what he meant, that after he had been once forgiven, he would again willfully offend the King's Laws in faying of Mais, and other like; he could not deny but he had done evil in 16 oding. He therefore was committed to the Tower.

Bis win and Bergan upon their Submiffion were foon after discharged from their Imprisonment.

Aug. 51, Itwa sericlived in Council at Richards, 24 Lords prefent, to fend for the chiet Officers of the Lady Mary's House, and to give them in Charge not 10 permit Mafs to be Itid in her House, or to hear it, and to give the fame Charge of the Chaplains, and other Servants. The fame day it was refolved not 10 permit the Uffer of the Mafs to the Emperor's Ambaffador, since he would not permit the English Ambaffador, Resident in his Dominions, the Ute of our Liturgy.

Aug. 11. A Warrant was figued for the Appearance of the Lady Mary's Officers. And an excellent Letter of the King's own to his Sifter accompanied their Deparance, which they feemed to be the Bringers of. Which I will here infert out of the Cotton Library, the rather becaule it is not any where published, as namy others are, relating to this Matter.

infert out of the Cotton Library, the rather becaule it is not any where publified, as many others are, relating to this Mixter.

8 Right dear and intrictly belowed Sifter, We greet you well. And where we have heretofore not only by our Speech sunce you, but aid by your heterets, and by the Letters of our Council, and otherwise, many times declared unto you the carnel Defire we had to have reduced you to fuch Conformity, and Agrecableness in Religion, as is agreed upon by the letters of Men of our Readle, eliabilitied by us in our Parliaments, and most, we doubt not, to the Hourour of Almighty God?, Perceiving that all our Travel and Sufferance taken to that End, worketh not in you the good Effect we would have withed, but that you do rather reft more wedded to your own Mind than you were at the leging; refusing allo to thear any learned Men, that might inform you more rightly in these things; like as for the natural good will be remarked to reduce the provided trather have found of all other most obedient, and readies to give example to others, for doing of any thing learning, we cannot but have a more earnest Regard to the Retormation thereof; not office of your family, we cannot have a more earnest Regard to the Retormation thereof; not office of your family, we cannot have a more earnest Regard to the Retormation thereof; not office of your family, we cannot have a more earnest Regard to the Retormation thereof; not office the Almost and your Family, we cannot have a more earnest Regard to the Retormation thereof; not office the Almost and your Family, we cannot but have a more earnest Regard to the Retormation thereof; not office the Almost and July and your Family, we cannot but have a more earnest Regard to the Retormation thereof; not office of the Almost and the Almo Otho.C.c.

6 thall be used according to our Laws. Of which our Fleature declared unto your Others by our Council, they are commanded to make report to you; to whom we pray you give Credic in that behalf.
The Contents of this Medage given to her Officers aforefaid were, that the Common Prayer flould be used from henceforth in her Family; and to inhibit her Chaplains to fay Maß before her, and her Servants to heat it. But they out of icar of diffushing her, being not well, delivered not this Medage. Which the Council Angul 22, understanding from their own Nouthe, charged them, and that upon their Allegiance, to go and do it. Ear they fill retuited it, and officed themselves willingly to endure any Penishment rather than to deliver to insuredcome a Matter. Wetcupon they were commanded to attend continually upon the Council. And a little after they were committed to the Fleet, and thence to the Tower.

Aug. 26. The L. Chancellor Rich, Sir Anthony Wingfield Comptroler of the Houshold, and Sir William Petre Secre-Aug. 25. The L. Chancellor Rich, Six Inthony Unipheld Comperiors of the Boulhood, and Six Inthin Peter Sective, were fent by the King. 5 Council to her, with a Methics, which was medicit the faune that her three Officers floudly have delivered her. They accordingly Angul 28, required to Crybhall where the now was. And Angul 29, they declired to the Council then as Winder, their Dicharge of the Matter intruded with them; and that faul Lady Mass received the King's Letter upon her Knees, and kift it. But a to her Compliance with the Commands given the List, three after than the wood of the and so they Service than what was upded at the Death of the Late King he Father, the analysis has a facility of the Late King her Father, the chance of the Compliance with the Commands give the Compliance with the Commands give her father than the chance of the Compliance with the Commands give her father than the chance of the Compliance with the Commands give the Command

ward's Fatter to Mary a-

King Ed-

Favour the King's Subjects had in the Emperor's Dominions for their Religion, the lame flould the Emperor's Subjects receive in England. The Emperor perceiving that his Threats were little regarded, regarded little to threaten any more. A Rehel.

lion attempted in Eficx. Diferer'd

About the time that the Lady Miry should have been transported unto Antwerp, a Rebellion was attempted in Effect where she then lay. For furtherance whereof Speeches were calt April 15. forth, that Strangers were arriv'd in England, either to rule or to spoil the natural Inhabitants. Upon this Surmife many appointed to affemble at Chelmsford, and from thence to make Pillage as their Wants or wanton Appetites should Cause Gentlemen were newly commanded to lead. But the Principal being put to death and the Residue pardon'd, all remain'd quiet Many Londoners also hunting after Riot and Threate up on May-day Eafe, contriv'd to tumult upon May-day, pre-Early contrive to thinking of the Enterprise was different bandly kept, the Enterprise was different bandly kept, the Enterprise was different bandly kept, the Enterprise was different bandle by Alliance to fireignthen himfelf. inLondon.

peror should intermeddle either with ordering tails a Rebellion in K. L. They often met. and last had Conferences both private and here. The Redm. (in) Thus much be offered, that what feem'd highly bufy'd in mind, and then H. feem'd highly bufy'd in mind, and then II travelling with troubl'd thoughts, which they often diffembled with importment space. This was first discover'd by one of their sign vants, doubtfel whether before knowled the Mischief, and until then secret or ignoral before, and then first apprehending Sufficers So they were apprehended and after Conviction the Danger determin'd by their * Deaths. Here- (Milita) with Rumours were rais'd of great Difford and Practifes among the Nobility: for this Cause the Lords affembled at London; and feasted divers Days together, giving order to apprehend the Reporters of these surmites, albeit happily not altogether untrue. For this remain in the Country, to govern the People, early to be dealt with while they flund in that when the King was come to fuch Age as he might be able to use, these things bimfelf, his Maietly flouid find her ready to obey his Orders in Weligion; but in these years of his (the, good forcer King, he hash more Knowledge, faid file, than any other or his years, yet that; it was not possible he could be indeed them. That as not her Priesls, they knew what they had to do. The Pain of Impressment was but for a first time. And that if they refused to fair Mass for tear of their Imprisonment, they might do as they would. Eurthat none of the new service should be used in her House; and that if any were, the would not tarry in it.

The King being thus uncertain of the Faith 4ml altbut desperate and discontent, endeavour'd to the King', Silter, and the King of Dian

her Houfe; and that if any were, the would not carry in it.

And figealing or nor ring the I tomife given to the Emperor on Eer behalf, the faid. That to be plain with them, his Ambaffador finald know how the was used at their hands; the faid mereover, that the was falshy, and yet would not die willingly; hat the if the chanced to die, the would proteft, that they of the Council wire the Cantle or her Death. And that it is gave her fair Words, but their Deeds were always ill towards her. Them the words were the Cantle or he for Chancellor a Bing upon her Ringes for the fing, with her very lumble Recommendation to hour, faving, Bing would die his true Subject, and furfer and obey his Commindment in all things, except in their Batters of Religion.

In the, notwichfunding the Emperor's Ambalfador's Sollicitation to have the Lady May'. Officers fet at liberty, In the, notwithtanding the imperors annotations constitution to have the stary and a viticers let at theirty, and that the might have the Mist, till the Emperor were extracted of their thing, he was antivered as was notified convenient, and that the Ring's Amstadador though driving the imperor. And the land Officers were not fet at theirty unril April 24, the next year, viz, 1552, when they repair d unto her Grace, J. S.

unrel Apil 24, the next year, viz. 1552 when they repaired into her Grace. J. S.

(m) This Ambathider Dr. Bifter, Dembath of Camerboar and Tick, was an antient Counfellor and an Ambathider in the Beign of King Henry VIII. But it is fluinge to confider, what a Hierry this Author takes in relating the Influentions that were given Botton in this Embathy, whereas there in not a word in the Lad Influentions, as he repredended them. Ner would it have been good Exlery to rectar proferents and powerful Emper, in intelligent rough Terms, when the Embathy was commenced on purpole to entinue a good Cerrepty-dence with him. That part of the Infinitions relating to the Lady Month State are in thefe ver Weeks, as they are extain in a Volume of the Citian Elbiary. Which I will infert, to fer this part of the Biftory right.

Stalley by full declare, That We perceived likewise, by the Letter of our faid good Brother, his Motion that our Cott, Use Siller the Lady Many, his Coulin, might affe her accultomed Religion for a further Time, according to an Adurance and each while fail Letter is reported.

6 made, as by the flid Letter is reported.
6 For answer whereunto ye shall fay, that First, there buth never been any Affurance or Promise made for that Par-* For antier whereupto ye shall fay, that Fift, there both never been any Assurance or Promise made for that Purpose by us, but only in this manner, at the Mortion of him that was here amballador last better this present than three our right for a r. We were content to bear at dist time with our Sifter, and to typac the execution of our Law for a time, until entight see some proof of her Amendment by Instruction and Persuano of her. The proof whereast of the fach sale to ether, the Amballador that now is here present, that evidendy seen and heard by the feveral 7c-finning of all are Council, even in particularities by all, and every such as either bath been on our behalf with our failed got denote, or for this purpose with this Amballador here: in such for that it he shall repress what he hash heard in that borner, estimately all are consistent in what manner the sufficance was, and to what had. And it there that he was a such as the sum of th and the relationship of the state of the sta paying him that the might le twoured, and permitted to have her anima maner of Religion. Wherethe Led L. Pager faith, that the, co. Intering he had no Communition to treat of that Matter, animared with the Ad% of Philip Hibs to our fail good Brother, that he would make Report of his Request unrone, and to our Unisk be Discon Some fee, at that time Protector, and to the reli of our Council, nor doubting but that ince thould have be like on Some fee, at that time Protector, and to the reli of our Council, nor doubting but that the thould have be like on Some fee. Let Dieson Somefort, as that time Protector, and to the reli of our Council, not doubting but that the hold facility of the Lorenthat was convincient to the to being our visites, and Countil to our find good Ecrober. On the Generic Societies of the special societies of t t551. eldest Son. (v) But this Lady, albeit she was furnish'd with many excellent Endowments both of Nature and Education, yet could she never be induc'd to entertain Marriage with An bensur-France.

After this the Lord Marquiss of Northampton able Em- was directed with a folemn Embassage to the French King, as well to prefent him with the Order of the Garter, as to treat with him of other fecret Affairs. With him were join'd in Commission the Bishop of Ely, Sir Philip Hobby, Sir William Pickering, Sir John Mason Knights, and Mr. Smith Secretary of State. The Earls of Worceffer, Rutland, and Ormond were appointed to accompany them, and likewise the Lords Liste, Fitzmater, Bray, Abergacency, and Emers, with other Knights and Gentlemen of Note, to the number of 26: and for avoiding immoderate and burthenfome Train, Order was given that every Earl should have four Attendants, every Lord three, every Knight and Gentleman two; the Commissioners were not limited to any Number.

They arriv'd at Nants, and were there re-ceiv'd by Monsieur Chastilion, and by him conducted to Chafteau Bryan where the French King then lodg'd, they were twice banqueted by the way; and the nearer they approach'd to the Caftle, the more increas'd the Refort of the French Nobility to do them Honour: being come to the Court, they were forthwith brought to the King abiding then in his Bed-chamber. Here the Marquifs prefented unto him the Order of the Gatter, wherewith he was pre-fently invelted, and thereupon gave for the Garter a Chain worth 2001, and his Gown address'd with Aglets esteem'd worth 251.

Then the Eishop of Ely in a short Speech Then the famous the K. of Tingland was not declar'd how defirous the K. of Tingland was not only to continue but to encrease Amity with the throad Erozeb King. That to this purpose be had sent the Order of the Garter to be both a Testimony Jun. 20. and Tye of Love between them, to which purpose chiefly those Societies of Honour were He further declar'd that they had Commission to make Overture of some other Matters, which was like to make the Concord between the Kings and their Realms,

To this Speech the Cardinal of Lorain an- 1551. fiver d, that the French King was ready to apprehend and embrace all Offers tending to heart of the concept of Amity, and the rather, for that long dual of Hoffility had made their new Friendship both Logis. more weak in it felf, and more obnoxious to Jealousies and Distrusts. And therefore he promis'd on the King's Behalf, that Commiffioners should be appointed to treat with them about any Matters which they had in Charge; praying to God that it might be a Means, not only to affure but to enlarge their late fettled Love. So a Commission went forth to the Cardinal of Lorain and Chaftilion the Constable, the D. of Guife, and certain others. At the first the English demanded, that the young Queen of Seas might be sent into England for perfection of Marriage between King Edward and her. But hereto the French answered, that they had taken too much Adventure, and spent too many Lives, upon any Conditions to let her go; and that Conclusion had been made long before for her Marriage with the Dolphine of

Then the English propos'd a Marriage be- A Proposat Then the English propose a manage of French tween their King and the Lady Elizabeth the of Mari-French King's eldeft Daughter: to which the ageletical King's eldeft Daughter:

French did chearfully incline. So after Agreement that neither Party of France, fhould be bound, either in Confeience or in Ho-June 21.
nour, until the Lady should accomplish twelve Years of Age, they fell to treat of the Portion which should be given with her in Mar-tiage. The English first demanded 1500000 Crowns, and offer'd that her Dowry should be to great as King Henry the Eighth had given to any of his Wives. The offer of Dower was not dilliked; but for the Portion, some of the French wondred, others fmiled, that fo great a Sum should be demanded. The English defounded to 1400000 Crowns, and after by degrees fell fo low as 800000. But the French, as they held the first Sum to be unreasonable, to all the other they esteemed excessive. the Figlish demanded what the French would give? First they offer'd 100000 Crowns, afterwards 200000, which they faid was the most, and more than ever had been given not only more durable, but in all expectation with a Daughter of France. Then follow'd a perpetual; defiring the King to appoint some stiff Contention, both by Reasons and Precewith a Daughter of France. Then follow'd a Perfons enabled with Authority to treat with dents; but the French in no Cafe would rife them.

and Ufage of the Communion of the Sacrament, as we afe here, befides that it is in the very fame Order as the Primiwhich the whole Effare of our whole Realm and Subjects be ruled, and We our felves also in all manner Causes; being fuch an Univerful and High Court, as there is none in all our Policy to be compared to it. And therefore as it binded our Self and all our subjects, for flowluld we not that do untuitly to violate it, or in any point to agree to the breaking of it. * Enfides, that the Example of breaking that Order wittingly, were for permicious and dangerous to all our Realm, that 6 both the Reverence of our Effate, the Execution of our Law, and the Authority of the fame, were gone utterly and the lotter! Terms thewed to the Emperor. J. S.

(a) This Embelly from Demna, b. imitplaced here, and belonged to the Year raft, viz. 1550. His coming being placed intel. Jaural of R. Edward at Decemb. 13, that Year. J. S.

taken away.

Wherefore ye shall fay in thi: Cause, We do but require our said good Brother, while he is in the consideration of this Matter, to turn the Cafe, and either remember fome like Cafe of his own, or imagine this to be his, and make it the Larry limit, it to pleafe him. As where the is our natural Sifter, let our good Erother imagine in his own Caffe, the Enrry were his natural Son. And that done, and confidered with tach Circumstance, as indeed be in this Cafe, 6 the Barry were his natural Son. And that done, and confidered with fach Creamflances, as indeed be in this Coffe, of willing breaking of our Laws to be confidered; we affine curfelves upon the Opinion of the great wildow and long Experience, which We know to be in our fail good Erother in the ruling of his own Realms and Dominions, be will not only coaffor move this Marter tarther, but rather to give us contrary Counfil, for the good Love and tender Care, we tout, he beareth to us in thi, our Youth. And Smewblat the more for the kelfyest that one Prince naturally ought to have to the Conference Education Bignity.
And yet we thall affure our fail good Brother, that in all manner things wherein we may any wife flew our natural Affection, for a demonstration of another above our natural Affection, for a demonstration of anearned Define to gratify our fail good En-ther. The other Article of these Introductors (minkaten also by this Author) was, that as the King permitted the Emperors Ambattador to use that manner of Religion which he used in his own Country, fo also it was desired that the Ring's Ambattador to use that manner of Religion which he used in his own Country, fo also it was desired that the Ring's Ambattador to use that manner of Religion which he used in his own Country. But it was desired that the Ring's former Ambattador. The Reasonableness of which Request was in the lotted From theorem the Emporer. J. 8.

1551. King, at his proper Charge, should fend her less or malicious, raise divers vain Rumors to to the King of England three Months before draw the King, as it is thought, from his Mathe flouid accomplish her Age for Marriage, fufficiently appointed with Jewels, Apparel, and Furniture for House; and that Bonds for the Performances should then be delivered at London by the King of England, and at Paris by the French King; and that in case the Lady should not consent after she should be of the faid Age for Marriage, the Penalty should be 150000 Crowns. The French set down these Offers in Writing, and fent them to the King of England.

CommiJio-Soon after Monsieur le Mareshall, and other ners from France fent land.

Sickness.

Court,

Delivers

Commissioners, were sent by the French King into England; where they arriv'd at fuch into Engtime as the Sweating Sickness was most furious; a new, strange and violent Disease, for if a Man were attack'd therewith, he dy'd or escap'd within nine Hours, or ten at the most. Sweating If he took cold he dy'd within three Hours; if he flept within fix Hours (as he should be defirous to do) he dy'd raving; albeit in other burning Difeafes that Diftemper is commonly appealed with Sleep. It raged chiefly among Men of ftrongest Constitution and Years, of whom 120 perified in fome one day within the Liberties of London; few aged Men, or Chil-dren, or Women, dy'd thereor.

Two of Charles Brandon's Sons, both Dukes of Suffolk, one of the King's Gentlemen and one of his Grooms, dy'd of this Difeafe: For The King goes to one of his Grooms, dy d of this Dheale: For Hampton-which Cause the King remov'd to Hampton-

Court with very few Followers.

The same day the Marshal and other French The frame day the Alexandra and Olds Hadden Paterines Commissioners were brought by the Lord Clim-lembally ton Lord Admiral of England, from Gravefend or comes ton Lordon. They were faluted by the way with all the Shot of more than fifty of the King's great Ships, and with a fair Peal of Artillery from the Tower; and laftly were lodg'd in Suffolk Palace † in Southwark. And albeit they had more than 400 Gentlemen in their Train, yet was not one of them, nor any other Stranger in England touch'd with the Sweating Difeafe; and yet the English were chafed therewith, not only in England, but in other Countries abroad, which made them like Tyrants, both feared and avoided wherefoever they came.

The next day the French were remov'd to his Meffage bis Meffage to the king. Richmond; whence every day they reforted to the king. Hampton-Court, where the King remained.
The first day after they had perform'd the Ceremonies of Court, and deliver'd to the King their Letters of Credence, they were led to a Chamber richly furnish'd for their Repose: The same day they dined with the King, and after Dinner being brought into an inner Chamber, the Marshal declar'd that they were come, not only to deliver unto him the Order of St. Michael, but therewith to manifest the entire Love which the King his Mafter bare him; which he defir'd him to conceive to be no lefs than a Father can bear to his natural Son.

fter's Friendship, yet he trusted that the King would not liften unto them. That it much concern'd the Common Quiet, that good Officers be placed upon the Frontiers; for as good may do good in moderating things amits. fo evil will do evil albeit no bad occasion be offer'd. Lastly, He desir'd in case any new Controversy should arise, it might be determin'd by Commissioners on both sides, and not by Conflicts, the Parent of War.

To this the King both fuddenly and fhortly The King' answer'd, 'That he much thanked the French Answer King for his Order, as for the large Expreifion of his Love, which he would be ready Touching Rumors, in all Points to requite. they are not always to be credited, nor always to be contemn'd, it being no less vain to fear all things, than dangerous to doubt of nothing. And in case at any time he listned to them, it was only to provide against the worst, and never to break into Hostility. Concerning Officers, he appointed fuch as he esteemed good, and yet preferred the overdoubtful before the over-credulous and fecure-New Controversies he would always be ready to determine by Reafon rather than by Force, fo far as his Honour should not thereby be diminish'd. (0) The French after this return to their Lodg-The King is ing at Richmond, and the next day reforted a-invefted ing at Richmond, and the next day resorted as with my gain to the King, invested him with Garments Order of of the Order, and accompany'd him to the S.Mi-hael; Chappel, the King going between the Mar-July 17. fbal and de Guife; both which after the Communion kiffing his Cheek. The refidue of that day, and a few days following, were paf-fed over with Paftimes and Feafts. At the last the Lord Marquis of Northampton, and the Refidue, who had been formerly tent with Commission from the King into France, were appointed to treat with the French Commisfioners touching the great Matters of their Embailage.

And because the French could be serv'd no Articlesfor higher than their Offer of 200000 Crowns, it with with was accepted; the one Moity to be paid upon brance. the day of Marriage, and the other fix months after: the Dote was agreed to be 10000 Marks of English Mony, and not to be paid in case the King should die before Marriage. This A-greement was reduc'd into Writing, and delivered under Seal on both fides. At the fame time an Embassador arriv'd out of Scotland, to demand an Exemplification of Articles of Peace between England and France, under the Great Seal of England; which without any difficulty they obtain'd.

The Marshal at his taking leave, declar'd Ft. Common to the King how kindly his Master did con-deposition of the King's readiness to conclude this deput. Aug. 3. Treaty, and also commended his Master's great Inclination to the Agreement thereof. Then he presented Monsieur Boys to be Embas-That albeit divers Persons, either wit- sador Legier for the French, and the Marquiss + Duresme Place. K. Edw. Journal.

[†] Dursjim Place. K. Edw. Journal.

(3) For a Youth not fourteen Years old to make fuch an Extemporary Harangue as this, fo grave and fo wife, will puss most Readers. Faith to believe. But our Author has drelfed up and improved by his own Eloquence, what the soung King Lidd in Answer to the Feends Manifador: which he feet down in his own Journal; and was to this Tenor, (marvellous enough for his Years). wit, "That he thanked him [the Feends King] for his Order [of S. Michael, which this Ambifador brought to him] and all his Love, dyr. And he [the King] would flow the like Love in all Points.

For Rumors, that they were not always to be believed. That he did fometimes provide for the worst, but never did any Harm upon their hearing. For Ministers, he faid, he would rather appeale these Controversies with Words, than do any thing by Force. J. S.

presented Mr. Pickering to be Embassador for the King of England in France. The Reward of the Marshal was three thousand Pounds in Gold, besides a Diamond taken from the King's Finger, esteem'd worth an hundred and Pounds; Monsieur de Guise had 1000 l. Monsieur Chenault 1000 l. Monsieur Mortuillier 500 l. the Secretary 500 l. and the Bishop of Periqueux 5001. The Feaftings were exceeding fumptuous; and at their return they were wafted over the Seas by certain of the King's Ships, by reason of the Wars between the Emperor and the French King. The Lord Marquifs's Reward was afterwards delivered at Paris, worth 500 l. the Bishop of Ely 200 l. Sir Philp Hobby's 150 l. and fo were the Rewards of the reft.

The King confers Honours. O.tob.11.

K. Tourn

Duke of

berland's

Now the King fuppoling his Estate to be most safe, when indeed it was most unsure, in testimony both of his Joy and his Love, advanced many to new Titles of Honour. The Lord Marquifs Dorfet, a Man for his harmless simplicity, neither mislik'd nor much regarded (p), was created Duke of Suffolk; the Earl of War-mick was created Duke of Northumberland, the Earl of Wiltsbire was created Marquiss of Winchefter; Sir William Herbert, Lord of Cardiff, was created Earl of Pembroke; Sir Thomas Dar-cie, Vice-Chamberlain, and Captain of the Guard, was created Lord Darcie; William Cecil was made one of the chief Secretaries (q); Mr. John Cheek the King's School-mafter, and one of the Guides of his Industry and Hope, Sydney, and with him Mr. Henry Dudley * and Mr. Henry Nevill of the Privy Chamber, were made ghts. And which was the Accomplishment Mischief, Sir Robert Dudley one of the Knights. Duke of Northumberland's Sons, a true Heir both of his Hate against Persons of Nobility, and of his cunning to dissemble the same, was iworn one of the Six ordinary Gentlemen (r). He was afterwards, for Luft and Cruelty, a Monster of the Court, as apt to hate, fo a most fure Executioner of his Hate: yet rather by practice than open dealing, as wanting rather Courage than Wit. After his entertainment into a Place of fo near Sevrice, the

King enjoy'd his Health not long. (f)

The Duke of Northumberland being now in-Northum-ferior unto none of the Nobility in Title of Honour, and fuperior to all in Authority and Power, could not reftrain his haughty Hopes from afpiring to an abfolute Command. But before he would directly level at his Mark, the Duke of Somerfer was thought fit to be taken away, whose Credit was so great with the common People, that although it sufficed not to bear out any bad Attempt of his own, yet was it of force to crofs the evil Purposes of others. And now to begin the third Act of his Tramours of gedy, Speeches were cast that he caused him- Duke was enforced as a Suspicion against him:

felf to be proclaimed King in divers Countries; which albeit they were known to be falfe, informuch as the Miller's Servant at Battle-bridg in Southwark, loft both his Ears upon a Pillory for fo reporting; yet the very naming of him to be King, either as defir'd by himfelf or by others efteemed worthy, brought with it a distastful relish, apt to apprehend Suspicion to be true.

After this he was charged to have perfuaded divers of the Nobility to chuse him Protector at the next Parliament. The Duke being queftioned, neither held filence as he might, nor constantly deny'd it; but entangled himself in his doubtful Tale. One Whaley a bufy-headed Man, and defirous to be fet on work, gave first light to this Appeachment, but the Earl of Rutland did floutly avouch it.

Herewith Sir Thomas Palmer, a Man neither Sir Tho. Herewith Sir Thomas Latiner, a grant nettered loving the Duke of Somerfet, nor beloved of Palmer's him, was brought by the Duke of Northum-thomas him, was brought by the Duke of Northum-thomas for the same of t berland to the King, being in his Garden. Here somerfet, he de lar'd, that upon St. George's day last be- Oft. 7. fore, the Duke of Somerfet being upon a Journey towards the North, in case Sir William Herbert Malter of the Horse had not assured him that he should receive no Harm, would have raifed the People; and that he had fent the Lord Gray before to know who would be his Friends: Also that the Duke of Northum-berland, the Marquis of Northampton, the Earl of Pembroke, and other Lords, should be invited to a Banquet; and if they came with a bare Company, to be fet upon by the way; if ftrongly, their Heads should have been cut off further, that Sir Ralph Vane had 2000 Men in a readiness; that Sir Thomas Arundell had assured. the Tower, that Seymor and Hamond would wait upon him, and that all the Horse of the Gendermorie should be slain. To this Mr. Secretary Cecil added, that the Duke had fent for him, od. 14. and faid, that he fuspected fome ill Meaning against him; whereto Mr. Secretary answer-ed, that if he were not in Fault, he might trust to his Innocency; if he were, he had nothing to fay but to lament him.

The Duke being advertis'd of these Informa-Palmer detions against him, by some who had some re-mys his Ingard of Honesty, did forthwith defy the Se-formation. cretary by his Letters. Then he fent for Sir Thomas Polmer, to understand what he had reported of him, who denied all that he had faid: but by this hot and humosrous ftriving, he did but draw the Knots more fait.

A few days being past, the Duke either ig. The Duke norant of what was intended, or fearing if he and Confishermed to recreive it. came to the Court harders feifeemed to perceive it, came to the Court, but zed, Oct. 16. somewhat later then he accustomed. And as to Minds polleft with Fear, all things unufual feem to menace Danger; fo this late coming of the False Ru-Somerfet.

⁽j) A difparaging Character given of a Great Man without much, if any ground for it. This Character Leangive of Lim, that he was a great Friend to the Reformation, and a Patron of Learned Men. I have feen Letters from Bacer lini, that he wis a great Friend to the Reformation, and a Patron of Learned Men. I have feen Letters from Bacer and Bailinger to him. And, which is inflead of all that can be faid of him, he was the Father of an admirable tho unfortunate Woman, the Lady Jane Grey. J. S.

(4) Cecil was made Secretary before now, namely, upon Dr. Watton's refignation of that Office, which was Sept. 6.

(5) Sir Robert Dudley is not well placed here among those that received Titles of Honour at this time; fince he wish Banardy File Patrick were two Months before admirted and fovon of the King's Eed-Chamber, viz. Aug. 15. J. S.

(7) Of all the ill Characters our Author gives of Men, that he beflows upon Sir Robert Dudley is the worfit and given ha laft a Hun, as tho he was the wicked Inframent or the King's Death. This true, this Man was none of the beft, but is repretented worse than he was, especially by Parjons in his Book intitled Leitessers Common-nealth. Out of which our Author takes his Character for Dudley: When other more wary Men would hardly see down all for Truth that where a fine and ballicious Book, and wrote by 6 inventmed an Author. Undoubtedly Sir Ab. Dudley was a good Souldier, a gellam Courtier, a great Statesman, an Enemy to Papists, and a tavourer of Learning. J. S.

And so after dimer he was apprehended. fent to the Tower, so were sor diev and Sec. 15 Gray being newly come out of the Country was attach'd. Sir Ralph Vine being twice fent for, fled. Upon the first Message it was re-ported that he said, that his Lord was not ftout, and that if he could get home he cared not for any: but upon pursuit he was found in his Servants Stable at Lambeth, cover'd with straw. He was a Man of a fierce Spirit, both fudden and bold, of no evil Disposition, faving that he thought Scantiness of Estate too great an Evil. Ail thele were the fame night fent to the Tower, except Palmer, Avendel, and Vane, who were kept in the Court well guarded in Chambers apart. The day following the Dutchess of Somerset was fent to the Tower, no man grieving thereat, because her Pride and Baseness of Life overballanc'd all Pity; and doubtlefs if any Mif-chief were then contriv'd, whereof many were doubtfal (every one giving forth as he believ'd) it was first hammer'd in the Forge of her wicked-working Brain; for she had always wicked instruments about her, whom the more she found appliable to her Purposes, the more Favours she bestow'd upon them, who being engag'd by her into Dangers, held it dangerous to fall from her. Alfo with her were committed one Crane and his Wife, and were committed one Crane and his Wife, and her own Chamberwoman. After these follow'd Sir Thomas Holderoff, Sir Miles Parridge, finould affail them, they consenting to do the Sir Michael Stanbope, Wingfield, Banifers, Wanghan, and some others. In divers of these was then neither any cause known or afterwards discovered, but the Number rais'd the Hopes, that because their Neitheg was only Nov. 14. greater Terror, and doubled the Conceit of the Danger. Their Con-

oir Thomas Palmer being again examin'd, added to his former Detection, that the Gen-darmory upon the Muster-day should be asfaulted by 2000 Foot under Sir Ralph Vane, and by 100 Horses of the Duke of Somersee's, bendes his Friends which should stand by, and belides the idle People which were thought inclinable to take his part; that this done, he would run thro the City, and proclaim Livery, and in case his Attempt did not succeed, he would go to the Isle of Wight or to Poole.

Cross confessed for the most part as Palmer.

fellins.

had done, and further added, that the Lord Paget's House was the Place, where the Nobiloft their Heads, and that the Earl of Arundel was made acquainted with the Practice by Sir Michael Stanhope; and that it had been done, but that the Greatness of the Enterprize caus'd Delays, and fome diversity of Advice: and further faid, that the Duke of Samerfet once feigning himfelf fick, went to This Crane was a Man, who having confun'd his own Estate, had arm'd himself to any

And to after the was appreciated by J. Sir Thomas Arundel, Ha-Join Thomas Palmer, Sir Thomas Arundel, Ha-monde, Nudigaret, John Seymour and David Lord Strange voluntarily infernith, how the Seymour were also made Prisoners; the Lord Duke defired him to move the King to take to Wife his third Daughter the Lady Jave, and that he would be his Efficial about the King, to advertise him when any of the Council spake privately with him, and to acquaint him what they faid.

Hereupon to give some publick Satisfaction The Land to the People, the Lord Chancellor who had Chancellor Words at will, and Wit enough to apply hands them, declared opposite in the state handlor all chancer them, declar'd openly in the starchamber all acchoes thele Acculations against the Duke of Somerfet: they demi-ted the Acculations against the Duke of Somerfet: they demi-Letters were also published to all Emperors, between Chinas of Kings, Emballadors, and Chief and any the trates State, wherein the matters were comprised. By other Letters the Mufter of the Gendar-mory was defer'd for certain months: Other Letters were directed to Sir Acthur Darcy, to take charge of the Tower, and to discharge Sir Arthur Markham, for that without acqualiting any of the Lords of the Council, he fuffer d the D. of Somerfet to walk abroad, and permitted Intercourfes of Letters between and permittee intercourts of Lecters between Drivid Sympr and Mrs. Poyee.

Whill these Matters were in traverse, A suffice Medicagers arrived from Duke Matters, of from the Partel and Joan Protection Marquis of Brandonburge, Princes of the re-Germany Marquis of Brandonburge, Princes of the re-Germany mind, whether he would agree to aid them with 20000 Bollars, in case any Necessity than this, that he was well inclin'd to join in Amity with them whom he knew to agree with him in Religion; but first he was delirous to know whether they could procure fuch Aid from other Princes, as might enable them to maintain their Wars, and to affift him if need should require. And therefore he willed them to break this matter to the Duke of Profile and other Princes about them, and to procure the Good-will of Hamberough, Lubeck, and Breme. Then he defir'd that the matter of Religion should be plainly fet down, lest under pretence thereof Wars should be made for other Quarrels. Lastly, he willed that lity being invited to a Banquet, should have they should furnish themselves with more ample Infructions from their Lords, to commune and conclude of all Circumitances pertaining to that Bufinefs.

The King's Answer was fram'd with these Uncertainties and Delays, left if the King had affur'd his Confent at the first, it might have been taken as Breach of League with the Em-London to allay what Friends he could procure. peror. Afterwards they and other Princes of Germany made a League offensive and defensive with the French King against the Emperor. Into which the Emperor. Into which the French King against the Emperor. Into which the French King defired the first and the Emperor. Into which the fensive with the French King against the

About the fame time the Lord Admiral been believ'd. That at London he never pro- 1551 About the fame time the Lord Admiral The king was fent into Fr.mee, as the King's Deputy, to be Godfather at the Baptifin of the French the king's Son: also a French Man who had comto the re-King's Son, mitted a Murder at Diepe, and fled into Eng-Nov. 16. Land, was remitted into France, and deliver'd upon the Borders to receive Justice by the fame Laws against which he had offended.

Dube of brought to his Trial,

And now the Duke of Northumberland being Somerfet impatient of long-working Wickedness, the brought to fourth Act of the Duke of Somerfet's Tragedy must not be delay'd, lest thereby Fear abating (as being false it could not be durable) either the King's gentle Disposition, or the Love which he had formerly born to his Uncle, might haply return to their natural working. So the Duke of Somerfet, after a short abode (t) in the Tower, was brought to his Trial at Westminster. The Lord William Paulet, Marquiss of Winchester and Lord Treasurer, sat as High Steward of England, under a Cloth of State, on a Bench mounted three degrees; the Peers to the number of 27 fat on a Bench one ftep lower. These were the Dukes of Suffolk and Northumberland, the Marquiss of Northampton, the Earls of Derby, Bedford, Huntington, Ruland, Bath, Suffex, Worcester, Pembroke, and Viscount Herejord. The Barons Abergavenny, Andey, Wharton, Euers, Latimer, Borough, South, Stafford, Wenworth, Darcy, Sturton, Undfor, Cromwell, Cobhun, and Bray-First the Indictments were read, in number five: containing a Charge of raising Men in the North Parts of the Realm, and at his House of assembling Men to kill the Duke of Northumberland, of refilting his Attachment, of killing the Gendarmory, of raising London, of affaulting the Lords, and deviling their Deaths. When the Prisoner had pleaded not guilty, and put himfelf upon Trial of his Peers, the Examinations before-mention'd were read, and by the King's learned Council prefs'd against him. Hereto albeit he was both unskilful and much appalled (Caufes fufficient to drive him out of matters) yet after a short Intreaty, that Words either idly or angerly fpoken might not be enforc'd to any high Crew, to the Points objected he anfwer'd.

The Duke's himfelf.

That he never intended to raife the North Apology for Parts of the Realm, but upon fome Bruits he apprehended a Fear, which mov'd him to Spirit (v). Some of the relt plainly brake fend to Sir William Herbert to remain his torth, that they held it unfit that the Duke Friend. That he determin'd not to kill the Duke of Northumberland, the Marquifs of Northumberland, the Marquifs of Northumberland or any other Lord, ten, and the Earl of Pembroke hould be of but spake of it only, and determin'd the contrary. That it had been a mad Enterprise with his 100 Men to affail the Gendarmory confifting of 900, when in case he had pre-vail'd, it would nothing have avail'd the pretended Purpose. And therefore this being fentless and absurd, must needs discredit Voices (most favouring the Duke of Northum-Brought in other matters, which otherwise might have | berland) was found guilty of Felony. Here-guilty of

for his Surety. That for having Men in his Chamber at Greenwich, it was manifest he meant no harm, because when he might have done it he did not. And further, against the Persons of them, whose Examinations had been read against him, he objected many things, defiring they might be brought to his face, which in regard he was a Person of Dignity and Estate, he claim'd to be reasonable: Especially against Sir Thomas Palmer he spake much Evil, and yet in opinion of many far short of the Truth. Hereto no anfwer was made, but that the worse they were, the fitter they were to be his instruments. Fit Instruments indeed, faid he, but rather for others than for me.

The Fact being made, the King's learned Council avouch'd the Law to be, to affemble Men with intent to kill the Duke of Northumberland, was Treason by a Statute of the 3d and 4th of King Edward then reigning, made againft unlawful Assemblies; that to raise London or the North Parts of the Realm was Treason; that to mind resisting his Attachment was Felony; that to affault the Lords, and to devise their Deaths, was Felony. But under favour of their judgment, the Statute alledg'd bears no fuch Senfe, either for Trea-fon or for Felony. Indeed by a Statute of K. Henry 7. it is Felony for inferior Persons to contrive the Death of a Lord of the Council, but Lords are therein expresly excepted.

The Lords went together, and first the The Lords
Duke of Suff-lk nobly said, that he held it confait to not reasonable, that this being but a Conten-gether of tion between private Subjects, under preten-the Dule's lion thereof any mean Action should be drawn Case. to Intention of Treason. The Duke of Northumberland (in countenance bearing shew of Sadness, but in truth stifly obstinate) deny'd that he would ever confent that any Practice againft him fhould be either imputed or re-puted to be Treason; yet this was not taken to proceed from Modelty, as he expected, but for that he could not with his Honour or with Reason so enforce it. The Marquiss of Northampton was cross'd and contentious with many, but never reply'd to any Answer; a manifest mark of no strong of Northumberland, the Marquiss of Northump-ten, and the Earl of Pembroke should be of the Trial, because the Prisoner was chiefly charg'd with Practices intended against them. But hereto answer was made, that a Peer of the Realm might not be challeng'd. After much variation of Opinions, the Prifoner at the Bar was acquit of Treafon, but by most

(t) That is, from the 16th of Ollober to the 1/t of December.

⁽t) That is, from the 16th of Ollsber to the 1/l of December.

(v) This was rather a figo of no coneneous Spirit, and that delighted not in fending and proving, as we fay.

But if our Author means a Meannefs and Lownets of Spirit, this kubearing of Replies is no fuch matrieft figo of that; because formerines this Sparingness of Words and Slownets of Reply proceeds from Wisdom and Discretion. But where our Author met with this Account of the Marquist, I know not; he was certainly able enough to make Replies, if he had pleased, being et a very gay Diportion, and additted to Pleafute: as may be judged from this Passage, that at his Trial under Q. Juary, when he was with the Ducket of Northumberland charged with High Treason, he pleaded for himself, that in the midst of those Conspiracies for the testing up the Lady Jane Gray, Sc., he was intent to Hunting and other Sports. And Lamdon at the Year 1591, wherein this Maiquis died, gives him this Charaster, That he was a Man very well verted in the more designatual forts of Studies, as Mussic, Love-toys, and other courtly Dalliances. J. S.

1. upon Judgment follow'd, that he fhould be true, or whether devis'd to make the King inang'd; but this would never have gone for hard, had they not profecuted all under pre- not hold themselves assured.

tence of Treason.

The Duke of Somerfet might have crav'd his Clergy, but he suffer'd Judgment to pass, thank'd the Lords for his gentle Trial, crav'd Pardon of the Duke of Northumberland, the Marquifs of Northampton, and the Earl of Pembroke, for his ill meaning against them, and made suit for his Life, in pity to his Wife, Children, and Servants, and in regard of Payment of his Debts. As he departed, becaufe he was acquit of Treafon, the Ax of the Tower was not openly carry'd; whereupon the People supposing that he was alto-gether acquit, shouted half a dozen times so loud, that they were heard beyond Charing-Cross. It is certain the People favour'd him the more, because they saw that there was much secret Hate born against him. But as this immoderate Favour of the Multitude did him no good, so will it undo so many as shall trust unto it. It was told the King, that after the Duke's Return to the Tower, he acknowledg'd to certain Lords, that he had acknowledg'd to certain Lords, that he had hired Bartuile to make them away, that Bartuile to make them away, that Bartuile to make them away, that Bartuile tonfess'd something the sickness of the Lord Rieb, not ignorant thereof; which whether it were but in short time after he was sworn Lord more estrang'd from him, of Judgment could

About this time Cuthbert Tunftall Bishop Tunstal Bp of Durham, a Man famous in those times for of Durham Learning and Integrity of Life, was fent to T_{wer} , the Tower for Concealment of (I know not what) Treafon, written to him I know not by whom, and not difcover'd until (what shall I call) the Party did reveal it. (m) But L. Ch.m. the Lord Chancellor Rich having built a fair cells Rich Estate, and perceiving what nimble Ears resignished, were born to listen after Treason, also for Office. that a Parliament was towards, wherein he was doubtful what Questions might arise, made fuit to the King, that in regard of the Infirmities of his Body, he might be dif-charg'd of his Office; giving good Example to Men, fometimes by their own Moderation to avoid Difgrace. So he deliver'd the Seal at his House in Great St. Bartholomew's to the D. of Northumberland and the E. of Pembroke, fent by the King with Commission to receive it (x). The same Seal was forthwith deliver'd to Dr. Goodrick Bishop of Ely, a Man if haply Chancellor,

(w) Our Author writes not like an Hiftorian, in giving us so lame an account of the Imprisonment of this Bishop. In the King's Journal he met with his Commitment for Concealment of Treason. And because he read no more Particulars of it, he would hint as the his Imprisonment were unjust, and would east the Imputation of it upon the State, as a piece of Forgery and Oppression. Whereas by the Minutes of the Council-Book, and the Book of Warrants to the Scal, the Particulars of this Matter appear. It was for confenting, about July 1550. to a Conspiracy in the North, for the rating a Rebellion. One Ninian Menvile of Steakhois in the Bishopic of Durbam. Effa; accused the faid Bishop of Durbam of this in a Writing. To which the Bishop made his Answer. And Menvile again replied to the faine. But so want of a Letter written by the Bishop to Menvile, whereupon depended a great Trial of this matter, the Determination theroft was for some imestal at the Bishop to Menvile the Case of State of the Case of the Cas

Enting was tent to; and December the 20th, 1551. In manaer in Appetrance before the Councils. Boy which IV, A. Harbe could not deny but to be of his own Hand, and unable to make any further Antwer thereto than he had done be mark's Space or by Writing, he was (for that the Lame feemed not a fufficient Antwer) committed by the King's Commandment cimp, 10.9, to the Tower of London. And there was a special Committion appointed for his Trial, dated in Oldster 1552. to SI Warrant-Roger Oblimbly, Lord Chief Jultice of the King's Eench, Si Richard Read, and divers others both of the Common Bade.

And Civil Law, to call before them Cubert Eithop of Durbam, and to examine him of all manner of Conventicles, Conjectively, and the Concempts, Concealments, der. And if found gulty, to deprive him of his Eithopric, and orther Eithop of the International Contempts, and the Contempts, Concealments, der. And if found gulty, to deprive him of his Eithopric, and orther to do in the Premites according to the King's Journal. And in November following a Grant was made to Rob. Home, Protectior of Divinity and Dean of Durbam, of the faid Eithopric: Which however he would not accept of. And Menvile for his Service, in making this Information, was rewarded by the King with the Gift of an 1col.

And a year before this, viz., July 8. 1551. the Dean of Durbam (whose Name was Whitebead) was ordered by the Privy Council to answer in Writing unto fach Matrers as he was charged with at his being before the Council, and in fueth for as he would fland to at his peril. And in Oldster the Council wrote a Letter to the L. Treasfurer, L. Chamberlain, Secretary Cecil, and Mr. Majóm, to bear and examine the Eithop and Dean of Durbam's Case, and to make them Report of the tame. So that this Dean forms to be involved in the fame Acculation with the Eithop. But he died from after. J. S.

(a) Those that were fern to the L. Permbroke was none of them) who brought chetters from the King, dated the 21fl of December, in the Firth of his Reign, to the faid L. R only upon a Letter under tome two Counteners haves, wey might the displaced and the displaced and displaced. A Cooking to the common Gustom of Sir John Haymard, here is a disparaging Character given of the Bishop of Elb, as to his Abilities. This Man was long accultomed to Bussiness, from K. Henry the Eighth's time to this prefent. In K. Edward's Reign he was in many weighty Commissions, and a Privy Countellor: employed in several Embassines. In K. Edward's Reign he was in many weighty Commissions, and a Privy Countellor: employed in several Embassines. In his olice of Chancellor he is noted by Archbishop Parker, in a Letter of his, for his imparrial Administration of Justice. He was also a Churchman that was very instrumental in promoting of the Reformation of Religion, and pugging it you. II.

Tt 2

Chancellor, because as Keeper of the Seal he could not then execute fuch matters as were to be difpatch'd in Parliament.

The King And now after Judgment against Somerfet, diverted, the Lords were not negligent to entertain the King with all Delights they could devife, partly to win the King's Favour, but especially to convert his Thoughts from his con-denn'd Uncle. To this end they often pre-fented him with flately Mafques, brave Challenges at Tilt and at Barriers, and whatfoever Exercifes or Difports they could conjecture to be best pleasing to him. Then also he first began to ecep Hall, and the Christmas time was pass'a over with Banquetings, Masques, Plays, and much other variety of Mirth-Often they would call him to ferious Affairs, wherein he took especial Pleasure. Sometimes they would remember him how dangerous the Duke of Somerfet was, who having made away his only Brother, contrivid the Death of the Chief of the Nobility. And where (fay they) would his Mischief have rested? Would it have raged against all, and left the King only untouch'd? Verily, having been King only untouch'd? Verily, having been always both cruel and faife, there would have been no end of his Mifchief, and all his Submissions must now be taken for counterfeit and dissembled: But his Avarice and Ambition once remov'd, the way will be laid open to Virtue and Merit.

A.1552. Jan. 22.

So about two months after his Judgment, The Duke the fifth and last Act of his Tragedy was hoheaded brought upon the Stage. When being so often expos'd to Fortune's mercy before, he was plac'd by a strong Guard upon a Scaffold at Towerhill, about eight of the clock in the morning, to fuffer Death: and albeit ftrait Charge had been given the day before to every Housholder in the City, not to permit any to depart out of their Houses before ten of the clock that day, yet the People the more unruly by this Reftraint, by fuch thick Throngs fwarm'd to the place, that before feven of the clock the Hill was cover'd, and all the Chambers which open'd towards the Scaffold were taken up.

His Speech Here the Duke first avow'd to the People, anthe Scafe that his Intentions had been not only harmless in regard of particular Perfons, but driving to the common Benefit both of the King and of the Realm. Then he exhorted them unto Obedience, ailuring them that no Perfons could justly avouch their Faith to God, who were not faithful to their King.

But herewith behold, certain Perfons of a 1552 Hamlet near, who had been warn'd by the Licutenant of the Tower to attend that morning about feven of the clock, coming after their hour thro the Postern, and perceiving the Prisoner to be mounted upon the Scaffold, began to run, and to call to their Fellows to come away. The fuddeaness of their coming, the hafte that they made, the Wea-pons they carry'd, but especially the word, Come away, being often doubled, mov'd many of the nearest to furmise that a Power was come to receive the Duke, whereupon many cry'd with high Voice, Away, Away. The Cry of those and the coming on of the other, cast amazement upon the rest, so much the more terrible, because no Man knew what he fear'd or wherefore, every Man conceiving that which his aftonish'd Fancy did cast in his mind; some imagin'd that it thunder'd, others that it was an Earthquake, others that the Pouder in the Armory had taken fire, others that Troops of Horfemen approach'd. In which medly of Conceits they bare down one another, and jostled many into the Tower-Dirch, and long it was before the vain Tumult could be appeared. No fooner were the People fettled in quiet, and the Duke beginning to finish his Speech. but upon another idle Apprehension they fell to be no less riotous in joy than they had been in Fear. For Sir Anthony Brown coming on horseback upon the spur, gave occasion whereby many entertain'd hope that he brought a Pardon; whereupon a great Shout was rais'd, A Pardon, A Pardon, God fave the King. But the Duke of Somerfet express'd great Constancy at both these times, often desiring the People to remain quiet, that he might quietly end his Life. For, faid he, I have often look'd Death in the face, upon great Advenures in the Field, he is now no Stranger to me; and among all the vain Mockeries of this World, I report me of nothing more than in esteeming Life more dear than I should. I have endur'd the Hate of Great Perfons; fo much the endir a the Hitten Oreal rayons, yo much the more dangerous, because unjust. I have includ Displeasure from Inseriors, not always for any great Faults of my own (albeit I was never free) great Earlis of my own (albeit 1 mas never pree) but for giving ways to be Earlis of others. And now being confiantly refolved, I neither fear to die, wor defire to live; and having maffered all Grief in my felf, I defire no man to forrow for me (2). So having tellify'd his Faith to God, and his Faithfulnefs to the King, he yielded from the old Superfittions, both in K. Henry's and K. Edward's Reigns; and one of the Compilers of the Book of Common Payer. He bred up Learned Men in his Family. Dr. Cox, who was K. Edward's Influsion of tree Goods of Common Payer. He bred up Learned Men in his Family. Dr. Cox, who was K. Edward's Influsion after fue-ceeded in this Bifthopric, was his Chaplain; and the m.ft. Learned Dr. Smith, atterwards Secretary of Stare, and a Knight, was his Chaplain. To Foreigners, especially Profeions of the Goffuel, he was a Patron and Friend; as particularly the Noble Palonian ALafos, and Petrus Valentius a French Proteffunt, whom he made his Chaplain and Almoner.

ner. J. S.:
Our Author hath a way of making Speeches for men; and taking too much Liberty thetein, to make them fpeak more or otherwise than they did, not to larg, contrary to what they themselves uttered. In the Speech of this good Duke, as here represented, are several entity, contrary to what they themselves uttered, the the Speech of this good Duke, as here represented, are several entity, contrary to what they themselves uttered. In the Speech of this good Duke, as here represented, are several entity of the several entity of the several entities of the several entitie therefore it may not to carmb to let down there more truly the last vortes of 10 great a retinonage. And that I will do from John Pax, a diligent Hilferian, who lived in thole Times, and had his linelligence from a noble Peru, then near the Duke upon the Starfold, and who carefully marked all things.

The Duke addicting to the People with the Compellation of Death beloved Prionds, faid, 6. That he was brought

AHs and the Duce addressing to the reepic with the Compensation of Decay Reason Profiles, and the Mac Screen, which is differ Death, althou he never offended against the king, neither by Word nor Deed; but had always been as furthful and true tuno this Realm, as any Man had been. But forafined as he was by a Law condemned to die, he acknowledged himfelf, as well as others, to be fully either thereunto. Wherefore to relify his Obdience which he had been as the state of the profile of the pr Mon. ad An. 1552. The Duke ought onto the Laws, he was come thither to fuffer Death: whereunto he wlingly offered himfelt, with moft hearty. Thanks unto God, that had given him this time of Repentance; who might by Indden Death lave taken away his of Somer-tet's Lift

Thanks alord Own, that that given him this time for rependance; who might by induced better have taken away mis Line, that neither he librated have acknowledged God, nor himfelf.

'That there was yet fomewhat he mult put them in mind of, as touching the Chriftian Religion; which fo long as he was in Authority, he always diligently fee forth and furthered to his power. And he did not repert him of his Doings, but rejoiced therein; fince now the State of Religion came most near uncoche Form and Order of the & imitive 1552. yielded his Body into the Executioner's Hand, 1 who with one Stroke of the Ax cut off all his confus'd Cogitations and Cares; the more pity'd by the People, for the known Hate of Northumberland against him.

His Cha-Affuredly he was a Man harmlefs and faithraHer. ful, and one who never hatch'd any Hopes prejudicial to the King, but always intended his Safety and Honour; but hard it is for Greatness to stand, when it is not sustain'd Beloved by by the proper Strength. The People, whose the People. Property it is by excessive Favour to bring Great Men to Mifery, and then to be excellive in Pity, departed away griev'd and afraid, and yet fear'd to feem to be afraid, and for this cause chiefly did never bear good mind to Northumberland afterwards, altho in thew they diffembled the contrary; for nothing is more easy than to discern when People obferve Great Men from the Heart, or when they do it for fashion or for fear: and as it often happens, that Men oppress'd work revenge after their Deaths, fo the Remembrance of Somerset much mov'd the People to fall from Northumberland in his greatest Attempt, berland from Northumberland in his greatest Attempt, and to leave him to his fatal Fall, whereat the People they openly rejoic'd, and prefented to him Handkerchiefs dip'd in the Blood of Somerfet, for whom they thought he deferv'd rather late than undeferved Punishment. So certain it is that the Debts both of Cruelty and Mercy go never unpaid. I omit the mean Scourges of Conscience: For affuredly a Body cannot be to torn with Stripes, as a Mind is with remembrance of wicked Actions. But of him more hereafter shall be faid, and how his Greatness turn'd to be Fortune's Scorn.

But outwardly and for the prefent he gain'd The same a great hand over the Nobility; who foon and omly observing that he was able to endanger the mithin. Eftate of the greatelt, and that the more Respect they did bear to him, the more fafely they liv'd and the more easily advanc'd to Honour, they all contended to creep into his Humour, to watch his Words, his Gestures, his Looks, and to do that as of themselves, which they conceiv'd he had a defire they fhould do.

But the King, albeit at the first he gave Refestions, no token of any ill-temper'd Passion, as tak-declare himfelf, and albeit the Lords did 1552 much help to diffed any dampy Thoughts which the Remembrance of his Uncle might raife, by applying him with great variety of Exercises and Disports; yet upon sprech of him afterward, he would often high and let fall tears: fometimes he was of opinion that he had done nothing that deferv'd Death, or if he had, that it was very imil, and proceeded rather from his Wife than from himfelf. And ale to then, faid he, may the Good-Nature of a N p'ew? Where was the Clemency of a Prince? All how injusts are lave I been to those of my Blood? My Mother I feer at my very Birth, and fince have made away two of her Brothers, and haply to make a may for the Purposes of others against my self. Whis it ever known before that a King's Uncle, a Lord Pro-tector, one whose Fortunes had much advane'd the Honour of the Realm, did lofe his Head for Felony, a Filony neither clear in Law, and in fact weakly provid? Alas! how falfly have I been abus'd? How weakly carry'd? How little mas I Mafter over my own Judgment, that both his Death and the Entry thereof mift be charg'd upon

Not long after the Death of Somerfet, be- Fator in cause it was not thought hit that such a Per- carenical fon should be executed alone, who could hardly be thought to offend alone, Sir R. 17h V.me and Sir Miles Partridge were hang'd on Tower-hill; Sir Michael Stanhope and Sir Tho. Arundel were there also beheaded. All these took it upon their last Charge, that they never offended against the King, nor against any of his Council. God knows whether obftinately fecret, or whether innocent; and in the opinion of all Men Somerfet was much clear'd by the Death of those who were executed to make him appear faulty.

Sir Ralph Vane was charg'd with confpicing Sir Ralph with Somerfet; but his bold Answers, term'd Vancrude and ruffian-like, falling into Years apt to take offence, either only caus'd, or much further'd his Condemnation. For beildes his natural Fiercenels entlam'd by his prefent Difgrace, he was the more free by reason of his great Services in the Field. The time hath been, faid he, when I was of fome efteem, but now we are in Peace which repuing it not agreeable to Majesty openly to teth the Coward and Couragious alike : and fo

6 Church. Which thing he efteemed as a great Benefit given of God both unto them and him: and most heartily ex-6 horted them all, that this which was most purely feet orth unto them, they would with all Thankfulness accept and 6 embrace, and 60 the same forth in their Living; which thing if they did not, without doubt greater Mitchief and Calamity would follow.

That the Duke (top; a while upon certain Hurly-Burlies occasionally happening among the People. One Cause there-of was by Sir Anthony Brown's coming, and riding towards the Scathold; by whom the People thought a Pardon was brought; but proving no such thing, the Duke proceeded, telling them, 'That there was no such matter as they hoped or believed. That so it seemed good unto Almighty God, whose Ordinance it was nect and necessary that we all flouid be obedient to. Wherefore he prayed them all to be quiet, and to be concented with his Death, which he King S Majelty; unco whom hither to he had always filewed himfelf a most taithful and true subject. That he had always been most diligent about his Majeffe in his affairs both at home and abroad; and no lefs diligent in feeking the common Commodity of the whole Realm. [At which Word all the People cryed out, It was might rue.] That unto the Eing's Majeff he wished continual Health, with all Felicity and protectors Sacceds. [Mercanco all the People cryed out again, Amen.] He wished moreover since all his Countellors the Grace and Evour of God, where he wished moreover since all his Countellors the Grace and Evour of God, where he might rue in all things purighely with Juffrie. Unto whom he exhorted them all in the Lord to these them-felves obedient, as it was their bounden Dury, under the pain of Condemnation; and also most profitable for the Profession and Stieguard of the Kine's Miss. (b).

felves obedient, as it was their bounden Duóy, under the pain of Condennation; and allo moit profitable for the Prefervation and Safeguard of the Ring's Majafety.

* That forafinitch as heretofore he had oftentimes /fairs with divers Men (and hard it was to plenfe every Man) herefore if there were any that had been officided or injuried by him, he most humbly required and safe him forgiveness; and especially Almighry God, whom throughout all his Life he had most grievously offended. And all other, whatfoever they were, that had offended him, he did with all his whole Beart torgive them. And all other, whatfoever they were, that het ye would keep clientleves gotter and fill, let thro their Tumule they might trouble him. For ableit the Sprite were willing and ready, the Flesh was find and wiverings and that thrive dieri Quientenfish Infould be much more quie chimfelt. And the detired demail to be are him sumes, that he died there in the Faith of Jeius Christ; detiring them likewife to help him with their Prayers, that he might perfevere constant in the fame unto his Life's end. J. S.

(a) A good Speech made for the Ring, but not by him. J. S.

yith

rather not to regard Death, than by any Submillion to intreat for Life. Indeed it was well known that he had been famous for Service, but therewith it was well known by whose Favour he had been famous.

Sir Tho. Arundel.

Sir Thomas Arundel was with fome dif-ficulty condemn'd; for his Caufe was brought to Trial about feven of the clock in the morning, about noon the Jurors went together, and because they could not agree, they were shut in a House all the residue of that day, and all the night following. The next morning they found him guilty. Unhappy Man! who found the doing of any thing or of nothing dangerous alike.

Sir Miles Partridge. Sir Mich-Stanhope.

Sir Miles Partridge and Sir Michael Stanhope were condemn'd, as Confociates in the Conspiracy of Somerset. Both reputed indifferently dispos'd to bad or good, yet neither of them of that Temper, as to dare any dangerous Fact; either because they were fo indeed, or because their Favour or Alliance with the Dutchess of Somerfet made them to be of less esteem.

L. Paget Garter King at Arms was fent to the Lord depived of paget, Prisoner in the Tower, to take from the Garter, the Garter, him the Garter and the George, and to discharge him of that Order. The Pretence of this Dishonour, was because he was said to be no Gentleman of Blood, neither by Fa-ther nor by Mother. The Garter and the George were forthwith bestow'd upon the Earl of Warwick, eldest Son to the Duke of Northumberland. About this time the Order was almost wholly alter'd, as by the Statutes thereof then made it appears. (b)

After these Times few Matters of high nature or observable note happen'd in England during King Edward's Life. Of these I will felect fuch as I efteem most fit for Hiltory, both as being publick, and as containing matter of fome regard, not always observing the just Order of Time, but fometime Coherence or Propinquity of Matter.

Sir Phil.

Sir Phill. Sir Phillip Hobby was fent to pay 62000 dition with other Strangers. And albeit the Hebby for pounds at Antwerp, for Payment of which to Fland Sum the King flood to divers Perfons enders, agg'd. This done, he went to the Regent then lying at Bruffels, to declare unto her certain Grievances of the English Merchants of the Divines, 8 Civilians, and 8 common.

Adventurers; but he receiv'd nothing but 1552 fair Promifes, which prov'd deceivable. Af- L terwards Monsieur de Couriers came from the Regent to the King, to understand more particularly the Complaints of the Merchants, and therewith to defire, that her Subjects Ships might fafely take harbour in any of the King's Havens. For the first a Note of the Merchants Complaints was deliver'd in writing, but answer was defer'd for want of Instructions, an usual Pretence in like Affairs. Touching the fecond, answer was made, that the King had given order that Flemish Ships should not be molested in any of his Havens, which appear'd in that they were there always rescu'd from the Pursuit and Chase of the French; but he thought it not fit that more should enter his Havens at once, than he had power to govern. Affuredly the Merchants Adventurers have been often wrong'd and wring'd to the quick, but were never quick and lively in Thanks to those by whose Endeavours they were freed.

The fame Merchants exhibited a Bill at Merchants the Council-Table against the Merchants of of the Stilthe Stilyard. After answer by those of the yard. Stilyard, and reply by the Adventurers, it was conceiv'd upon view of divers Charters, that the Merchants of the Stilyard were no sufficient Corporation, and that their Number, Names, and Nation could not be known: Also that when they had forfeited their Liberties, King Edward the Fourth reftor'd them, upon condition that they should cover no Strangers Goods, which they had not observed. And again, whereas at the beginning they ship'd not above 80 Cloths, beginning they mip a not above so clours, after that 100, afterwards 1000, after that 6000, at that time 44000 Cloths were ship'd every year in their names, and not above 1100 by all Strangers befides. Wherefore albeit certain Embassacous from Hamburgh Dissilved. and Lubeck spake much in their behalf, yet a Decree was made, that they had forfeited their Liberties, and were in the fame condition with other Strangers. And albeit they made great Moans afterwards, yet could they not procure this Sentence to be cal Laws.

^{##} Ring | (b) The old Cuftom of the Kings of England on Maundy Thurfday was observed by K. Edward this Year 1552.

Manndy | Wardrobe] to deliver to Richard Cetyl and Robert Rolabham, Yeomenot the Robes, 15 Gowns of gray mable Cloth, Pharladys, 15 pair of fingle-fold Shoes, and 45 Ellos Clinen Cloth, to be given to 15 poor Men on Maundy Thurfday, 3.5.

(c) In this Year, vir. 1552. the King being 15 years of Age, was mightily improved, and had attained to no ordinary Degrees of Knowledg and Learning: For the underflood many Language's, as, befides his metal the French. He was skilled in the Sciences of Logic and Munic, underflood Natural Philofophy: and as he was a King, he carried himself with the Majeity and Gravity of a King 15 yet with much Sweemefs and Obligingness too. The Fame of him made Hierosymus Cardamsa, a learned Hailam, eminent for Aftelogy and Philofophy; and as he was a King, he carried himself it with the Majeity and Gravity of a King 15 yet with much Sweemefs and Obligingness too. The Fame of him made Hierosymus Cardamsa, a learned Hailam, eminent for Aftelogy and Philofophy; one into England this Year to fee King Edward; and prefented him a Book de Renum Varietate, which he had dedicated to him. When we shought to the King, and offered his Book, the King forthwith discoursed learnedly and perompty in Latin with him; asking him first about the Subject of his Book, and then argued with him philofophically and eriterday too cerning Contes, according to the account he had given of them. Which made the Indian amazed: fo that afterwards in a Look of his De Genitarit, he gave him a very high Elogium; extolling him, from his own Knowledg, to be a Youth of face textorodinary Para and Expectations, that he fecuent to be brought up for a Miretory and the France was Advanced to be brought up for a Miretory and the France was Advanced to Brought up for a Miretory and the France was Advanced to Brought up for a Miretory Him and the Advanced to Brought firto transferibe the very Words of Cardam, and to tra

Gon for compiling

fix Chap-

Lawyers, in all 32. to fet forth Ecclefiastical Laws, agreeable to the Nature both of the Acommil- People and of the Religion then establish'd in the Church of England, but it took no effect. Ecclefialli. For neither the number of the Commissioners cal Laws, being many, nor the Quality of them, being Persons both in great Offices and divers far remote, could afford Meetings for so great a Bufiness. Also the Difference both of Professions and of Ends, did of necessity raise much difference in Judgment. Order for

The King had fix Chaplains in Ordinary; the King's touching whose Attendance in Court an Order was made, that two should remain with the King by turns, and four should travel in Preaching abroad. The first Year two in Wales, and two in Lincolnshire, the next Year two in the Marshes of Scotland and two in York-Shire. The third Year two in Devonshire and two in Hampshire. The fourth Year two in Norfolk and Essex, and two in Kent and Sussex, and fo thro all the Shires in England; which happily did not only ferve for a spiritual End, namely Instruction in Religion, but did also advance a temporal Purpose of peaceable Obe-dience. For as rude untrain'd Minds are not only eafily drawn but inclinable of themselves to Sedition and Tumult, fo by Learning and Religion Men are especially both reduc'd and retain'd in civil Quiet.

The Coun For better Dispatch of Business of divers cil divides Natures, the Body of the Council was divided into several Commissions. Some were appointed to cut off superstuous Charges, to oversee all missions, ted for hearing those Suits which were usually Courts, especially those of new Erection, as March 3. brought before the whole Table, to fend matinto jeve-ral Com-

ters of Justice to their proper Courts, to give 1552 full denial to fuch as they should not esteem reasonable, to certify what they thought meet to be granted, and upon Allowance thereof to Others were appointed dispatch the Parties. to confider of Penal Laws and Proclamations in force, and to quicken the Execution of the most Principal. These were directed first to confider what Principal Laws and Proclamations were most needful to be executed. Then to inquire in the Countries how they were disobey'd, and first to punish greatest Offenders, and afterwards to proceed to the rest. Lastly, that they should inquire what other Disorders were either dangerous or offentive in every Shire, and either to punish the Offenders, or else to report their Judgment therein. Others were appointed to attend Occurrences of State at large, with whom the King did fit once every Week to hear matters of greatest moment debated, because in these high Passages nothing was thought to be done truly with Majesty, nothing agreeable to the Dignity of the State, but in the Presence of the King. Generally all the Council agreed that none of them should make Suit to the Kingfor Landor Forfeitures above 201. or for Reversion of Leafes, or any other extraordinary Matter, until the State of his Revenues should be further known.

Besides these Commissions another went forth for the king to oversee and order the King's Revenues, and Recepture.

that a Book of Laws was drawn up, and compleatly finished, and wanted nothing but the King's Confirmation and Au-

Try. Dit his Death and form only and Computerly inhinered, such a company on the single Solition and All-lett the King had it in his Mind, and in his Heart. I have feed a rought Draught of the King's laft Will, drawn up by Secretary Petre, wherein he gave this Order to his Executors, 'That they thould diffigurily ravel to cathe gold'. Ecclefiaffical Laws to be made and fet forth: Such as may be agreeable with the Reformation of Religion received within the Realm. And that done, thall also cause the Canon Laws to be abolified.

But to relate this remarkable Piece of History in this Reign, from the Council Book and elicwhere. The Council worse to the Little Chancelor, to make out Commission to Source Source Source 1000 and electroner. In Other 1551, the Council worse to the Little Chancelor, to make out Commission to 2 Perfons, viz. B Bithops, Cantagy, London, Wincheller, Els, Exeter, Giouceler, Buth, and Rocheller: 8 Divines, Taylor of Lincoln, Cox, Parley, Latymer, Cook, Martyr, Cheek, Alafor: 8 Givilians, Peter, Ceck, Sir Thomas Smith, Taylor of Hadley, May, Traberon, Lyel, Skinner: 8 Common Lawyers, Justice Hades, Justice Branley, Goodrick, Ginald, Stamford, Carvel, Lucas, Brook: To authorize them to affemble together, and to refolve upon the Reformation of the Canon Law. Eight of these to rough-hew the Canon Law; the reft to conclude it afterwards.

In November following a new Commission was ordered to eight Persons, for the first drawing and ordering the Canon

In November following a new Commiffion was ordered to eight Perfons, for the first drawing and ordering the Canon Law; for that fome of those after appointed were then thought meet by the Ring to be lett out. The Eight were, the Erchbishop of Canterbury*, and the Bishop of Els*, Dr. Cov., and Peter Marsy*, Dr. 36x*, and Dr. 47afors, and 9 f. fm. Lawa, and Richard Goodrick*. But by a new Commission the Bishop of Londowns up to the recommon the Taylors, and 9 f. fm. Lawa, and Richard Goodrick*. But by a new Commission to Bishop of Londowns up to the recommon the Taylors, and Commission to the Archbishop of Canterbury* and other Bishops*. Learned Mena, Givilians and Lawyers of the Reform. Realm, for Establishment of the Ecclefalical Laws, according to the Act of Parliament made the last Sessions. The p. 196.* granting of this Commission Richard date that the 10- of Petrany*.

Now because here is mention made of an Act of Parliament for this Commission of Secondown up to the Act of Parliament of the Secondown up to the Act of Parliament of the Secondown up to the Act of Parliament and the last Secondown up to the Act of Parliament of the Secondown u

Compiling and Ordering of Ecclefatival Laws. And that fich Laws for compiled, gathered and ordered by the faid 32, or the more part of them, and fet forth and published and declared by the King's Proclamation with the Advice of 6 his Privy Council, under the Great Scal, Rall by virtue of this Adv, be only taken, reputed, practified and put in Ufe, 6 for the King's Ecclefatical Laws of this Realm.

when this Act the Commissions afore mentioned were grounded. And at last after great Pains of the Learned Men the whole Work was finished, and a Body of Ecclesiastical Laws drawn up. Which were ascerwards printed An. 1571. and again 1560. under the Title of Reformatio Legum Ecclesiasticaum, with a large Presace see before it made by J. F. that is, (I suppose) John 80x.

By this it appears how our Author erreth, when he writest here, that this Matter took no Effect, because of the Number of Commissioners, and divers of them far remote: and others of them having great Offices could not afford Meetings for be great a Business. And also their Difference of Professions and Easts, rating Difference in Judgment. Which is allow to Commission in Officer 1551, to eight Persons, leaving the Work in their Hands to shifth. And the Archiviltopo of Carebray being one of these eight, knowing the great Usefulless of the ching, hastened it, and in effect himself completed it, as is thewn in Archiviltopo Crammer's Memorials. Yet he had the Assistance of the Assistance of whose Hands have seen in a rough Copy of this Book. But indeed the rune reason which excellent Book, framed with so much Study and Care and Consultation, had not Aurhority given to it, to make it a Law, was because the Nation, especialty the great Men of it, could not endure Ecclesiastical Discipline. And so can of the eight Commissioners, wrote about this time to Bullinger at Zurich, in the Course of their Correspondence, We bate those bitter Institutions of Christian Discipline. J. S.

1552. and Tenths, and to provide that the Revenues only difensed and not brought to an end, then it 1552. were answer devery half Year. Another went shall be noted to what Point is a Business is brought, " talle account of Payments fince the 35th of King Henry the VIII, and in what manner the King had been deceived, either by not accounting or accounting failly. Another allo for taking away needless Bulwarks, by virtue whereof divers were demolish'd upon the Sea-Coasts, in Peace chargeable and little ferviceable in War. And further, for more orderly and fpeedy Dispatch of Causes, the King deliver'd to his Council these Articles following.

for di-fratch of Caufes.

1. That all Suits, Petitions and common !! rants deliver'd to the Privy-Council, be confider'd by them on Mondays in the Afternoon, and anfwer'd on Saturdays in the Afternoon; and that those Days and no other be assigned to that Pur-

2. That fuch Suits and Petitions as pertain to any Courts of Law, be refer'd to those Courts where properly they are irrable, others to be determin'd | with Expedition. 3. That in making Warrants for Almy it be forefree, that they be not for fuch matters as may Le diffacted by Warrant's dormant, left by fuch ce eajja cora cy w arrants aermant, tejt by Jueb recum Account flould be notectrain.

4. The upon Similays they attend publick Af-flivs of the Realm, difficult Asfrers to Letters for word Order of the States and make full Dfparenes of all things concluded the Week before; provided that they be prefent at Common Prayer.

5. That en Sanday Night the Secretaries or one of them deliver to the King a Memorial of facts things as are to be debated by the Privy-Cou cil, and he to appoint certain of them to be debuted a point Several Day, viz. Monday Asternoon, Tuckery, Wenfday, Thursday, and Friday before noon.

6. That on Friday afternoon they shall make Collection of fuch things as have been done the for Days before, what they have concluded, and what the time fuffer'd not to perufe. Also the principal Reasons which mov dr am to conclude of Jach matters as feen? d doubtfid.

7. That on Saturday before noon they prefent this Collection to the King, and inquire his Pleasure upon all things which they have concluded, and also apon all private Suits.

8. That none of the Privy-Council depart the Court for longer time than two Days, unlife eight of the Council remain behind, and unless the King

9. That they make no Affaibly in Council unless they be to the number of four at the least.

10. That if they affemble to the number of four, and under the number of fix, then they may reason or examine the Commodities or Inconveniences of Matters preposed, and make things plain which feem difined at the first opening; and if they agree, then at the next full Assembly of six, a perfect Conclusion the field be made.

1. That if there be under four, and a matter and a requiring Expedition, they shall declare it to the Korg, but not give answer unless it requires extraora vary haft.

12. That if fich matters arife as it shall pleafe the King to bear the fame debated, warning shall be given that the more may be prefert.

13. That if fuch in atter arife as cannot be ended without long debating, the Council shall not intermeddle with other Caules until they beve concluded in. That no private Suit be intermeddled with your shiftenes int Shall be heard on Mondays

. . Dat when Matters for fearinefs of time be forth for Debts owing to the King, and to and what have been the princip a Reafens, that noen it shall be treated again it may the foomer come to Conclusion.

16. That in tedious or difficult masters two or three or more may be appointed to prepare and report the fame, that being lefs combrons and diffuje they may the more easily be dispatch'd.

17. That no Warrant for Remard above 40 l. or Bississis or Affairs above 1001. pass but under the King's Signet. 18. That if 1 pon Advertisements or other Oc-

cassens, matters of great Importance appear which require helf, such natters by all be considered and determined a township anding those Assistes which appoint Business for several Day, so a this Order be not generally or commonly broken.

Affuredly albeit the King declar'd both his Judgment and his Diligence and Care of Attairs of the Realm; yet is there one Rule more (and not by him neglected) for all great Officers, which if it be not fufficient in it felt to hold Matters in order, yet are no Rules fufficient without it.

And this is to chuse Persons both for Ability and Integrity well reputed, albeit haply they be not always us'd. For befides that thefe will be a Rule to themselves, it is a great Satisfaction to the People, and keepeth them both from murmuring and curious inquiring into Counfels of State, which is never good, and often dangerous, when they know, or at leaft fuppore Matters to pais under fuch Mens Judgments.

In thefe times it was conceiv'd by many, that A Mart in by erecting of a Mart in England, the Kealm England would be much inrich'd and made more fa-miliand. mons and lefs obnoxious to other Countries. the time was then esteem'd fit by reason of the Wars between the Emperor and the French sing. The Places deem'd most meet were It I for the East-Countries, and South ampton for the South. Lenden was thought no ill Place, but Sorthampion was judg'd melt convenient for the first Beginning. This Matter March c. detain'd the Lords of the Council in a Deliberation both ferious and long, with great Strength and Variety of Renfons on both indes; which because they may give some light to the like Quethion, which in times enfuing may happily again be its on foot, I will here declare them in the fame manner as they were collected by the King.

Against the Mart these Objections were made.

1. That Strangers could have no Accefs into Objettions England by Land, which they had at Antwerp against it. where il e Mart then was.

2. That the ill marking of English Cloth's made them lefs effecta'd abroad.

3. That the great quantity of English Cloths in Flanders would make them lefs defir'd from

4. That the Merchants had then eftablished their dwelling Places at Antwerp.

5. That other Nations would forbear their Refort into England for a while upon Commandment of the Emperor.

6. That the denial of the Requests of the Merchants of the Stilyard world be a hindrance to the Mari, if Preventant were not us'd.

7. That the Povery and Smallnefs of Southampton would be a great Impediment.

8. That the Kirer Rhine was more commodious for Antwerp than as y River was for England.

Hiereunto

To be fertled at Southampton.

Hereunto answer was made, that at the time | standeth not upon the Rhome, neither doth 1552 when the Mart should begin at Southampton, the French King and the Almanes would ftop Intercourse to Autwerp by Land, so as nothing should pass that way but in great danger. Again, as Southampton wanteth the Commodity of Access of Merchandize by Land, fo it hath the Commodity that there can be no Access of Enemies by Land; and if Wars should be rais'd, then the Navy of England is fufficient to defend them. And further that Traffick that cometh to Antwerp by Land is almost only from the Venetians, who may with greater case, and lefs danger transport their Merchandiss into England by Sea. That the ill making of Cloths was fit to be redressed by the Parliament, then fitting, and the matter was then reduc'd to fome Ripeness, the Upper House having one Bill and the nether House another in good forwardness. Neither were they for ill made but that the Flenmings did eafily defire them, offering rather to pay the Impolition of the Emperor than to be without them.

That it were necessary that the Passage of Ships should be feav'd until the Mart should! advance to fome ripeness, and that Cloti: should be bought with the King's Mony, and convey'd to Southampton to be there utter'd at the Mart, which should help the inconveni-ence very well. That Merchants never bind themselves to any Mansson, which either to atchieve, gain, or to avoid danger they will not readily forfake, for fo they removed from Bruges to Antwerp only for the English Commodities. And therefore seeing they shall have a good Commodity by coming to Southempron, and be rid of great Fear of Danger both in their Lives and Goods, in forfaking Autmorp, there is little Fear that they will be curious in making the Change.

That the Emperor then was fo nearly driven, that neither was he willing to attend the Impeachment of the Mart, neither could be at that time do it. For the Flommings and the Spaniards under him could more hardly be without the English, than the English without them, and therefore would hardly be brought to forbear that Traffick; and belides, they liv'd then in fear of losing all-

That it were good that for the prefent the Stillyard Men were generally answer'd, an Trial made whether by any gentle Offer of fome part of their Liberties again they might be brought to ship their Wares unto the Mart. The Frence, also might easily be drawn over, having one Traffick at that time but with England.

That thefe two might fuffice to begin a Mart. That the Merchants would make good shift for their Lodging; and it is not the Ability of the Place that maketh a Mart, but the Refort of Merchants, as Spaniards, Almanes, Italians, Flemmings, Venetians, Danes, in exchanging their Commodities one with another. With whom also would concur the Merchants of London, Erifton, and other Places of England. And fome of the Cloths which should be carry'd thither at the first, might be taken up with the King's Mony, and there be utter'd.

Antwerp where the Mart was then. doth and may well ferve for a Fair for high Almain, but Southampton ferveth better for all Countries upon the Sea, for few of these resort to Frankford.

Herewith diverse Reasons were alled 3'd for Argument; the Mart, and namely, that the Vent of Lig-fr the lish Cloths would hereby be open in all times Mart. of War, that the English Merchants Goods would be out of Dinger of Strangers, and without fear of Linger of arreling upon every light Caufe. That it would much inrich the Realm, because as a Market inricher a Town, so doth a Mart Iarich a Kingdom. That upon occasion great sums of Mony might be borrow'd of them who frequent the Mart.
That the King might sommand a great num-That the King migni "Dintaling a green number of Strangers Ships to ferve in his Wars.

That War being made, all Goods flould be in the King's * Danger. That the English flould hidde to be used to the the Company of the Public Wires. Whereas then the Strangers fold their Wares the King, to the Flemmings, and the Flemmings to the English. That the Towns towards the Sea would hereby be made more Populous, Rich, Beautiful and Strong. That the Merchants inflead of Tapiftry, Points, Glailes, and other Laces, would then bring in Bullion, and other Substantial Merchandizes to have the English Cloth, and Tin. That by this means the Englift should abate the Power of their Enemies, and not be inforc'd to borrow of Merchants but when they lift, and that in no great Quantity or Sum.

The time was then effeem'd most convenient, This time The time was then elteem'd most couvenient, because the Wars betwirt the French and the mile to see hier to see Emperor caused the It ilians, Genosfe, Portur in fact to, galt, and Spaniards to forbear their Frade to daturery. The Profficus also and other East-Countries, having four teen Ships against the Enperor, would not be very forward to adventure peror, would not be very forward to adventure thither. Again, the Fench invading Lovain, and menacing Fluiders, and the Almanes lying on the River of Rhine, did Rop the Courfe of Merchants out of Indy, as well to Frankfield as to Antwerp. And further, the putting of Soldiers into Antwerp moved the Merchants to forbear their Traffick, and to look to their after. Also the Breach which a late Tempelt is an analysis of the property of the second of t ad made, was like to make the Channel un-certain, and the Haven naught. Laftly, the stop of the Exchange to Lions would make many Flemmings Bankrupts. And because these Nations cannot live without a Vent, thefe things decaying the Mart of Antmerp and Frenk-ford, they would most willingly upon creeting a free Mart refort to England.

And here the Town of Southampton was esteem'd most fit, because the Sp. miards, Britains, Gafeoins, Lombards, Genoefe, Normans, Ita-lians, the Merchants of the Baffland, the Pruffians, Danes, Swedes and Norwegians might indifferently refort thither, and more easy than to Autwerp. (e) And whereas the Fernmings having few Commodities, have allur'd Merchants by their Privileges to fettle a Martamong them, much more eafily should the English That Bruges where the Mart was before do it, having both Opportunity and Means, as

⁽c) There were two Sea-Port Towns in England nominated, to fix this Martin. One in the South Part of the Ringdom, viz. Southampton, for the Convenience of Merchants Strangers on that fide; the other on the Eafl, viz. Hall, for the Convenience of Merchants Strangers on the Eafl and Northern Parts. This Eaflern is to turn Author ackeling Nortice of, the the MS. out of Which he transcribed mencioneth is exprelly here; viz. That it is calter for Spaniards, Briton, Valcins, Lombards, Geologies, Normans and Indians, to come to Southampton than to January: No for the Merchants of the England, the Profles, the Dance, Sweder and Norveyjans to go go [not to Southampton bat] to Mull. J. S. Vol. II.

Vol. II. [Sf] Cloth,

The LIFE and REIGN of EDWARD the Sixth. [318]

Countries have the like.

The Means Laftly, The Means to establish this Mart enabled were contrived to be thefe. First, That the challed this dark. English Merchants should forbear their refort this dark for a Mart or two beyond the Seas, under pretence of the Impolitions there charg'd upon them. Then that Proclamation should be made in divers parts of this Realm where Merchants chiefly refort, That there shall be a free Mart kept at Southampion to begin prefently after Whitfontide, and to continue five Weeks, fo as it should be no hindrance to St. James's Fair at Briffol, nor to Bartholomew Fair in Lerdon. The Privileges of which Mart fhould be expreffed to be thefe.

That all Men should have free Liberty for Refort and Return, without arrefting, except in Cafes of Treafon, Murder or Felony. That for the time of the Mart all Men should pay but half the Custom due in other Places of the Realm. That during the time no Shipping should be made from any Place between South-Wales and Effex, but only to Southampton. That in H.mpshire, Wilishire, Sussex, Surrey, Kent, Dorfeeshire, no Bargain should be made for Wares, dering that time, but only at that Mart. That a Court should be crected to pu-nish Offenders with Liberties of good Condition. That fome one Commodity, as haply fome one kind of Cloth, should be assign'd as proper to the Mart. That fome Liberties be given to to the Adaptants of Southengton, and fome Mo-nys to them, if it might be spared, to begin their France. That Ships should at-tend the Satiguard of Merchants fo well as they could. And that if this Mart took good effect, another might be creded at Holl for the North-East Countries, to begin presently af-Thus it was concluded, but the Execution was for a time delayd, because the Wool Flect of fixty Sail was lately before departed for dutinery, and could not possibly be call'd back. But to make the first Preparation, because a Mart could not fublift without Exchange, Liberty was granted to the English Merchants to exchange and rechange Mony for Mony.

As upon this Occasion this profitable Purpose was first delay'd, so afterwards it was altogether dash'd, first by the King's Sickness, after by his Death.

Dobt, and had many extraordinary Occasions, Residue to be apply'd to the Benesit of the The King

Cloth, Tin, Seacole, Lead, Belmettal, and yet in regard of the troublesom Times he 1552 Fish other Commodities, as few Christian did forbear to charge his Subjects with such Loans and Impositions, as usually in Peace breed Discontent, and in turbulent Times Disquiet; but he chofe rather to deal with the Foulker in the Lom-Countrys for Monys upon Loan at a very high Rate. And hereupon Letters were directed from the Lords of the May Si Council to the Foulker at Antwerp, that he had received from the King 63000 Pounds Flereceived from the King 63000 mish in February, and 24000 Pounds (g) in April, which amounted to 87000 Pounds Flemish. A fair Sum to be paid in one Year, especially in that busy World when it was necellary for Princes not to be without Mony. Hereupon, and for that they understood that at that time he was well able to forbear Mony, they advised the King to pay to him only 5,000 l. of the 45000 l. which then remain'd unpaid, and to continue the reft at the ufual yearly Interest of 1.4 l. for every Hundred, wherewith they defir'd him to retain good patience. Hereto the Foulker answer'd, that as he May 21. had found fair Dealings before, so he would rest content to defer paiment of 2000 l. so as ... affar'd to 20000 l. (h) thereof r = be paid within four convenient time. All this was probably agreed, and no lefs faithfully perf un'd afterwards. And afteredly as God is the Word, and cannot but make good bis Word, to a Prince to mach loft th of his Dignity as he declineth from his Word.

About this time a Garifon-pay of 10000 l. Pays his was fent to the Frontiers of Scotland, and the Frontiers of like to Colais, and in the fame Year 5000 l. in. Scotland to Leeland. Hereto if we add the King's great and rance. Charges in Fortification upon both the Frontiers of Scotland and France, the Particulars whereof I omit as Matters now altogether of no use, it may casily be discern'd that the Hostility with Scotland and France, and the Incivility of Ireland, were a great part of the Cause which held this frugal King thus dived in Debt.

And for another Means of railing of Mony, commissions Commissions went forth for felling Chantry for felling Lands, and Houses, for Paiment of the King's Chantry Debt, given forth to be 251000 Pounds Sterling May 10. at the least (i). Also to enquire of all Church-Goods, either remaining in Cathedral or Parish-Churches, or embezled away; and name-ly of Jewels of Gold and Silver, or Silver Crolles, Candlefticks, Cenfors, Chalices, ready Mony, Copes, and other Vestments: and referving to every Church one Chalice, and Covering for the Communion-Table; the tak: up Mony at

(f) This whole Diffourfe of the Mart was a Paper writ by K. Edward himfelf, and fli'll remains in the Cotton Library: And is transcribed complete, and printed in Ep. Bonets inflitory of the Reformation. The Heads of which Paper are Vol. II. there. I. The Reaf is and Crutes, why it is now most necessary to have a Mart in England. II. The Caustes why dis Collect. Time is not commodious to certal Mart in III. How the Mart will be brought to pate. IV. The Diffoommodities and N°. 4, p. Letts to the Mart to be kept in England. V. The Remedies and Autvers thereastic. J. S. 78.

(g) In the King's Journal published by the Epp of Sazum, the Last Sum is 14000 L. which with the 64000 L. maketh 77000 L. Letter to the Collect. The Collect of The Collect of The Collect. The Collect of The Collect. The Collect of The Collect of writteth 870.0 l. wilfully (as one may guess) the better to cover his former Millake. So that here was an Error of which 8% of L willully (as one may guels) the better to cover his former pulluace. So that here on the first of the sound of of the sound

The LIFE and REIGN of EDWARD the Sixth.

219

Church-

1552. King. By their Sales and Enquiries, the King's Wants were fomewhat relieved. And many Perfons, very mean both for Birth and Ability of Mind, and of no lefs place of Employment, found Means to advance themselves to so great Estate, as they left their Posterity ranged among the Nobility of this Realm.

Of these Church-Purchasers, I have seen Purchasers many melt to nothing, and the Residue shall be observ'd, either by Riot or by Improvidence to confume.

At the same time for more assured Strength of the Borders upon Scotland, Order was fet-tled that no Man in those Parts should bear two Offices at once. Which not well obferv'd in later Years, hath much derogated both from the Dignity and Discharge of Offices, as well in State as in fome inferior Places.

Beaumont Master of the Rolls unfaithful,

Another Means for raising Mony was practifed no lefs pleafing to the People, than proand punish by enquiring after Offences of Officers in control of the Property of the Commonwealth, and that was and punish by enquiring after Offences of Officers in control of the Commonwealth of the Commo great Place; who as by unjust dealing they became most odious, so by Justice in their Punishments, the Prince acquireth both Love and Applause. And so one Beaumont Master of the Rolls was convicted, that in his Office of Wards he had purchas'd Lands with the King's Mony (k); also that he had lent above 700 l. of the King's Mony, and forborn 11000 l. of the King's Debts for his own Profit. Also that being Master of the Rolls, he dealt corruptly in a Case between the Duke of Suffolk and the Lady Powers. For he bought the Ladys Tithe, and caused an Indenture to be forged from Charles Brandon the Duke a little before deceased, purpoling a Grant of the Lands in question from Duke Charles to the Lady Powes. Also that he had conceal'd the Felony of his Servant, who having stol'n from him 200 l. he took the Momy to himself again. Hereupon he surrender'd to the King all his Offices, Lands and Goods in fatisfaction, as well for the Monys due by him to the King, as of the Fines which his Offences had merited. He was a Man of a dull and heavy Spirit, and therefore the more fenflefly devoted in his fenfual Avarice.

And by Receiver of Torkshire, acknow-whalsy Receiver of Gan, how he had lent the King's Mony for Yorkshire with the Arrerages of the Year before; how he had bought the King's Land with the King's how upon fall of Mony he borrow'd divers 1552 Sums, whereby he gain'd 500 L at one crying down. For these Misdmeanours he surrender'd his Office, and submitted himself to pay fuch Fines as the King or his Council should charge upon him.

The Lord Pager Chancellor of the Dutchy, was And the L convicted that he had fold the King's Lands Pages. and Timber Woods without Commission; that he had taken great Fines for the King's Lands, and apply'd them to his proper Use; and that he had made Leafes in Reversion for more than one and twenty Years. For these Offences he furrender'd his Office, and submitted himself to be fined at the Pleasure of the King. So his Fine was gueffed at 6000 Pounds, whereof ther 4000 should be paid within the compass of that Year.

This he endur'd with a manly Patience, as knowing right-well that he held all the Residue of his Estate upon Courtesy of those who hated him at the Heart. It was at the first fufpected, and afterwards expected by all, that among other Matters objected against the Lord Pager, the chief, or at leaft one flould have been for contriving to Banquet the Lords at his House, and under pretence thereof to take off their Heads, which was the only Cause for which the Duke of Somerset lost his Head. But because no mention was made thereof, because about the same time the Lord Gray of Wilton, Bannister and Crane, and a little after the Earl of Arundel were freely discharg'd, having been imprisoned for this Conspiracy, the Conceit was taken that the Duke's Head was the only Airs, and that the Residue were us'd but as a Countenance of State to dazzle the People.

2000 were remitted upon condition that the o-

Countenance of State to Mazzar in the September 2, that Divine Service should be there as divine to be according to the Form of the Church of Eng. 1964 at according to the Eng. 1964 at according t

A King of Arms, named Ulfter, was new- ulfter K. ly instituted for Ireland; his Province was all at Arms. Ireland, and he was the first 4th King of Arms, the first Herald appointed for Ireland.

Whilft these Matters were in action, the The Empe-Emperor's Embassador in England deliver'd torrequires Letters to the King from the Regent in the Aid of the Low-Countries, importing, that whereas the King by a King was bound by a Treaty between the Em- $\frac{tormer}{T_{reaty_o}}$ peror and the King's Father at Lurrelt (1) in Mony; how he had made divers false Accounts; the Year 1542. that if the Low-Countries should

For Satisfaction of the Kinges Majesties Dett charged upon me in his Graces Court of Wards and Lyveries, for redy 6 For Sarisfation of the Kinges Majerities Dett charged upon me in his Graces Court of Wards and Lyveries, for redy Money and Speculaties, amounting to the form of reventy thousand, eight hundred (kevnty one pounds, eightcen 6 shillings and eight pence, I am pleaded and conteneed, and by this prefert Bill do acknowledg my sfelt to be fully content of the first of him and his Heiss: And as a large of the first of him and his Heiss: And as a large of the man of the first of him and his Heiss: And as a large of the first of the first of him and his Heiss: And as a large of the first MSS. henes me.

⁽b) Our Author here errs again from the King's Journal: from which now all along he doth but Copy, with fome little Deficants of his own. For where he written that Beaument lent above 700 l. of the King's Mony, in the faid Journal it is 9000 I.
What this John Beamonts Debt was to the King, and what Satisfaction and Submiffion he made, will appear by this Exemplification of two Original Papers.

^{} A Submitted of the Role of

[320] The Life and Reign of EDWARD the Sixth.

1552. be invaded, the King should aid him with 5000 Foot, or 70 (m) Crowns a Day, during four Months; and that this Aid should be perform'd within one Month after Request: For fo much as the French King invaded Lunemburg, the Emperor requir'd Aid of the King of England according to the Effect of that Treaty.

The King Hereupon Order was given, that if the excuses it. Embassador did move for Answer to this Letter, he should be told by two of the Council, that during the King's Progress his Council was difperfed, whose Advice he was desirous to hear. And further, that the King had committed the same Treaty to be perus'd by Men whose Judgments, as he did much respect, so would he expect a time until their Opinions might be heard. And in case that after this the Embaffador should again require an An-fwer, then they should fay, that the King having lately wrestled out of most dangerous Wars, wherewith his young Years were overburdened, he hop'd well, that the Emperor would not defire to thrust him into the like That he had fworn Amity with the again. French King, which he could not with his Honour break; and therefore if the Emperor should deem it so meet, he would mediate a Peace as a Friend to both, which he should bett effect by forbearing to use Hostility against either. And in case the Embassador should still perfevere to urge the Treaty, they were lastly directed to answer, that the King did not hold himself bound by that Treaty, as both made by his Father, and evidently prejudicial to his Realm; for albeit Agreements of Peace arc perpetual, and bind the Succellor, yet it is not io in Agreements of Society and Confederation. And this the Emperor did right-well understand, for when the King in his last Mars defir'd to enter a new Treaty with the Emperor, he return'd answer that it should not need, for albeit the King were discharg'd by his Father's Death, yet the Emperor was still bound. And again, the Emperor had not for his part perform'd the Treaty, as well in hindring the carriage of Fiorfes, Armour and Munition, which the King had provided for his Wars, as also in neglecting to send Aid when the Low Country of Calais was foraged; and therefore he did not justly demand performance thereof from the King.

I know it hath been often in like fort anfwer'd, that Treaties diffolve by Death of those who made them; for so the Fidenates held themselves discharg'd of the League which they had made with Romulus after his Death. And the Latines did the like after the Death of Tullus, and likewise after the Death of Ancus. The Etrurians affirm'd the like after the Death of Prifcus. And the Sabines after the Death of Servius. And again after that Tarquinius was cast out of State. I knowalso that the difference is great between a League of Peace, and a League of Society and Confederation, But I will not touch every String of this Question, which Hottoman calleth a Noble Question, and much toffed and debated; partly, because it consisteth of many knotty and thorny Distinctions, wherein approv'd Authors do not well agree; but chiefly because at this time it fell not to be a Difference between the Emperor and the King.

For when the Embassador first came for Anby answer'd according to the first Branch of The Empe-ther Instructions, wherewith he departed well bufflador fatisfy'd for the prefent.

And before he call'd for Answer again, one stukelys Stukely arriv'd out of France, and declar'd to Infirmath the Council, how the French King being per- on of the funded that Stukely would never return into Defign aupon apprehension of the Duke of Somerfet, his fais, Master bewrayed to him, that if he could pro- Sept. 16. cure Peace with the Emperor, he intended to beliege Calais, and was in hope to carry the Town by way of the Sand-bills, and that from thence winning the Rice-bank, he might both famish the Town, and beat the Market-place: how he further said, that he intended to land in some Angle of England about Falmouth, because Bulworks there might easily be won, and the People were for the most part Catholicks. And further, how at the same time Monsieur de Guise should enter England by the way of Scotland, not only with good Leave, but with Aid and Conduct from the Scots.

Upon this Discovery the King assembled his Council at Windsor, and entred with them into deliberation, whether it were either Safe from him, or to no Difadvantage, to rely fo fecurely, either upon the Strength or Faith of France, as either to refuse or neglect to afford Aid unto the Emperor, and thereby haply

incur his Hostility

Many were of Opinion that the King should Deliberati. condescend to aid the Emperor. First, For on about that if the King were defirous to hold the affiling the Emperor bound, by the Treaty made with Emperor. the King's Father, he must also be oblig'd thereby; Otherwise it was a lame halting League, and could not pollibly go upright. Then for that if the Emperor should not be aided, the House of Burgundy was like to be devour'd by the French, whereby their Greatness might grow dreadful, especially to England. Then for that again the French King had drawn the Turk into Christendom, and therefore was to be refifted as a Common Enc-And further, in case the Emperor upon Extremity should compose Agreement with the French, the Danger to England would be double. First, Upon Offence taken by the Emperor, then upon the French King's old Difpolition, edged by every new Displeasure, wherein the Devotion of the Bishop of Rome would not be wanting. And again, the Eng-lift Merchants were so ill intreated in the Empire, the Realm was fo much engaged in Honour and in Wealth, as fome Remedy was to be fought, and none better than by giving Aid. Laftly, The French King's Proceedings were no less doubtful than fearful, not only in regard of Stukely's Report (not altogether to be neglected) but by reason of his breaking and siring divers English Ships, the antient Strength and Fortreffes of the Realm.

Others were of Advice, that the Emperor's Demands of Aid should be deny'd. First, For that it would be too chargeable, and almost impossible for the English to perform. Then for that when the Emperor should die, the whole Weight of the War would roll upon the Englift. And further, the German Protestants would be offended herewith, and conceive

(m) 700 Crowns a Day. In the Journal.

1552. fome Doubts of their own Estates. Lastly, There was hope that the Amity with France would not long continue, but amend, and that the Embassadors then lately sent, would repair all Harms done by the French upon English Ships.

Between both these the King stroke a midling Judgment, fo to aid the Emperor against the French King, as other Christian Princes should also adjoyn, and that for no other Cause but as a Common Enemy for drawing the Turks Forces upon them.

That hereby as the Caufe was common, fo would there be more Parties to it: And this also would moderate the Charge of aiding the Emperor according to the Treaty; and when-foever the Emperor should die or break off, it was likely that some of those Princes and Parties should remain so as the King should not fland alone. Moreover, this Friendship would much advance the King's other Affairs in Germany; and finally, it would be honourable to break with the French King upon this Common Ouarrel.

Against this Advice of the King, two Objections were made; one, that the Treaty must be entertain'd with so many, that it could not be speedily or secretly concluded: the other, that in cafe the Purpose should be discover'd and not concluded, the French might be provoked thereby to practife the like Confederation against the English.

All these the King did knit up in this Conclusion; first, that the Treaty should be made only with the Emperor, and by the Emperor's Means with other Princes; fecondly, That the Emperor's Acceptance should be well under-stood before any Treaty were either enter'd or entertain'd against the French.

The King will assist Hereupon Letters were dispatch'd to Mr. Morison the King's Embassador with the Emperor, whereby he was directed to declare to the Emperor, how the King touch'd with pithe Emperor against the Turk, ty at the Invasion of Christian Countrys by the Turks, would willingly joyn with him and other States of the Empire (in case the Emperor could bring it to pass) in some League against the Turks and against their Confederates. But Caution was given that he should not once mention the French King, nor answer any mention made of him, only to fay that his Commission extended no further. But if the Emperor would fenda Messenger into England, he should happily know more.

Letters to the King's Emb issador in France Stukely.

Herewith, and because Time beateth out Pickering Truth, Letters were fent to Mr. Pickering the King's Embassador in France, to know whether Stukely had acquainted him with any of those Matters which he had disclosed in England. And with what Familiarity the French King us'd him, or by what other Circumstances he could conceive his Report to be true. Herewith also the Lord Gray was chosen Deputy of Calais, and the Lord Wentworth remov'd, as one whose Youth, and want of Experience, was held unfit to govern that Charge in turbulent Times. On the other fide, Sir Nicholas Wentworth was remov'd from being Porter of the Town, by reason of his old Age, but had an hundred Pounds yearly Pension affign'd him for his Life.

The King Also by abating needless Expences, to be the retrenches better enabled against Charge; the several Tahis Expen- bles for young Lords, for the Masters of Requests, and for Serjeants at Arms, were laid down; and divers extraordinary Allowances were taken away. And further, because the King was to make paiment of 48000 l. beyond the Seas, and had but 14000 l. towards the Sun, Three hundred of the chief Merchants Adventurers, granted to him a Loan of 400001. for three Months, to be levied from the Cloths which they were then to transport, after the rate of 20 s. for every Cloth. But these Adventurers went not upon any Adventure, because at that shipping 40000 Broad-cloths were by them transported.

Whilft these Matters were in action, two Two come Lawyers arrivd in England, with direction from the from the French King, to declare what Matters ters had been determined againft the English by Sept. 22. the French King's Council, and upon what Reafons, and also what Matters were then depending, and what Care and Diligence was used in those Dispatches. They were much commended by all for their modelt Behaviour, and their fweet Eloquence much delighted the King; who again in a short Speech first thanked the French King for his defire to give him Satisfaction, then commended them for well performing their Charge; but for the Sub-stance of their Business he referred them to London, where fome of his Council should commune thereof fully with them. Here Mr. Secretary Petre, and Mr. Wotton, and Sir Thomas Smith, laid before them the Grievances of the English Merchants, whose Losses by the French exceeded the Sum of 500001. To this the Embassadors gave little Answer, but said, they would make Report thereof at their return into France, affirming, that they had no Commission, but only to declare the Manner and Caufes of judicial Proceedings.

Presently after their return, Monf. Villandry Another was fent again in Polt to the King to declare to Molecule him, that albeit Mr. Sydney's and Mr. Winter's fran the Matters went jully against them; yet because to fellow they were the King's Servants, and one of mailime, them in place near his Perfon, the French Affairs, King was content freely to give Mr. Sydney Oct. 8. his Ship, and all his Goods in her; and to Mr. Winter his Ship, and all his own Goods. But this Offer the King refused, affirming that he requir'd nothing freely, but expected Juftice and Expedition. Villandry fliew'd further, that the King his Mafter was defirous that the Ordinances and Customs of England and France touching Marine Affairs, might be reduc'd into one Form, without any difference between them. Whereto answer was made, that the English Ordinances for Marine Assairs, were no other than the Civil Laws, and certain antient Additions of the Realm, wherein they could conceive no reason or conveniency of Change, having long continu'd without Reproof. After this Fillendry brought forth two Proclamations, not long before publish'd in France, and very advantageable for the Engtifb; for the which he had a Letter of Thanks to the King his Master. Lastly, which was indeed the main of his Message, and whereto all other were but Infinuations; he defired that certain Frenchmen taken upon the Coast of England might be released. Hereto he re-French ceived answer that they were Pirates, and that Pirates. fome of them should by Justice be punished, and some might happily by Clemency be spared. So with this difpatch he returned for France.

But before it was conceiv'd he could be fully Propefitiat Home, he came again to the English Court, by the Vr. and there declar'd to the King, how the King ambassadar his Master would deliver four Ships, against about Shipwhich Judgment had been given; and that he ting.

1552. would appoint Men of good fort and fuffiliked no better than he did the old, and therefore defir'd no other than the Customs which of late times had been us'd in France, and then continu'd in force between England and the Low Countries. Lastly, he defir'd no more Words, but Deeds.

And now were Letters return'd from Mr. Pickering out of France; whereby he advertis'd the King, how Stukely never discover'd any of that he never was either in credit or converfant with the French King or with the Constable, nor ever reforted unto them except once, when he was Interpreter between the Constable and certain English Pioners. Wherefore as it was very like, fo did he verily believe, that as the French King was always close and referv'd amongst his best known Friends, fo would he not be open and uncircumfpect, to impart a matter of fuch import to a mere Stranger, and in a most unseasonable time.

Stukely to the Tower.

English

ироп.

Letters

from Picerin,

> Hereupon Stukely was examin'd again, and then finding it dangerous alike to confess a Truth or ftand to a Lye, he became more un-constant and variable than he was before: wherefore he was committed to the Tower, and notice was given to the French King's Letters were also sent to the King's Embassador in France, directing him to adver-tife the French King of all these matters, and that for two special Ends; one to manifest the King's Confidence in his Amity with France, the other to bring the French King into fufpicion against all English Fugitives who reforted daily to his Court. And fo because no better Person was the Author, incredible Fables were not believ'd. But hereupon fome began to discourse that the Accusations against the Duke of Somerset were no less improbable, and upon the credit of no better Persons, and therefore might haply be no less Prince and of a Subject.

And now when the French King understood What the Fr. K. pro- as well the Imputation which Stukely had healthful Humours as commonly occasion long relief table rais'd, as his Imprisonment; First, he deeply Sickness or Death; and hereof he also so perprotested his Innocence in his particular, and Embasja-dor herehis general fincere meaning for preferving Amity with England: Then he much blam'd Stakely's Villany, and no lefs thank'd the King as well for that he had not afforded a credulous ear to fuch mischievous Devices, wherewith.

would appoint Mcn of good fort and fuffive ciency to hear the English Merchants at Paris, and that he would alter his Ordinances for open'd the Matters given him in charge, to the property of the Matters given him in charge, to the property of the Matters given him in charge, to the property of the Matters given him in charge, to the property of the Matters given him in charge, to the property of the Matters given him in charge, to the property of the Matters given him in charge, the property of the Matters given him in charge, the property of the Matters given him in charge, the property of the Matters given him in charge, the property of the Matters given him in charge, the property of the Matters given him in charge, the property of the Matters given him in charge, the property of the Matters given him in charge, the property of the Matters given him in charge, the property of the Matters given him in charge, the property of the Matters given him in charge, the property of the Matters given him in charge, the property of the Matters given him in charge, the property of the Matters given him in charge, the property of the Matters given him in charge, the property of the Matters given him in charge, the property of the Matters given him in charge with the property of the Matters given him in charge with the property of the Matters given him in charge with the property of the Matters given him in charge with the property of the Matters given him in charge with the property of the Matters given him in charge with the property of the Matters given him in charge with the property of the Matters given him in charge with the property of the Matters given him in charge with the property of the Matters given him in charge with the property of the Matters given him in charge with the property of the Matters given him in charge with the property of the Matters given him in charge with the property of the Matters given him in the property of the Matters given him in charge with the property of the Matters given him in th marine Affairs, of which Emendations he then touching a League against the Took, and a to Morton fent a Copy to the King. The King appointed his Secretaries to consider thereof, thank'd the King for his gentle Offer, and Embalia-And after fome paffages of time, Villandry had his answer; That the King intended not by fome Persons of credit to understand the Octob. 6. receiving four Ships freely to prejudice his King's further meaning. Soon after Mr. Tho. Right in the rest; That the appointing of an Gresham came from Answerp into England, and inferior Council to hear Merchants at Paris, declar'd to the Council, how Monleur Longie after former tedious Suits in a higher Court, the thought would be but dilatory, and so to to him from the Regent with a Packet of Let-Letters of little purpose, because the inferior Council ters, which the Burgundans had intercepted a consultation would never undo that (albeit good cause in Bullaronis, sent, as it was faid, from the Boughard which had been joudy'd by a Dowager of Seatland's wherein the fet forth Secondard higher Council; That the new Ordinances he how the had imprison'd George Paris an Irish Man, because she understood that upon Grant of his Pardon he had a meaning to come into England, and how the had fent Oconner's Son into Ireland to give encouragement to the Irish Lords. Also he shew'd Instructions given about four years before upon the Fall of the Admiral of France, to a Gentleman then coming from England, that if any were in England of the Admiral's Faction, he should do The Deputy of I cland was at that time Order to ready to transport into England: But upon this Advertisement Sir Henry Knowles was sent patr fireready to transport into England: But upon the L. Dein post to stay him there, yet with caution that he should pretend to stay upon his own Occasions, and thereupon defer'd his Deparyet with caution upon. ture from week to week, lest the true reason should be discern'd. Letters of Thanks were Letters of also sent to the Regent for this gentle Over-Thank to ture. And the Messenger was directed to the Queen ture. And the Mellenger was directed to Regent, use pleasing Words in the Delivery of the Let-Nov. 30. ter, and to wish a further Amity between the two States: And further to acquaint her with the French King's Practice in waging 5000 Scotish Footmen, and 500 Horsemen, and how he took up 100000 l. by Exchange at Lubeck; whereby the Conjecture was evident that he had fome meaning against the Empe-Embaffador of all those troceedings, to the ror in the Spring then next following. Doubt-intent that he might acquaint his Master with less the Advertisments of neighbour Princes are always much to be regarded; for that they receive Intelligence from better Authors and furer Grounds than Persons of inferior note and fort.

About this time one of the Earl of Tyrone's E. of Ty-Men was committed to the Tower, for mak-rone's Men ing an untrue Complaint againft the Deputy committed and Council of Ireland, and for bruiting a Tower, broad how the Duke of Northumberland and the Earl of Pembroke were fallen into quarrel, and one of them againft the other in rel, and one of them against the other in the field.

In April, in the fixth Year of the Reign of The King the King, he fell fick of the Meafles, whereof has the untrue: But the difference is great between in fhort time he well recover'd; afterwards Meafles both the Perfons, and the Facts of a Sovereign he fickned of the Small-pox, which breaking and Small-pox which breaking pox. kindly from him, was thought would prove a means to cleanse his Body from such un-Sickness or Death; and hereof he also so per-fectly recover'd, that in the Summer next following he rode his Progress with greater Mag- Goes his nificence than ever before. For whether it Progress. were to maintain his Majesty, or to manifest the Fear which had been formerly impress'd, he carry'd with him a Band of 320 Men, in the tender Touch of his Estate might which made up his whole Train above the haply have excus'd his Error, as for his number of 4000 Horfe. But because this Princely manner in acquainting him therewhich which he pass'd, which did afford little Mea-working Poilon. Upon this cause it happen'd, 1553 dow or Pasture, because also it seem'd to be wray Distrust, as if the King should think of March, was upon the last of the fame many. wray Diffruft, as if the King fhould think that he rather march'd among dangerous Rebels, than took his Pleafure among faithful and quiet dispos'd Subjects, about the midst of his Progress the greatest part was discharged. For furnishing the Charge of this Progress soo pound weight of Gold was coin'd, with 1500 /. sterling.

Soural Dolphins

Aug. 8.

Soon after the King did complain of a continual Infirmity of Body; yet rather as an Indifposition in Health, than any fet Sickness. And about that time certain Prodigies were Child horn feen, either as Messengers or Signs of some Aug. 3. imminent and eminent Evil. At Middleton, eleven miles from Oxford, a Woman brought forth a Female Child, which had two Bodies from the Navel upward; fo united at the Navel; as when they were laid in length, the one firetch'd directly opposite to the other; from the Navel downward it was but one; Holli the Kavet downward it was one, and the loth it lived weakly eighteen days, and then both bit Perfaits abroad by domeflical Diforders and Bodies died rogether. Upon Eirth of fach Divisions, both among the People and Pobli-Monflers, the Greeians, and after them the lity of his Realm, by reason whereof he scarce Romans, did use divers forts of Expiations, the control of the wind well fertiled in his Chair of Estate, and albeit below which reliable the second of the winds. and to go about their principal Citys with many folema Ceremonies and Sacrifices; fuppoing hereby that Wrath from Leaven was menaed against them. At Quinharangh three great Dolphias were taken, and a few daythe River, to London, the least in bigness exceeding any Horfe. After this three great Files were taken at Graveford, called Whishpolt, and drawn upon the King's Bridg at W. fluinfter. Thefe Accidents the more rarely they happen, the more ominous are they commonly efreem'd; either because they are so indeed, or because they are never observ'd but when sad

In Fanuary, about the beginning of the 7th Year of the King's Reign, his Sickness did more apof the King's Reigh, insoftances are more precisely parently finewit felt, effectfully by the Symptom of a rough frong ftraining Cough. All the Medicines and Diet which could be preferibly. together with the helps both of his young Age, and of the rifing time of the Year, were to far either from curing or abating his Grief, that it daily increas'd by dangerous degrees; and it was not only a Violence of the Cough that did infect him, but therewith a Weakness and Faintness of Spirit, which shew'd plainly that his vital Parts were most strongly and strangely as- ' faulted. And the talk hereof among the Pcople was fo much the more, because thro an Opinion obscurely rais'd, but running as most 'c ticular As absurd, that his Sickness grew by a flow-'my Duty.

Month diffolv'd. (n)

And now the Danger of the King's Sich. The dunger nefs was much lamented, not only by his own Jon Sak. People, but by Strangers abroad; because Li ham Li-Courtefy and Wifdom had begot to him fact mental, Love, that he was no lefs honour'd by those who heard of him, than of those who convers'd with him. For he was famous in all places by reason of his Forelight and Judgment praces by teaton or instructing and judy-mean in Affairs, and did fo well temper the Great nefs of his Effare both with Modelly and with Gravity, that he avoided Envy by the one, and Contempt by the other. Some compar'd him with the createst Persons that had been, both for War and Peace, because in the like pitch of Years none of them att un'd to the like Perfections. Fiaply he did not appeur in Soldiery to great, but that was beautic be was not for raft; being also drawn back from his Perfacts abroad by domefficial Difforders and yet his Fortunes were always victorious.

th happen'd during his Sichness, that Dr. The king Ridley Eithep of Leader preach'd before him, excited to ad in his Sermon much commended Works (Sound) and in his Se f Charity, which as they were a Duty for a Semon of all Mea to perform, so most especially for Mea in most especial Lignity and Place, as well in regard of their lurge Abilities, as for that they were much obligd to give Examples of Goodness to others. The fame day after dinner the King fent for him privately into the Gallery at Whitchall, caus'd him to fit in a Chair by him, would not permit him to remain uncover'd; and then after conrecous thanks, be reported all the principal Foints of his Sermon, and further added: 'I too! His Difony felf to be especially touched by your consensition Speech, as well in regard of the Abilities the Biffers. which God hath given me, as in regard of the Example which from me he will require; for as in the Kingdom I am next under God, fo must I most nearly approach to him in Goodness and in Mercy. For as our Miferies stand most in need from him, so are we the greatest Debtors: Debtors to all that are miserable, and shall be the greatest Accomptants of our Dispensation therein. And therefore, my Lord, as you have given me (I thank you) this general Exhortation, fo direct me, I intreat you, by what par' ticular Actions I may this way best discharge

⁽n) The King being now in a fickly Condution, the Lords were called together as Whitehall, and fix there, in the Srow's grear Chamber on the King's (de, and he under a Cloth of Ellare with them: where Bp Godh'h' Lord Chancellor Annals, made a Speech, lhewing the Reafonsof the calling of the Parhament. Eut first the Parliament was opened by a Forman preached at Whitehall by Ridley L. Bishop of London. After which the King with divers Lords received the Communican. And this being ended, the King and Lords repaired to the fail great Chamber. The chief Emines of this Parliament was to give the King Mony to pay his Debts, and maintein his State. Which was greated both by the Laiey and the Clergy out of their respective Revenues. In this Parliament was an AR made for the Diffoliation of the Bithoptic of Journary, upon the confidenciation that the Elithoptic was to large and extentive into dwarfed both by the Lindy and the Clergy of the Month of the Clerks of t with 1000 Mark a year: And Power was granted, that the King might erect the fame by his Letters Patents. on concepting with 1000 Mark a year: And Vower was granted, that the King might erect the fame by his Letters Patents. But there were no Bithops preferred to either of these two new-erected Bithopries, while this King lived. Only Riller Ep of London, born in the Dioces, was nominated for Darkon, but never removed from London, till he was depoted from it under Q. Mary. And all that was done after this Act, was that the Temporalities of the Billiopric, a County Hyll, Ref. Palatine, was given to the Duke of Northwisheland. But under Q. Mary this Act was repealed, and the Billiopric new Palatine, was given to the Duke of Northwisheland. But under Q. Mary this Act was repealed, and the Billiopric new Palatine, was creeked, and the old Bishop Tunshal (who had been deposed) restored. J. S.

The LIFE and REIGN of EDWARD the Sixth. [324]

The Bijhop London.

The Bishop partly astonish'd, and partly overjoy'd with these Speeches, was struck mends the and Words breaking forth together, he declar'd to the King, that as he little expected fuch a Coeffion, fo was he not furnish'd with a present Answer, for this matter had a great Mixture of a Civil Government, wherein he conceiv'd that the Citizens of London had best Experience, as overburden'd with multitudes of Poor, not only of their own, but from all parts of the Realm besides. And therefore as they best know both the Quality of such People, he outwardly make. Whether any tokens of and the Inconveniences which they occasion, fo could they best advise what Remedies were fittest: Wherefore, if the King were pleas'd to afford his Letters to that effect, he would confer with them, and in very floor time re-turn with answer. The King forthwith cans'd his Letters to be written, and would not fuffer the Bifhop to depart until he had firm'd them with his Hand and Signet, and enjoin'd the Bishop to be the Meslenger, imposing great charge for Expedition. The listhop hasted with his Letters to the Lord Mayor, who presently allembled certain Alton for the present, the cause's Speeches to be spread abroad, that the King was well dermen, and four and twenty Commissioners, recover'd in Health, which was readily be-by whose Advice the Poor were cast into three liev'd, as most de in'd to be true. Companies and Sorts; fome were Poor by Spenders, Vagabonds, Loiterers, leud Strumpets and their Companions: that the first of thefe were to be educated and maintain'd, the fecond to be cur'd and reliev'd, and the third to be chaftis'd and reduc'd to good order. When this was prefented to the King, he gave to the City for Education and Mainte-nance of the first fort of Poor, the Gr.syars Church, Friers Church (o) near Newgate-Market, with S. Burtho- all the Revenues thereto belonging; for Cure of the third, he appointed his House at Bridewell, the antient Mantion of many English

after the recommendation of the fector of the feed of the feed for Correction

from Court; this was the reason that such well, the antient Mantion of many English affuredly dispose deither to commit or permit Kings, and which not long before had been repair'd and beautify'd by Henry the Eighth, for the Entertainment of the Great Emperor Charles the Fifth. For Increase of Maintenance of their Places, together with the new re-edify'd Hospital of St. Thomas in Southwark, And 750 the King gave feven hundred and fifty Marks Minks out yearly out of the Rents of the Hofpital of of the Res St. John Baptift, or the Savoy, with all the Bed-

the Savoy, ding and Furniture at that time belonging to that place. And when the Charter of this that place. And when the Charter of this of Life, Men are often able to do. Whilf the King remain'd thus grieroully Lad Jane Space for Lands to be afterwards receiv'd in Mortmain, to a yearly Value without further licence, the King prefently with his own Fland fill'd up the void Space with these words, few thoughout Marks by year. This done, with reverend Gefture and Speech he should for prolonging his Life to finish of Pembroke's eldelt Son marry'd the Lady Gourt.

that Business: And so he was the first Foun-ler of those three pious Works, which by many Additions are now grown to be the molt absolute and famous of that kind in Eurane.

The King's Sickness daily increas'd, and so The King

did the Duke of Northumberland's Diligence 1-2008 bout him; for he was little abfent from the was king, and had always fome well affurd to berlandve cfpy how the ftate of his Health chang'd y to go at every hour; and the more joyful he was at this time. the heart, the more forrowful appearance did Poison did appear, Reports are various; certainly his Physicians discern'd an invincible Malignity in his Difeafe: and the Sufpicion did the more increase, for that the Complaint being chiefly from the Lights, a Part, as of no quick Senfe, fo no Seat for any fharp Difeafe, yet his Sickness toward the end grew highly extreme. But the Duke regarded not much the muttering Multitude, knowing right

Hereupon all Persons express'd Joy in their Reports of Companies and sorts; interest were roof by Importance and Speech, which they inlarged the kind Children, old decrepit Persons, Ideots, Criby telling the News to others whom they in-Recover, ples, and such like; others are poor by Facountred, who haply had heard it often be but fulge. Culty, as wounded Soldiers, diseased and sick fore; and as the Report increased, so there-Persons, and the like; the third fort are the with increased also the Joy. Thus whilst every Man believed, and no Man knew, it was made more credible by Religious Persons, who openly in Churches gave publick Thanks for the King's Recovery.

But when the Speech of his Danger was a- The Peoples gain reviv'd, and as in News it happeneth, Manuscattle more stop'd, the more increas'd to the upon his worse, then as if the second time he had been Siekness. loft, the People did immoderately break forth into Passions, complaining, that for this cause his two Uncles had been taken away, for this cause the most faithful of his Nobility any Mischief; that then it did appear, that it was not vainly conjectur'd fome years before by Men of Judgment and Forefight, that after Someyfer's Death the King should not long enjoy his Life. To qualify these and some broader Speeches, it was thought convenient that the King fometimes should shew himself abroad, albeit little either with his Pleafure or for his Health, yet a thing which in long confuming Sicknesses, even to the last Period of Life, Men are often able to do.

The King gives the City the Gray Fri-

Fid. Stow's (a) Yet it must be remembred, that K. Hony VIII. also gave by Parent, Ann. 1546. the Gray Filars Church to the Switch of City for the Relief of the Poor. And in the beginning of January that year the Bishop of Recheffer declared the Iame branches of the Parity and the Armedian openly at St. Paul's. As also the Hospital of St. Bartholomen's was likewise at the same time granted to the City by the first the Iame Sing. Which Gifts were to the value of 500 Mark. In memory whereof the Statue of Henry VIII. is fet up on that part of St. Bartholomen's Hospital over the Gate that fronterth Smithfield. J. S.

Katherine.

The first and Lady Frances, who then was tent with divers Realons, whereof John were 1/10 of Law, and fome of Policy in State. The theReams marry'd Many the third Daughter of the Duke of Suffolk, by the faid Lady Frances: Crown of the Feeling 15, and Art of the five Ladly, the Lord Haffings, Son to the Earl of Hamington, took to Wife Katherine younged and thirtieth of King In 3 the Eighth, was in default of like of his Body, and of the Body of Falmand his Son Lawfully beauties, University to the Duke of Northanderland. The People Hereupon the common People, upon a dispo-especial fition to interpret all Northumberland's Actions their Hereupon the worst last position that the their Hat-tredagainst to the worst, left nothing unspoken which the Dake of might serve to stir their Hatred against the Northum Duke, or Pity towards the King: But the berland Duke was nothing mov'd hereat; for being equally obitinate both in Purpose and Defire, and mounting his Hopes above the pitch of

Who procures the

the Lady

Reason, he resolv'd then to dissemble no For albeit the Lady Jane, marry'd to his fourth Son, had not right to the Succession. King to jet-tle the of the Crown, for that the was excluded, first, by the two Ladies Many and Elizabeth, Crown up in Daughters of King Henry the Eighth, next by the lilie of Lady Margaret marry'd into Scotland, clotel Sifter to K. Henry the Eighth, the Eighth and thirritch Year of King Henry the Eighth, the Eighth and thirritch Year of King Henry the Eighth, which Act remain'd then in force, who then was living: yet Nathumberland, fotwere thereby diffibled to claim the Crowa, the King by his Letters Patents under the Great Seal of England, to appoint the Lady fane to facceed him in the Inheritance of the limited to remain to the Lady Mary his cldekt Daughter, and to the Heirs of her Body liwfully begotten; and in default of fach filic, fully begotten; and in decimit of near mas, the Remainder thereof to the Lady III shadh his fecond Daughter, and to the Heirs of her Body lawfully begotten, under fuch Conditions as flouid be limit. By the half King under his Letters Patents under the Great scal, or by the Lad William of the Great scal, or by the Lad William of the Great scal, or by his laft Will in writing, figured with his Hand: yet because the faid Limitations were raint: yet becaute the first Lumitation, were made to Perions illegitimate, both the Marriages between King Henry the Eighth and their feveral Mothers being undone by Sentences of Divorce, and the feveral Divorcements ratify'd by Authority of Parliament in the girls and thinks Ways. both the Lady Mary and the Lady El zabath were thereby difabled to claim the Crown, or any Honours or Hereditaments, as Heirs to King Edmard the Sixth or any other Perfon.

Extherine, the Duke of Suffolk's fecond Daugh-Secretary Cecil. (p) There furnished the Pt- 1553.

And again, the faid two Ladies, Mary and Elizabeth, being but of the half-blood to King

(p) Herein our Author großt wrongeth the Memzries of these two Gendemen, Mountage and Coil 3, out of what Design I know nor, nor as listed do I know whence he had it. For neither Structure was such as mention it.

For first, as for Coil, he was so far from affilting in this matter, either by Advice, or deviting East ms for the Patent, AV indication in the composition of the Coil of the C

This for Cecil. Then for Sir Edward Mountages, I. Chief Juffice, how he flood affected, and what he did in this AralMountaging, I. Chief Juffice, how he flood affected, and what he did in this AralMountaging, I. Chief Juffice, he was defended and the flood of the Charob Arabita, may be feen by an original Paper, drawn up by that Judees Jown hand, which has Great Grandchild Edward 4.30. Lord Abuntage of Bonghton communicated unto Dr. Dr. Fullor. The Sum of which they bould frame a Book for the Charob Ludges told the high, that the Eliof Articles thewed to them, according to which they bould frame a Book for the Charob Ludges and the fill of Articles and the property of the Common of the Crown in the Lady June, was directly ayanut the Act of Succeifum. Which was an Act of Parilla VIII. p. 1. mack according to those Articles, Mountage took them. And the next day he and the reft concluded to do nothing the made according to those Articles, Mountage took them. And the next day he and the reft concluded to do nothing to the Device was prefently Treafon. And fo they did report to the Council. And that upon it the Duke of Nathonderland was in a pract furry, and called Sir Edward Traitor. And fo he deerared hone without doing any thing two the Articles and Lawyers being come, they were brought to the King at the deerared hone without doing any thing two. Alterwards Mountagerecived another Letter from the Council to come to the Court. He and tome others of the Judges and Lawyers being come, they were brought to the King and the Articles and Lawyers being come, they were brought to the King and the Articles and the State of the Articles and Lawyers being come, they were brought to the King that, it was an apartment. And advised the King that all might be referred to a Publiment. The king faid, they floudd deerage. And that the Statute of Succeifur could not be taken away, but by the Gime Authority that made it: and char was a Parlament. And advised the King that all might be referred to a Publiment. The king faid, they fl This for Cecil. Then for Sir Edward Mountague, L. Chief Juffice, how he flood affected, and what he did in this AndMounlicy.

to receive any Inheritance from him. And in Po-fome Stranger, who would reduce this noble and free Realm into the Servitude of the Bishop of Rome, and thereby bring in foreign Customs and Laws, abolishing those where-upon the Rights of all native Subjects depend. And haply the whole Body of the Realm fhould hereby be annex'd as a Member to fome other greater Kingdom, to the utter Subverfion of the antient Dignity and Estate thereof. The People were not unlike to elect a King of fome private Stock, a popular and feditions Man, peradventure one who to countenance his own Unworthiness and Obfcurity, would little regard what Contumely he cast upon the falling Family of the Kings before him. Wherefore he held it the most provident Advice, that the King by his Authority flould delign not only his next Succeflor, but others also in Reversion, that the Crown might not be subject to risling, but remain to those whom he lov'd, and who humour'd him beft. These Reasons did more easily fink into the

King's Judgment, partly by means of the great Affection which he bare to the Religion that he had establish'd, of the Change whereof he was affuredly perfuaded, in cafe the Lady Mary his Sifter should succeed; and partly by reason of the entire Love he bare to the his Coulin the Lady Jane, a Woman of most character, rare and incomparable Perfections: for befides her excellent Beauty adorn'd with all variety of Virtues, as a clear Sky with Stars, as a princely Diadem with Jewels, the was most dear to the King in regard both of her Religion and of her Education in the Knowledg of the liberal Sciences, and Skill in Languages; for in Theology, in Philosophy, in all liberal Arts, in the Latin and Greek Tongues, and in the vulgar Languages of divers near Nations, the far exceeded all of her Sex, and any of her Years, unless haply the

The Import Hereupon the King confented that Letters of the K's Patents should be drawn, importing that in Letters Pa-Letters we cate the rang.

Letters we cate the r case the King should die without Islue of his

and all the Premifes should remain and come to the Lady Jane, eldest Daughter to the faid Lady Frances, and the Heirs Male of her lawfully begotten; and for default of fuch Issue, the said Crown to remain to the Lady Katherine, fecond Daughter to the faid Lady Frances, with divers other Remainders, over which as they were vainly appointed, fo are they needless to be repeated.

These Letters were dated the one and These Lettwentieth of June, in the seventh Year of tes dated King Edward's Reign, and by him sign'd when June 21. he was in great debility of Body, and afterwards passed under the Great Seal of England. And albeit the coarfe Contrivance was almost visible; first, for that such provision was made for the Issue Male of the said Lady Frances, who neither at that time had any, and was commonly reputed to be past Years of Childbearing; fecondly, for that in case that beyoud the ordinary Course of Nature she should conceive, the hope was desperate, that the King should live until the Birth; lastly, for that her Children born, and to be born, were fo carefully and orderly remember'd, and no mention made of her felf, from whom their Title must be deriv'd : Yet these Letters were Subscribed fubscrib'd by all the Privy Counsellors, the by all the greatest part both of number and power of PrivyCounthe Nobility of the Realm, the Bishops, the il, &c. King's learned Counsel, and all the Judges at the Common Law, except only Sir James Hales, (q) one of the Justices of the Common ries, a man well observed to be both refu-gious and upright, who worthily required by Queen Mayafterwards. (r)

It is very like that fome of these were guided with respect of their particular In-terest, for that they were possess divises Lands which once pertain'd to Monasteries, Chantries, and other Religious Houses not long before diffolv'd. Of these they held themselves in some danger to lose, in case Religion should change to the antient Form, which by Succession of Q. Mary they did evidently forefee.

Pleas, a Man well observ'd to be both reli-

Others were drawn partly by Fear, and partly by Obligation to the Duke of Northumto the Crown of France, and all things to partly by Congation to the Duke of Northme-them belonging, flould remain and come to the eldeft Son of the Lady Frances, Daughter to the Lady Mary, youngeft Sifter to Hamy the Eighth, in case such like should be born into the World during the Life of King Edward, and after to the Heirs Male of the faild by his Will, or otherwise, of a Kingdom that King may live the such as the content of the Son and the such as the content of the Son and the such as th

(q) It was very long and with great ado, before two others would be brought to fubfiribe, who ought therefore to be mentioned; viz. Crammer the Archbillop, and Secretary Ceil: The former over-perfusaled by the earnest Sollicitation of the King, and the latter forced by Threating and Terror. 7.5.

be mentioned, viz. Crammer the Archibilinop, and Secretary Cent: The connect over-perhasical by the earnest Sometra-tion of the King, and the later forced by Threatning and Terror. J. 5.

(i) The matter of this unworthy Requiral of Judg Males was this. Soon after the Queen's Access to the Throne, as a Quarter Session (not at a Circuit, as the Bp of Saum missakes in his Hislary of the Reformation) he declared, as the ought to do, that the Laws of King Edward were as yet in force and unrepealed: and therefore admontibled the Justices of the Peace that they flould fee them duly performed, and not transferlied, as memory confinement in the plant theoretical transfer the plant they are the fall gibble to the filing's Bench (not the Manthalles, as the fall Eiling Federates) and thence to the Flort. In the meant time partly dealt which to turn reactes to any energe totaled to the Counter, and thence to the Flort. In the mean time partly cleaft withalt to turn his Keligion, being a conficientious Procedum, and partly certified with Threatonings if he did not, he at length makes Compliance upon DeDe's Communication with him. But the next day, being exectedingly diffurbed in his Mind for what he had done, wounded himself with a Penknife. Upon his Submittion at latt he recovered his Liberty, but never recovered himself: and being at his Houfe in Kent, one day took an opportunity to go forth, and drowned himself. J. S.

Hales mus

King himfelf.

hat b

di(po

the Arrange of College and the College of the three the Phyticians call'd again who College of the three the Phyticians call'd again who College of the three thre ry of the Norman Kings, about the beginning of the three Nor. Reign of King William the Second: But cermanking, tail it is, that when Kingdoms have cufto-mably been carry'd by Right of Succession, according to Proximity of Blood, the Viola-tion of which courfe hath always been either very vain or with dangerous confequence, it hath always been like the breaking of a Band which in its proper Channel, or like a cafting down of a Pale wherewith Deer or other Beafts are inclos'd. It was never done, but either no Effect enfa'd, or bloody Diforders, or haply feits the whole reft.

The King's Dijeaje gions vio-

dertakes

.But having thus in his own opinion affur'd his own Devices, nothing remain'd but that the King should not longer survive, left haply his fickly Judgment might be over-rul'd by founder Advice. His Difease was violent, but his Phylicians conceiv'd fome hope of Recovery, in case he might be remov'd to change of healthful Air, which in Infirmities of the vital Parts, the Seat of his Sickness, is of greatest moment for the Cure.

A Gentle-

But hereto the Council would not confent: woman un- fo he continu'd without either any fensible whereupon she return'd in haste to her House mending or impairing for a time. At the last a Gentlewoman, unworthy to be named, the King's but accounted to be a School-miftreis for the purpose, offer'd her Service assuredly to cure him, in case he were committed wholly to her hand. Hereto the Phylicians would in no cafe afford their Advice, because as she could give no reason either of the Nature of the Difease or of the Part afflicted, fo she would not declare the Means whereby she intended to work the Cure.

After fome flow of Deliberation among the Council, it was refolv'd that the Physicians to her alone. The apparent Defect both of her Judgment and Experience, join'd to the Weightiness of the Adventure, caus'd many to marvel, and some deeply to suspect that she was but an Instrument of Mischief. This Surmife was ftrongly confirm'd within a very efpying him in that fearful Effect, departed game, from him with a fad filence, leaving him to the miferable Mercy of near-approaching Death. Some of their whitper'd among their private Friends, that they were call'd for laftion only, but neither their Advice nor Appliances were any deal regarded, but the King had been ill dealt with more than once; and holdeth a Sheaf of Arrows together, like a that when by the Benefit both of his Youth Rupture in Banks which budeth a River with- and of careful Means there was fair hope of his Recovery, he was again more ftroughy overlaid.

Yet as Cruelty and Wrong never frand fe-Northumcure, fo the Duke thought one thing more ex-berland both: and the Duke, by piercing his ambitious pedicet for affairing his Defigus, and that was being the Purpofes with his unjust Policy, did no other-to draw the Lady Mary wholly into his power. Lady wife than often doth a foolifh greedy Gamefter, to this purpofe Letters were directed to her to Court, who by flealing a Card to win a Stake, fortified the King's Name from the Council, will be the foolith greedy Gamefter, the King's Name from the Council, will be the foolith greedy for the King's Name from the Council, will be the foolith greedy for the King's Name from the Council, will be the foolith greedy for the King's Name from the Council, will be the foolith greedy for the King's Name from the Council, will be the foolith greedy for the King's Name from the Council will be the foolith greedy for the King's Name from the Council will be the foolith greedy for the King's Name from the Council will be the foolith greedy for the King's Name from the Council will be the C ling her forthwith to refort to the King, as well to be a Comfort to him in his Sickness, as to fee all matters well order d about him-The Lady suspecting no lurking Mischief, address'd her self with all speed to the Journy, expressing great joy that either her Company or her Service should be esteem'd needful to the King; but as the was upon the way, and within half a day's journy of London, her rent ready to flip into the Snare, fhe receiv'd Advice both of the King's desperate Estate, and of the Duke's Designments against her: at Hunfdon, where in a short time she heard how unprofitable her journey would have been to London.

So the King having long wrestled with a The King lingring and tormenting Sickness, at the last dies. his Spirits yielded to the Malice of his Difcafe; which as with great patience he did endure, fo with no less picty did he end it. Many fervent Prayers he made, both for himfelf and for the People of his Realms, and some when he was esteem'd almost past Sense; and fo frent his last Breath, in committing his fweet Soul into the Almighty's hands which had created it.

He died at Greenwich upon Thursday the fixth day of July, in the Year 1553, and in the feventeenth Year of his Age, when he had reign'd fix Years, five Months and nine Days. Two days (t) his Death was conceal'd, to open a fleait way for the Duke's crooked Purpofes. thort time enfuing, when the King did fall His Body was bury'd upon the ninth of August into desperate Extremities; his vital Parts in the same Year, in the Chappel of St. Peter's were mortally stuff'd, which brought him to Church in Westerninster, and laid near to the a difficulty of Speech and of Breath; his Legs Body of King Henry the Seventh, his Grand-fwell'd, his Pulle fail'd, his Skin chang'd co-father. (1)

(f) Two days after the King's Death, the Lords of the Privy Council being at Greenwich, fent for the Lord Mayor of The King's London, Sir George Barner, thither; and to bring with him is or eight of his Drethren the Aldermen, and taslve Death full Merchanis. Who being come in the Afternoon, they acquainted them fecretly that the King died two days before, made

Parchines. Who being come in the Afternoon, they acquainted them ferretly that the Ring died row day before, and whom he had appointed by his Letters Parent to fucceed in the Government of the Kingdom. The Lime day the Lords feet the full Rows abroad to Sir Phili Philis Ambaliador with the Emperor, to whom he might take his opportunity to relate it: Affigning the Caufe of his Death to be a Putrilation of his Lungs, utterly uncurable of this Limit I, but that the Manner of his Death was fuch towards God, as afford them that his Soal was in place of certral Ref.

⁽¹⁾ The Lady Many was at Hundon in Hertfordfline in the time of her Erother's Sickness: But speeded away Intel before his Death at a latther diffuse to kerninghi rear Nofole. Where the feems to be at the Death of the King 3, and whence three days etc., vir. Job the etc., the cross to the Council, wondering that in 6 long time they had not acquainted her with the Kings Departure, fince the was by Jil Law and Right to faceced.

of eternal Reft.

(a) Bis Funerals began to be celebrated the 8th of Angull. A Majefly was fet up for him in the Chappel at Whitehall, The King's and another at Wellminfer Alby. His Corps was drawn in a Chariot covered with Cloth of Gold. Whereon lay his Fanerals. Efficies

Efficies

[328] The Life and Reign of EDWARD the Sixth.

1553. Effigies with a Crown of Gold and a great Collar, his Scepter in his Hand, covered with his Robes, a Garter about his Leg, and his Coat with Embroidery of Gold. The Marquifs of Winkefler was chief Mourner, and near him went the Leg, and his Coat with Embroidery of Gold. The Marquifs of Winkefler was chief Mourner, and near him went the Leg, and his Coat with Embroiders, that is, fix Earls and fix Earns, going two and two, Archhifthop Crammer performed the Office of Burial according to the Redomed way: and Day, Bifthop of Chichefler, preached the Funeral Sermon. He was interred at the Head of his Grandstuffer K. Homy VIII. and reflecth under an Altar Monument of Erafs gill, curioully wrought, but without any Inferipcion, tho he well deferred it. J. S.

This History of King EDWARD the Sixth I have built for the Monument of his Unperishable Fame.

ANNALS

ANNALS

OF THE

Translated from the Latin of FRANCIS GODWIN. Lord Bishop of HEREFORD, by 7. H.

With ADDITIONAL NOTES by 7. S.

Anno Dom. 1553. Reg. I.

the Duke of Northumberland's fecret Practices, She judg'd it unsafe to remain near London where Her Enemies were in full Power; and therefore, pretending a fear of the Plague, by reason of the sudden Death of one of Her Domeflicks, She withdrew from St. Edmond s-Bury, (Her Abode at that time) and in one Day came to Framlingbam-Caftle, in the Lady Mary County of Suffolk, about Fourfcore Miles flies into from London, and not far from the Sea; by flies into which, if the Extremity of Her Affairs requir'd it, She might have an easie Passage to France.

As foon as She arriv'd, She took the Title of Queen; and fending Letters to Her Friends, and to the Nobility, requir'd 'em with all Expedition to attend Her. Northumberland in the mean time, having for two whole Days held a Confultation with his Friends, about the Measures to be taken in this important Juneture, fent to the Lord-Mayor before the King's Death was publish'd, and requir'd his Attendance at Greenwich, with Six Aldermen, and Twelve other principal Citizens. When they came, he inform'd'em of His Majesty's Decease, and of Lady Fane's Accession to the Throne, shewing 'em the King's Will, and the PatentSign'd for that purpose 14 Days before; then, by Promises or Threatings, he oblig'd 'em to take the Oaths to Her, and enjoyn d'em under a great Penalty, not to divulge what they had heard: For he had Cunning enough, to know what an Advantage twou'd be, if he ceiv'd the News of Her Brother's Death, having long before been acquainted with lorthumberland's fecret Practices, unsafe to remain near London, unsafe to remain near London, the street of the lorthumberland is full Pure and the street of the lorthumberland is full Pure and the street of the lorthumberland is full Pure and the street of the lorthumberland is full Pure and the lorthumberl into Suffolk, most of the Nobility, with all the Solemnities of Royal Pomp, conducted Lady fane to the Tower of London, acknow

Lady fane for their Queen, and caus'd her to Jaim Pros be Proclaim'd.

Queen,

This Princess was about Sixteen, not Unhandsome, Learned beyond Imagination, of a most acute Wir, and for Prudence, even at that Age, superior to her Sex; Extremely Pious, devoted to the Resormed Faith, and fo far from aspiring to the Honour conferr'd on her, that she took the Regalia with Tears; so that it plainly appear'd fhe was compell'd to aftend the Throne by the Importunities of her Parents and Friends, directly contrary to her own Inclination. When the pass'd thro' the City to the Tower, she was not faluted with any Acclamations, tho' vast Crouds slock'd about her, drawn rather, it feems, to gratifie their Curiofity, than to express their Joy: And this was the first Omen which encourag'd Queen Mary's Friends to the Resolution of making some Attempt in Her behalf, when a proper Occasion should offer; for, tho' they were aw'd from any immediate Motion by the Presence of Northumberland, a Min of the sharpest Discernment, and deepest Politicks, they hop'd, if they cou'd by any means horeafter, get him to a diffence, they might be able to effect fomething confiderable.

The fame Day that Lady Jone went to the Tomer, Queen May's Letters arriv'd, and were Vol. II.

Un read

1553, read in Council; in which She commanded em to come and pay their Duty and Allegiance to Her, as rightful Heir to the Crown, and fo acknowledged by the Major Part of the Kingdom. At the fame time, News was brought that the People of Norfolk and Suffolk had taken the Oaths to Her; and indeed it plainly appear'd to the wifest Observers, that the Commonalty were almost every where alienated from Lady Jane : For this Reason, they refolv'd upon railing Forces with all poffible speed, that they might surprize Many, and bring her to London by sorce. The Duke of Susfield was designed General; but those who privately favour'd Mary, influenc'd the new Queen to keep Her Father near Her, and to fend Northumberland on this Expedition; who, they faid, might do more by the Terror of his Name, (for he had lately reduc'd the Norfolk Rebels) than the other by his Arms or Counfel, or any other way; and betides, who was a more proper Guardian to the Daughter, than her own Father? As for the City, Her Council were at hand to govern it with their usual Wisdom and Fidelity.

Mov'd with these Reasons, She prevail'd with Northumberland, after some difficulty, to The D. of undertake this Charge. He was in a World of Apprehension, least any Disorder shou'd happen in his Absence; but since he had no way to get himself excusd, he prepar'd for the Expedition; and on the 13th. of July, with an Army of 6000 Men, march'd out of London. As he was passing thro' the City, 'tis faid, he turn'd to the Lord Gray of Wilton, who was with him, and defir'd him to observe the Crouds that prefs'd to fee their March; Tet, fays he, in all this Multitude, my Lord, you do not bear one wish us Prosperity. (a)

The Citizens were extremely Zealous in the Cause of Religion, as were likewise most of the People in Suffolk, and a great many in Norfolk, and they all knew how entirely Mary was the Creature of Popery. But 'tis the Man-

Pretences or Colours, not even of Religion it felt, can draw 'em from their Loyalty: Of which Truth, the unhappy Fall of Lady Jane, which we shall presently relate, was a memo-rable Example. For the the Foundation of her Government was laid with all poffible Strength, and the Superstructure carry'd on with the utmost Arr; yet, as soon as the true and undoubted Successfor appear'd, and made her Claim, the whole Fabrick fell at once, and was diffipated in a Moment, and that chiefly by the Means of those very Persons, who for the fake of Religion were expected to continue most firm to Lady Jane.

The Preachers whom Northumberland had appointed in great Numbers at London, to oppose Queen Mary's Title, prevail'd but little in the City it felf: Nor was the Learned and Pious Ridley, who had been made Bishop of London after Boner's Deprivation, at all regarded upon this Subject. Indeed 'tis much to be wish'd that so excellent a Man had avoided the false Step he now made; For, as to Lady Mary, if there had been nothing in what the Lawyers affirm, That the Offspring of a Marriage folemnly contracted, tho' it shou'd afterwards be diffolv'd, shall be held Legitimate, yet why it was judg'd necessary to Exclude her Sifter Elizabeth too, I can never futficiently admire, nor do I think any probable Reason is to be assigned by those who were diffatisfy'd with Mary's Birth. To fay nothing of Mary Queen of Scotland, to whom, after King Henry the Eighth's Offspring, the Right of Succession undoubtedly belong d. But whatever were the Reasons alledg'd by the Preachers, 'tis certain they had no Influence upon the Common People, who continually flock'd in great Multitudes to Queen Mary; and not the common fort only, but a confiderable Number of the best Interest and Quali-Among these are reckond particularly the Earls of Bath, and of Suffex; Wharton and Mordant, both Barons eldest Sons; Sir William ner of the English, to have fuch a constant Veneration for the lawful Sovereign, that no Sir Henry Jernigam, Suliced, Freston, and o-

Transacti-Jane at Home.

berland marches

againft

Q. Mary, July 13.

(a) This was done at Home by Queen JANE and Her Council. Some Days before, the Lord Clauson Lord Admiral, was made Conflable of the Tower; who prefently planted the Tower outwith Great Guns, made ready for Service: And the Lords Lieutenants of the Counties had their Committions confirmed to then by this Temporary Queen, whole Letters, I fuppole, ran in the fame Tenor with that to the Marquet of Northimpton, More and Lieutenant of Surry, Northimpton, Edford and Berks, which bore Date July the test of Northimpton, the William of the Kingdom, filling it Her Rightful Polion, as was existent by the Will of Her late Count, K. Edward, and Geveral other Individuols to that Effect, Signed with His own Hand: Ordering him to defend Her right Title againfit the Lady MART, whom the Letter filled B.st. STARD to the Great Objek King H.R.N.R.Y VIII.

And Abroad

own Hand: Ordering him to defend Her right Title against the Lady MART, whom the Letter stilled B.s. STARD to Her Great Unlek King HENRY VIII.

Now as to what was done for lettling Marters Abroad with Foreign Princes. July the 8th, Letters were fent from the Council to Holy, Movison, and the Bishop of Normach, Ambailadors at the Emperor's Court at Bright, importing the Death of K. Edward; and that they should declare it to the Emperor, and to pray Him to temember the Antient Amity between the two Growns, and to continue it. July the 11th, Rithard 8th May was first Ambailador to the Emperor, to whom he carried a Letter from JANE Her Self: She also was a fent Ambailadors at that Court, setting forth Her Title to the best Advantage: As, that 8he was possed for the Crown by Her Coulin King Edward's Lawful Determination, and by the Alliest of Nobility and States of the Ream; calling Her Self the Lamful Heir and Successive in the whole Blood-Rayat. Six Philip Him; She Corr. Liand States of the Realm; calling Her Self the Lamful Heir and Succession in the whole Board-Rayat. Sit Philip Hop, She appointed to redide at the Emperor's Court, as Her Ambalfador there; and both him and the two other repair to the Emperor, and offer their Mediation, as they had before employed it by the Command of Her Predecessor. Readword, for the begetting of a good Peace between Him and the French King. July the 1650, the Ambalfadors had Admittance and Speech with the Emperor; who fiake to them many good. Words, and Commendations of His good Brother K. Edward, Deccased; and declared His ready Mund, to keep and observe the Amity and good. Correspondence that He had before with this Realm, and thanked the Council for their good Will towards Him. July the 1750, the Ambassidors by Letters, signified to the Council the Contents of the Emperor's Discourse with them; and yet to try Him further, advised their Lordships to offer a new League to Him, or to confirm the old, or to the some other Means. brar, Gal-ba B. 12.

or to use fome other uteans.

But $b.eth that lately came, understanding the Inclination of the People of England towards the Lady $Maty$, made fome delay, and delivered not his Letters at all: And the others as yet moved nothing concerning the new Queen to the Emperor. $b.eth makes half Home: T' Amballadors hearing of Queen $May$'s Success and Access to the Grown, and having no Letters sent to them, were in a Maze what to do; and upon $b.eth set Letters to the County.

fignified as much by their Letters to the Council

1553. thers; but the principal of all was Sir Edward Hastings, (b) the Earl of Huntingdon's Brother, who having a Commission from Northumberland to raise 4000 Foot, went over with 'em to Queen Mary; for which Service She after-wards created him Baron of Loughborough. Sir John Williams too was rais'd to the fame Rank of Quality, in reward for his faithful Performances at that time; and Serjeant Morgan having done his utmost among the rest, was foon after made one of the Lords Chief-

An Acci-dent favourable to Queen Mary.

Justices. But there was an Accident that prov'd of very great Advantage to Mary's Affairs; Northumberland had order d 6 Men of War to lie upon the Coast towards Holland, to intercept her if she shou'd Attempt her Escape; or to be ready against any extraordinary Occasion. It happen'd that they were driven by ftress of Weather into Yarmouth Harbour, at the same time that there was a Levy of Forces for Queen Mary; the Seamen and Soldiers being prevail'd upon, both by Threatnings and Promifes to Revolt, deliver'd their Ships to Sir Henry Jernegam, one of Mary's Commanders, which gave such a fortunate Turn to her Affairs, that she receiv'd the News with the greatest Joy imaginable; for being now furnish'd with Men, Ammunition, and a Train of Artillery, the refolv'd to march against her Rival, not in the least fearing Northumberland's Troops.

The Lords who were with Lady Jane, as foon as they heard of this, were in very great Dread what might be the Refult of it. And Mary's Friends at Court being grown bolder, began to open their Minds to each other; defiring nothing more than the Liberty of goingout of the Tower, that they might confer more freely. Northumberland had now written to the Council, to defire a Reinforcement. After he began his March, besides his Four Sons, and the Marquis of the Odium of all upon him only; then he Northampton, the Earl of Huntingdon, the Lord 1553. Gray, and several others of the first Rank, he had 8000 Foot and 2000 Horfe, when he arriv'd at Cambridge. But by that time he was come to St. Edmunds-Bury, he found great Numbers of his Men had deferted, and was vehemently afraid that most of the rest would Northwest follow 'em. For this Reason he mov'd back berland's Soldiers again to Cambridge, and ply'd the Council with defert. continual and earnest Applications for Recontinual and carrier Applications for Ne-cruits. Mary's Party taking hold of this Op-portunity, came to a Refolution, That the Necessary Forces should be rais'd as soon as possible. But they faid, None except themselves ought to be trufted with the Command of 'em, for fear of the fame Trick that was play'd 'em a little before by Sir Edward Haftings. Thus by Suffolk's leave they got out of the Tower, where they had been in effect Prifoners, and dispers'd themselves over the Ci-Those of 'em that appear'd most devotv. ted to Queen Mary's Interest, were the Marquis of Winchester, Lord Treasurer; Herbert Larl of Pembroke; the Earl of Arundel, (who with Paget not long before had been kept Prisoner a whole Year by Northimberland,) and Sir Thomas Cheyny, Warden of the Cinque-Ports. By the Care and Industry of these, all of the Council that cou'd be found (except Suffelk only) and feveral others of the Nobility who were known not to be ill-affected to Queen Mary, were affembled at the Earl of Pembroke's House, known by the ancient Name of Bainard Caftle, under Colour of treating fures for reducing Lady Jane.

In this Affembly the Earl of Arundel fell foul upon Northumberland with the utmost Severity. He ran over the Hiftory of the late Times, and reckoning up every Act of Milmanagement, Cruelty, and Injustice, committed in King Edward the VIth's Reign, threw other Matters, but in reality to concert Mea-

(b) And no question this Sir Edward Hashings was excited the more to put himself forward in aiding Queen Lady Ms-Mary in this Juncture, by the earnest and gracious Letter She had sent him; which was to this Tenor.

ry to Ha-flings.

MARY the green,

Mary the green of Heart, We have received would News and Advertifing you that to Our great Grief

And Heavines of Heart, We have received would News and Advertifinent, that the King Our Dearest MSS. G.

Brother, and late Sovereign Lord, is departed to God's Mercy, upon Timplay last at Night. By means whereof, payt, are the Right of the Crown of this Realm of England, with the Governance thereof, and the Title of Fosnes, is justly mig come unto Us by God's mere Providence; as appears by fuch Provisions as have been made by Ad Parliament, and the Testament and last Will of Our late dearest Fasher King HENRY VIII. for Our Preferrient in this Behalf. Whereby you are now discharged of your Duty of Allegiance to Our faid Brother the King, and unburthened and set at large to observe, execute, and obey any Commandment heretofore, or hereafter to be address turn you by Letter or otherwise, from or in the Nime, or by Colour of the Authority of the same King, Our late Brother; and only to Us and our Person and owe to be Our true Liegeman.

Wherefore, Right Trustly and Right Welbeloved, for the special Trust and Espe vigilant and fully bent to God's Glory, Our Honour, the Surrey of our Person, and the Universal Quietness of the whole Realm; especially of those Our Counties of Middlefar and Bucks, where your Habitation and Mansion is: And that yestir not in a forcible Array at the Commandment, Call or Bidding, by Letters or otherwise, of any Person or Person what for ever, except of Us your Sovereign Lady: And except also, if any wilful Person, as God foolid, will date and are tempt otherwise volently and by Force, that to you ball seen proposed and the server of Us your Sovereign Lady: And except also, if any wilful Person, as God foolid, will date and are tempt otherwise volently and by Force, that to you ball seen prejudical unto Us, Our Right and Title afore find. To rit

Vol. II.

The People of Buckinghamshire to the Number of Four thousand, being got into Arms for the Lady MARY, headed by this Gentleman, SirEdward Hashings, JANE wrot to several Gentlemen of the best Rank of the same County immediately to levy their Servants and Tenants to quell these Rabils as She shied them. Her Letter to Str John Bridger, and Sir Nu. Pyms., which She wort July the 18. is reposited in the Appendix to the Memorials of Archbishop Crammer. Wherein She ordered them to forbeat tasing the Servants and Tenants of the Earls of cramsda and Pendroks, as relying on them otherwise for Her Service, tho they were at that Instant plotting and contriving Her Overthrow.

expostulating Complaints, that the 1553. Children of K. Henry the VIIIth shou'd contrary to all Right be thruft from the Succession; and profess d himself amaz'd, to think how Northumberland had brought such Great and Noble Persons (meaning those present) to fo mean Servitude, as to be made the Tools of his wicked Defigns: For 'twas by their Consent and Affishance that the Crown was put upon the Daughter of Suffolk, the same Northumberland's Daughter-in-Law; the Sovereignty in effect remaining in him, of exer-citing the most uncontrollable Rage and Tyranny over their Lives and Fortunes. To accomplish this Usurpation indeed, the Cause of Religion was pretended; but tho they had forgot the Apostle's Advice, not to do evil rhat good may follow; and to obey even bad Princes, not out of Fear, but for Confcience fake; yet who, he ask'd, had feen Caufe to think, that in Matters of Religion Queen Mary intended any Alteration? For when She was lately Address'd about this in Suffolk, She had (which indeed was true) given a very fair Satisfactory Answer. And what a Madness is it, fays he, for Men to throw themfelves into certain Destruction, to avoid an uncertain Danger. I heartily wish there had been no such Transgression; but since there has, the best Remedy for a part Error, is a timely Repentance; wherefore its my Advice, that we all join our utmost Endeavours. that so by our Authority, Mary, the Rightful and Undoubted Heirels of these Kingdoms, may be Proclaim'd Queen.

TheLords refolve

refolve for Queen Pembrook generously profess d alou'd his Approbation of Arundel's Proposal; and clapping his hand to his Sword, added, That he was ready to dispute that Matter at the Peril of his Life with any who durft oppose it. Upon this, they all went into the same Resolution; and fending for the Lord Mayor, and Aldermen, proceeded in a full Body into Cheapfide, and there with Sound of Trumpet Proclaim'd Queen Mary: From thence they all went to St. Paul's, where Te Deum was fung; after which, they fent some to sieze upon the Tower, and oblige Suffolk to appear before the Council. Upon the first hearing of what had pass'd, the Duke, as much dejected now as he had before been exalted, went into his Daughter's Apartment, order'd all the Ceremonies of Royalty to cease, and admonish'd Her to bear with what Patience she cou'd, her Return to a Private State. She answer'd him with a Countenance not at all Discomposid, That this was a more welcome Summons to her, than that which fore'd her against her Will to such an Elevation. In Obedience to you, my Lord, faid the, and to my Mother, I acted a Violence on my the man way recover, I wise a violence on my felf, and have been guilty of a grievous Offence. But this present is my own Ast, and I millingly refign, to correct another's Funti, if o great a Fust can be corrected by my Resignation and succere Acknowledgment. Having said this, she retir'd to her Closet, more Solicitous for her Life, which he have the in dearent. fhe knew to be in danger, than concern'd for the Loss of her Crown.

After he had ended his Speech, the Earl of Suffolk went directly to the Council, and subscrib'd their Decree; On the 19th of July it was Proclaim'd with fuch Rejoycing of the People, that after the Name of Mary was read, not a word more could be heard for the general Acclamations. Arundel and Paget having feen this accomplish'd according to their 1553. Minds, took Horse the same Night, and with a Party of 30 Horse more, made all possible haft to the Queen, who was transported with the News of fo happy a Revolution. Council in the mean time dispatch'd Letters to Northumberland, to certify him of what had pass'd, and requir'd him to Subscribe the Decree, and disband his Army. But before he receiv'd 'em, fuspecting a Revolution, and cunningly hiding his Concern, he had Pro-Northum-claim'd Queen Mary at Cambridge, and throw-berland ing up his Hat in the Croud, pretended to proclaims express his Joy. Then the Army was Dif-Qu. Mary banbed, and all the Nobility going over to bridge. Queen Mary, obtain'd a Pardon, by throwing the whole Guilt on Northumberland.

The Unhappy Lady Jane, having thus as it were in a Play, acted the Part of Queen for a short space of ten Days, was siez'd, and her Attendants remanded to their respective siez'd, Homes; Northumberland too by Order of the Queen was Arrested by the Earl of Arundel, And Norand fent Prisoner to the Tower. Some say thumberthat while he was doubtful what to do, and think- land. ing how to make his Efcape, as he was drawing on his Boots, the Guards (who under the Command of Sir John Gates follow'd him in that Expedition) fiez'd him, faying, Truss juff be should bring em off from the Guilt of Treatives (the School of Standard of Stan fon. While he relifted, and a Contention arose between 'em, the Letters came from the Lords of the Council with the Contents above-mentioned; and a Command that every Man shou'd lay down his Arms and be gone to his own Dwelling. Upon the reading of these, the Duke was suffer'd to go free. But his Liberty lafted not long; for the very next Morning as he was preparing to take Horse, Arundel With coming from the Queen Siez'd him and car-other ry'd him away, together with feveral others, Gentleparticularly his Eldeft Son the Earl of Warwick, men. the Lord Ambrofe, and Lord Henry Dudley, his Younger Sons, Sir Andrew Dudley his Brother, the Earl of Huntingdon, Sir Thomas Palmer, Sir John Gates, with his Brother Henry Gates, and Doctor Edwin Sands.

On the 25 of July they were brought to July 25. London, and immediately confin'd in the Tower. Huntingdon not long after was Discharg'd, as his Son was at first. Sir John Gates, whom Northumberland accus'd as the Projector of all this Mifchief, and Sir Thomas Palmer, were Executed; The Earl of Warwick dy'd in Prifon; the Lords Ambrose and Henry Dudley were pardon'd, the latter of which was afterwards kill'd by a Shot at the Battel of St. Quintin; the other had the good Fortune to live to the Time of Queen Elizabeth, was created by Her Earl of Warwick, and flourish'd many Years in great Authority and Favour with Her. Andrew Dudley receiv'd Sentence of Death, yet had the Queen's Pardon. Dr. Sands, who was Vice-Chancellor of Cambridge, by Northumberland's Order had preach'd against Queen Mary at the University, and defended the Ti-tle of Jane, but with that Prudence and Moderation, tho he had but a few hours to compose his Sermon, that the Duke was abundantly Satisfied; and yet the Offence to the other fide was not so great, but that his Friends prevail'd for hisPardon.So that after almost a Year's Imprisonment he was Discharg'd, and prefently fled to Germany; from thence returning after Queen Mary's Death, he was first made 1553. Bishop of Worcester, then translated to the See \ of London; and lastly to the Archbishoprick of York. A Man very eminent for his Learning, Probity, and Prudence; to which I may likewife add his Birth and Family, and above all, his peculiar Happiness in an Offspring; for he left feveral Children, of whom Three were made Knights, and adorn'd with all the Felicities of Body and Mind.

Jane dethron'd.

On the 26. of July were brought to the July 26. Northampand others brought to the Tower.

July 27. Duke of Suffolk

zabeth

goes to meet her

Sifter.

Tower likewise, the Marquis of Northampton, (who afterwards receiv'd Sentence of Death, ton, Ridley, but was Pardon'd.) Ridley Bishop of London, Burn'd two Years after at Oxford; and befides feveral others, Robert Dudley, another of Northumberland's Sons: This was the Great Earl of Leicester, afterwards under Queen Elizabeth, by whom he was rais'd to the higheft Honours; but Death fnatch'd him from his mighty Power, before he reach'd any confiderable Age. 7mly the 27th, the Duke of Suffolk was brought in, and four Days after, by a wonderful Inflance of the Queen's Mercy, receiv'd a Pardon. Cheek, King Edward's Preceptor, and the Chief Juffices Pardon'd. Chomley and Montague, were Committed too at the same time, but on the 3d. of September were fet at Liberty.

July the 30th. the Lady Elizabeth, Queen Mary's Sifter, with a great Number of Quali-July 30. Lady Elity and Gentry of both Sexes, (some fay 500, others 1000) went in State from her House thro' the City to meet her Sifter, and to Congratulate Her Accession to the Throne; who lejected without due Process of Law. (c) on the 3d. of August having disbanded Her Ar- 1553 my, (which had not yet exceeded 13000 Men) was attended at Wanfed by the chief Noblemen and Ladies of the Kingdom; and this Queen entring the Gity with a numerous Train, She comes to came to the Tower. There met Her as hum-Lordon. ble Supplicants the Duke of Norfolk, who had been a Prisoner ever since his Son the Earl of Surrey was put to Death by King Henry the VIIIth. Edward Courtney, Son of the Marquiss of Exeter, Executed in the Year 1538. Gardiner, depriv'd of his Bishoprick of Winchester about two Years before; and the Dutchels Dowager of Somerset, whose Lord had been Beheaded. They presented themselves on their Knees, and Gardiner in the Name of them all, made a Congratulatory Speech to the Queen, who kindly rais d'em one after another, faluted 'em, faying they were Her own proper Prifoners, and order'd their immediate Discharge. The next Day She reftor'd Courtney to the Honour of his Family; Gardiner not only obtain'd his Bishoprick again, but on the 23d. of sugust following was The Lord made Lord Chancellor, tho he formerly fub- Chancel-fcribed the Sentence of Divorce against the lor Gar-

Queen's Mother, and had written in Defence diner. of K. Henry's Proceedings.

On the 5th of Leight, Borner, formerly Log of Bilhop of London, and Torfell formerine Ei-Several floop of Darbarn, were refelred; (bb) and a Bilhops little after, Day, Bilhop of Chichefter, and Reford Heath of Worcester, the late Incumbents being

August

(bb) Bishop Bowe pretended that his Deprivation during his Appeal to King Edward from the Commissioners, Bone? Was Illegal: Whereupon the Queen appointed several Judges Delegates, to examine his whole Cause. Their Research Delegates were John Tregomed and William Reper, Esquires; David Peal Archdeacon of Davity, Anthon Draicit upon his Archdeacon of Huntington, and divers others, Doctors of the Civil-Law. And to countenance his Businest the Archdeacon of Huntington, and divers others, Doctors of the Civil-Law. And to countenance his Businest the Archdeacon of Huntington, and divers others, Doctors of the Civil-Law. And to countenance his Businest the Archdeacon of Huntington, and divers others. The Countenance his Businest the Archdeacon of Huntington, and divers other Persons of Quality. To these Bones in much Formality preferred his Litely, the Last of Strewbury, and Several other Persons of Quality. To these Bones in much Formality Preferred his Litely, filled An Appellacon and Sull states and the Street Archbishop Crammer, Bishop Ridley, Six Tio. Switch, Dr. May, and others: And at length Sentence Desinitive was pronounced in stown of Bones, by the faid Dr. Tregomed; and the former Sentence was faid to be rashly attempted to his prejudice, and Null in Law: And further, declared him to be restored as well to the Position of his Bishoprick, as to all his Goods and Things, with their Rights and Appurtiences; and allowed him to take his Counte against the faid Commissioners, for his Expences, Losses, and Incommodities of his Imprisonment. But it must be noted for faid Commissioners, that King did accordingly appoint the Lord Chancellor Rich, the Lord Treasurer, and Many and Almoster of these times, that you the Appeal Bones had made to K. Edward from the forestore the Positions, that King did accordingly appoint the Lord Chancellor Rich, the Lord Treasurer, and Amany and Almoster of the Emission of Cathers, Bishop of Durbam, the Queen Bones had made to K. Edward the radies of the Emission of Cathers, Bishop of

(c) These Bishops, with Bishop Gardiner aforementioned, being restored, were to be made use of in Commitfions to depose and thrust out the other Bishops that favoured the Reformed Religion, and so stood in the way to from the Georgies of the Courses now to be taken to overthrow it: For in the Month of March following, were Two Commissions, as is sufficient to the form the Queen; One dated on the 15th and another on the 16th Day, for the removing of them.

In the former, Gardiner Bishop of Wimbester, Tunfast, Romo and Day, with the Bishops of S. Ajaph and Landard, Bushog, or any two of them, were empowered to call before them, if they thought good, Taylor Bishop standard, Bushog, of News, and the Parker of War-ster and Glavesfor, and Harley of Hardford; and to proceed to declare their Bishopricks void, for the macrosistic string room for other meet Persons to be elected theremore. Their pretended Bishopricks being did in the sidal 49, 8, eff.

Commission, to be given to them by Letters Patents of K. Edward, to hold the same during their good Behaviour, vol. 2 with the express Clause, Reparding the elected theremose, and by inordinate Life and Conversation; trille. It was urged against them further in the Commission, That they had declared themselves unworthy of the Vocation, by their Prechesting and setting forth Erroneous Dostrines, and by inordinate Life and Conversation, by their Prechesting and setting forth Erroneous Dostrines, and by inordinate Life and Conversation, by their Prechesting and setting forth Erroneous Dostrines, and by inordinate Life and Conversation, by their Prechesting and setting forth Erroneous Dostrines, and by inordinate Life and Conversation, by their Prechesting and setting after the properties of the Commission and the rest Authority and Warrant to do.

The other Commission dated the next Day, was directed to the fame Six Bishops, to Amove, Deprive and Exclude from their Bishopricks Four more of these Bishops, vz. Hisgate Archbishop of York, Errora Bishop of St. Davids, Bishof Cl 1553. Aug. 10. King Edmard's Funeral.

August the 10th, the Funeral Rites of King Edward were perform'd: A Sermon was Preach'd on this Occasion by Day, Bishop of Chichester, who read Prayers in English, and administer'd the Sacrament to those who were present, after the Manner Ordain'd by King Edward; for no Change was yet made in Religion. (e) So that when Bourn, Canon of St. Panls, and afterwards Bifthop of Bath and Wells, in a Sermon at Paul's Cross, inveigh'd against the Reformation under King Edward, and extolling Bonner, observ'd that he was unjuttly Depriv'd for a Sermon Preach'd four Years before in the same place, and had ever fince been kept a close Prisoner, but was now by the Queen's Goodness restor'd, the People rais'd a Tumult, and fomebody in the Croud flung a Dagger at the Preacher, which narrowly mis'd him. This Action it feems was fo much with the Confent of the Standers-by, that tho' the ftrictest Enquiry was made, the Author of it was never discover'd; Others at the fame time making a Clamour, and fome endeavouring to force the Pulpit: Bradford and Rogers, two very popular Miniflers, who were afterwards Burnt, fav'd Bourn from the Danger which threaten'd him, and with great difficulty convey'd him unhurt into the neighbouring School of St. Paul's.

And now on the 18th of August, the Duke of Norfolk sitting as Lord High Steward, those concern'd in the Rebellion were Try'd at Westminster; where the Duke of Northumberland, with his eldeft Son the Earl of Warwick, and the Marquis of Northampton were found Guilty of High-Treason. The Account of that Day's Proceedings, and of the Day following, I shall here transcribe from The Dute Thumans, a Writer of great Fame; because, themselves the The State of I do not entirely approve all he has fet the lead and down, I think he keeps very near to Truth, others and the Reader perhaps will not be ill Enter-Contain'd with the Variety of Opinions upon demn'd.

"The Duke of Northumberland, fays he,
"alledg'd that he did nothing but by Order " of the Council, yet this wou'd not excuse "him; fo that he was Condemn'das a Tray-tor. When the Sentence was pronounc'd, " he beg'd that it might be mitigated as to the " Manner of his Death, and that his Chil-" dren in regard to their tender Years, might "find Mercy; and that he might have the "Liberty of speaking with some Learned "Liberty of speaking with some Learned to the Confidence of "Divine, (for the fettling of his Confci-ence.) And laftly, that Her Majefly wou'd be pleas'd ro fend to him Four of Her Two "Privy Council, to whom he had fome according things to Communicate relating to the Pub- to Hol-Then came on the Tryal of the Mar-lingfload. "quiss of Northampton, who pretended that he had not any Hand in the Rebellion, nor wasengag'd in any Party, but having no pub-" lick Post, + had spent all the time in his usu-" al Diversion of Hunting, and other Sports. "However, it appear'd that he was engag'd " on Northumberland's side, and therefore he was likewise Condemn'd. Afterwards, the

"Earl of Warwick, Northumberland's Eldeft

"Son, when the Plea of his Youth wou'd not

mous Crimes and Sins; [but not expressed] and among the rest, that after express Profession of Chastity, they mous crimes and shirs; four not experience a among the ret; that actor experts riorential or Chattery, the actor tarked Marriage with certain Women de faits, which de jure they ought not; and had lived with them as Wives, in contempt of God, and the manifelf Scandal of all Orders, as well of Clarks as Laymen. And that they the said Commillioners, or any three of them, should fend for these Bithops, or go to them, I for indeed they, or some of them were in Priton and proceed against them summaris & de plans, and Depose them; and also injoyn them Salutary Penance.

Here were two distinct Commissions for the Deprivation of these Seven Bishops, whereas one seemed to have been fufficient: But the former Commiftion was directed againft those that were student, and had not made any Vow of Single Life; the latter againft then sweer Regulars, and so had made an experts Proteffion of it, when they entred into the Rules of their Orders; and therefore to them were enjoyned Penances, which others were not.

Senien Bithops Deprived. Regist. of Canterb.

A. Harm. Specim.

Both thefe Commissions were set upon and Executed in one Day, wiz. the zoth of March. When the Sentence of Deprivation was pronounced upon all Seven, wiz. Upon John Taylor for the Nullity of his Conferencia, (as it is set town in the Regulter of Canterbury) and for a Defici in his Title which he had from K. Edward the Sixth, by his Latter Patents, with this Challe, Dum boue figgifait: Upon Happer for his Marriage, and other Demertis, and a faulty Title, as before: Upon Harly for his Marriage and Herely, and as before: Upon Farrar for the Caules alley Title, as before i Upon Horly for his Marriage and Herefy, and as before: Upon Form for the Cause Selve and Se

(c) It is very unlikely a Popith Bithop, and one that had fuffered for his Opinion, thould himfelf, and at this Barieto Time, ute the Proteibant Service, fo much by him diffixed. Day indeed Preached the Funeral Sermon; but it from a Archbithop Commer, however now under a Cloud, that Officiated at the King's Interrent after the Reformed by the Fig. way appointed in the English Service-Book: To which he joyned a Communion, by him alio Administred, tho golfic of Dirige and Reguene was faid for the King at the Tower before the Queen, the Marquel's of Windepler, the Figure 1 and the Bithop of Windepler, with his Mitre on his Head, Vol. 11. Archbijhop firmat. Vol. II. † The contrary to which was Notorious; for Northampton was one of Queen Jane's Privy-Counfellors, and Signed Letter July the 19th, among the reft of Her Pivy-Council, to the Lady Napy, (as they filled Her) requiring the to det[h, and be quite and obedient; betales his going along with the Duke in all his Councils.) P 744

"derful Constancy; and only pray'd Her Ma-iesty, that out of his Estate Consiscated, his presently sent back to the Tower. Aug. 22. Northumberlandbe. " ecution, having two days before received headed.

15536

"Debts might be discharged. These were The "next day, Sir Andrew Dudley, Northumber-"land's Brother, and Sir John Gates, who was " fuppos'd the first Author of fetting up Lady Jane, with his Brother Henry Gates, and Sir "Thomas Palmer, were Condemn'd. The " 22d of August they were brought out to Ex-"the Sacrament in Prison. Northumberland, "by the Perfuaiion of Heath (afterwards "Archbishop of 2000k) made a Speech to the People, in which he confess d his Crime " and Repentance, and advis'd all who were present to adhere to the ancient Religion of "their Forefathers, and rejecting the new " Opinions as the Source of all the Evils that " had befallen 'em for 30 Years past, to drive "the Preachers of 'em, as Trumpeters of 'Sedition, out of the Kingdom, if they " wou'd approve themselves innocent before "God and the Publick. He declar'd that in " his Heart he had always been for the old "Religion, and appeal d for the Truth of this

" be admitted in Excuse of so great a Crime,

" receiv'd his Sentence of Death with a won-

"to his intimate Friend the Bishop of Worce-"fer*, but he had temported out of Ambition, for which he now was a fincere Peni-"tent; And laftly, that he willingly fubmit-ted to this Death which he own'd he had " deferv'd. Having faid this, he recommended " himself to God, and defiring the Prayers of "the Spectators, prepar'd to receive the "Stroke; and immediately the Executioner perform'd his Office. Northumberland's Fx-" hortations variously affected the Minds of " the People, who were amaz'd to hear him "fpeak against that Religion, which he had
"profess of probless of Years; and on the Sixteen
"profess of the base of the base of the Sixteen Account of which chiefly he had advis'd K. Years, ac-Edward to exclude his Sifters. Most have cording written, that being a cumming Man, and to the late written, that being a cumming Man, and English li-" fond of Life, Le did this in hopes of a Par-dition. "don; and that when he look'd round him and "faw he was deceiv'd, he repented of it (f)

" He was charg'd (upon no trivial Conjectures) "with having Poyfon'd the late King. But nothing of this was mention dat his Trial, " because his Judges undertook not the Exa-" mination into K. Edward's Death, but only " the Butiness of the Rebellion against Queen " Mary. Gates too and Palmer underwent the " fame Punishment". Thus far Thuanus. g) About

(f) Fex, who lived in these Times, confirms and clears this Matter: who writes, that the Duke had a Promise Normade him of a Pardon; yea, tho his Head were upon the Block, on condition he would recant and hear Max, thumber-On which Promise he firmly relyed, and did what was required; and fit! born up with the same hope, on the land peak.

Scaffold denyed in Word and outward Protession that true Religion which he had often, bord in K. Heary's and might a support that the peak of the Scaffold denyed in Word and odward Proteffion that true Religion which he had often, both in K. Hony's and mission of the K. Edward's Days, evidently declared himself to favour and further.

(c) Two things the Queen now did as public Acts of Favour, to ingratiate her felf with her People, upon decivied, her late Accelsion to the Throne; which our Historian takes no Notice of. The One was, To reducis the Wrong The Queen of the Day the Historian takes no Notice of. The One was, To reducis the Wrong The Queen of the One to the Tubble State of the Historian takes no Notice of. The One was, To reducis the Wrong The Queen of the One to the Tubble State of the Historian takes no Notice of the One was for the Remission of part of the Tax granted in K. Edwards Reign. For which the Signed Letters Patents, bearing Date the 16 of September; and confirmed what was granted in those Letters, in the next Parliament. The purport of their the declared in Two Proclamations, drawn up in the most endearing manner.

The former was to this Tenor, That she of her great and aboundant Clemency, calling to her gracious Remembrance, what great and intolerable Charges had come and chanced both to her and to her Loving Subjects, by treas Sereflower fon of the bale Monies of late made within the Realms; and also by great Quantities of the lake base Monies Monies to made and counterfeit in other Realms, and illude our here and in other her Dominions: For the tender Zeal Her tever Face Grace bore to her loving Subjects, could in no wise longer fuffer the same Inconvenience, but we ally tresloved made and counterfeit in other Realms, and illude our here and in other her Dominions: For the tender Zeal Her tever Face Grace bore to her loving Subjects, could in no wise longer fuffer the same Inconvenience, but we ally resloved made and counterfeit in other levels Subjects, could in no wise longer fuffer the same Inconvenience, but we all the relieved made and counterfeit in other Realms; and illude our here and in other her Dominions: For the tend

Grace bore to her loving Subjects, could in no wife longer fuffer the fame Inconveniencie, but was fully refolved in an object to the remaining subjects, could in no wife longer fuffer the fame Inconveniencie, but was fully refolved in and determined with all convenient freed, to cause to be made and set forth certain Coins as well of Gold as of Silver, of the perfect Finenes; which would redound much to her Honour, and her Subjects great Wealth, Commodity and Profit.

That therefore the had ordered within her Mints thefe feveral Coins, as wel of Silver in fineness of the Standard Sterling, as also of Gold; as ensueth:
The whole Sovereign of fine Gold, to be current for xxx Sh

The whole Sovereign of fine Gold, to be currant for xxx Sh.

The half Sovereign of fine Gold, to be called the Royal of Gold, for xv Sh.

The singel of fine Gold, current for X Sh.

The Half Angel of Fine Gold, for V Sh.

And of Coins of Silver

One piece of Silver Monies, which should be called the Grote, to be Current for 4 Pence of the lawful Monies not Englind.

Another piece to be called the half Grote, to be Current for a pence.

Another piece, half of the half Grote, which thould be called the Penny, to be Current for one Penny.

All which Monies atoretisid the Queen flatilty charged and commanded at manner of Perions within her Realms (the Realm of Ireland only excepted; fordinach as her Coins there had a "fpecial Standard") to Receive and Pay the faid Reveral pieces of Money, at the feveral Rates before rehearfed.

And her express Commandment was, 'That all fuch bale Mones, as had been reduced to a lower rate, flouds of Current in payment, as the same was Current at that day; a swas declared in a Prochamation made in the time of K.Edward VI. in that behalf, until fuch time as she could, with the Advice of her Council, take further Order tour-him the fume.

of K. Edward VI. in that behalf, until fuch time as the could, with the Advice of her Council, the truther Order touching the fame.

The other A2t of Grace of the Queen ran to this Tenor, that the graciously considering the good Wills, I orwards and hearty Dispositions of her true loving Subjects always heretotone exhibited, to the Ard and Successful Commonweal, with their proper Subfance and Goods, when the Service, the Necethity and Homour of the Realm had fo required; as well in the times of her Father and Brother, but specially since the time of her Vocation to the Grown, in the Defence of her Royal Person, against the malicious borce of the material Trait tor Sir John Dudley, late Duke of Northonderland, and his Complices: Notwithshanding it was well known to the Multitude of her faid good Subjects, how by the evil Government of the Realm had for the Realm had henour of the Realm the Honour of the Realm the determined by the help of God, truly to fifthinge, content, and pay, in times convenient and reasonable. That yet having a special Mind to the Weal of her Subjects, near the layour and Grace of God; and having a full Affiance in her faid Subjects, that if the State, the Cause, and Honour of the Realm flowled for engine, the would at a stimes hereafter exhibite their iembleble Service; this in the latter Session of the Iast Parliament holden in the time of the faid K. Edward, towards the Payment and Ditcharge of the faid not ble Debts, were granted two Dilines, and two Fifteens, and one Subirdy of four Stale

1553. Bifhops Impu-

About the fame time, feveral Bishops who had appear'd with more than common Zeal in the Cause of Religion, were taken into Cullody; as Hooper, Bishop of Worcester and Glocester; Ferrar, Bishop of St. David's, (who were afterwards burnt); and Coverdade Biflop of Exeter, who, upon a Letter in his Favour from Christian the HId. King of Denmark, obtain'd a Pardon. But all Ecclefiafticks who refused to put away their Wives, or enjoy'd Benefices whereof the former Incumbents had been deprived for Defence of Popery; and even those too who wou'd not promise by Oath to defend it, were forced to relinquish them without exception.

Peter Mar-Peter Martyr was then Professor at Oxford;

who, as foon as King Edward dy'd, was confin'd to his House; but afterwards, upon the Application of his Friends, he had Leave to come to London, and there he put himfelf under the Protection of Cranmer Archbishop of Archbi-Canterbury. But Cranmer was already near his Thop Crime Fall, being in very great Displeasure with fent Conthe Queen; who besides that She was entirely manag'd by Gardiner, his mortal Enedition. my, cou'd never forgive him the Bufiness of the Divorce.

> - Manet altà mente repostum Judicium Litum, spretæq; injuria matris.
> For deep Imprinted in Her Breatt remains Th' opprobrious Sentence, and Her Mother's CStains.

Merits Oucen.

Tis faid that when Henry the VIIIth. had Merits with the refolv'd to Imprison His Daughter Mary, for her Contumacy in Defending the Caufe of Popery, He chang'd His Resolution at the sole Mediation of Cranmer. Afterwards, when fhe was to be Difinherited by King Edward, the Archbishop in a long Speech strenuously oppos'd it, tho' without Success; nor cou'd he be prevail'd with to fubscribe the Decree, till the Judges having unanimously affirm'd that it might Lawfully be done, the dying King Himfelf with continu'd Importantey gain'd him to it. But the Memory of one Injury has more force on anungrateful Mind, than that of a thousand Obligations. At that time there was an uncertain Rumor, that Crenmer had chang'd his Religion with his Fortunes; so that to gratify the Queen, he had promis'd to Celebrate the Exequies of King Edward after the Romish Manner. Cranmer therefore, by a Writing which he pub-lish'd about the beginning of November, vinfund the Inflitutions of K. Edward about Religion, as conformable to the Doctrine of Christ and his Apostles; in which Resolution having been confirm'd by Peter Martyr, he nam'd him for his Second in the Dispute. But the Controverfy was foon decided another way; for his Death was positively refolv'd, but which way to bring it about was the Question. 'Twas determin'd therefore to proceed against him as a Traytor: So that on the 13th. of November, after he had been con- Nov: 13. fin'd for some time in the Tower, to lessen the People's Veneration for him, he was Arraign'd for High-Treason, together with the Lords LadyJane, Ambrofe and Gilford Dudley, and the Lady and Lords fanz, who so lately had suitain d the Person controls, of Queen: They were all Condemn'd as Ac- and Gilof Queen: They were all Condemn d as Ac- and complices in this Crime. As to Cranmer's ford Dudley Particular, his Enemies were so as sham'd of demn'd. the Part they had undertaken, that they pro-cur'd him the Queen's Pardon for Treason; yet afterwards had him Profecuted for Herefy. Before he had been Apprehended, his Friends advis'd him to fly into Germany, and avoid certain Ruin, as some of his Brethren had done: He answer'd 'em, that if he were in danger of being taken up for Theft, Parricide, or any other fuch horrid Crime, tho he knew his Innocence, he might perhaps be prevail'd with to fly; but fince the Caufe now present a with to by 5 out pine the large man depending, Rays he, in my Eath in God, and the Truth of the Holy Scriptures, in apposition to the Errors of Popilh Deckrines, I have determined to flaw a Confinery worthy of a Chriftian Prelate, and to lofe my Life rather than withdraw at such a time. But for the prefent let us leave Cranmer in Peter Mar-Prison, fince the rest of his Story will be fr'd to related hereaster in its proper Place. There depart the was a Debate a long time in Council, con-Kingdom-cerning Peter Martyr, Whether they shou'd not try him for a Heretick too, as one that had done a World of Mischief to the Catholick Caufe. But 'twas concluded, that fince he came into England upon the Publick Faith, he shou'd be suffer'd to retire in safety out of the Kingdom. So that a Pass being Granted him, he went with his Friend Octionus to Antwerp first, then to Cologn, and lastly to Strafbourg, from whence he came.

In the mean time came on the Coronation of Queen Mary, which was perform'd at West- Queen's minster on the first of October, by Gardiner, Bi- Coronati minifer on the little of Octobers, by Gardaners, 51- Coronati-floop of Wincheffer (b). On the 5th of the on, 0.ft. t. fame Month, a Parliament was call'd, in 0.ft. 6, a which almost all the Laws and Orders made dicated himself from this, and offer'd to de- by the late Kings Henry and Edward against the

Shillings in the Pound, to be raifed and levyed of the Mannours, Lands and Tenements; and two Shillings Eightpence of the Goods and Cartels of her Subjects; which Graunts were now due unto her by the time Act, and would difcharge one great Piece of the faid Debts; Her Majefty of her mere Grace and great Clemency, for the Relief and Succour of her faid good Subjects, had freely, for her, her Heirs, and Succellors, pardoned and rematted to them the faid Subfidy of four Shillings the Pound, and two Shillings Eight-pence the Pound. Trudlenger good Subjects would have loving Condideration thereof; whom the required harity to bend themelievs wholly to ferve God to his Glory, with continual Prayer for the Honour and Advancement of her Grace and the Commonweal, in the few states following were as honourable Preliminaries to her Coronation. The Sunday Sevennight before, being the 24th of September, Feekenkone, Dean of St. Fruits, and after Lord Abbot of 11. Juniaging, preaches at Paul's-Copf. And tome few days before the fail Coronation, Honours were Conferred upon certain Prefions from the Queen: Whereof one was, (and that was moft remarkable) the Refloration of the Lord Press to the Street, which he had once received, but was with great Indignity deprived of, by the Millier the street in the Section of the Section of the Lord Press to the Copfer of the Gatter, which he had once received, but was with great Indignity deprived of, by the Millier the street in the Section of the Copfer of the Heralds; And Order of Sometics, upon the presence that he was not a Gentleman of Bloud. For his honourable Refloration there was a Decise male Section of the Copfer of the Heralds; And Copfer of the Meralds; And Copfer of Pope and the Roman Modes of Worship were of Exeter, and Walter Philips, Dean of Rocherepeal'd (i). In the Convocation, which was Summon'd at the fame (k) time, a Dispute was held with great Contention for feveral days, lonvocaconcerning the Lord's Supper. Western the Prolocutor, and many others, defended the Doctrine of Christ's bodily Presence. Among the few that maintain'd the contrary Opinion, are reckon'd as chief, John Ailmer, and Richard Cheny, (the latter of which enjoy'd the See of Gleefter, under Queen Elizabeth, and the former, that of London,) John Philper, Archdeacon of Winchelter, who at latt feal'd that former, that of London,) John Philpot, Archdeacon of Wineheller, who at laft feal'd that Doctrine with his Blood; James Haddon, Dean had some hopes of a Pardon too.

1553.

Dif-

ute in

ion.

fter. These, after a long and sharp Controversie, were overpower'd by Multitudes, not by Reason; and the re-establishing of Popery was concluded. So that by the Authority and Popery Order of the Convocation on the 21st of De. Reltord, cember, Mass began to be celebrated in all the Churches of the Realm.

At the fame time the Marquis of Northampton, and Henry Gates, who had receiv'd Sentence of Death a little before, were Pardon'd and Shoulders, with the George depending thereat: And a Command given to Garter, that his Atchievements should Blew Book be publickly set up over his Stell at Windson, being the same he before possess, and the Records of the Order of the Rebrad his Degradation with Injustice: Asserting, that when Honour is conserved upon the Score of Vertue or gifty, from great Endowments, the Consideration of this supplies the Defect or Obscurity or Extraction. And the Sove- Allimote's reign then present declared, That he kad highly delivered of the Nation by his Pradance and Comfel. And as a token Infusion's new much the Queen element him, at her Coronation he was one of the Four Knights that held the Pall over her that Order in her Traverse, when she was Anointed by the Bishop of Windshight.

Supromber the 28. being Timesson, the Queen removed from St. James's to Whitehal, and took Barge to the Tow- Knights of e, where she bay that Night. The next day she made Fifteen Knights of the Barb, who were Knighted by the the Bath. Earl of Awardd, Steward of the Queen's House, by Commission from her. The First whereof, was the Earl of Decoupline; the next, the Young Earl of Surrey; then the Lord Bargeway, the Lord Cardiff, Lord Assaulty, Lord Lumdey, Sir William Paulet, Sir Honey Pavker, Sir Hings Rich, [the L. Rich's Son] Sir Hong Parker, Lord Mannifer, Lord Lumdey, Sir William Paulet, Sir Hong Pavker, Sir Hong Parker, Sir Hong Dumer. The Oath then Minister to these Knights, was in these Words: "Right Dere Broulet. Dire Carolity by be this Direct unto "post; and the langths of the Burghty Good of the young Fall of all Engaglishes." Eight of the William Paulet, Sir Hong Parker, Sir Hong Parker Sir Hong Parker of Burghts of the B

"forth as primap; not fer in place where any broughil Singment hall be given, to your knowledge."

And as given by bounds be this Bolte Direct and you, as ever it has to any of your productions.

Saturday, 8-71. the jeth, She pafied from the Tower through the City to Weiminder in great Triumph, fitting & Mary's in an open Chariot to be feen. All this glorious Cavaleade is fet down by John Srow in his Chronicle. Geronation.

Sanday, O'fled, the 1ft. The Ceremonics of Her Coronation were performed in St. Pater's Weißmiffer, by Gardine Bilhop of Windsfire in his Patricaliuse flood, and declared to the People the Putpole of the prefent Solemnity, with demand of their Confent in these Words.

Sirs, Here prefent is Mar R.T. nightful and undoubted Inheritary, by the Laws of God and Man, to the Crown and Royal Dignity of these Realms of England, France, and Ireland. Whereupon you shall understand, that "this Day is prefixed and appointed by all the Peers of this Land, for the Confectation, Inunction and Coronation of the laid most Royal Princets Mar T. Will by Serve at this time, and give your Good Will and Assential to the state of the Coronation-Sermon was Preached by Day Bishop of Chiechsfir; who had also in Angust before, preached at the Funeral of King Edward; being, it seems, a Celebrated Orator.

Orator.

The next Day, being the Morrow after the Coronation, the Queen made Fourfcore and Ten Knights of the Knights The next Day, being the Morrow after the Coronation, the Queen made Fourfcore and Ten Knights of the Knights Carpet, Dubb'd in Her Chamber of Prefence at Wessimspire by the Earl of Servands, who had Knighted before the made. Ex Knights of the Bath. Some of these Knights were the Lord Gerrerd, the Lord Borongh, the Lord Dudly, Thomas Ossic. Assembley, Edmund Windler, Henry Ratelist, The Intelligen, Will. Walgrove, John Browne, Rafe Chamberlain, John Tirmbir, Towns Cont. 8.1 John Browne, Rafe Chamberlain, John Tirmbir, and The Ministry of John Browne, Rafe Chamberlain, John Tirmbir, and Roman, Solan Tirmbir, John Tirmbir, John Tirmbir, John Tirmbir, Will. Kelbway, Henry Gassian, John Tirmbir, Lord Ministry, Lord Chief Baron, Richard Morgan, Lord Chief Justice; and among the rest, The White, Lord-Mayor of Landon.

(i) This first Parliament of the Queen was short, having but two Sessions, and ending the Stib. Day of De-Seme Accorder. Sir Jebin Pellural esteemed excellently Learned in the Laws of this Realm, was choicen Speaker, by the counter that Recommendation of Mr. Treasfurer of the Queen's Hoole, and fair in the Chair. Here fomething in the begin-fight Parning of the Session happened to one of the Members elected, that desirveth a Remark: Which was, that size. Eliment. and re News, a Learned Man, and Favourer of K. Edward's Resformation, was called into Question; the Methe the Jeona of being a Prehendary of Westing Prehendary of Westing View in the House? And the 12th of Ostolers, it was declared by the the House Commoners, that he being Prehendary of Westing Wise was the Commoners, that he being Prehendary of Westing View in the Convocation louie, I Soo Comic is sin the Journal of the House of Commons; and Premainer, and hereby having Voice in the Convocation-louie, I Soo Comic is sin the Journal of the American and Premainer, was brought from the Lords by Several of the House of Commons; and Premainer, was brought from the Lords by Several of the House of Commons; and Premainer, was brought from the Lords by Several of the House of Commons; and Premainer in this House, and added in the Journal, if the may be of the House of Commons and Premainer, was brought from the Lords by Several of the House of Commons and the Premainer of the House of Commons and Premainer, was brought from the Lords by Several of the House of Commons and the Premainer of the House of Commons and the (i) This first Parliament of the Queen was short, having but two Sessions, and ending the 6th. Day of De- Some Ac

In the second session of this Parliament, which began off be. 24, after a few Days Protogation, some Bills were brought in for the Discouragement and Testro of such as should continue to profess the late Reformed Religion: the brought in for the Discouragement and Testro of such as should continue to profess the late Reformed Religion: the second self-based as a solid for such as came not to Church, or received not the Sacraments. Another Bill for divers Punishments referred to the Ecclesialtical Power, for such as fay not their Service, or come not to the Carlot: But these Bills professor. The such as a subject of the Sacraments. Another Bill that now passed into an Ast, in Eavour of the old Popsis Religion, and the Overstrow of the Reformation, which was instead of an Hundred: Wherein no less than Nine Acts, all for the Repaid at a Clap. These were, an Act for the Election of Bishops.

An Act for the Election of Bishops.

An Act for the Election of Bishops.

An Act for the Cordering of Fockelstatical Ministers.

An Act made for the Veniformity of Common-Prayer, and Administration of the Sacraments.

An Act made for the Sacraments.

An Act made for the Sacraments as in the last Year of K. Henry VIII. was to be used and frequented, from the acets of December, Jamus 153. I find by the Commons House fourth, that this great Bill was distourted and argued the last Day of Otsley. Arguments upon this Bill again Novomb, the Gib, and ordered to be Engrossed. It was read again the 7th of Novomber. Argued again the 8th Day.

fore, who fer up Jane a-

The Prolo-Speech.

MSS.

Some Account of the Convocation also now began about the 16th of O'll-ber, with much Solemnity, and as great Heat and Resolution to overturn all that had been done in Religion before. It was opened with a Latin Sermon preached this Convocation.

The Sortina Sermon began about the 16th of O'll-ber, with much Solemnity, and as great Heat and Resolution to overturn all that had been done in Religion before. It was opened with a Latin Sermon preached this Convocation. The Sortina Sermon before the Sole and the Elders of Ephilius, attendite webs, O'least the Church of God, which he hat be purchaled with his early Blood. He first divided his Matter he intended to distinct the service of the Church of God, which he hat be purchaled with his early Blood. He first divided his Matter he intended to distinct the service of the Church of God, which he hat be purchaled with his early Blood. He first divided his Matter he intended to distinct the service of the Church of God, which he hat be purchaled with the way began and the Card of the Church of God, which he hat be purchaled at the Church of God, which he hat be purchaled with the service of the Church of God, which he hat be purchaled with the way had the Church of God, which he hat be purchaled with the way had the Church of God, which he hat be purchaled with the way had the Church of God, which he hat be purchaled with the way had the Church of God, which he hat be purchaled with the way had the Church of God, which he hat be purchaled with the way had the Church of God, which he hat be purchaled with the way had the Church of God, which he hat be purchaled with the way had the Church of God, which he hat be purchaled with the way had the way had the Church of God, which he hat be purchaled with the way had the way had the way had the Church of God, which he hat be with a had the way had the way had the late of the Church of God, which he had the made you offer?

It was on the first the Church of God, which he hat be with he done in the first the had you of the like that entred into the Flock: And that they did favagely butcher the Lord's Flock, and plunged numberlefs Souls into Hell. Afterwards he proceeded to Directions how to reform these Evils: And he told his Reverend Fathers and Brethren, that he thought it the wifest Course to recall those Ecclesiastical Laws which had been made before, and Brethren, that he thought it the wifeft Courfe to recall thole Ecclefiafical Laws which had been made before, and no need of great Labout to make any new Canons.

The Sermon ended, at the fame Seffion the Bifhop of London, as the Mouth of the Upper House (there being no Archbifhop) bad the Lower House chule them a Referendary or Prolecutor; and to they adjourned. The next Seffion Dr. Hugh Wofton Dean of Wiffminfer, being chosen, was preferred to the Bifhops by P. Dean of Chichiffer, and Winfly Archdeacon of London. Both which making their Speeches, and Wiffon accordingly accepted, he began his Haranque, and went on to a great Length, extolling the Bifhops that underwent from Troubes in the late Reign, and aggravating their Sufferings, comparing them with 16th the Bapith, who was Beheaded; but that they had fuffered far more bitterly: He for a fhort time hold his Head, but they for a long time flruggled with Doolours, Terrors, Threats, Bonds, &c. And concerning the Book of Common-Prayers, he faid, It was fluffed with Blafphemies, flored with Errors; which under the Name of Religion, took away Religion, &c. And that to the obtruding of this Book, they [meaning the Convocation of the Clergy] never gave their Confent; and for which they did now congratulate themselves.

Wifton having done, the Bifhop of London made a concluding Speech. goinft Her.

they did now congratulate themfelves.

Wifen having done, the Biliop of London made a concluding Speech.

In this Synod great pains was taken to reflore the abandoned Doctrines, and especially those of the Mass: Yet those sex Learned Perions of the Reformation that were present, signified in the Points with the reft, prevailing much in their Numbers. These brave and flour Men were Philipse, standaton, seymon, and one or two more; whose Disputations may be read in Fee's Acts and Monuments. At last Four Points were defined by the Upper House, I. Of the Sacrament of the Altar. II. Of Transinstantiation. III. Of the Adoration of the Eucharift, and the Refervation of it. IV. Of the Subflance of the Sacrifice of the Church, and of its Institution; and by whom and for whom, and to whom it is to be offered.

Out of these Doctrines were framed by this Synod Three Outsigns to be diffoured on a Contract by the Men.

by whom and for whom, and to whom it is to be offered.

Out of their Doctrines were framed by this Synod Three Queftions to be diffpured on at Oxford by fome Members of the fame, and others, againft Archbifthop Cromor, Bifthop Ridley, and Mr. Latymer, who were fent down thicher from Lendon on purpole. The First was, That in the Sacrament of the Altar, by vertue of the Word of God uttered by the Prieft, is prefent under the Kinds of Bread and Wine, really the true and natural Body of Chritl, which was born of the Virgin; and allo his natural Blood. The Second was, That after the Confectation there remaineth not the Subflance of Bread, nor any other Subflance, befides the Subflance of Chrift, God and Man. The Third was, That in the Maß is the Lively Sacrifice of the Church, proprintatory for the Sins as well of the Dead as of the Living.

On the 13th, of December, the Queen fent Her Mandate to Boore Biflop of Lendon, forthwith to Diffolve and break up this Convocation, and to fignify to the Biflops and the reft of the Clergy this Her pleafure.

Anno

Anno Domini, 1554. Regina 1 6 2.

155-1- \sim The clines to

THE Queen was in Her 3/111 2011, had hitherto been thought averte to Matri-THE Queen was in Her 37th Year, and The mony; whether by Nature, or from a Sense that Queenin-Her Person was none of the most engaging; yet She began now to yield to the Necessity of Her Affairs, and to think of a Husband. She was afraid that Her Sex's Weakness might expose Her to the Contempt of Her People, while Her Throne was not yet fix'd, nor the Nation well recover'd from the late tempestu-ous Factions. There were Three at that time allotted by common Fame for Her Choice: Philip Prince of Spain, Son to the Emperor; Cardinal Reginold Pool, and Courtney Marquis of Exeter. The two latter had their Country and the Splendor of their Ancestors to recommend 'em; and there was hopes that under either of 'em the Liberty and Privileges of the Kingdom wou'd be preferv'd. Affinity of Blood was respected in em all; Pool was much in the Queen's Affection, for his Gravity and Holy Life, joyn'd with the greatest Courtefy and Prudence; and Courtey for his Youth, good Humour, and his Courtly Address. But some Suspicions were rais'd against the latter, as if he favour'd the Reformation; and Pool being above Fifty Three Years of Age, 'twas thought too great a Chance, whether the Queen might have Children by him or not. Therefore twas Refolved to follow the Advice of those, who judg'd that the unset!'d State of the Kingdom requir'd some Potent Prince to compose Domestick Troubles, and to make War upon France, which was now become a very troublefome Neighbour. These Motives easily wrought upon an Ambitious Woman, and gain'd Her Confent to Marry Phili An Em-

To treat of this Match, about the latter end of the laft Year, the Emperor had fent baffyfrom the Empeover an Extraordinary Embassy, of which L'Amirol Count Egmont, was chief, and with treat of a him were join'd in Commission Charles Count Marriage betwixt the Qu.& Lataine, and John Memorancy. In the begin-Latame, and your identified in the beginning of fantary, the Ambiffedours being come to London, foon accomplished the Builness. The Conditions of Marriage were thefe.

Articles of Mar-

Philip of Spain.

"That Phillip being Marry'd to Queen Ma-"ry, shall take the Title of all the Dominions " belonging to his Wife, and fhare with Her "in the Administration; but that all the Privi-leges and Customs of the Realm shall be "prefervd, and the free and full Power of bestowing Preferments, Rewards, and Of-fices, shall remain in the Queen. The Queen " shall reciprocally share in all the Dominions

"Pounds, as was formerly allow'd to Lady 1554"
"Margaret, Sifter to King Edward the Fourth, "and Dowager to Charles of Burgundy. Of this, Forty Thousand Pound shall be rais'd " in Spain and Aragon, and 20 Thousand in the " Low-Countries. And to prevent all future Difputes and Contention about dividing the Inheritance, 'tis covenanted, that the Children which shall Spring from this Marriage, fall succeed to all the Kingdoms and Do-"minions of Her Majesty; and moreover to all the Dominions of which the Emperor stands possess'd in the Low-Countries and "in Burgundy. Charles, Philip's Eldeft Son by his former Marriage, shall for his Share
fucceed to all the other Dominions in Spain "and Italy, both of his Father and of his "Grandfather the Emperor, but shall be obligd to pay the foremention'd Forty Thou-fand Pounds. If the Offspring of this Mar-riage be Daughters, the Eldeft shall succeed " to all the Dominions in the Low-Countries, " on Condition that the choose a Husband in "England, or in the Netherlands, with the "Confent of her Brother Charles; but if the " choose one elsewhere, without her Brother's " Confent, the shall lose her Right of Succes-" fion to the Netherlands, and it shall devolve " on her Brother Charles. But to her and her "Sifters shall be affigued a convenient Dowry according to the Laws and Customs of the places. If Charles, or his Successors, die "without Issue, then the first-born of this "Marriage, the it be a Female, shall succeed " to all the Dominions of both these Princes, "as well in Spain as the Low-Countries, and to all the Principalities in Italy; and shall " be oblig'd to preserve inviolate the Rights, "Privileges, Immunities, and Customs of each Kingdom. That between the Empe-" ror Philip and his Heirs, and the Queen of England, her Children and Heirs, and both " their Realms and Dominions, shall be con-"ftant Friendship, Peace, and a perpetual and inviolable League. That the Leagues " made at Westminster in the Year 1542. and " four Years after at Utretcht, shall be renew'd " and confirm'd.

When the Refolution of concluding this The Peo-Match was generally known, many who were at the Spadispleased at it took occasion to raise Calumnies, nish as if a Spaniard was to be set at the Head of Match. Affairs, that he and his Creatures might govern at will, and overturning the Ancient Laws and Inflitutions, might enflave England like a Conquer d Nation (1). These Murmurs were common and openly utter'd. But in private, which Philip Her Husband has now, or which finall come to Him hereafter; and if yer of those with whom they Convers'd; to she Survive him, for a Dowty, She shall ligion, contrary to what the Queen had pro-

(I) And so many Wise Men did think and believe, and affert long after; namely. That the chief intent of this Marriage of Philip with Queen Mary, on the part of England, was for the better and surer Establishment of additionable the Papacy here: But the Spaniards secret Design, was to get the Possession of the Imperial Crown of this Real to himself, and to make the English bis Vallast for ever. And to this purpose Sir Fonces Inspired, (who lived in institute Queen Elizabeth's Reign) writeth, and had good Testimony for it; which may not be amis to be here feed one, Marries as illustrating this Article of Queen Mary's Reign. 'This Marriage, faith he, was lought and intended also in Watch-as allowed the Marries of the Watch-as and Covernment word, which was not of the Queen of England, to bring in the Possible Religion and Government word, Vol. II.

misd to the People of Suffolk. To others, they commiserated and bewail'd the Misfortune of Lady Jane, that fo illustrious a Person shou d he precipitated from the Throne, and condemn'd to a shameful and unmerited Death. Pity mov'd many, Religion some, but most the Dread of a Forreign Yoke; And others were excited by their private Hopes, and the Affectation of Change; fo that an Infurrection was ripe, and feem d to want nothing but a Leader; This Post therefore was undertaken by Sir Thomas West of Kent, who having communicated the Defign to the Duke of Suffolk, to Sir Peter Carow of Devoughire, and Iome others, declar'd that no Attempt ought to be made till Philip's Arrival, that fo whatever they intended, it might appear to the Publick they had taken Arms for no other Cause than to defend their Liberty from the Tyrannical Administration of a Foreign Prince. The reft agreed to this, and for the prefent they all re-tir'd home to their feveral Counties. There they apply d themselves privately to provide Arms, Money, and all Things necessary, and gain'd as many as they cou'd into their Conspiracy. But Carow, whether mov'd by his Destiny, or because he thought delays wou'd be hazardous, began to raise Men in Cornwall; and thus discovering the Design before 'twas | lar in this Story, because some have related, ripe, he was foon oppress'd and forc'd to fly into France, where he lay hid for a while, till at last being in appearance reconcil'd to the King, he was taken at Bruffels, and brought a Prisoner into England. How he escap'd afterwards I do not find; but 'tis certain that he flourish'd for many Years under Queen Elizabeth; and at last dy'd peaceably in Ireland, in the Year 1577, as appears by his Monument in Exeter Cathedral (m).

1554.

With this Gentleman was taken at the same Sir John time, Sir John Cheek, Præceptor to K. Edward, Gheek who with Publick Licence had come from Seizd. Strasburg to Bruffels to visit the Queen's Agents there, as Fox fays; or rather upon a business of Marrimony, if we may credit Thunns (n). But be that as twill, 'tis certain he was pull'd from his Horse in the Road between Antwerp and Bruffels, then bound with Cords in a Waggon, and laftly Hoodwink'd, and hurry'd on Board a Vessel, while he knew nothing whither he was a going, till he was brought into the Tower of London. There with Threatnings he was terrify'd to a Recantation, tho in his Heart he utterly abhorr'd Popery. Affliction and Regret at this Action threw him afterwards into a fit of Sickness, which coft him his Life. I have been more particu-

into this Land, and to Eflablifi it with Continuance; with Purpofe and Meaning to add Strength to all the 'Concres of Christodom, to continue Popery where it was, and to bring it in where it was not. That fo 'Archivelste for 'seem right hold the Scepters and Powers of al Princes and Powerstates of Christodom in his shand, Archyrelate of eme might hold the Scepters and Powers of all Princes and Porentates of Conference in the Neutron of the Scepters of the Scene of the Scene written our of England, doth make flew; wherein he expredicth what a worthy Work be hath don, when he had drawn the Nobles and Commons of the Land to fubmit themfelves to his Holinics, as their Chiff (those are the very Words.) Yet little did the Nobles and Commons know what was intended towards them by this Catholic Child of Rome. For under this colorable name of Catholic Religion, was hidden the Ambition Humour of a most proud userping Tyrant, whole Resolution was, upon mature deliberation and consistation with his Mashawaition of Control of the Common and Constitution with his Mashawaition of the Common and the Common and constitution with his Mashawaition and their Affection to possess from the Common Land to Land to Land to the Common Land to Land to Land to Land to Land the Common Land the Mashawaition when the Common Law of this Land be altered: By which Justice is truly raught to a lors; the Prince to Govern, the People to Obey; the Nobles to live of their own, without wronging the Inferiors; the Inferiors; the Land to the Common Law of this Land be altered: By which Justice is truly raught to a lors; the Prince to Govern, the People to Obey; the Nobles to live of their own, without wronging the Inferiors; the Inferiors; the Land colon of the Common Law of this Land be altered: By which Justice is truly raught to a lors; the Prince to Govern, the People to Obey; the Nobles to live of their own, without wronging the Inferiors; the Inferiors; the Land colon of the Common Law of the Land without respect of Perions. This the Law of the Land doth ofter unto us, to our Comfort; and from this he purposed to make an Exchange to his Spaniffic Laws. Which being no bettan his Spanific languistion (as indeed they are not) we could not without queflion receive great Comfort by the Exchange, 6v. Their intolerabl * Elfeabeth, having decreed with limiter, that netiner inc, nor any or tast entry a ratio to the Crown upon Govern England any more, de. While this Plot was laid, and the Practice was in hand, to fet the Crown upon the Spanyards Head, the Spanyards themfelves (in the Author's hearing) often curfed the time that ever their King Married Queen Many, unlefs they might get the Crown: But if that should be brought to pais (which was meant by making the Marriage) they should do wel enough, de. And to knit up all, this Marriage could not draw the leaft Spark of true Love from him to this Noble Queen, who to lovingly made choice of him to be her Husband: Nor the Honourable Acceptation of him by the Nobles, could work any found Love in him towards them.

(m) He dyed at Roffe in Leinfler, a Province of Ireland. His Monument was erected at the Costs of his Nephew eter Carew, who was Brother to George, whom K. James I. for his many Vertues created a Baron. So in the for-Peter Caren, who was mer English Edition.

(n) Cheek was Maried already; and left his Wife in England, when he went Abroad: And feeing little hope of his fafe or comfortable Dwelling in his Native Country, reforded to fettle himfelf at Straiburgh among other English Exils, both Learned and of Quality; where he also undertook the reading of a Greek Lecture, there being an University there. And now as it feems, had fent for the Lady Choek his Wife to come over to him: and in his way to feeth her, and to conduct her home, (not to Mary her) he mee with his Disfielt. For fowe must interpret that Clause of Sleidan, (and Thummy probably from him) at Unavon (not discrete, but) aducted. Sir John that

that Caron and Check were both bound to the of the English Name, and to fet us free at the bazard of their Liver, from Spanish Pride and Cruelty? You then, that are content to be made

But let us return to Wist; When he faw his Defign was laid open, and that he had nothing to rely upon besides his Courage, he made an Infurrection in Kon, using that Argument common to almost all the Heads of Sedition, That the Queen being influenced by Evil Counfellors, had already done feveral things, and was daily contriving more, which were pernicious to the good of the Kingdom; that therefore some Course must be taken to get those Ministers removd, and others put in their Places, who might discharge their Trust like faithful Counsellors, and such as were more fludious of the publick Advantage than of their private Gain. But above all, he clamour'd against the Spanish Match, and that twas highly necessary to try all means to break it off; an Alliance by which he plainly forefaw England was doom'd to the most insupportable Slavery, and the Popish Superstition wou'd be for ever Establish'd. Therefore what he had now in Defign wou'd be for her Majesty's Service, (to whom he wish'd all Happiness) and for the Universal Benefit of the Nation.

But whatever his Pretences were, when about the same time the News was spread, that Suffelk was raising Forces in Warwickshire, no body was so blind as not to perceive that the Drift of all these Efforts was to depose Queen

Mary, and reftore Lady Jane.

Jan. 15. On the 25th of January, News came to The Duke London of the Kentish Rebellion; and the same of Norfolk day the Duke of Norfolk was fent to suppress fent to day the Dike of Norpole was the to implies furpress it with a finall Force, conflitting chiefly of the kentlyh Queen's Guards. The next day 500 Men Sedition. Were rais'd in the City, who being fent down the River to Gravofend, where the Duke waited for 'em; with these he resolv'd to Attack Wiat who lay at Rochester, and kept his Head Quarters in the old ruinous Castle of that Town. This Place is fituate near the River Medway, where falling into the Thames, it is extremely violent: Over it is a Stone-Bridge, of which Wiat's Party had posses'd themselves, and fortify'd it with some Brass Guns, that they might oppose the Duke's Passage, whom their Scouts had inform'd 'em to be at hand. But he continu'd his March, not in the leaft daunted, and fent a Herald before, to pro-claim a Pardon to all who wou'd lay down their Arms, and quit the Rebels Camp. This was perform'd, but in fo low a Voice, that the Proclamation was heard by very few; for one that flood by, held a Pistol to the Herald's Breaft, and oblig'd him upon Pain of immediate Death, to deliver his Message fofily: To which, all that were nigh enough to hear it, made Answer, That they were conscious of no Crime that needed Her Majesty's Pardon. Sir George Harper only, seigning Repentance, came over to the Duke of Norfolk, with defign to try his Skill upon Bret, with Bret, who Commanded the 500 Men we mentioned before, and perfuade him to Defert. doners Re- He accomplish'd this so luckily, that before they came up to the Enemy, Bres suddenly drew his Sword, and turning to his Men, entreated 'em to confider what they were going to do, and against whom they were Marching: Are they not, fays he, our Friends and Countrymen, who have taken Arms to preferve the ancient Glory

Slaves, may tarry a God's Name with your General there, the Duke of Notfolk: For my felf, who had rather die a thousand times than be a Slave to the Spaniard, I'm refolv'd to feek better Fortune under the Noble Wiat; and I hope there are some at least among you, who will have the Wisdom and Bravery to accept of my Advice, and follow my Example.— He had scarce ended his Speech, when they all cry'd out, A Wiat! A Wiat! and began to turn their Arms upon those that follow'd 'em.

Norfolk was confounded at this fudden Re- Norfolk as volt, and immediately fled, together with the bandon'd Earl of Arundel, and Jernegam Captain of by his the Guard. But Wist came up that Moment Forces, is with a Party of Horfe, and intercepted the fly. rest: He seiz d 8 Brass Guns, and all Norfolk's Baggage; Then addressing himself to the Queen's Forces, he exhorted 'em to joyn him in fo just a Cause; but declared at the same time, that if any Man had a Mind to return to the Queen, he should have his Freedom: This only he faid he would request of those Deserters of their Country, that at their Return they wou'd let Her Majesty and the People know, that Wist call'd Heaven and Earth to witness that he did not take up Arms against his Soveraign, but only to oppose the Defigns of Foreigners upon the Liberty of his Country. Then the 500 under Bret, with many of the Guards, and the greatest part of the rest presently joyn'd Wist; who being slush'd with such a Reinforcement, refolv'd to march directly to London.

While these things pass'd in the City and suffalk fol-in Kent, the Duke of Suffalk, who left the licits an Town on the 25th of January with his two Infurction in vain. Ces, inviting the People to take up Arms against the approaching Spiniards; but finding twas to no purpose, he began to think of malking his Escape, when he heard that the Earl of Huntingdon with a Body of Horse was come from the Queen to feize him. He had then about Fifty Men with him: He knew 'twou'd be in vain to make any Refiftance with fo fmall a Party, in a Country that was not likely to affift him; therefore distributing his Money among 'em, he feign'd a Flight, and fending away his Brothers and the rest, he committed his Life to the sole Fidelity of one Underwood, whom he had made his Ran-ger at Aftley. This Fellow promis'd to conger at Aftley. ceal him, till he fhou'd have time to refolve on fomething for his Safety: But whether wrought upon by Fear, or by the hopes of a He is care wrong the hopes of a ryd Pvi Reward, he deliver'd his Master to Hunting- foner to don, by whom with a Guard of Three Hun-the Tower. dred Horse he was brought to London, and Imprison'd in the Tower on the 11th. of February.

In the mean time the Queen being con Fib. 51b. cern'd to keep the Landowers in their Duty, The and more particularly when She heard of the Speech to Defertion of Bree's Men, came into the City the Citi-February the 1st. attended by most of the No-zens. bility, and in Guild-Hall made a Speech to the Citizens; in which vehemently inveighing against Wiat, She represented his Rebellion as black as possible; faying, "That he only " made use of the Pretence of breaking the " Spanish Match, to cover the most Villanous 'Defigns. That having a little augmented 500 Lon-Wias.

Feb. 3d. Wist

comes to

London

" his Forces, he had proceeded to that degree | "of Madnefs and Impudence, as not only to "pretend in the Affair of the Marriage, but "to aim at the Cuflody of the Queen's Per-"fon, and to give Orders what Counfellors fhou'd attend Her, and who shou'd be Dif"charg'd and Punish'd. That in the Treaty " of the Match, She had done nothing with-" out the Advice of Her Nobles: That ha-" ving liv'd a Virgin the better part of Her " time, She was not now fo fix'd upon Mar-" rying, but that if the States of the Realm "thought proper, She wou'd gladly continue "in the same Condition. For it wou'd go to Her Heart, to think that by reason of Her "Contract, England shou'd be expos'd to the "Miseries of Fire and Sword, and all man-"ner of Confusion. Therefore She exhorted " 'em to keep firm to their Allegiance, and be " ready to affift Her just Revenge upon Tray-" tors. For this was their Duty, as having " with one Confent receiv'd Her for their " Queen, and the Rightful Successor of Her " Father and Brother.

Having thus confirm'd the Minds of the Londoners, She arm'd Five Hundred Men, most of 'em Forreigners; of which a select Party were posted to defend the Bridge, and the rest dispos'd in proper Places thro' the City.

Two Days after, on the 3d. of February, Wist came to London with Three Thousand, or as fome fay Four Thoufand Men: He had conceived mighty hopes that he should pre-fently be admitted into the City, and accom-plish his Ends without striking a Stroke; but he was deceiv'd. For advancing to the Bridge, he found it poffess'd by the Queen's Forces: However he remain'd in Southwork two Days, expecting that his Friends in the City wou'd in that time contrive fomething for his Affistance. But when he saw he did but lose his time, he march'd to Kingston, ten Mile from London, to take the Advantage of the Bridge there: He found it cut down, and Two Hundred Men posted on the opposite Bank; but these were foon dispers d at the fight of two Pieces of Ordnance brought up against em. After which, Wist with great diligence got the Bridge repair'd, and in the Evening brought over his Army: Then thinking that every thing now depended upon the fwiftness of his Motion, without allowing his Soldiers any Rest, he march'd for London, hoping to reach it before Break of Day, and furprize the Queen unprepar'd to oppose him. haps too he had not been disappointed, if Providence, which feldom prospers Rebels, had not by an unexpected Event retarded their March, or rather infatuated their Minds, that for a Trifle they might lose the oppor-tunity of effecting their Design. They were now within fix Miles of the City, when it happen'd that a Carriage of one of their Great Guns broke; fo that it cou'd not be brought any further. Some Hours were loft in repairing it, and Wiat wou'd not be per-fuaded to leave it behind him; fo that by this means he was not able to come up at the Hour appointed by his Lordon Friends. Upon which, many despairing now of Success, fled from Maryar many departing now or success, near now good to the Queen Number of his Forces. Among the reft, and diffee Sir George Harper, who had fhard all his Severs the crees, to explate his feignd Revolt by bewhole Confpire traying his Companions, went directly to the Queen, and discover'd the whole Conspi- 1554.

Her Majesty was in great Consternation at

it, and raifing in all haft fome Forces, gave the Command of 'em to the Earl of Pembroke. The Farl Wiat hearing of this, flacken'd his March, broke fent that he might not bring his Men fatigu'd a- against the gainst fresh Soldiers; so that by a flow Moti-Rebels. on he reach'd the Suburbs about Noon. Then planting his Ordnance on a Hill beyond St. James's, he left there the greatest part of his small Army, and advanc'd with Five Companies towards Ludgate, while Cutbert Vaughan with two Companies more, leaving St. James's on the Left, march'd towards Westminster. This was probably intended to make a Diversion, and favour Wiat's Passage by terrifying that Partof the Town. At Charing-Cross Sir John Gage, Lord Chamberlain, with the Guards and fome other Soldiers oppos'd Wiat. But whether unable to fuftain the Shock, or having receiv'd new Orders from the Queen, who perhaps was fearful of Vaughan, they foon retir'd in disorder to the Court, and fill'd it with Tumult and Confusion. The Earl of Pembroke in the mean time infested the Enemy's Rear, who hasting forward, and not facing about to receive him, loft a confiderable Number. But the Rebels boldly continu'd their March, crying out, Long live Queen Mary; and pretended that She had graciously granted their Requests. Then coming to Ludgate, they demanded Entrance; but being answer'd with nothing but Reproaches, they determin'd to return to their Companions the fame way they came, when unexpectedly they found themfelves Surrounded by the Earl of Pembroke's Horfe. Clarenceux King at Arms press d Wint to yield, and not by drawing on himself the Blood of 6 many Valiant Men, forfeit all Hope of the Queen's Mercy. The Soldiers feem'd refolute to try the worst of him directly to the Queen. The Rebels having loft their General, made no further Attempt; fome of 'em fled, the Prisons were filled with the reft. Thus on the 6th. of February was this Flame of Rebellion extin-guish'd. The Punishment of the Prisoners was next taken into Confideration; the first thing re-folv'd, was the Execution of Lady Jane, who had been Sentenc'd on the 13th of November, but was Repriev'd till now, not without fome hopes of a Pardon. But fince 'twas plain by Experience, how dangerous it wou'd be to let her Live; to remove all Caufe of Sedition 'twas thought fit to hasten her Death. To prepare her for it, Dr. Fecknam Dean of St. Paul's, and afterward Abbot of Westminster, was sent to her, and had orders to endeavour her Conversion to the Roman Religion. She was so far from receiving this fatal Summons with Terror, that fhe devoutly Bles'd God for it, but said, fhe had no time to spare now for Controversies, and thought that little which was allow'd her ought rather to be spent in Prayers and Supplication. Feckman miltaking her Defign in this Answer; as though the desir'd a Reprieve, went to the Queen and obtain'd three game ReDays. Then returning immediately, told her priev'd, what he had done, and Exhorted her to hearken to his Arguments, and to learn a better Faith.

She answer'd with a pleasant Countenance,

Alas! Sir, I did not intend that what I faid I filed ! Str. 1 at a not intend that where y and popular pout think me covetous of a Moment's longer Life, which were four Departure his beet to burdenfome to me, that I am only folicitious for a better Life in Eternity, and will gladly fuffer Death, fine 'tis her Mighty's Pleafare. When the Dean constituted that continu'd flill to urge her Return to the Romish Church, she made such extraordinary Anfwers, that whoever reads that Dispute, (for it was afterwards publish'd) must be aftonish'd to observe in one of her Age and Sex, such Conflarey of Mind, found Learning, and acute Wit. Her Husband, the Lord Guilford, being first to suffer, had obtaind leave to see her, and take his last Farewell; but she wou'd by no means consent to it, befeeching him to omit this as a fomenting of Grief, rather than a Confolation in Death, for they fliou'd shortly have an Interview in a better place, and be joyn'd in a stricter Union. Yet she had fuch Presence of Mind, as to look on him Lordguil, through the Window, when he pass of to the ford Bescaffold, and saw his headless Body afterwards brought back in a Carron he body afterwards brought back in a Cart to be interr'd in the Chappel of the Tower. There was no doubt but the Death of this innocent unhappy Lady wou'd excite Pity and Regret. 'Twas determin'd therefore not to bring her to the usual Place of Execution. But a Scaffold was hour or two after her Lord, on the 12th of February she was Beheaded. When she was And Lady brought out to fuffer, the Lieutenant of the Jane, Feb. Tower desir'd her to Favour him with some Memorial of her, upon which she ask'd for a Table-book, and wrote Three fhort Sentences in Greek and Latin (of both which Tongues she was a wonderful Mistress) and in English, by which she afferted her Innocence; and tho she own'd she had committed a Capital Error, yet she thought that among Men her Ignorance might without Injury to the Laws, have been allow'd in Excuse of it. At last having Saluted the Crowd as she went, with an unconcern'd Countenance, and defir'd their Prayers, she came to the Scaffold, holding Doctor Fecknam by the hand, whom fhe kindly embrac'd, faying, God will abundantly requite you, good Sir, for your Humanity to me, tho it gave me more uneafiness than all the Terrors of my approaching Death. Then turning to the Spectators, the modeftly related her Misfortune after this Manner.

"I am Condemn'd, not for grafping a Scepter, but for not refusing it when offerd; and my Death will be a memorable Instruction to Posterity, that Innocence is no Excuse for great Fasts which tend to the publick Detriment; for 'tis criminal enough to be made, tho ever so unwillingly, the unhappy Instrument of another's Ambition.

Having faid this, she commended her felf to the Divine Mercy; then with the Affiftance of the Ladies her Attendants, she took off her Gown, and the Ornaments of her Head and Neck, and having cover'd her Eyes with a Handkerchief, laid her Neck on the Block, and haften'd the Executioner when he delay'd to do his Office, which was at laft perforn'd, and drew Tears from the Eyes of the Speciators, even of those who from the first had espous d Queen Marr's Patry.

Such was the End of Lady Jane, a Petfon illustrious by Birth and Titles of her Ancestors, but much more so by her own Virtue and noble Endowments of Mind, who, says Thuamus, sway'd by the Ambirtion of her Father-in-Law, and of her Imperious Mother, assistant with fatal Title of Queen; and being suddenly hurry'd from a Throne to a Scassfold, suffer d for Guilt not her own, surmounting all these Institutions of adverse Fortune by her Innocence and amazing Constancy.

The Death of this illustrious Lady was follow'd two days after by the much juster Execution of What's Accomplices. Twenty Gibbets were erected in several Parts of the City, Rh.14,15, on which, upon the Fourteenth and Fiscenth of February Fifty of the Rebels were hang'd. On the 18th of the same Month, Alexander Bret, who carry'd over the five hundred Londoners from the Duke of Norfolk, was sent downs to be Executed in Kent, with abundance more, many of which were Persons of Condition and Figure. On the 20th, Four hun-20th, 440 dred of What's Party came with Halters about Pardon'd, their Necks, and obtain'd the Queen's Pardon'd. Hebruary 23, Henry Gray, Duke of Suff-Suffelk Beach ad formerly pardon'd, having receiv'd Sentence of Death on the 17th of the same Month, was beheaded, as indeed he deserv'd, being the chief Cause of all the Troubles which had hitherto distracted this Reign.

On the Eleventh of April came on Wiat's Execution, who in hopes of a Pardon, and infligated (as 'tis fuppos'd) by fome malicious wrat's Ex-Inftruments, among others whom he disco-ecution ver'd as privy to the Confpiracy, nam'd the Marquis of Exeter; infinuating, that in Revenge of Queen Mary's refusing him the Honour of being her Husband, he had confpir'd to Depose her, and by Marrying her Sister using the Throne. Upon this Accusation, Lady Elisthe Marquis was committed to the Tower on zakethand the 12th of February, and the Lady Elizabeth Marquis of Exter on the 18th of March. But Wiat as he was Prifoners going to Execution, being touch'd in Conscience, defir'd to fee the Marquis, and on his Knees begg'd his Pardon for having been in-Ances begg a instruction for naving been induced by hopes of Life to load him with for foul a Calumny. This was afterwards teltify'd by the Sheriffs, and many others, who faw and heard it. But the Bifnop of Winnbeffer, Lord Chancellour, who, fearing a Change of Religion by the Lady Elizabeth, was observ'd to use his utmost Endeavours to take her off, declar'd openly in the Star-Chamber, and cited the Lord Chandois as Witness to it, That Wiat a little before his Death had press'd the Marquis of Exeter to plead Guilty, and throw himself on the Queen's Mercy. This howehimself on the Queen's Mercy. This however had not the least Face of Probability; for 'twas certain, and univerfally known, that Wiat at the place of Execution, feeing no hope of a Pardon remain, when he was preparing to dye, did in the most folenm and religious Manner declare aloud, that the Lady Elizabeth, and Courtney Marquis of Exeter, were not all concern'd in his Treafon, not all concerns in this region.

April the 27th, Lord Thomas Gray was Be-Lord Theheaded for having push'd forward his Brother min Gray
the Duke of Suffolk, and been the chief InBeheaded, frument to engage him in Wais's Conspiracy.

On the 19th of May the Lady Elizabeth was remov'd from the Tower to Woodfock; and on the 25th, the Marquis of Exetor, to Federingay :

gg; but both still remain'd close Prisoners. About the fame time, Cranmer, yet ArchbiADifpute floop of Canterbury, Rilley lately deprived of the See of Landon; and Hugh Latiner, who long before refigned his Bishoprick of Worcester, were remov'd from the Tower to Windfor, and thence to Oxford, there to Dispute publickly with the Divines of both Univerlities, concerning the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper. They were forc'd to engage in this upon the most unequal Terms imaginable; for, having but Two Days allow'd 'em to prepare for it, they were all the while kept close Prifoners, and not fuffer'd to speak with any Friend, nor allow'd the Use of their own Papers and Books. The Controverfy was nothing but Clamour and Confusion; and they were attack'd by several asking the same Questions att once, without either Order or Civility.

On the 14th of April, being brought from their Prifons to St. Mary s, they were commanded to Subfcribe to the Popith Doctrine; which when they refused, several Days were appointed 'em for Difputing. The 16th. for Cranmer, the 17th for Ridley, and the 18th for Latimer; at which times they were fingly to Answer to all Opponents. The they were confounded with Noise, and distracted with the Multitude and Variety of Questions propos'd together; tho they were abus'd with low:

Scoffs and Reproaches, and over-born with Numbers, yet they extorted the unwilling Admiration of their Adversaries : For Cranmer answer'd with the greatest Learning, and with a Gravity becoming that Dignity he had fo many Years possess of Ridley with wonderful Promptitude and Acuteness; and Latimer with a pleasant Sharpness, and with more Strength of Reason than cou'd be expected from a Man who was near Fourfcore. After this Dispute, on the 20th of the same Month, they were brought again to St. Mary's, and being ask'd, whether they perfifted in their Opinions; when they affirm'd that they did, they were adjudg'd Hereticks, and Con Crammer, demn'd to be Burn'd. They all receiv'd the Ridey and Sentence with admirable Conftancy; Lati-Con-mer even Triumphing, that God wou'd Ho-demn'd to nour him with fo glorious a Period of a long be burn'd Life, which according to Nature must quickly have expir'd. What became of these excellent Perfons afterwards, we shall relate in the next Year's Transactions.

In the mean time, on the 2d of April, the Parliament met (0), to whom the Queen pro- a Parliapos'd Two Things; her Marriage, and the ment. Reftoring the Pope's Supremacy. The laft of these fine cou'd not yet Obtain; the other was The Sparaflented to on certain Conditions, such as fol- with March.

Account of (a) This Second Parliament began April 2. on a Monday in this first of the Queen. Then the Bishop of Windless College of the Queen for the Queen for the Causes of the Corroboxation of true causes for the Causes of the Corroboxation of the Queen for the Causes of the Corroboxation of the Causes of t Consent: Lo prove which, Appez and others published Droks in English tome time after.

The rich day was the Bill first read, touching the Articles agreed on fir the Marriage between the Queen and the Noble Prince Philip of Spain, Son and Heir to the Emperor CHARLES the Fifth. Which Bill was read again the 12th And again the 12th day.

again the 11th. And again the 12th day.

Another confiderable Bill brought into this Parliament, and paft at laft, was for the refloring and erecting the Bifloprick of Durbam; which the Queen had done as much as She could before, by Letters-Patents. This Bill (whereby many were like to become Lofers) met with much opposition; because King Edward had given and fold away to the Town of Noweaftle, and to other particular Perions, fome Parts of the Lands and Revenues of the faild Bifloprick: First, the Burgelles of Noweaftle exhibited a Provise for the Town of Gatecide, and the Sait Meadows to continue annexed to Noweaftle, according to an Akt made in the late Reign. Another Provise was brought in upon another Reading of the Bill, for certain Lands, parcel of the Bifloprick, that had been granted to Sir John 1966 by King Edward VI. and another Provise general for Sir Fanuti 1966, for his Patent of those Lands and Touffait the Biflop of Durbam finding the Bill thus like to be clogged, came into the Lower House himself; and declared his whole Caulic concerning his Bill, and his Troubles occasioned by the late Duke of Novethmeller. Truffal the Bishop of Durbam stading the Bill thus like to be clogged, came into the Lower Houle himself, and declared his whole Caule concerning his Bill, and his Trubles occasioned by the late Duke of Northamherland; and afterwards required the House to consider his Bill. The Day after, which was the 19th Day of April, there was an Argument upon the Bill; and upon the Question the House divided, and the Number that far so to the Bill was 201; and the Number against it was 120. But it was agreed by the House, that Mr. Speaker in their Names should require the stad Bishop to shew favour to Sir Fanneir Justien in this Suit. But in the Act there is neither Consideration nor Provis made for the Town of Novaesille, or any other Persons, except Francis Earl of Shrewbary, to enjoy the Bishop's House of Coldhober in the Parish of Albalows Barking, London, and three other Medluages or Tenements in the Parish of Graficharch, London, which K. Edward had given him. There were several Bills brought in and read abour Religion (which was the second great Business of calling this Parliament) but passed not into Acts: As a Bill to review certain Statutes touching Hereses and Lollardies. Another was a superior can be a superior with the superior calling this Parliament) but passed not into Acts: As a Bill to review certain Statutes touching Hereses and Lollardies. Another was a superior can be a superior calling the superior can be superior to the superior calling this Parliament) but passed not into Acts: As a Bill to review certain Statutes touching Hereses and Lollardies.

There were feveral Bills brought in and read about Religion (which was the fecond great Butlines of calling this Parliament) but paffed not into Atks: As a Bill to revive certain Statutes rouching Herefies and Lollardies. Another (to be even with that) to avoid the Statute of the Six Articles, made 31 H. 8. And another, that the Bills of Rome Hall not convent any Perfon for any Abby Lands. Which was read again; to the Biftop of Rome was added, or any other Spiritual Perfon; meaning, perhaps, Cardinal P.O. L. E., who was e't long to come as his Legate. Another, for extripating Herefies, and Erroncous Opinions and Books: Another, to avoid Penfons of Married Priefis: Another, for the Election of Scholars in the Univertities: Perhaps that fuch only thould be elected in fuch Places, as thould fublicative or fwear certain Matters for the furer preferving them in Papiftry. Another Bill for avoiding Playing Houles. Another, for Unlawful Affemblies.

Their Bills either could note, or perhaps were not thought convenient now to pafs, and fo were floor either in

Their Bills either could not, or perhaps were not thought convenient now to paß, and so were stopt either in the Lower or Upper House; the Marters for the further Etlablishment of the Popish Religion, being as in Rewar intended to be more fully profectured in a longer Selfion than this could be; and another Parlament-being likely to

The bestere disposed to do it, after the Marriage with Catholic PHILLTO

In many be noted further in this Parlament, that one Mr. Boamson of the House of Commons, and his Wise, had served a Subpean upon the Earl of Hamington in Parlament time. Whereat the Lords were offended: And popularly. Sett some of the Judges to the Lower House, bringing the Subpean with them; and prayed the Order the House for this Offence. And it was ordered that Eight of the faid House should declare to the Lords, That they took this Writ to be no Breach of Privilege.

May the 5th in the Aftennoon, the Queen came into the Parlament Chamber, and gave her Royal Assent to 15 Acts; and then that Second Parlament was dissolved.

Tourn. Comm. Houle.

"That the Prince of Spain shou'd not Ad-"Yant the Frince of opan more and the five ware any to Publick Offices, but fuch as "were Natives of England, and Subjects to "the Queen. That he shou'd admit a certain Number of English in his Houshold, "The Analysis with Pelport and Public Publi "whom he shou'd treat with Respect, and not suffer 'em to be insulted by Foreign-"ers. That he shou'd not carry the Queen out of England, unless She desir'd it, nor any of the Children which might spring " from this Marriage; who shou'd be Educa-"ted in England; nor fuffer'd to go out of the Realm, but upon Necessity, or some good Reason, and that with the Consent of the English. That if the Queen shou'd Die "without Iffue, the Prince shou'd have no "Claim in the Kingdom, but shou'd leave it "free to the Legal Successor; and shou'd make no Innovations in any of the Rights, "either publick or private, the Immunities or "Cuftoms of the Realm, but fhou'd preferve "em entire and inviolate. That he shou'd "'em entire and inviolate. "not be permitted to Transport any Jewels or Goods belonging to the Crown, nor to "Alienate any of the Royal Patrimony. "That he shou'd preserve the Shipping, Ar-"tillery and Stores, and keep in good Repair the Castles and Fortify'd Places. Lastly, "That this Match shou'd not at all derogate "from the League lately concluded betwixt the Queen of England, and the King of " France; but the Peace shou'd remain invio-" late between the English and French: Yet the "Prince shou'd be at Liberty to fend Aids out of other Kingdoms and Dominions to his "Father the Emperor, either to keep off In-" juries, or to revenge those already receiv'd.

All things being thus agreed, and no Im- 1554pediment remaining to oblituet the Nuprials, Pr. Philip Philip Embark'd, and fetting Sail July 26. Pr. Philip from the Greine, arriv'd three days after at to Eng. Southampton, with a Fleet confifting in all of land. a Hundred and Sixty Sail; among which were 20 English, and as many Flemish. From Southampton, where he rested three days, attended by a numerous Train of Spaniards and tended by a numerous 11am of of English, on the 24th of July in a very wet the Oneen at Winchester. The day he came to the Queen at Winchester. The Festival of St. James, the tutelary Saint of the Spaniards, was the Day appointed for the Nuptials, which were celebrated at Winchester TheNupwith great Magnificence. At which time tials. Don Juan Figueroa in the Emperor's Name refign'd the Kingdom of Naples and Sicily, and transferr'd all Right therein to Philip. Then were their Titles publickly proclaimed by the Heralds in Latin, French, and English. (p) About the beginning of August the Royal Pair came to Basing, and thence to Windsor, where King Philip on the 5th, of the fame Month was Install'd Knight of the Garter. Angust the 11th, they made a fplendid Entry at Lon- Aug. 11th. don, being receiv'd by the City with all manner of Expence and Solemnity. On the 11th. of November a Parliament A Parlia-met again. (q) About the beginning of this ment, Seffion, Pole came into England, who had Cardinal been declard by King Henry the Eighth an Pole's Ar-Franch to the Server 1. Enemy to the State, had been created Cardi- rival in nal by Paul the IIId. and might have been England. chosen Pope if he had consented in time, and who (as we before observ'd) had been mark'd out by some as a proper Husband for the Queen. After he had loft the Chair, by the

(2) But neither the Queen, nor the Nation were likely to have any great Bleffing of this Spanish P HILLIP: For, fast was Recorded of him, and experienced in his Reign very smply) in Diffimulation he furpaffed all Nassive strongs, till he had obtained his Purpofe; and when he could once prevail, he went beyond all in Operfoon and Haftings's Tyranny. Alfo, that he didained all other Nations; and in Pride and Carnal Voluptuousnels, no Nation came Martishnear him. And their were the Qualities of this Prince, whom the Queen had now against the Grain of the En. mored, 992, 3/19, obtained for Her Husband.

(a) Queen MARY'S Third Parliament, commonly called the 1. and 2. of Philip and Mary, began the 12th of Nevember. The Bithop of Wintehfor Lord Chancellor, declared this Parliament to be called for Confirmation of Tourn. True Religion, and other weighty Affairs. After his Oration was ended, the Knights, Citizens and Burgeffes Houfe of came to the Commons Houle, and there did elect and chule Clamant Higham, Elig, one of the Privy-Council, to be Commons thouth and Speaker; who was brought to the Chair by Mr. Treafurer and Mr. Comptroller. The faid Mr. Speaker, Nev. 15. made an excellent Oration, comparing the Body Politick to a Body Natural. And in the End, made Three Petitions; wiz. For free Speech in the Houle: Liberty from Arreft and Trouble for the Commons, and their Servants: And to have ready Access to the King and Queen for the Eafe of the Houle. Which being granted, the Lord Chancellor Prorogued the Court until Saturday following; which was the 17th. Day of Nevember.

mons, and their Servants: And to have ready Access to the saing some strength, and their Servants: And to have ready Access to the Saing stated, the Lord Chancellor Prorogued the Court until Saturday following; which was the 17th. Day of Newtonker.

This Parliament made it felf remarkable for two Things: One was for taking off the Attainder of Cardinal Work was the 18th of Newtonker.

This Parliament made it felf remarkable for two Things: One was for taking off the Attainder of Cardinal Work was the 18th of Newtonker. The former was done with great freed, and much Honor to the Cardinal Cardinal For on the 19th of Newtonker, the Bill to take off his Attainder was brought from the Lords by the Mafter half before the Rolls, and Mafter Pollicitor: And the fine day it was read once, and a fector dittier, the 18th of the Next day, length the 20th of Newtonker, the Bill to take off his Attainder was brought from the Lords by the Mafter half the next day, length the 20th of the Rolls, and Mafter Pollicitor: And the Speaker; and Mr. Treafurer declared to the Houseful the King and Queen would be the 18th enterties, and Mr. Speaker; and Mr. Speaker; and Mr. Speaker the Rolls, and for made it a perfect Ma.

On the 21th day of Newtonker, Mr. Speaker declared, it was the King and Queen's Pleafure, that the Houseful Rolls of the Charles of the Charles of the Cardinal Concerning his Legatic. On the day after hearing the faid Cardinal's Declaration, Mr. Speaker shewel that the Ind Legate had moved them the Gommons, to come again to the Unity of the Church from the which they were fallen. And the Mafter of the Rolls, and Mr. Sollicitor declared from the Lords, that they had appointed the Lord Charles for four benefit of the Rolls, and Mr. Sollicitor declared from the Lords, that they had appointed the Lord Charles for four benefit of the Rolls, and Mr. Sollicitor declared from the Lords, that they had appointed the Lord Charles for the King and Queen: Which was Engroffed; and then it was agreed by the Houle to be preferred to t

1554. fault of another rather than his own, with the Leave of the new Pope Julius, he withdrew into the Territory of Verona to a Mona-flery of Benedictines, call'd Maguzano; of ftery of Benedictines, call'd Maguzano; of which Order he had been Patron while he continu'd at Rome. While he thought to live in private there the remainder of his Days, the News of King Edward's Death and Queen Mary's Succession, drew him once more to Rome. He knew very well how Zealous a Daughter of the Roman Church the Queen was, and hop'd with very good Reason that Julius, who much esteem'd him, having by Pole's Delays been chiefly affisted to obtain the Papacy, wou'd now send him with the Honour and Authority of a Legate into England. From this he promised to himself the absolute Direction of the Church at least, if not the State, by vertue of his Legantine Commission, and the Dignity of Archbishop of Canterbury. While he was a Child, Queen Mary had been Educated for some time under the Care of his Mother Margaret Countess of Salisbury, by the Direction of Queen Catharine; who was suppos'd to have defign'd a Match for her with one of the Countess's Sons, to strengthen her 1554. Title to the Crown, in case King Henry dy'd without Male-Issue; for this Lady was Daughter to George Duke of Clarence, Brother to Edward the Fourth. The Cardinal, whether for this, or for any other Reason, knowing himfelf to be in great Esteem with the Queen, was fure, if not of the Crown by Marriage, yet of all the highest Advantages of Her Fa-vour. Nor was he deceiv'd: For Mary no fooner was advanc'd to the Throne, than she invited him over with very great Promifes and the Pope knowing he wou'd be a faithful Sollicitor of his Interest in England, at the Queen's Request, sent him immediately with ample Authority (*). But the Emperor, who The Emfecting formewhat jealous of the Cardinal's Properor's jeft, and had another of his own in favour of his Son Philip, which he defign'd by all pofficient pedie at his ble means to promote, began to treat earnest-Court. ly with Cardinal Dandino, the Pope's Legate at his Court, about concluding of a Peace between himfelf and the French, By this Stratagem he defign'd to retard Pole in his Journey, that he might not arrive in England foon

The News of this Reconciliation King Philip wrote in a Letter in Spanijh to the Pope, with wonderful Joy; and Cardinal Pale in Latin: Both dated November the 30th, that is, the very day wherein the Matter was done. The Translation of both are likewise preferved in Far's Marryrology.

The Evil of this Submiffion to the Pope, and Union with the pretended Catholick Church, foon appeared, by the feveral Bloody Acts that paffed this Settion, and the Bloody Acts that followed in this Kingdom during the reft of the Reign. The Acts were the feet of the Reign.

An A& to revive Three Statutes made for the Punishment of Herefy; viz. the 5. R. II. the 7. H. IV. and the 2. H. V. An Act repealing all Statutes, Articles and Provisions, made against the See Apostolic of Rome, since the 2016. ear of King Honry VIII.

An Aft repealing all Statutes, Articles and Provisions, made against the one Apostolic of Rome, nuclear active. Year of King Honry VIII.

An Aft for Traiterous Words, spoken or to be spoken against the Queen.

An Aft whereby certain Offences are made Treason.

Besides these Bills that past, other Bills were brought in that passed not, intended for the hampering of Minissers and People of the Protestant Religion; as,

A Bill for those that had been Married Priests, or Seditious Preachers, not to be Schoolmasters.

A Bill against Seditious Schoolmasters. This Bill was, as it seems, new-made, and intitled, A Bill against Erroneous Schoolmasters.

A Bill to avoid Leafes made by Married Priests.

A hir to about Letter made by married Trient.

Another Bill, (which perhaps was the fame new-modelled) touching Leafes by Spiritual Persons, to be avoided after Resignation and Non-Residence.

January 16, in the Afternoon, the King and Queen gave their Royal Affent to One and twenty Bills: 17 whereof are printed. And thereupon this Parliament was Dissolved, having done and undone enough of Conficience.

(r) This ample Authority wherewith the Pope dispatched our Cardinal, will appear by the Bull wherein he confitured him his Legite de Lavere, and by a Commission he gave him for the reconciling of the Clergy and Laity england to the Church of Rome: Which Commission is extant in an Act of Parliament in the 1. and 2. of Philip and Marry, cap. 8. and may there be read. But the Bull being not so common, may not be unworthy to be set Pole's Re- down in this place.

and Many, cap. 8. and may there be read. But the Bull being not fo common, may not be unworthy to be feet gift to the followin in this place.

GULTUS Epileope Serven Serven me, &c. i. e. JULTUS Bilhop, Servent of the Servants of God, to our before the lives of the servants of God, to our before the lives of the servants of God, to our before the lives of the servants of God, to our before the lives of t

Church.
That therefore after very mature and deliberate Thoughts, he the Cardinal, was not only the first, but the onby Man that occurred to his Mind, to whom above all he might commit this Care: And that conflitting with his Brethren the Cardinals of the Holy Roman Church, by their unanimous Alfent and Confent, he made choice thin, as his and the Apollotic Sees Legate to the fame Queen MAR1, and the whole Realmof England. For Liftly, whether he regarded his Person, which the high Giver or any other Vertues; He judged him most fitty qualified for this Legation enough to disconcert his Measures. Dandino 1554. therefore, to gratify the Emperor, fent Letters to Pole by Francisco Commendano, advising him not to fet forward yet, for the Emperor was displeas'd with that Legacy, which was undertaken without his Approbation; besides, that the English for the most part, and especially the Londoners, had fuch an Aversion to the Pope, that a Legate ought not to be fent, till they were brought to a Temper to admit of it. Pole having received these Letters at the Monastery of Maguzano, thought it not proper to proceed till he had further Orders from the Pope; who being jealous of the Emperour's increase of Power, by the Accession of fo many Dominions, refented Dandino's officioufness, and recalling him, conferr'd on Pole the whole Legatine Power both into Englind, and to the Emperour and the French, for transacting a Peace.

Pole willingly undertook this double Charge, and now began his Journey; when he came to Trent he dispatch d Expresses both to the Emperour and the King of France to certify them of his Commission. The Emperour perceiving that he was no longer to be delay'd by Stratagems, fends Mendoza to him, with Letters plainly confessing his Fear, that Pole's further Progress wou'd obstruct some Affairs of great Moment depending; and therefore he defir'd him to flay where he was, till those Affairs were concluded, or to proceed to Liege and there expect his further Orders. Pole, upon the Receipt of these Letters, return'd to Dilling, not far from Trent, from whence he certifies the Pope of the whole Business, and writes at the same time an Expostulation to the Emperour, representing what an Indignity 'twas, that his Holiness's Legate sent to transact the Cause of Peace and of Religion, shou'd be stop'd in the midst of Germany, in the view of Hereticks, and that by his Imperial Majesty's own Direction, to the utmost Disgrace of the Holy Chair. Domingo Soto, a great Divine, and Preacher in ordinary to the Emperour, was then at Dilling. By him he prefles the Emperour that he wou'd no longer retard him, to the great Detriment of Chriflianity, and especially of the English Nation. At last, when his Imperial Majesty had receiv'd advice, that the Marriage Articles were agreed on, Pole with much difficulty obtain'd leave to come to him at Bruffels, but on Condition that he shou'd tarry there till the Nuptials of Philip and Mary were Solemniz'd. To his Devoirs to the Emperour who received him with a World of Civility, that his time might not be Confum'd to no purpose, he enters upon the other Part of his Commission to mediate a Peace between his Imperial Majesty and the King of France. He try'd the Emperour first, who seeming not averse to it upon reaso-nable Terms the Cardinal goes to France to treat the same Affair, but in short, such was the inveterate Hatred betwixt these Princes, that he cou'd effect Nothing; yet King Henry had made as fair a shew as the Emperor, and Embracing Pole at his Departure, declar'd a wonderful Sorrow that he had not the Happiness to know him fooner; for he wou'd not have wish'd to see any other in the Pontifical Chair, if he had been truly appriz'd of his great Virtues.

A little after his return to Bruffels, came the Lords Paget and Haftings Embassadours to the Emperour from Philip and Mary, who fignify'd their earnest Desire to see the Cardinal, and defir'd his Dismission by the first Opportunity, that by the Pope's Authority he might fettle the Ecclefiastical Affairs in his own Country which by a long Schism had been miserably disorder d. In September he had leave for his Departure, but was detain'd till the next Month by adverfe Winds, and then embarking, soon arriv'd at Dover.

He was received by the King and Cueen Pole's Rewith the highest Marks of Honour, as like-ception in wife by all the Nobility who feem'd at least England. to be full of Joy. And because in the year 1539 he had been attainted by the Parliament, the Act of Attainder was now repealed, the King and Queen coming to the House after an extraordinary manner to Sign the Repeal before his Arrival at London. A little after his coming, both Houses were affembl'd, and the King and Queen being prefent, the Lord Speech to Chancellour having notify'd the Cardinal's the Ethates grateful Arrival, Pole himfelf in his native in Parla-ment. dinary Acknowledgments to their Majesties, to the Lords, and Commons by whose favour his Banishment and Proscription being repeal'd, he was restor'd to the Rights and Privileges of his Native Country: "And the best " Return, he faid, which in Duty and Gratitude he cou'd make for fo great an Obligati-

"he wou'd by Authority from Christ's Vi-car bring em back to the Fold, and so re-"flore 'em to their heavenly Inheritance. "Therefore he exhorted 'em ingenuously to acknowledge and detest the Errors of the "late times, and with fincere alacrity of " Mind to accept and retain the Benefit which "God by his Vicar's Legate offer'd to 'em. " For, fince he was come with the Keys to " open to 'em the Church Gates, nothing now " remain'd than that as they had open'd a way

" on was this, that fince by the late Schisim " they had become Exiles from the Unity of " the Church and the Kingdom of Heaven,

"for his Return, by abrogating the Laws which made him an Exile, fo they should " abrogate all those Laws too, which being "lately made against the Apostolical See, " wholly seperated them from the Body of the " Church.

After he had made a long Harangue to this Effect, and ranfack'd Antiquity for Examples to flew how religiously their Forefathers were ^{&#}x27;Wherefore by these present Letters he recommended this Office to the Cardinal's Circumspection: That he staking it upon him, according to that his Piery towards God, that Reverence towards him [the Pope] and the Holy See, with that Study and Love of his rowards the Christian Commonwealth, would perform it with Faithfulness, Diligence and Dexerrity; and would omit nothing to obtain, by the Assistance of God, the desired Frain of his Legation, by comforting those that were fallen into Error, and restoring them to the Grace of God, and the Commonion of the Holy Catholic Church. The hope of which he especially placed in the Mercy of God, and, next to God, as well in his Care, Prudence, and Virtue, as in the godly Piety, Wildom and Devotion of Queen MART. It was Dated at Rome, at S. Mark's, the Year of our Lord 1553 August the 5th, the Fourth eyear of his Pontificare.

Ýуг

premacy reftor'd, and the folv'd

devoted to the See of Rome, the Gravity of his Countenance, his fmooth Language, and the elegant Method of his Discourse, so sentibly affected the Devotees of Popery, that they believ'd themselves just then regenerated to the hopes of Salvation : Yet there were fome of the House of Commons who strenu-ously opposed the submitting again to the Roman Yoke; but in fine, by the pressing In-slances of the King and Queen, all things were concluded to the Cardinal's Satisfaction. The Pope's former Authority in this Realm The Was restor'd, and the Title of Supreme Head of the Pope's Su. Church abrogated from the Crown; a Petition for absolving the Clergy and Laity from the Crime of Herefy was prefented by the Bifhop Realmab- of Winebester, Lord Chancellour, to the Legate, who pronouc'd the Abfolution in English, all the Effates Kneeling. After this they went in Procession to the Chappel Royal, Singing Te Deum; and on the Sunday following, at Paul's-Crefs the Bishop of Winchester in his Sermon related the particulars of that Day's Proceedings. Things being thus order'd, a most honourabaffy fent ble Embaffy is appointed to the Pope, which the Queen had promis'd upon her first coming to the Crown. For as fhe then refolv d to Re-establish Popery, she had privately written to Pole and inform'd him of her Defigns. The Pope, upon this, had dispatch'd Giovanni Francisco Commendano, his Chamberlain, who was afterwards made a Cardinal, into England, to inspect the State of the Nation. He had fome fecret Conferences with the Queen, and receiv'd a Paper from her, in which under her hand she promis'd Obedience to the See of Rome, and defir'd that the Realm might be absolv'd from the Interdict; to obtain which, the oblig'd her felf to fend a Solemn Embaffy as foon as the State fhou'd be Settl'd. Accordingly, about the End of this Year, the Bifhop of Ely, Sir Anthony Brown, and Edward Carne Doctor of Laws, are fent to Rome, in the Name of King Phillip and Queen Mary, to promife Obedience to his Holiness and the Apostolick Chair. But all this pre-paration was to no purpose; for before they Arriv d the Pope was dead.

An Em-

In the mean time the Queen finding all her Measures hitherto crown'd with Success and Applause, while the House was still sitting, began to try the Nobility, upon permitting

Philip to wear, if not the Int-

* As being a Matter withprecedent, and that might perchance, to an Ambitious Prince give fome Colour for Claim to the Kingdom. Laft Engl. Edit.

perial Crown which the Kings of England wear at their Coronation, at least the Crown of the Queen-Confort. But finding 'em averse to this *, she forbore any further Motion of it.

Her next Endeavour was the Restitution of the Church-Lands; but because the greatest part of 'em had been many years posses'd by Queen's the Nobility, nothing cou'd be effected. On- endeavour ly 'twas decreed that the first Fruits and Tenths to restore granted to the King by the Clergy, in the the Church Year 1534. should now be remitted. Yet this Lands. Decree was foon revok'd, because the Treasury was fo low, and fo great the Penfions to be paid yearly ro the ejected Monks, that such a Branch of the Revenue could not be spared.

1554.

About this time happened an abfurd (not to fay a ridiculous) thing, occasion'd by the Queen Queen's Credulity, and increas'd by the Flat-fuppos'd tery of those about her. She had a Swelling to be with in her Belly, by a Distemper which Phyficians call a Mole, or fomething of the like Nature. And other Symptoms feeming to concur, the gave her felf up to the Tales of Midwives, and neglecting the Advice of Phyficians, believ'd fo certainly fle was with Child, that she affirm'd she felt the Motion of the Embryo. 'Tis usual it seems in that Diftemper, for the fleshy Substance which is call'd the Mole to feem sometimes to move, and that with a flow and gentle Agitation of the whole Belly. But there were other Indi-cations, if she had taken proper Advice, which made it not difficult to know the Diftemper, which is generally incurable, if not apply'd to at first. So that in process of time, her Liver being over-cool'd, she fell into a

Dropfy, which is usual, as Fuchfius and other

Physicians write. In the mean time, the Queen's Error being fomented by Sycophants, not only was fatal to her in a few years, as she afterwards own'd, but in the mean time expos'd her to the infinite Scoffs and Ridicule of her Enemies. For on the 27th of November, the Privy-Council fent fome Mandates to the Bishop of London, requiring him to cause Te Deum to be sung, and a general Thanksgiving to be given to Almighty God for his great Mercy to this Realm, in giving her Majesty certain hopes of an Offspring, by quickning the Embryo; and that the Priefts shou'd pray for the prefervation of the Queen and the Infant, and for her happy Delivery. A Form of Prayer was composed for this Occasion, and printed Copies of it dispers'd through the whole Kingdom. Several things were enacted in Parliament relating to the future Education of the Babe; and much ado there was with all the necessary preparations of Cradle, Swadling-Clouts, and such Trumpery to no purpose, for at last in the Month of June they were undeceiv'd, and the Nation wak'd from this ridiculous Dream. (1).

This

(s) Hollingshed in his Chronicle hath exemplified the Letter of the Privy-Council to Boner Bishop of London, con (1) Hollingthed in his Chromicle hath exemplified the Letter of the Privy-Council to Bone Billion of Chromos, Contenting the Queen's fuppoled quickening with Child: The Contents whereof were, to direct and other him that the good News of it flould by him be publified in al parts of his Diocels; and that he himfelf flould give God Thanks in his wown Perfon for this fpecial Grace; and tog iye out his Commands, that Thanks be returned openly by finging of Te Denm in all Churches; and that al Prieffs and Ecolefattical Perfons in their Maffes and Diving Services, continually pray to God that this Thing begun by his Omnipotent Power, might be continued and brought to good Effect. There he also the Prayers to be used on this Occasion, set down in the faid Chronick, which are I three in Number; whereof one, usef, I suppose, in the Abby-Church of Woffminfer, is faid to be made by Dr. Wyson Dean of that Church.

made by Dr. Weften Dean of that Church.

And that which was done by Parliament upon this expected Heir of the Crown to be Born, was, That King Philip the Father, being requeited by the faid Parliament, that if the Queen flould be taken out of the World denied to the Conder and Education of the faid Hille. Upon which Requeft, the King did promife to accept and take upon him the Rule. Order, and Education of the faid Hille. Upon which Requeft, the King did promife to accept and take upon him the faid Care and Charge of the Education of first Child, and that during the time of fuch Covernment of the Child, he would fludy and travail to advance the Weal of this Realmaccording to the Truft in his faid Majethy repoided: And for according to that Purpot at a Act was made. But happy it was, that the Heir of this Kingdom, and the Kingdom it fall had no Occasion for the Covernment of the Kingdom state of the Spaniards.

In

Lords were Created; 18 wart worth, "Baron Cherdige; John Brigge 1554.

Lord William Haward, Lord Howard of Effingham; † Lord Chandou; Gerard, "Earl of terested be was Father to Charles Howard, Admiral of Riddire; Anthony Brown; Vicount Montague.

And in September dy'd Thomas Duke of Ner-April 5, ams was made † Lord Williams of Tame; Ed-Jolk.

This Year feveral Lords were Created; As mard North, * Baron Cherilege; John Brugget 15 William Haward, Lord Howard of Effingham; † Lord Chindon; Gerwil Fitz-Gerard, * Earl of

Anno Dom. 1555. Regina Maria, 2. 6 3. Philippi 1. 6 2.

Prifeners charg'd, Jan. 18.

N the 18th. of January, the Bishop of out this Year, to the destroying of great Winchester Lord Chancellor, with fix others of the Privy-Council, coming to the Tower, discharg'd several Noble Prisoners; viz. The Archbithop of Took, Sir Edwir Re-gers, Sir James Croft, Sir Nieholas Throgmorten, Sir Nieholas Arnold, Sir Edward Warner, Sir George Harper, Sir William Sentlow, Sir Gawin Carew, and Sir Andrew Dudle, the Duke of Northumberland's Brother; and besides these, William Gibs, Cuthert Voughen, Hiringt a, Tremain, and others. The Archbishop for hamain, and others. The Archbillop for having Marry'd was Deprivd, and his See fill'd with Nicholas Hath, formerly Bishop of Wircesser, removed by King Edward, and lately reflor'd by Queen Mary, Hooper (the former Bishop) being ejected and condemn'd to be Burn'd. Rogers and Crofts were afterwards of the Privy-Council to Queen Eliz buth, and flourish'd many Years in great Authority with Her. Throgmorton, a very fubtle Man, was thought to have been the Contriver of Wiat's Rebellion; his Life therefore was principally aim'd at: But when he was Arraign'd, by his most ingenious Answers he so cluded the Ac-cusation of his Adversaries, that after Ten Hours spent in his Trial, the Jury brought him in not Guilty; for which they were afterwards feverely Fin'd.

The Marguik of Exeter was fent for; and a little after, the Exter of Lady Elizabeth, who were brought from the chargd. Tower to Court. The Marquis was foon difcharg'd: But it was long debated, what shou'd be done with Lady Elizabeth; for the Papists were refolv'd to take away her Life by the first opportunity, if they cou'd have found the least Colour for it. The Bishop of Winchefer, upon any Discourse concerning punishing Hereticks, is reported to have said, We may linke off the Leaves, and lop the Brunches, but if we do not destroy the Root, the Hope of Hereticks, (meaning Lady Elizabeth) we do reticks, (meaning Lady Elizabeth) we do nothing. But after the strictest Scrutiny, no probable Ground of Accusation appearing, tho' 'twas fuggested by some that her Liberty wou'd indanger the Queen, yet at the Inter-cession of Philip, who affected the Reputati-And Lady on of Clemency, about the latter end of Elizabeth. April the obtain'd her Freedom: But 'twas with this Condition; That she shou'd be oblig'd to keep in her Family Thomas Pope, one of the Privy-Council, Gage, and fome others, who were to be conflant Spies upon her Acti-

This small Spark of Clemency was obscur'd by very great Flames of Cruelty which broke

Numbers of Pious Men on the fole account of Religion. On the 4th of February, John Rogers was burn'd, the Proto-Marryr of those Times. He was the Companion of Tindal, who first Translated the Bible into English; after whose Death, fearing Persecution, he declin'd returning into his own Country, (being newly Marry'd) went with his Wife to Wittenberg: There having attain da competent Knowledge of the German Tongue, he became Patter of a Church; which Trust he faithfully administer'd, till in King Edward's Reign lie was recall'd from Banishment, and made a Prebend and Lecturer of St. Paul's by Ridley Bishop of Lendon. When Mary was fix'd in the Throne, the Papists endeavour'd to terrify him with Threatnings, that he might fly to a voluntary Exile, forbidding him to ftir from his House. Thus he lived for almost a Year; till at last, since he refus'd the Occasion given him for Flight, they threw him into Prison, and condemn'd him to the Flames; which cruel Death, tho' he had a Wife and Ten Children, he endur'd with an interpid and amazing Conftancy.

The fame Death on the 9th, of February Febr. 9. fuffer'd John Hooper, Bishop of Gloueeseer first, And and afterwards by King Edward made Bishop Hooper, of Worcester too. He had been very diligent in procuring Boner's Deprivation, which pro-bably now prov'd his Ruin: For no fooner had Mary got the Crown, than he was fent for to London, imprison'd in the Tower, and finally condemn'd as a Heretick. In K. Henry's Reign he pass'd much time in Germany, where he Marry d a Burguignen; and among feveral Learned and Pious Men with whom he convers'd, had peculiar intimacy with Bullinger, to whom he was extremely indear'd by his Knowledge, and the agreeable fweetnels as well as fanctity of his Manners. After his Condemnation, he was fent to Gloucester, that he might fuffer in that Place where he was thought to have done most harm by fowing the Seeds of Herefy; while he himfelf was not a little joyful that he had an opportunity of Sealing with his Blood the Truth of his Doctrine, before the Eyes of those to whom he had so often preach'd it.

The fame Course was raken with Forum, E. who was brought from London to his own Dio cess of St. David's, to be judg'd there by the new Bishop Morgan; by whom being Condemn'd, he was Burn'd on the 3d. of March in the Market-Place at Carmarthen. He was March 3. a Man of a rigid Temper, and rough Beha-

In fine, concerning this Spanifb Match and this millaken Prefumption of an Heir, it was the grave Observation of a post of the land Reverend Man of that time 30%. If food Contempt of true Marinoun were not throughly Prunified and D f of Physical Information of the Marines, which then were following beginn, fo gorgeounly fer out and advanced, 40 p. 10%, greatly reloyed at, and lutch wonderful Fruit certainty looked for; and in Conclusion, how it faceded thow Marine the collection of the Marine through through the Marine through the Marine through the Marine through through the Marine through the Marine through the Marine through through the Marine through through the Marine through the Marine through through 1555. viour; which drew on him much Trouble even in King Edward's Days, and was now perhaps his Destruction: For having been preferred to that Dignity by the Duke of Somerfet, after his Death this good and Learned Man by the unhappy Morofeness of his Manners, which even border'd upon Arrogance, rais d against himself Accusers. Two of these, who were Bishops afterwards under Q. Elizabeth, eafily prevail d with the Faction against Somerfet, to get Ferrar imprison'd. Thus being in Custody at Queen Mary's Accession to the Throne, he was brought before the Bifhop of Winchester; and 'tis very probable, that by a little Temper in his Answers, and a discreet Regard to the Times, he might have favid himself (without wrong to his Integrity) from the Hands of bloody Men, as feveral had done, who were not engag'd in the Caufe of Lady Jane, nor had any other way notoriously affronted the Patrons of Popery; whose Flight was therefore conniv'd at; or if they were taken, they were foon discharg d again at the Intercession of their Friends. But Ferrar, fway'd by his natural Severity and ungovern'd Paffion, gave fuch bold and provoking Answers to the Bishops, that 'tis not to be admir'd it went so hard with him.

Befides these, Laurence Saunders an excellent Preacher was Burnd at Coventry; Doctor Reland Taylor at Halley; John Cardmaker Chancellor of Wellisat London; as likewise that cminently good and Learned Man Jehn Bradford; July 1. And not to enumerate all Particulars, a great Number of bothSexes were Sufferers this Year, for their Faith in God; the greatest part of which were deftroy'd by Boner's Butchery.

But I must not pass by in silence Ridley and Ridley and Latimer, who being Sentenc'd the last Year, Latimer, were now brought out on the 16th, of Octo- Octob. 16. ber, and bound to a Stake in the Town-Ditch over against Baliol College in Oxford, where, in the light of the Students they were Burn'd. 'Tis faid that Cranmer, from the Top of the House where he was a Prisoner, beheld that mournful Spectacle; and falling on his Knees, begg'd Conftancy of Hope and Faith for his Companions, to support 'em in their Torments; as likewife for himfelf, who was not ignorant that he must shortly follow 'em. But his Execution was deferr d for the prefent, by the means (as 'tis reported) of the Bishop of Winchester; and that not out of Pity, but Ambition, and a Regard to his own Profit. (t)

On

this Par-Hament.

(c) The Queen's Fourth Parliament began at Welphinifler, Monday, Ollob. 22, called 2, and 3, of Philip and Mary. In the Houfe of Lords lat the Queen, and next in place the Lord Cardinal Pole, now Archbishop of Canterbury. The Bishop of Winterfer Lord Chanceller declared this Parliament was called for necessary Aid to be made ther Majesty. The Commons House by entire Voice, chose John Palma, Estig profoundly Learned in the Laws of this Realm, their Speaker. One of the main things done this Parliament, (befides the Subshiy) was the restoring of the First Fruits and Tenthes, and Impropriations in the Queen's Possettion, to the Church. The Bist of which, how it was carried, shall be shewed by and by.

On Wednelty of the last Speaker made his Speech. Then a Bull was read from the Pope's Holines, confirming the Dechration of the Lord Cardinal, touching the Assurance of Abby-Lands to the present Possets. After which, the Speaker, with the Commons, departed to their House.

Islass present the Speaker, which is speaker, when the Speaker, which the Speaker, with the Commons, departed to their House.

a Subfidy, and two Fiftee contented to refuse them.

Third Reading

I shall specify some Things of more special Remark, done in this Paliament. When they had given the Queen a wubbidy, and two Fritteens, it he Speaker declared, the Queen gave them Thanks for the two Fritteens, but was contented to resulte them.

November the 16th. The Speaker declared the Queen's Pleasure to be, that he with a convenient Number of the House, should be before Her Highness that Day in the Asternoon. Whereupon Fifty were nominated. The next remains and the state of the properties of the state of the properties of the state of the s

The

1555.

Paul IV.

On the 24th. of March Dy'd Pope Julius IIId. Marcello Cervino was elected to fuc-The death ceed him; a Man of extraordinary Learning of Pope and Sanctity, and particularly remarkable for his Saying, —That he did not fee how 'twas pof-fible for a Pope to be fav d. From his diffin-guishing Character 'twas reasonable to hope for a Reformation of the Church; but he fill'd the Chair but Two and twenty Days, and then dy'd. His Successor Cardinal Caforceeds. raffa, who took the Name of Paul the Fourth, had engag'd formerly in fliarp Contentions with Cardinal Pole, of which the Bishop of Win-Bishop of cheffer was not ignorant, and therefore deals Windlester, privately with the new Pope to make him a fues to be Cardinal, and transfer to him Pole's Legatine made a made a Cardinal, and transfer to him Pole's Legatine Cardinal. Authority. The Pope by his Hatred to Pole was eafily inclin'd to grant this Request, defigning moreover to cite his old Enemy to Rome, there to accuse him of Heresy, and treat him as he afterwards did Cardinal Morono

Pole's most intimate Friend, whom he kept in 1555. Prison as long as he himself liv'd. By this means, Gardiner well hop'd he shou'd get into the See of Canterbury, which Pole yet held in Sequestration, nor won'd enter upon it any otherwise so long as Crimmer liv'd; Twis with this cunning Prospect, that Gardiner is believ'd to have protracted Cranmer's Execution, that Pole might not fettle in the Archbifhoprick. But while his whole Thoughts were thus engag'd, he was feiz'd with a Dropfey, which swelling from his Feet and Legs up to his Belly put a Period to his Life on the 12th May 13 of November. He was buried with great Pomp Nov. 12.

in his Cathedral at Winchester (u). This Year, on the 25th of October, the Emperor Charles the Vth, having determined to The Emp refign his Dominions, at Bruffells in a Conventi-Relignation on of the Estates, transferr'd his Kingdoms on and Principalities to his Son Philip, whom he had before made King of Naples and Sicily.

The 7th, of December, Saturday, Mr. Comptroller declared the Quten's pleasure to dissolve this Parliament on Monday. So on Monday, December the 9th, about One of the Clock, the Lords with Mr. Speaker and the Commons, came before Her Highnests at the Palace at White-Bad; and after the Royal Affent given to 24 Bills, the Parliament was Diffolved by the Marquists of Menchette, upon the Queen's Commandment, the Bills when the Marquist of Menchette, upon the Queen's Commandment, the Bills were read in this House, which proceeded not to Ads: Some whereof were thefe. A Bill touching the Abience of Knights and Burgeliës in Parliament time: Afterward the Billwas Worded, For Bill, which is Appearance in Parliament. A Bill that went through all this Queen's Parliaments, and in the Reign of the Passed King before her, but never perfected; though it were engrolled 36th of Otiober; And a new Bill to the same purpose brought in under this Title; For Knights, Citizans, and Burgelies, to bearts and and parliament.

A Bill touching Lecles made by Spiritual Persons, [to the damage and prejudice, I suppose, of their Successions.]

Cellors. In the Charles made by Spiritual Periods ; to the damage and prejudice, I tuppote, of their Succellors. In the Mens Servants, wearing their Cloths [or Liveries] should be Justices of Peace, but the Kings and Queens. To prevent as it icems, the Inconvenience and Prejudice that might happen to the Queen's Subjects from the Dependents of Noblemen, [or other great men, who might distribute Justice partially in favour of their Lords and Mafters]

A Bill, that certain Persons might peruse the Penal Laws, for Reformation; for the Continuation of certain Sta-

A Bill, that certain Perforsinging permethe Perial Laws, for Recommend; not the Comminuation of certain Statutes. This paided the next Parliament.

A Bill, that Out-Lawries fhould be declated once in the Parific Church where the Defendent is dwelling.

A Bill, that the late House of Black-Fryer may be within the Liberty of London.

A Bill for Silk Weavers and Silk Woven, and for wrought Silk from beyond the Seas. Another Bill for Silk-Workers of London. [Perhaps the lame new modelled.]

Workers of London, I Perhaps the lame new moneured. A Bill for the Town and Kiver of Stamford.

A Bill for the Town and Kiver of Stamford.

A Bill for a more grievous punishment of Murther. [Occasioned perhaps from the Murther of Mr. Rufford.]

A Bill for a more grievous punishment of Murther. [Occasioned perhaps from the Murther of Mr. Rufford.]

A Bill for the Town of Murthers and Felonies, not to have the Benefit of Clergy or Sanchuary. That such fhould not have the Benefit of Clergy, was made an Act the next Parliament.

A Bill to review the Act for killing of Crows.

A Bill to review the Act for killing of Crows.

A Bill to review the Act for killing of Crows.

A Bill for the Dutchels of Suffilk, and other Perfons gone over the Seas, without the Queen's Licence, and contemptuoully remaining there, notwithlanding the King's and Queen's Letters Patents to them, or Proclamations openly made for their calling home. [This was to be a Check upon the Noblemen, Gentlemen, Clergy, and Learned Men, and other Eules, that were fled abroad for the Liberty of their Religion and Concinences.]

A Bill to avoid Licences made by the Queen, her Father, or Brother. [Thefe Licences therefore were not Licences from Remya, as the Author of the Hisfory of the Reformation writes; but Licences, (too common in thole times) that dispensed with some Ecclefialical or other Laws of the Land: As Licences to geat Persons to ear $12.2.

Helm in Learn and other failing days, for themselves, and as many as floud come to their Tables; again, Licences to Gene, to give Licences to any of their Servants, to should come to their Tables; again, Licences to Gene, to give Licences to any of their Servants, to should come to their Tables; again, Licences to Gene, to Give Licences to any of their Servants, to should come to their Tables; again, Licences to Gene, to give Licences to any of their Servants, to should come to their Tables; again, Licences to Gene, to give Licences to any of their Servants, to should come to their Tables; and to the House Merchandizes forbidden. Many such kind of Licences and Warrants may be met withal in these times. This Bill against Licences was read the 16th of Nevermber; the earth following, the Speaker with others of the House waiting upon the Queen, and making no mention of these Licences to Her; Stery, one of the Members, kneeled Story a down to her, and complained, that Mr. Speaker did not open to her, that Licences might be restrained, as had been such as a such And thus much of this Parliament.

(a) Where his Effigies upon his Monument is yet to be feen, but broken and defaced. No Infeription appears on his Tomb. He died after the Queen had by his Means, Pains, and Policy above the reft, brought back the Church of England to downright Popery, and unravelled al that King Henry and King Edward for many years had directly above noting for cafting off the Yoke of a Foreign Power, and promoting a Reformation of corrupt Religion. He is capitally stoped to the Parliament the first day of its Sitting, which was Odebec 21. Menday; and was there again the Wedshalds of the Wedsha

1556. Anno Dom. 1556. Regina Maria 3 & 4. Philippi 2 & 3. 1556.

└∕ '† m. 1/f. Archbith. made I. Chancel-March.

A Coun-

N the first day of the New Year, Ni- Burn'd; which on the 14th of February was cholas Heath, Archbishop of York, re- accordingly perform'd. ceiv'd the Seal, and was made Lord Chancellour.

In March a Comet appear'd for Twelve days, (viz. from the Fifth to the Seventeenth) in the 20th Degree of Libra.

On the 13th of the same Month one rerfeit Edwas Executed. This Fellow was a Miller's Son; and being fomewhat like the King in Stature and Features, and about the fame Age, he acted this Imposture, for which he had been whip'd through the City the last Year. But not being reclaim'd, he continu'd his Boasts, and caus'd Letters to be dispers'd that King Edward was yet alive, for which he was at laft defervedly hang'd. And now we come to give an Account of the memorable Martyrdom of Archbishop Cranmer, Gardiner, Bishop of Winchester, being Dead, Pole, who was yet the Pope's Legate, appointed fames Brook, Bishop of Glou-cester, for Cranmer's Trial, because twas thought unlawful to punish an Archbishop without Leave from his Holiness. With him were joyn'd folm Story and Thomas Martin, Doctors of Laws, and Commissioners from the Queen, who accompany'd the Bishop to Oxford for this Purpose. They had lofty Seats prepar'd for em in St. Mary's; Brook took his place under the Confecrated Hoft, which hung in a Pix after the Roman manner: On each side a little lower were feated Martin and Story; then Cran-mer was brought before 'em, not habited like a Bishop, but only as a Doctor of Divinity; and being inform'd that besides her Majesty's Representatives, there was present too, the Representative of their most holy Father the Pope, he faluted the former with the greatest Reverence, but wou'd not fo much as turn his Eyes on the Bishop of Gloucester; and that, as he afterwards confess'd, not out of Contempt of his Person, but lest he might appear to pay any Deference to the Pope's Authority, which he faid, he had obliged himself by Oath to King Henry never to acknowledge, at least in England, where, he faid, the Pope cou'd have no Pretention of Right. Upon this, each of em with many Perfualions urg'd him to change his Opinion, and return to the Unity of the Catholick Church. When he refus'd to comply with this Advice, they cited him to appear within Fourscore days before his Holiness, which, with her Majesty's Leave; he undertook to do. But the Pope, not expect-ing his coming, in less than Twenty days by Letters to the King and Queen, commanded that he should receive Condemnation, and be deliver'd to the Secular Arm. Alittle afterwards therefore, new Powers were granted by the Pope to Thielby, Bishop of Ely, and Bener, Orier of Bishop of London, to degrade Crammer from his the Pope. Orders Presbyteral as well as Archiepifcopal, and give him up to the Civil Magistrate to be | ment.

While Cranmer, Ridley, and Latimer liv'd to-gether, these holy Men by frequent Letters mutually animated one another with unshaken Courage, to suffer Death it self for the Truth of the Christian Faith. But this intercourse being put to an end, by the taking away the two latter, the Defire of Life began to fieze upon Cranmer, and his Constancy was weaken'd by the subtilty and restless Importunity of a Spanish Fryar. So that, seduc'd with the hopes of a Pardon, he retracted in writing the Doctrines he had formerly taught; which Retractation was afterwards printed and publish'd: But this avail'd him little; for whether it were that Pole wou'd no longer endure to be kept out of the Archbishoprick,or (which is more probable) that the Queen's deadly Hatred of him, and thirst of Revenge for her Mother's Divorce, wou'd be fatiated by nothing but his Blood; after he had been delu-ded into the firmest Contidence of Life, he was barbarously hurry'd to Death, and burn'd with the most savage Cruelty in the same place, where Five Months before, his Friends Ridley and Latiner had been crown'd with Marryrdom. The day being fix'd for his Execution, one Cole, by the appointment of Cardinal Pole, preach'd a Sermon on the Occasion at St. Mary's. Cranmer was brought thither and plac'd over against the Pulpit, and exhorted by the Preacher to perfish in the Faith of which he had lately publish'd a Confession, and that to Death it self; which, he told him, 'twas the Will of the Magistrate to inflict on him this day. That the Divine Vengeance for the Death of Moor and Fisher under Keng Henry cou'd not otherwise be satisfy'd. But before his Execution's would be most acceptable to God and all good Men, if he wou'd make publick Declaration, that his Conver-fion to the Unity of the Catholick Churchwas Real and Sincere.

'Tis no wonder that Cranmer was in the utmost Consternation at such an unexpected Denunciation; yet recollecting himfelf, he rofe from his Seat, and without the least Discovery of Fear, made an excellent Speech to the People, in which having promis d many things concerning Reformation of Life and Morals, he repeated the principal Heads of his Doctrine, and briefly explain'd his Faith, affirming, that in the power of the Pope was contain'd and established the Kingdom of Anti-Chrift; and finally, represented how heinously he had offended God by renouncing the Truth. He declar'd therefore his Refolution, That his Right Hand whiteh had so impiculty sim'd, in sub-scribing the Dostrines propos'd by the Enemies of Truth, should be the first to suffer Punishment He wou'd have proceeded, but was hinder'd by the Clamours and Reviling of the Romanifts, whose Hopes he had so fairly eluded, and hurry'd immediately to the Place of Tor-There he stood, expos'd, the most

F.b. 14.

ence." In his younger Years bred under Cardinal Woolfy, and so brought up to State Business: Upon Woolfy's Disgrace, he was taken by King Hony into his Service, and became his Secretary of State; and was sent Ambuftador to the Pope. He was very Obsequious to that King, and forwarded at his Inclinations; and esciptly was very infrumental in his Divorce from Queen Katherine; under whose Daughter nevertheless, this present Queen, e obtained to much I avour and Honour piercing Spectacle in the World, fufficient | Yet dauntless at the Stake the Hero stood, 1556. one would think) not only to extort Compaffion from his Enemies, but to melt inanimate Things into Tears: The Primate of England, that lately Flourish'd in the highest Honour and Authority with Princes, most venerable for his great Sanctity of Life, for his Age, Person, Learning, Gravity, and innumerable Excellencies of Mind, now by the Malice of the Romanists, dreft in a ridiculous old Habit, baited with Scurrility and contemptuous Revilings, and drag'd to a most inhuman and tormenting Death. When he was bound to the Stake, as foon as the Fire was kindl'd, he rais'd his Left Hand to Heaven, and thrufting out the other, held it in the Flames, not removing it, except once to ftroak his Beard. till it was quite confum'd. At last, as the Flame encreas'd, listing up his Eyes, he cry'd out, Lord, receive my Spirit ! and continuing as motionless as the Stake to which he was ty'd, endur'd the violence of the Torture till he expir'd. The' his Body was confum'd to Ashes, his Heart was found intig and untouch'd: Which remarkable Accillent, if it had happen'd to one of the other Party, muft certainly have Canoniz'd him. And here let not the Reader be offended, if I make a little bold with the Rules of Hiftory, and infert these Verses written in Latin by our Countryman Skinner, on the Martyrdom of fo extraordinary a Man.

And Burn'd.

Succubuit sanctus Præsul CRANMERUS, iniqua

Pontificum Rabie, fraude dolog; perit. Quod Verbi invicto dejecerat Enfe Papatum, Quod docuit pura quærere mente Deum ; Quodq; Antichristi subverterat impia Regna, Regna piis Anglis, beu! tolerata din: Hine pius & clemens crudeli addicitur igni, Dantur & innocui Membra cremanda Viri.

Huc ubi jam ventum est, dextram projecit inignem, Projectamq; tenens, talia dicta dedit : Primum peccasti, primum & sentire dolorem Debes, ob Christo dextra inimica meo! Immotamque tenet, dum deflagraverat omnis,

In cineres totam dum cecidisse videt. Catera cum pereant flamma (mirabile dictu) Cor manet illæ(um post ubi flamma perit. Ecce invicta fides ! Cor inviolabile fervat, Nec mediis flammis Corda perire finit.

To bloody Priefts, inflam'd with favage

A guiltless Victim martyr'd CRANMER fell; Because he dar'd the conqu'ring Sword employ,

Of Sacred Writ their Empire to destroy. Reftor'd old exil'd Truth, and made Religion fhine

With native Charms fincere, and Purity Divine.

Refeu'd his Country from the Tyrant Chain, Too long endur'd, and crush'd the Papal Reign.

For this the Heav'nly Prelate must expire, Doom'd by hot Bigots to confuming Fire.

1556 And ftretch'd his Right Hand to the kindl'd Wood;

Foe to my God, this Rebel Hand, he faid, Be tortur'd first, that first my Faith betray d: He held it thus, while his own I yes fu:

The ravenous Element devour its Prey. And when his Body too fulfill'd this Fate, To Ashes turn'd; - prodigious to relate! From its fierce Task, the Recreant Fire with drew

And left his Heart unfing'd, and whole to View!

Heav'n gave this Witness to his pious Fame, And 'twas his Victor-Faith preferv'd it in the Flame.

Befides Crammer, many other Profesfors of Eighty the Reformed Faith were this Year Sacrine'd four of no lefs than Eighty four of both Sexes.

Nor was the Rage of these Times exercised only on the living: The Bones of Martin Earth. cer and Paul Phagins, who had been long Bu-Bones of ry'd, were dug up, formally arraign'd for He-Phagins refy, and with much favage Ceremony pub- Burn'd. lickly burn'd in the Market-Place at Cambridge. Peter Martyr's Wife, who dy'd at Oxford, was likewife rak'd out of her Grave, and bafely bury'd in a Dunghill. The Memory and just Honours of Bucer and Phagius were afterwards restored by Queen Elizabeth, with great Solemnity; and the Bones of Mantyr's Wife being once more remov'd from so vile a Repository into the Church, to prevent the like Mockery for the future, were mingl'd with the Remains of Fridefivid, a Female Saint held by the Romanifts in the highest Ve-

On the fame Day that Cranmer ended his viz. March Life, as we have related, Pele took Sacordo-21. tal Orders at Greenwich; and the next day, Nabath being dead, he possess of himself of his pale Con-Vineyard, being Confecrated Archbishop of Secrated Canterbury. Three days afterwards, on the Archbishop of his pale Canterbury. Three days afterwards, on the fhop of Fealt of Annunciation, attended by many of Canterbusthe Nobility to Bow-Church, he received the 79.

Pall with great Pomp and Ceremony. About the same time was discover'd a Plot A Plot to to Rob the Exchequer, which was now well Rob the fill'd with SpanifhMoney, to the Value of Fifty quer. Thousand Pounds: The Names of the Confpirators were Udall, Throgmorton, Peccam, Daniel, Stanton, besides others that made their Efcape, and White who discover'd 'em. Being taken, they were all Executed. Sir Anthony Kingston, who was Apprehended on suspicion of being concern'd in this Design, before he cou'd be brought to London, dy'd on the Road; And this is all I find concerning this Plot.

In the Month of July new Tumults and

Seeds of Sedition began to fpring up in Nor-folk, but were timely fuppress'd, by the Ap-prehending and Punishing the Authors, who were one Cleber, and three Brothers nam'd Lincoln. (x)

(x) This Plot extended its felf as far as Suffilk and Effect. The Confipirators were certain English that lurked in English that lurked in English that lurked in English that lurked in English that the People in those Three Counties; many whereof were Well-wilhers to K. Edward's Reformation, and had been lardly used by the Queen, from whom they had deserved very well: But they of themselves without any Commandment, apprehended the Practifers, as many of them as they could find. These, for the better furthering of their Design, had sent over a bold Man. one Condemned, called (not Glober, as this Author calleth him from Vol II.

1556. Nov. 21. Monks begin to flour.fh again.

Lord

Hang'd,

November 2.1. Feeknam Dean of St. Paul's, gland, Fourteen were found who were con- 1566. was installed Abbot of Wisliminster, which Henry VIII. had erected into an Episcopal See. And there being no Monks then in En-

Anno Dom. 1557. Regina Maria, 4. & 5. Philippi 3. & 4.

1557.

Bout the beginning of this Year ar-riv'd in England, Osep Napea, Em-

* After four or five years we found the Effed of our Northern Navigation, fet on Foot by Cabota : So the former English Translation begins this Relation.

ballador from Bafiliwitz Czar of Moscowy, to treat a perpetual League and Friendship between the two States. On the Coast of Scotland he fuffer'd Shipwreck, and loft, befides abundance of rich Goods,

An Em- all the Presents sent from his Master to our baffyfrom Court. But this Lofs was a Trifle, compar'd to that of Richard Chanceller, werthy of Immortal Memory, a most skilful Pilot, that first discover'd the Passage to those Northern Parts, and now more follicitous for the Embaffador's Safety than for his own, was fwal-low'd up in the Sea.

England never perhaps receiv'd any Embaffador with more Magnificence. On the 25th. of Mirch, King Philip having about a Week before return'd from Flunders, he was admitted to Audience; and having declar'd the Subject of his Embaffy, flay'd at London till the 3d. of May, and then honour'd with rich Prefents, return'd to his own Country.

On the 6th. of March, Charles Lord Stourton, for having in his own House cruelly Murder'd one Hargil and his Son, with whom he had been long at variance, was defervedly Hang'd at Salisbury, together with four of his Servants who affifted him in the Murder. After he had knock'd 'em down, and cut their Throats, he bury'd their Carcasses in a Pit Fifteen Foot deep, in hopes that the Villany wou'd be conceal'd, or if it were discover'd, that he shou'd have the Queen's Pardon; because he had always shewn himself a most Zealous Partifan of Popery. But Providence wou'd not permit fo horrid a Villany to lye hid; and the Queen, who had the strictest regard to Justice, except in Matters wherein She was blinded by Her Religion, was averse to all mention of a Pardon: So that this Nobleman fuffer'd the Punishment due to his Crime, and had no favour above common Murtherers, except that he was hang'd in a Silken Halter.

On the 24th. of April, Thomas Stofford landing on the Northern Coast with a small Force of Exiles, and some Foreigners, took by Surprize Scarborough, which in time of Peace was but flightly Guarded; and dispersing thro' the neighbouring Countries Declarations, importing, That Queen Mary, who had not the fairest Title to the Crown, had betray'd it to the Spaniards, invited the People to Arms. By the Care and Diligence of Nicholas Wooton Dean of Canterbury, the English Resident at Paris, his Defigns were discovered to the Council before his Arrival in England. And fix Days after, the Earl of Westmorland got him seized, and brought to London, where he was Executed on the 28th. of May; and the next Day three of his Accomplices, Streekley, Proctor and Bradford, were Hang'd at Tyburn.

Protor and miliprin, well rising as specific The Queen engaging in Her Husband's Quarrel with France, which the Emperor had chain bequeath'd to him, together with the Inheritation with on on the 7th. of June, in which She complaint of "many Injuries done to Her by the French King, in supporting and encoura-"ging the Duke of Northumberland and Wiat " in all their Rebellious Conspiracies against "Her: That Dudly and Ashion had form'd " their Plot at the House of his Embassador, " and that his Kingdom was afterwards a Re-" ceptacle for 'em, where he yet Entertain'd, "and gave em Countenance. And finally, that he had lately furnish d Stafford with "Ships, Men, Money, and Ammunicion, to enable him, if possible, to Disposses liter of the Crown. For these Reasons She forbad all Her Subjects to fend any Merchandise into France, or Traffick with a " Nation, whose Prince She accounted Her "Enemy, and against whom She determined " to declare immediate War.

Tho the Matter of these Complaints was true, yet She would have forborn the denouncing of War, if the five Years Truce concluded a little before between Philip and the French King, had not been broke by the Pope's Infligation; fo that War being now commenced between 'em, She wou'd not feparate Her Husband's Cause from Her own. For the Pope, who had an old Grudge against the Emperor, when he knew that he againt the Emperor, when he had not had refigured his Kingdoms and Principalities to his Son Philip, and was retir'd into Spain, by the Cardinal of Lorrain, gave no Reit to Henry of France, to whom he had promisd the Inveftiture of the Kingdom of Neples, till he had engag'd him in a War againft the Spani-

For this Reason the Pope highly resented The Pope Queen Mary's arming in the Quarrel of Her refents it. Husband: Therefore, not knowing how to be reveng'd of Her, (who was the fole Caufe of England's Breach with France) he refolv'd Stom's Hiflory, but) Clybays, or Claybard; who gave himfelf out to be the Earl of Davon. That Earl was now, by Leave granted, in his Travails abroad in Flandar or Italy, where at Padus he feon after dyed. They also made use of the Lady Elizabeth's Name; and the Queen her Sifter first told her of it: Whereupon she wrote a very earnest Letter to the Queen, in deterlation of them and their Practices. This Cleybard was afterward taken in High-Suffolk, and Executed at Bury.

And re-

1557. to discharge his Resentment upon Pole, whom (as we observ'd before) he sufficiently hated: And this the rather, because Pole, tho' he knew the Pope was the Author of this War, calls Pole yet prefed him, and that with much earnestnefs, tho' with equal Reverence, by Letters and Embassadors, to mediate a Peace. Upon this Account, he took from Pole the Legantine Power, and recalling him to Rome, appointed in his flead Peter Peyto, a Franciscan P yto de-Fryar, whom he created Cardinal and Legate, and defigned him afterwards Bishop of Salsshis room. When the Queen had Information of this, She took care in the first place to keep it conceal'd from Pele, prohibiting not only the new Cardinal to enter the Kingdom, but all others too whom She expected to bring any Mandate from the Pope about this Affair and carefully intercepting the Letters, gave Orders to her Embaffador at Rome, to reprefent to his Holinefs how much he wou'd en-

> England, if he put any Difgrace upon so great a Man, whose Authority had born a mighty fway in Converting the Nation. But Pole in the mean time, having some way or other got Intelligence of this, laid by the Silver-Cross, the Enfign of his Office, nor wou'd afterwards exercise the Legantine Authority, till by the Intercession of Orm meto the Pope's Datary in England, he was reftor'd to his former danger the unfettl'd Catholick Religion in Dignity. By this time the War was grown very hot;

and Philip, who for the managing of it had left England on the Seventh of July, was now Besieging St. Quintin in Picardy with an Army of Thirty five thousand Foot, and Twelve thousand Horse, which was afterwards augmented by a thousand Horse, Four thousand Foot, and Two thousand Pioneers from England. On the Tenth of August, the French endeavouring to throw Succours into the French de- Town, were miserably Deseated; and tho not feated at above 2500 were Slain, yet many of thefe St. Quin were Men of Rank, and many more were Men of Rank, and many more taken Prifoners. Among the latter was Momorancy the Constable of France, and his Son, the Dukes of Montpensier and Longeville, Ludovice Gonzaga, Brother to the Duke of Muntua, the Marshal of St. Andrew, the Ringrave, Roch-dumaine, the Count Rochfoucault, the Baron of Curton and many others. The chief of the Slain were John of Bourbon Duke of Anguien, the Viscount of Turen, the Sen of Rech-dumain, the Lords of Chandenier, Puntdormy, and almost all the Captains of Foot. King Philip's Lofs amounted not to above 50 Men.

On the Eighth Day after this Victory the The Town was taken by Storm, and all that were Tow in it put to the Sword, or made Prisoners of ken, War. The Admiral Coligny, with his Brother D' Andelot who shortly after made his escape, Farnac, St. Remy, Humes, and many other Noblemen were taken. The Son of the Noblemen were taken. The Son of the Lord Fayette, Salevert, Ogier, Vicques, La Barre, Essting, and Gurdes were kill'd. Of the English, among a few others, fell Henry Dudley, Northumberland's Youngest Son, struck by a Canon Ball, and Sir Edward Windfor, who were the first that enter'd the Town.

This Year was remarkable for a great Scarcity of Corn in England before Harvest, and for as great a Plenty aftewards *.

Harvest

Wheat was Sold at Four Marks the Quarrer: Within the current of a Month it fel to the low rate of Five Shillings. Wherein I rather admire the influing Chapnel's than the Dearth, having my felf in the Year 1595. [that is near 40 Years after] paid double the Former dear Price. Former English Edit.

But what I shall next relate, I shou'd think A nocturmuch more remarkable, if I had not lately hap-nal Rainpen'd to fee the like. On the 7th of Septem. near Two Hours after Sun-fet, a Rainbow was feen in the West, when the Moon had been rifen Bishop about an Hour; 'twas my Chance (that I Godwin's may compare Similar Accidents, though at College and different times) to fee the like appearance on the different times) to fee the like appearance on like ap-the 24th of November, 1604. When about pearance the fame space of two Hours after Sunfer, as in the year I was upon the Road fourteen Mile Wiffward * 16-4 of London, a white Cloud appear d, form'd ing to into the Arch of a Circle, which did in all wards respects resemble a common Rainbow, except Colchrock only that it was but of one Colour, and inflead of the Sun, had the Moon for its Oppofite.

Anno Dom. 1558. Reg. Ultimo.

1558. (x) THE King of France, to repair his flrong as 'twas believ'd, but might early be tall the East of the Place join did this Asturance. King Philipe House from an out of Bouloigne, perfuaded him was not follow was not ignorant of this, or had fome

(c) The Queen's laft Parliament began Thurfilay January the 20th, the 4 and 5 of Phillip and Mary. Where the Matter of Archbifthop of York, now Lord Chancellor, declared this Parliament called for Aid to be given to her Majefty. Renark That day the Commons Houle by entire Confent chole for their Speaker William Cordull, Etg., one of the Queen's Philips Speaker Privy Council, learned in the Laws of the Realin, and Matter of the Rolls. On Saturday he made an elequent of Pauliam Oration to the Queen; and immediately after the made him Knight.

Now for fome Matters of Remark happening this Scilion.

January the 24th Secjeant Brewn and Mr. Road came from the Lords, and required Mr. Speaker and 16 or 12 of 32 and the Houle to floak immediately with certain Lords appointed. After the Meeting the Speaker theweld from the Lords, that it was convenient to feek for the fure Detence of the Realm, and a Relief for the fame. And in or Lordi Ger o enter into that Confultation, that the Lords had appointed Three Earls, Three Buthops, and Three Baros of Lordi Ger o enter into that Confultation, that the Lords had appointed Three Earls, Three Buthops, and Three Baros Unto the Geres Nominated One and Thirty of the Lower Houle.

This thew she Nation was at this time under great Leas and Apprehensions; as they might well be Calais being taken, and a French Army fo near; and at open Wars with France and Scientific.

with France and Scotland.

Wars with Fonce and Seedand.

On the 4th of Florent the Bill was read for a Sublidy, and Two Fifteens, and Tenths. And the 10th day Mr. Speaker declared, that he had opened to the Queen his Commission touching the Grant of the Subsidy. Which the Queen, he fidd, took thankfully, and gave them prefetnly hearty Thanks, and at the Realm.

The Nation was at this time inveterally offended with the French; as appeared by several Bills read in the House of our theorems. As (1) A Bill, o make youl Letters Patients made to Frenchmen to be Denitons. Aracher Bill to expuse the property of the Pr pol-reftor'd.

July 7.

Lientenant General in al his Dominions, lemy. For mer Engl.

Prefage of the French Counfels, had fore-1558. warn'd the Queen to take more Precaution of this City, and had offer'd his Affiftance for its Security. But because it lay commodious for his adjoyning Netherlands, in suspicion of Spanish Craft difguis'd under this fair Proposal, Having we declin'd the accepting of it, though the bythe K. Event confirm'd Philip's Augury: For the been declared Duke of Guise * march'd suddenly thither with a great Army, and fate down before it on New-years-day, over-against that part which is call'd Sandgate. Then dividing his Army into two Bodies; with one he attacks the Ref-bank, and with the other, Newnambridge at great Ar- the fame time, that by taking these he might cut off all Succour from England by Sea, or by Land from Holland. The Garrison being furpriz'd, and fensible of their own weakness, presently surrender'd both Places. Then the Beliegers begun to batter the Town between the Watergate and the Prison to make a diversion, for they defign'd the Attack in another Place. When they had continued this for some time, and the English had no apprehension of the Castle, the Enemy on a sudden rais'd a Battery of 15 Pieces of Canon, and fir'd on it with fuch Violence, that the Noife was heard all that day to Antwerp, distant above a hundred English Miles. Towards Night they had made a confiderable Breach, yet there Gray, was not carry'd fo eafily. However, was no approaching the Walls because of a that was taken at last, as likewise Hames Ca-deep Ditch full of Water, in which the be-1558. fieg'd plac'd their greatest Security. The 4 Enemy therefore with extraordinary Diligence dug a Trench from thence to the Sea, by which when the Tide went out they drain'd it, so that they march'd through without Opposition, the Water reaching but Navel high; they found the Caftle almost Defenceless, and possessed themselves of it immediately, and of the had taken the Town too, if Sir Anthony Ager * Town. with a small Force had not stop'd their Pro- Fore grefs, in which Conflict that Valiant Knight Engl. Edit. was kill'd. The Lord Wentworth, Governour of the City, feeing 'twas impossible to main- And Surtain it, Capitulated, and after many Conte-render'd. stations surrender'd upon these Articles. That the Garrison and Inhabitants should depart without carrying anything away; but the Lord Wentworth and Fifty others, whom the Duke of Guise should choose, should remain Prisoners. Thus was this important Place taken which had remain'd in the possession of the English above Two hun- Neither dred Years *. was the Siege long, the Enemy fitting down before it on New-years-day, and having it yielded up on Twelfth-day. Former Engl. Edit.

Seven days after the Duke of Guife march'd Guifnestato Guifnes, and took it without any difficulty; ken but the Castle being defended by the Lord Gray, was not carry d fo easily. However, expulse the French Denizons, and other French Persons out of the Realm; Another, for an Impedition to be gathered of Frenchman inhabiting this Realm; Another Bill for them to pay a yearly Contribution to Melamis Regis, and for the Fortifications of divers other Places: Yet another Bill to expel French and Guifom Wines. But none of these bills past into A8s. Yet the Bill for the Expulsion of al French, Denizons as well as others, was very near paging; there being: of with the Bill, and 111 against it. But the Bill that passed, and was made an A8t, was severe enough; wiz. to Expel al Frenchman and other Persons bors under the French Oberfalkence, not being Denizons, and not return again during the Wars between the French King and the Queen: And that upon the Missemenur of any Denizon, committed contrary to the Laws of this Realm, the Queen and the upon the Missemenur of any Denizon, committed contrary to the Laws of this Realm, the Queen and fine the Bill Ad8. Was, That these French did daily from time to time discover the Countil, State and Frivities of this Realm, and compass, imagine and procure fundy Missems and Barbaries in Murder and divers Felonies, should not have sandtuary too. But because that Addition might hinder this useful Bill to pass, the Churchman being very fond of that Privilege of their Churches, it was thought convenient to leave it out. And a diffuse Bill was brought in concerning Sanctuaries; that is, as it feems for the putting them down.

But Feekman, Abbot of Wijhmisse, for the Iske of his Church to which that Ancient Privilege belonged, opposed it. There was now a new Bill put into the House more for the Data that the Privilege of the House of the Missems and Commonness of them. The Abbot claimed this Privilege for his Clurch. And it was ordered, that he flould come to the House with his Countil the next day, to declare what he could fay for the Privilege of Sanctuary and their defired the House of consider for the Continuance of the Rame. And a day was given him to be at the House with thould not Sit on Aft-Hedricfilar,

S.m&ua=

March the 5th, the Speaker told the House, that it was her Majesty's Pleasure, that as for the Bill for answering the Queen's Revenue, for that it extended to Accomptants, and that they had already accounted, they should not procede further therein.

the Queen's Revenue, for that it extended to Accomptants, and that they had already accounted, they should not proceede further therein.

When the House was upon the Bill for the Confirmation of Patents granted by the Queen, or to be granted during Seven Years to come; of Honours, Castles, Manors, Lordships, Lands, Reversions, civ., one Mr. Cepler, a Member of the House, should be had in his Mind King Publis's getting the Crown after the Crown from the kinglet thereby give away the Crown from the kinglet blackers. It seems as though he had in his Mind King Publis's getting the Crown attent the Crown attent the Crown from the kinglet had the English Nation fince that $pamish Match. But this Septent he House could not but take Notice of, and called them irrevered Wards concerning the Queen's Majefty: And by Mr. Speaker the House commanded, that Copley should absent himself till Confustation were had thereon. After Confustation taken, and it was agreed to have been a grievous Fault, he was called in, and shewed the Sense of the House. But he required them to confider his Young Years. Upon this, it was ordered, that the whole House by Mr. Speaker might declare this Offence to the Queen, and to request her Majesty to extend her High-nes's Mercy towards him. And in the mean time Copley is committed to the Custody of the Serjeant at Arms. Two days after, viv. March the 7th, the Speaker acquainted the House that he had declared to the Queen the Mater touching Copley, and that her Pleasure was, That he should be examined, whence such Matter as he spake of did Spring. And that nevertheles her Majety would consider the Request of the House to her him. No question it sprung from the lears of King Philip's Access to the English Monarchy.

The Same day about four an the Asternoon, the Speaker with the reft of the Commons came before the Queen to her Royal Seat, (the Londs also there present) and made his Oration, exhibiting the Books to the Subishy of the Clergy; and that the would give her Royal Menu tunto such Sixteen Acts 1558. ftle. which our Kings once pollefs'd almost entire, and of which our Henry VI. had been Crown'd King at Paris in the year 1431: Nor in Normandy or Aquitain, the ancient Patrimony of the Kings of England do our Princes retain any thing, except the Isles of Jersey and Guarnsey, which have continu'd firm to us ever fince the Conquest.

While the French thusadvanc'd in Picardy, Queen Mary to prevent their Deligns had prepar'd a Fleet to fend Succours, but they were fo long detain'd by contrary Winds, that they were render'd ineffectual.

And perhaps it does no where appear in Hiftory, that upon any occasion Providence hath by more manifest Signs declar'd how highly it disapproves, that the publick Tranquility shou'd be disturb d by Wars begun for the sake of Ambition only, or private Advantage.

King Philip (to begin with him) against whom the King of France and the Pope unjustly conspir'd, enlarg'd his Possessions by a double Victory, each very great and memora-ble. Cardinal Caraffa, and the Duke of Paliane, who for their own Ends had perfuaded the old doting Pope to kindle this Flame between these Princes, suffer'd Death for it afterwards under his Successor Pins the Fourth. Pope Paul himfelf, after the French were defeated at St. Quintin, by their being necessitated to withdraw their Forces out of Italy, was * To the left expos'd without defence *. And Queen Mercy of Mary was punish'd for the rash Violation of the spani- her League with France by the Loss of Calais, ard, whom which went so near her Heart, that 'tis behe had ir-liev'd to have occasion'd her Death the Year enfuing. As for the French King, who at the Pope's Instigation broke his Five Years Truce; Form. Engl. enfuing. what his Fortune was at the Battel of St. Quintin we have already shewn; and that it may not be thought his Lofs was compenfated by the taking of Calais, another Overthrow which follow'd in a few Months will be found to turn

The Bat- the Balance.

Edit.

Graveling. (who fucceeded Stroff) Slain) made an incursi-1 Arthur on into the Netherlands †, with an Army of and Blan-action. Elements.

behind him, took Berg-

hes, Dunkirk, and feveabout Eleven thousand Men. And leaving Graveling and Burburg [] For they feared not the French there; and the Towns which the Spaniards held throughout the Tract, were ill furnished, lying open to their Mercy, they Ranfacked it most miserably. Form. Engl. Edit.

ral other Towns, || ra-vaging all that Coast as sar as Newport. When King Philip heard of this, he was alarm'd, left the Duke of Guife fhou'd follow too with his Forces, and fo he fhou'd be Surrounded. But observing that he fpent all his time about Arlon and Vireton, he took an opportunity to fall upon the French before they were Reinforc'd. He gave the Command of this Enterprize to Count Eg-* Of Be- mont, his Lieutenant-General in the Nethertune, St. lands, who having drawn a sufficient Force Omer Air out of the neighbouring Garifons, * to the rer, Bur-burg, and Number of about Fifteen thousand, puts himfelf between Dunkirk and Calais, to cut off the others. Tell between Dinaker and Castally, to cut on the Form Engl. Enemies Recueat. De Termes, who lither to Edic. † And o-think of drawing off, but too late; for he verthrew found himfelf inclos'd on all fides, and no possibility of Escape, unless he cou'd hew a Way thro' the Enemy with his Sword. He Form Engl. therefore made an Attack, † and a bloody

And fince that time neither in France, Fight commenc'd; in which Defpair on one 1558 fide, and the Remembrance of late Injuries, with a Thirst of Revenge on the other, animated both Parties to do Wonders, ... While the Victory was in fufpence, during the Heat of the Battel, which

The Spinish Troops renew the Fight. Form. Rugl. Edit.
For De Terms had for his Secu-rity betaken him to the Shore, ho-ping that way with much lefs hazard to have goined Paffage. Form. Engl. was upon the Shore, Edit. Ten English Men of War by good Fortune failing by, and obser- The ving the Ingagement, fird on the Fench for beaten his furiously, and made fo great a Slaughter, Country that they began to give ground, and at last most were entirely broken and defeated.

The French loft in this Action Five thousand Men, part in the Battel, part in Flight, and great Numbers push'd into the Ocean. Their chief Officers were almost all taken; among whom was the Marshal himself, with Senarpont, Villebon the Governor of Picardy, Annebalt Son of Claud the late Admiral, the Earl of Chaune, Morvilliers, and many others. Two hundred fled to our Ships, and tho' they might eafily have been Drown'd, obtain'd Quarter, and were carry'd Prisoners to England.

This Battel was fought on the 13th. of July; and about the fame time the English being July 13 defirous of wiping out the Ignominy of the Lofs of Calair by fome extraordinary Exploit, fent out a Fleet of 140 Sail, of which Thirty were Flemings, with Orders to make an Attempt upon Breft: But the Lord Clinton Lord High-Admiral, finding no opportunity to effect this, fail'd to Conquet; and making Conquet and Defcent, took, plunder d, and burn'd the Burn'd by Town, together with the Monastery of Saint the Eng. Matthew, and the adjacent Villages; after glift which he return'd to his Ships. But the Flemings greedy of Plunder, made a further Incursion into the Country; and not suffering themselves to be recalled in time, were attack'd by the Lord Kersimon, who cut off Five hundred of 'em.

This was about the latter End of July. At the fame time King Philip was near Amiens with a great Army, and King Homy with a much greater narrowly observed his Motions. At last they fix'd their Camps; the first on the South-side of the River Anthy, and the latter on the North of the Somme; fo near each other, that 'twas thought every thing feem'd to threaten an Engagement. But they had far other Defigns: For King Philip, being inferior in Strength, thought it not fafe to venture a Battel; and Henry had receiv'd too great a Shock before, and knowing the hazard of Attacking a Victorious Enemy with Troops dishearten'd by a double Defeat, wou'd not run the Chance of being ruin'd. For these Reasons they fortify'd their Camps with fuch care and diligence, as if each expected an Attack. In the mean time fome Motions were made of a Peace: They confider'd that the Strength of both their Armies confifted in Foreigners, who wou'd share the Fruits of a Victory, but the Calamity of a Defeat wou'd fall heaviest on themselves, and their Subjects; and therefore they inclin'd to a Treaty. To manage this, the Commissioners on King Philip's side were the Duke of ATreaty. Alva, the Prince of Orange, Ruyz Gomez de Silva, Granvel Bishop of zirras, and others; and for King Henry, the Constable, the Marshal of St. Andrew, the Cardinal of Lorrain, Mer-

Squadrons of Edit.

1558.

villiers Bifhop of Orleans, and Aubelpine Secretary of State. They differ'd upon the Article of reftoring Calain, which diffurl'd the whole Negociation: For the French would by no means agree to it; and King Philip thought, that to end the War on any other Terms, wou'd be to abandon the Cause of his Queen, which in Honour he cou'd never do. But Q. Mary's Queen Mary's Death, which happen'd on the Death. 17th, of November, ended this Controverfy. The Emperor Charles Vth. dy'd too not long before; and thus the Treaty broke off.

Here I must not omit what the Connexion of Affairs wou'd not fuffer me to mention before: That on the 28th of April, the Nupri-The Dam als of Francis the Dauphin of France, and Ma-phin Matry Queen of Scats, were celebrated at Paris Ness the With extraordinary Magnificence. But this Queen of Alliance lasted not long; for two Years af-

* Who was Nephew, for Grand-Child] by his Mother, to James V. by Margaret, eldeft Daughter to that wife King, Henry VII. who, the Iffec of Henry VIII, being extine, as the undoubted Heir, most happily united the Crowns of England, Scotland, and Ireland. First Engl. Edit.

ter, Francis dy'd, (having first succeeded to Death of his Father) and left his Bed to a more happy Poffesfor, Henry, the eldest Son to the Earl Lenon; from which Parents fprung our K. James the First. * (z)

This Year had a very fickly Autumn, and was remarkable for Fevers, which swept away great Numbers, and particularly of the Clergy. Of the Episcopal Rank alone, Thirteen are reckon'd to have dy'd a little Cardinal before, or after the Queen. Cardinal Pole fcarce out liv d her a Day : He had held out against his Distemper for some Weeks, till being reduc'd to extreme weakness, as if the News of the Queen's Death had stab'd him to the Heart, he dy'd at Three a Clock the next Morning. His Body in a Coffin of Lead was Interr d at his Cathedral of Canterbury, with no other Epitaph than this short Infeription:

> Depositum Cardinalis Poli. The Remains of Cardinal Pole.

He was a Man of extraordinary Learning, Modefly, and of a most engaging Temper, prudent, and very dextrous in Affairs: In short, nothing had been wanting to his confunimate Excellencies, if the Roman Religion had not unhappily debauch'd him from his natural Clemency, into Severity against the Professors of the Reform'd Religion.

The Queen dy'd at St. James's November the 17th. a few Hours before Break of Day. She was without doubt Pious, Merciful by Nature, of unblemish'd Manners, and excepting her Religion, every way worthy of praife. But as this prompted her to the Effusion of fo much Innocent Blood, 'twas just that the Sentence of the Prophet should be suffilled on her; The Blood-thirsty shall not simils half their Days. For she was cut off in the Two and fortieth Year of her Age, having Reign'd but Five Years, Four Months, and Eleven Days: Whereas her Sifter who fucceeded Her, Reign'd with Mildness and in great Prosperity Nine times as long, and reach'd almost twice her Age.

There are various Opinions concerning the Caufe of Queen Mary's Death. To relate what I find in Authors of good Credit; 'Tis faid, that in the beginning of her Sickness, her Friends supposing that King Philip's Absence afflicted her, endea-vour'd by all means to divert her Melanvourd by all means to divert her Melan-choly: But all prov'd in vain; and the Queen abandoning her felf to Defpair, told 'em, She flouid dye, the they were yet Strangers to the Caufe of her Death; but if they wou'd know it hereofter, they must diffeet her, and they flouid find Calais at her Heart: Intimating, that the Lofs of that Place was her Death's Wound. The Death of her, Extherin Law. Charles the Fifth in her Father-in-Law * Charles the Fifth in Sept 27.
Spain, was likewife thought to have coninderably augmented her Sorrow. Her Liver had been over-cool'd, as we formerly observ'd, by another Distemper; so that these Things probably hasten'd her End, and threw her by degrees into a Drop-

(z) The Second Selfion of the Parliament of 5. and 6. of Philip and Mary, began November the 5th. During this Selfion the Queen dyed; and so nothing of the Debates of the House came to perfection. Yet to give some Account what was now doing; It was now a very fickly time for burning Agues and Feavers, which were very mortal both this and the half Year, and carried off abundance of People, as our Histories shew us; the Distemper inortal ooth this and the mit real, and varied or abundance of recipie, as our flittones new us; the Dilempebeing allo infectious: Which occasioned this Parliament to order one James Thacker, Burgels for Darly, to be ablent by Licence of the House, he having reported that the Town was fore infected whence he came. And within a few days after, it was ordered. That each Burgels that was Sick, should not take Damage by his Ablence duringhes Sickness, to not being in the House: And that where Suit was made, that some Burgels being Sick might be removed, and Writs fent out for others in their Places, the House did resolve they should not be amoved, notwithflanding their Sickness.

flanding their Sicknefs.

There were a few Bills read: As, a Bill to avoid French Wares. A Bill for the Attendance of Knights and Burgeffes in Parliament Affembled. A Bill for Payment of Tithes out of the late Religious Lands. A Bill for the Corporation of Trinity-Hall in Cambridge.

Neumber 14. Mr. Attorney and Mr. Soliticitor declared to the Houfe, that divers of the Lords would come to confer with the Houfe about weighty Affairs of the Realm; and therefore required the Houfe to tarry their coming. The Lord Chancellor, the Lord Treaturer, Earl of Salop, Earl of Pembroke, the Bilhops of London, Linguistic Chancellor, the Lord Admiral, and the Lord William Howard, came into though, Linguistic action of the Realm of the Respondent of the Houfe, fitting where the King's Privy-Council used to fit. Then the Lord Chancellor by his Oration declared, that of Necessity for the Safegand of this Realm from the French and Seats, a Sublidy mult be had. Mr. Speaker and the Privy-Council then fat from them on the loweff Benches. After this Declaration made, the Lords departed.

November the 17th. Mr. Read and Mr. Sollicitor came from the Upper-Houfe, and faid, That the Lords required Mr. Speaker and the Houle to come unto them, where they fhould hear certain Matters, that the Lords had to communicate to the Houle. Whereupon, immediately he with the reft of the Houle was true. And the Lord Chancellor told them, that God had taken the Queen to his Mercy; but had furnished us with another Sovereign Lady, my Lady ELIZ AFETH her Grace: And then willed the Knights and Burgeffes to reft to the Platee.

Where Mr. Speaker and the Lords would come, and cause her Grace to be Proclaimed Queen of England, &c. And immediately after, the faid Proclamation was there made.

fey, which the Phylicians at first miltook, midst of the Chappel on the believing her with Child. So that proper of the Monument of Her Grand 1558. Remedies not being applied, and the Queen not observing a Regular Course of Diet, the fell at last into a Fever, which gradually increasing, put an End to her Life.

of the Monument of Her Grandfather King Hony the Seventh. Where her sifter Eli-zabah was afterwards buried with Her: And over Both, the Pious Munificence of King James erected a Noble Manfoleum, bentuing the Majefly of fuch Mighty So-

She was Bury'd at Wifiminfler, in the vereigns (a.t).

(10) It is is faid by Sandars, that when Q. Mmy faw that flue must dye, flue fent some Noble Persons to the Lady Elecabeth, who was to Succeed her, to desire certain things of her; but especially shelf: Two, who That she would make care to repay what Sums flee, the Queen, had taken up of her Subjects for the Publick Service; in truth, for make care to repay what Sums flee, the Queen, had taken up of her Subjects for the Publick Service; in truth, for glican, the unadvised War she had entire! into, the better to please her Husband Public. The other, That she would not glican, partial and passions of the Real of Expressions to much depreciated the former Kings and the prefent Queen, that by reason of the Offence (alen a bits Sermon, he was commanded to keep bit House; and atterwards in the Mount of January appearing before the Privy Councel, and receiving a Reprisand from them he was fea at Liberty.

And now to look back upon the State of this Reign, and to to take a farewel of it, a very Reverend Man that fived in the middt of their times shall be our Informer. Surely, Sinth he, the brief kemembranes of things channed [that The candidates] is, under this Queen [I may appear lamentable to be considered. As what immoderate Raynes and Tempels, and the strength of the stre

7. S.

End of Queen Mary's Reign.

THE

The whole Life and Reign of ELIZABETH late Queen thereof.

Written by WILLIAM CAMBDEN, Clarenceux King at Arms.

The AUTHOR's Preface to the first Edition.

fince William Cecil Lord Burghley, Lord High Treasurer of England, imparting to me, who then thought nothing of any fuch matter, first his own Collection, and then Her Majesty's, of Papers, Letters, Memorials, &c. order'd me from thence to compile an Historical Account of the first Beginnings of the Reign of Queen ELIZABETH: with what Intent 1 know not, unless, while he had a Defire to eternize the Memory of that Renowned Queen, he would first see an Introduction thereinto by my Pains in this kind I obey'd him, and not unwillingly, left I might feem either to neglect the Memory of that most Excellent Princess, or to fail his Expecta-tion and (which I priz'd as dear as them both) the Truth itself. For in these Papers, if any where, I had confident Hopes to find the real Truth of Things lodg'd, as it were, in so many Repositories.

But at my very first Entrance upon the Task, an intricate Difficulty did very much discourage me. For Highted upon great Piles and Heaps of Papers and Writings of all sorts, reasonably well digested indeed in respect of the Times, but in regard of the Variety of the Arguments, very much confused. In searching and turning over whereof, whilft I labour'd hard, cover'd with Dust, to gather fit Matter together, (which I diligently fought for, but more rarely found than I expected) that Noble Lord died, and my Industry began to flag and wax cold in the Bufiness. Not long after, that Incomparable Princess also render'd her Celeftial Soul to God: when I flood in expectation for some time, full of Hope that some other Person, haply some one of that Alghteen Years and more are now past, great number of Learned Men, who through her Favour and Bounty did abound both with Wealth and Leisure, would render her this due and deserved piece of Gratitude. But when I certainly found, that some, who were best able, could not, for their more weighty Employments; and others (I know not for what Causes) fairly desir'd to be excus'd; I buckl'd afresh to my intermitted Study, and ply'd it harder than before. I procur'd all the Helps I possibly could for writing it: Charters and Grants of Kings and great Perfonages, Letters, Consultations in the Council-Chamber, Ambaffadors Instructions and Epifiles, I carefully turn'd over; the Parliamentary Diaries, Acts and Statutes, I throughly perused, and read over every Edict or Proclamation. For the greatest part of all which, as I am beholden to that most Excellent Gentleman Sir Robert Cotton, Knight and Baronat, who has, with great Cost and successful Industry, furnish'd himfelf with the choicest things relating to History and Antiquity; (for he readily and willingly gave me Light and Direction in my Bufinels from his own Know-lege of things:) fo, Reader, if I shall in any thing profit or delight thee in this Undertaking, thou art defervedly obliged to give him Thanks for the fame.

Mine own Cabinets and Writings I also search'd into: because the I have been a studious Regarder and Admirer of venerable Antiquity, yet have I not been altogether care-less of later and more modern Occurrences; but have my felf feen and oblery'd many things, and receiv'd others from credible Persons that have been before me, Men who have been present at the transacting of Matters, and fuch as have been addicted to the Parties on both Sides, in this Contrariety of Religion. All which I have weigh'd and examind in the Balance of my own Judgment, (fuch as it is) left I should at any time thro' an unwary Credulity incline to that which is false. For, the Love of Truth, as it has been the only Incirement to me to undertake this Work; so has it also been my only Scope and Aim in the Performance of it. And indeed, to write History without a resolute Adherence to Truth, is, as it were, to pluck out the Eyes of the finest Creature in the World; and, instead of wholesom Liquor, to present a Draught of Poisson to the Readers Minds.

Aaa

All fuch things therefore as are wont to obscure and prejudice the Light of Truth, I refolv'd to remove. Ignorance, and (which spring from thence) doubtful Uncertainty and flat Falfity, I have to the utmost of my Power dispel'd by the bright Lustre of untainted Fidelity lodg'd in those Monuments and Records, which are beyond all Exception : and perhaps, I have thereby attain'd to an equal Knowlege of those Affairs, with some who have been long and deeply vers'd in Statematters. Prejudice I have shun'd, by reason it rakes away a Man's Judgment, and so hood-winks the Minds of Men in Matters both of Religion and State, that like dim Eyes they can behold nothing clearly. As for Danger, I fear'd none, even from those who think the Memory of fucceeding Ages may be extinguish'd by present Power. And let such remember, that never any were fevere and cruel towards Writers, for keeping to the Truth, but they have heap'd Dishonour upon themfelves, and Glory upon the other. of any Gain has not drawn me afide. To fet the Dignity of History to Sale, to me (who have always contented my felf with a mean Estate) has ever seem'd base and servile. Sutipicion either of Affection or Disaffection can here have no place For of all those that I am to mention, I know scarce one by whom have receiv'd any Benefit or Advantage, nor one from whom I have received any Injury: to that none can reckon me among fuch as are either obnoxious or malicious. As for the living, I have faid but little either in their Praise or Dispraise. By inveighing against the Enemies of my Country, to aim at the Reputation of a good Commonwealths-man, and at the same time to get the Character of a bad Historian, was look'd upon by me as a thing very ridiculous. This I have been careful of, that, following Folylius's Directions, 1 might have an Eye to the Truth only. Nor do I think that any one will find me wanting in a Freedom of Speech, join'd with Modefty, becoming an Historian; but the Licencioufness, Malignity and Backbiting, now-adays cloak'd under the counterfeit Shew of Freedom, and every-where entertain'd with a plaufible Acceptance, I for my part utterly deteft. Things manifest and evident I have not conceal'd; Things doubtful I have interpreted favourably; Things feeret and abstruse have not pry'd into. The hidden Meanings of Princes (Tays that great Master of History) and what they Jecretly design, to fearth out, it is as have been addicted to the Parties on both unlawful, it is doubtful and dangerous: parfue not Sides, in this Contrariety of Religion. All therefore the Search thereof. And, like Halicar-which I have weigh'd and examin'd in the naffacus, I am angry with those curious inquisibalance of my own Judgment, (such as it is) tive people, who will needs feek to know more less I should at any time thro' an unwary Cretan by the Laws is permitted them.

As for other matters; tho I am not ignorant that Affairs of War and Policy are the things proper to History; yet Ecclesiastical Matters I neither could, nor indeed ought I to omit. (For Religion and the Weal-publick can never be separated.) But forasmuch as the Writer of the Ecclefiastical History may justly challenge those things as belonging to himself; I for my part have not touch'd 'em but with a light and chary Hand. And whereas it stands with the Rules and Dignity of History, to handle Businesses of greatest Weight and Importance, and not to enquire after small matters; I have not infifted upon fmall things: yet some such there are, which if they please not one, another may be glad to know. Circumstances I have not in the least omitted, that not only the Events of Affairs, but also the Reasons and Causes thereof, might be understood. That of Polybius pleases me mightily. Take away from History Why, How, and To what end, things have been done, and Whether the thing done has succeeded according to Reason; and all that remains will rather be an idle Sport and Foolery, than a profitable Instruction: and tho for the present it may delight, for the future it cannot profit. I have not given my own Judgment either out of Prejudice or Affection, but writing with an undistemper'd and even Mind, I have rather fifted out the Sense and Opinion of others; and scarce interposed my own any where, tho' by the by, since 'tis a Question whether an Historian may lawfully do it. I leave every one to judge according to his Fancy. Speeches and Orations, unless they be the very same verbatim, or abbreviated, I have not meddled withal, much less coin'd 'em of my own Head. Short Sentences I have feldom interlaced, nor adorn'd my Discourse with those nice Observations which the Greeks aptly term ΕΠιΣΤΑ ΣΕΙΣ, whilst my sole Business has been to inform the Mind. Digressions I have avoided: Words of form I have used: Matters relating to Topography and Genealogy I have not neglected; and in Chronology I have follow'd the Series and Order of Time as near as might be, beginning the Year, as our former Chroniclers have utually done, from the first of January.

My Work I have entitled by the Name of ANN ALS, in regard I have disposed every thing in its proper Year: for I have learned of Tacinus, that weighty and remarkable Occurrences are to be digested by way of Annals; and that the principal Business of Annals is, to preserve virtuous Actions from being buryed in Oblivion, and to deter Men from either speaking or doing what is amiss, for sea of future Shame. Besides, a coarser and shorter Style (such as this of mine) is proper and peculiar to things written by way of Annals. Upon these Foundations I set my self to

Upon the& Foundations I fet my felf to writing, with this Intention and Defign I went forward, and in composing, polithing and perfecting my Undertakings I refolved to spend my whole Pains at spare times, and to bequeath em

'em by my last Testament to that honorable Gentleman Jacobus Augustus Thuanus, who has with fingular Commendations of his Fidelity and Moderation, begun an Hiftory of his own Time. And this I did, lest one so much respected by me (as indeed all Strangers are) should, as one unacquainted in a forein State, be at a Loss in the Affairs of our Country.

But in this my purpose I was (I know not by what Fate) prevented, and a great part of these Annals were sent over to him some Years before, when they lay yet shadow'd in their first Lineaments, and were scarce well begun, disfigur'd with Blurs and Dashes, and Chasms and Patches here and there cobbl'd together, as they flipt from my hasty Pen, and worse mangl'd by the Transcriber. Out of these, by taking away some things, changing and adding others, he has inferted fome few Paffages in the Eleventh and Twelfth Tomes of his History, but indeed by his grave and solid Judgment much rectify'd and refin'd. whereas he, according to the Proportion of his Work, (for he undertakes an Universal History of his Time) has only cull'd a few Passages concerning England and Ireland, and omitted a great many things that may please, and perhaps behove those of our Country to be acquainted with; and having myfelf heard that the Knowlege of our Affairs is earnestly defir'd by Foreiners, and that not without fome Check and Reproach of our Remisness in communicating them; I again fettl'd my-felf to the Work I had for fome time discontinued; I read it all over and confider'd of it again, added some things, and in some meafure polish'd the Style of it, tho' without any affected Flights of Eloquence, or quaint Ways of Expression. For, I think it sufficient, if, like a Picture drawn in weak and faint Colours, it is placed in a good and advantageous Light.

Yet after all, whether I should publish it of not, I could not well determine. But the truth is, those Censures and Prejudices, that Hatrod and Calumny, which, I foresee, advance their Enfigns, and found the Charge against me, have not so much discouraged me, as my Love of Truth, my Affection to my Country, and the Memory of that Princets (which among Englishmen ought to be held for ever facred) have born me up against those men, who having shaken off their Allegiance to their Prince and Country, endeavour to ecliple the Reputation of one, and the Glory of tother, by spitting forth their Venom and invererate Malice, in their scandalous Libels publish'd in forein parts; and at this very inflant (as they flick not to own) are ready to leave to Pofferity, in a large Volume, a Monument of their Lewdness and Dishonesty. For my part, I desire nothing more than that I may be like myself, and they like themselves. Posterity will gire every one the Flonor due to him.

What the Loftiness of the Argument requires, I confess, and am forry, I have not come up with; yet what Pains I was able, I have willingly bestow'd. My self I have not in the least satisfy'd, either in this or my other Writings; yet shall I think my felf well rewarded for my Labor, if by my ready Willingness to preserve the Memory of Things, to relate the Truth, and to train up the minds of men to Honesty and Wildom, I may thereby find a place amongst the petty Writers of great Matters. Whatever it be,

To God, my Country and Posterity, at the Altar of Truth, I dedicate and confecrate it.

INTRODUCTION.

Oucen E- I lizabeth's Lineage by the

By the Mother.

HE Lineage and Descent of ELIZABETH, HE Lineage and Defection of ELIZABETH, Queen of England, was by her Father's fide truly Royal: for he was Daughter to King Henry VIII. Grand-daughter to Henry VII. and Great-grand-daughter to Edward IV. By the Musher's fide her Defecti was not so high; yet Noble
it was, and branch d out by many and great Alliances both thre England and Ireland. Her Greatgrand-father, Eicher was Infference Rolen a May of ances both thro England and Ireland. Her Greatgrand-father's Father was Jeffery Bolen, a Min of a good Family in Norfolk, Lord-Mayor of the City of London, in the Year 1457, and at the fame time honen's d-with the Dignity of Knighthood. A fincere honef Min he was, of fuch Essimation, that Thomas Lord Hoo and Hastings, Knight of the Order of S. George, gave him his Daughter and one of his Heiresten Wife; and of fo large Means, that he match'd his Daughters into the Noble Houses of the Cheyneys, Heydons and Fortescues, left his Son a fair Estate, and bequeath'd 1000 l. Sterling to the Poor in the City of London, and 2001, to the like in Norfolk. This Mon's Son, William Bolen, was ene of the eighteen Knights of the Bath, made at the Coronation of King Richard III. to whom Thomas the Coronation of King Richard III. to whom Thomas Earl of Ormond (who was in such Favour with the Kings of England, that he alone of all the No-blemen of Iroland, had his Place and Vote in the English Parliament, and that also above the Baren. of England) gave his Daughter and one of his Heiresses in Marriage. By her (bessels Daughters marry'd to Shelton, Calchrop, Clere and Sackvill, wealthy Men, and of great Families, said other Children) he had Thomas Bolen; whom, being a young Man, Thomas Howard Earl of Surrey, asterward Duke of Norfolk, (a Man much renovival for his worthy Services and Achievements in the Wars) made choice of to be his Son-in-law, giving him his Daughter Elizabeth in Marriage: and Henry VIII. after he had perform'd one or two very honorable Embessies, made him first Treasurer of his Houshold, Knight of the Order of S. George, and Fiscum Pochtord; and asterwards Earl of Wiltshite and Ormond, and Lord Keeper of the Privy-Scal. This Thomas, among other Children by his faid Wisks, had Anne Bolen; who in her tender Tears was sent into France, and there waited soft on Mary of England, Wisk to English Parliament, and that also above the Barons Bolen; who in her tender Years was fent time trance, and there waited first on Mary of England, History Lewis XII. and then on Claudia of Breagne, Histor Francis I. and offer her Denth on Margaret of Alencon, a prime Favourer of the Pretestant Religion then springing up in France. Being return'd into England, and admitted one of the Queen's Maids of Honer, and being new twenty two years of Age, Kino Henry, in the thirty eighth. Fair of his Age, King Henry, in the thirty eighth Year of his Age, Vol. II A 2 2 2 and

Lovd of did for her Modesty, mix'd with a French Grace and e King, Pleataneneß, fall deeply in love with her; and when he heing could not overcome her Chastity, he fought to make her pur way his Wife, in hopes of Islue-Male by her. ns Wi c He (to fetch the matter a little higher) begin now, ofter seventeen Years Marriage, to grow weary of Queen

Katharine bu Wife, a Lady of very Religious Beba-Attentine on Wife, a Lady of very Religion Behiout, and Spanith Gravity; bewbeit many times mifthe calle carrying in the Fruit of her Womb, and having but one of the disouter distribution of the Month, and having but one of the distribution of the winning Artifice of Tho. Wolfey, Cardinal, who being now in the Heighth of Power with the King, had in a manner no Command over himself. For, bearing a Grudge to the Emperor Charles V. Queen Katharine's Sifter's Son, for denying him the Archbishoprick of Toledo, and because he had not favour'd him in his aspiring to the Popedom, and being now (out of Malice to Charles) so devoted to the French King, that be design'd King Henry a Wife out of France; be caus'd a Scruple to be put into the King's Head, who was already prone enough to his own De-fires, that his present Marriage with Queen Katharine, who before had been his Brother Arthur's Wife, was forbidden by the Law of God, notwithstanding Pope Julius II. bad dispens d therewith. Afterwards he binsfelf prefed it often appen him, how beinously he had offended God in marrying Queen Katharine, and in espendent God in marrying Zuen Kattattie, and in rubat a great Sin be cominued to live, by retaining her; that he had incur'd the Sentence of Excommunication, and that God had already evidence d his Anger against this so unlawful a Marriage, who would not suffer any issue a continue of the content of the thought that nothing essential be expected, but that those bloody Wars so lately laid asleep would again break out with fresh Slaughters, unless a lawful Heir to the Crown were ence certainly known. To the end therefore that all Scru-ple might be removed out of the King's Mind, and his Soul, which had for so many Years been polluted with Incest, unburdend, and withat the Safety and Security meer, unturned a, and without the Safety and Security of the Realin by the undoubted Succeffic of a largeful fue provided fire, she was to be divorced from him.

The most. Hereups in he King position of Pope Clement VII, that ter reter's he would depute Commissioners to hear and examine the to the Couse; and that either the Disposition of Pope Julius Pope.

Pepe. might be confirm'd by the Authority of Holy Scripture, or he might be absoluted from the Sentence of Excommaricge was no Marriage, but null and of no force, and that he might be at liberty to contract Marriage with any other Woman what forver, any Canon to the contrary not-The Pops withstanding. The Pope made Wossey and Cardinal Resolution Campoius his Deputies: to which Campoius he also privately deliver'd a Bull, wherein, favourably inclining to the King's Desire, as far as with a good Conscience before God he lawfully might, he granted all things, in ecfore God be lawfully might, he granted all things, in cofe it should prove that the Marriage contracted with force hatharine were declared to have been, and to be will and null. But this Bull be appointed to be conceald or published, according as the Empere's Affairs in The Kings Italy succeeded. Now were Questions every where star-Marriage ted, whether it were justifiable by the Law of God for coursely nication, and it might be decreed that the present Mar-

canvas'd in the U-

the Brother to take his Brother's Widow to Wife: and if in the U-niversities. this was forbidden by God's Law, whether it might not Several Universities in Christendom, and many very lud='d a Marriage to be represent to the facred Laws of both Toftsment, netwithfunding the Biflop of Rome's Di-freedation; the King began to be violently in low with Ann Bolen; and without, the Cardinal repenting too late of what he had done, and heng put forward with The Pope dager, so wrought under hand with the Pope, that he delay the refusal to confirm by his Papal Authority the Judgments buttered the refus a to evajura of the transcription of the following the incompletes, and the Caufe was prolonged and idelayed from day to day both at Rome and in England: tin the Cardinal steed in fear of Ann Bolen, who, being addicted to the Protestant Dostrine, bated his unreafinible Pomp and Pride. The Pope also stood in doubt of the Empror, who was now very strong in Italy, and most stiffy defended the Cause of his Aunt Queen be made lawful by the Pope's Diffensation. But when learned Men, had by their joint Suffrages declared fuch Katharine. Neither yet would the Pope incense King Henry, who had not long before, when he was taken Prisoner by the Imperialists, by his Arms and Money, procured his Liberty.

cured his Liberty.

King Henry, tho he were herewith much displeated. The King yet did he (mather it at present); and first Lives of the Pelates and and Nob. his Embassadors and Letters, and then the Prelates and and Nob. Nobility of England, by a Supplication sign d and sub-plicate the ferib'd with their Hands and Seals, with humble Intrea- Pope ties casting themselves at the Pope's Feet, belought him, wherein that what the two Universities of England, the University of Paris, and several other Universities, with divers learned and grave Men, both at home and a-broad, had affirm'd to be true, and were ready to defend and maintain for Truth, as well by Word as Writing, might (to use their own words) be confirmed by his Apostolical Authority. And an extraordinary Infe-licity it would be, (say they) if this could not be ob-taind of the See Apostolick, by that Prince, whise only Help had upholden and supported the Authority of the See Apostolick; who, when it was laid at by many, opposed them several times, partly by his Pen, and para-ly by his Word and Authority; and yet he alone could not enjoy the Assistance of her Authority. But that he might enjoy it, they befought him again and again, left Civil Wars should break forth anew about the Title to the Succession.

The Prelates also, fearing left the Pope should inter- And the The Prelates also, fearing test the rope promise meet diet the Realm, or excommunicate the King, did by Prelates diet the Realm, or excommunicate the King, did by themselves the state of the prelates are the prelates and the prelates are the prelates are the prelates and the prelates are the pr world Diffension formerly between Pope Alexander III.
and Henry II King of England; and among other weighty Reasons, they with humble Prayers advised him in those very words, in a manner, which Gilbert Bi-The project of Monday, in Amanane, Monday Globel Milpop of London at that time used. Your ardent Zeal we most humbiy beseech you for a time to restrain within the Bounds of Moderation and Sobriety, left by pronouncing either the Sentence of Interdict, or that final Declaration of Excision or Excommunication, you suffer innumerable Churches to be miserably subverted, and (which God forbid) irrevocably turn away from your Obedience as well the King himfelf, as infinite numbers of People with him. Better it is that a Member be join'd to the Head, tho' it be maim'd, than quite cut off, and caft from the Body. Maim'd Members may be heal'd again, but being once cut off, they never unite to the Body more. Cutting off brings Defpair, whereas the Chirurgeon's wary Hund many times heals the Wound. Better it is therefore, if it fo pleafe, that at the prefent you do your best to heal the Wound, (if any there be) than by cutting off so noble a Part from God's Church, you bring Matters (which are already in a high Confusion) into greater Disorder than can be express d. Then at length, does the Spirit of Kings know how to be overcome, when it has overcome; and is not asham'd to yield, when it has vanquish'd. With Mildness it is to be dealt withal, and to be overcome with Admonitions and Patience. For, what if Patience either already shewd, or to be shewd a little longer, do bring some Loss of temporal Concernments? ought there not to be a slacking of Severity, when the Ruin of the People is threatned? Are not many things to be thrown overboard, when the hideous Confusion of Sea and Waves menaces Destruction ?

But when the Pope and his Cardinals gave no Ear to these things, but neglected them for the space of five Tays or thereabouts, taking it in Dislains that the Pope's Power in Dispensing should be called in question, and thought sit that the King (should be cited to appear at Rome, they constraind the King (being a Prince full of Spirit, and already exasperated with the Perwerseof opens, and aiready exapperated with the Ferwerles, of flow Church-min at home, and who thought, that in regard of the Equity of his Caufe, he was most unjustly deals without, in confideration of his Reyal Degrity, most unworship; and in respect of his Defers, from the Church of Rome most ungratefully) that at

The King in prejudice of the King's Prerogative, abolify I the Au-being nee-thority of the Bishop of Rome, took upon him the Tibeing neg-thority of the Dipop of Nonice, two hypon turn the ar-lected re-tle of Supreme Head of the Church of England nounces next under Christ, which was given him by a Sy-Ec. nod and the Universities of England, advanc'd Ann

Ann Bolen be inaugurated Queen; whilst Pope Clement VII.
chafed in vain at it, decreed the former Marriage to lizabeth barn.

communication.

Declared Heir apparent.

Lidies their Daughters, the two Ladies Mary and Elizabeth, Mary and to be therefore illegitimate, and to be excluded from the declard il. Succession to the Crown. Queen Jane fell in labour of legitimate. Prime Edward, and presently dy'd, the said Prince Q. Jane being fain to be cut out of her Womb, and succeeding dies in his Father after in the Kingdom. The King, being but child-hirth supervision. bit Father after in the Kingdom. The King, veing one child-hith little troubl'd for his Queen's Death, prefently applied Edward. himself to find another Wife, both in Italy and France, to strengthen himself with new Alliances. Neverthe-less, being doubtful and unresolved in Mind, and ti-

one and the same time in a manner be both put away Queen Katharine, deprived Cardinal Wolley of his Goods and Possessions, laid a great Fine upon the Bishops, for owning and submitting to his Legatine Power in writings at the King's Proceedings about the day Bolen, (clad in her Robes of Honour, with her Gol-Bolen, (clad in her Robes of Honour, with ove vou-den Coronst on her Head to the Dignity of Marchin-neß of Pembroke, with the Content of the Peers of the Realm, for the Nobility of her Birth, and the great Merit of her Vertues, (6 the Words run) took her to Wife, and commanded her to be valid and Canonical, and pronounc'd the King to have incur'd the Pains and Penalties of the greater Ex-By this Marriage was born the Lady ELIZABETH By this Maringe was born the Lady ELILAMSE 1 H at Greenwich upon the Thames, September 7, 1533. And shortly after, the former Maringe contracted with Queen Katharine, was, by the Authority of Parliament declared to be void and incessionand this with Queen Ann to be just and consonant to the Law of God: the Lady Elizabeth, if the King should fail of silve-Male, was declared Heir apparent to the Crown; and an Outh of Allegiance taken by all the Subjects, to the King and his Heirs.

parent to the Crown, and an Onto y Augustuse taken by all the Subjects, to the King and his Heirs by Queen Ann. And when Paul III. purposed to pronounce Sentence of resh at Rome against this Mar-The holy riage, and at home an holy Maid or Nun in Kent, Maid ot (being fubornd and fet on by some Religious persons)

Kent. is if she were moved with a divine and prophetick Authority the King; the Title of Supreme Head of the granted to Church of England, with all manner of Authority the King;

granted to Church of England, with all manner of Authotie K. in Fire Church of England, with all manner of Authotie K. in Fire Church of England, with all manner of Authotie King in the Raim, and the faid Oath of Allegiance to the King's Heirs by Queen Ann confirmd. Neverthelefs, fearce were three Tears fully expired, when, falling into new Loves, featoufer, Rage, and meditating Blood and Slaughter, that he might make way for the new Famp be had to Jame Scimout, he call the new Famp be had to Jame Scimout, he call the new Famp be had not Jame Scimout, he call the new Famp be had not Jame Scimout, he call the new Famp be had not far Annet car'd herfelf fo far of the matters objected against her, that the Multitude that stood by judg'd her to be innocent, and merely circumvented. Neverthelefs, her Peers condemn'd her. Being condemn'd, she very handsomly and pleasantly by a Messenger fent her singular Thanks to the King, for the Favours he had heap'd upon her, viz. that, altho she were descended of no very honorable lineage, be had advanced be to the noble Diging of a Marchioness, to the Honor to be his Bedfellow, of a Marchiones, to the Honor to be his Bedfellow, and to the high Condition of a Queen, and (beyond all the rest) that when he could exast her no higher upon Earth, he would now raise her up to Heaven, where she should enjoy evernal Glory amongst holy and Sheis he insocent perform. Her Death she underwent quietly headed. and ebristianly, wishing all Happiness to the King, and forgiving her Enemies.

King marries Jame Seimour; and declar d, by Authority of Parliament, Samour, the Marriage with Gueen Ann, as well as that with Queen Katharine, to be flatly unlawful and void, and morous of every thing, whilft he food in fear of the

Papills for Rebellions formerly rair'd; left the Nobie's found attempt new Commutant at home, or from each forein Exemies, some of them for flight Couple, and timerages form without any Hearing, be cut shorter by the week. Heads. Many of the Religious, for the Obylines shorter, in maintaining the Poper Found, he put to death at species in maintaining the Poper Found, he put to death at species the lefter, so now be placked down the greater edition. Places of verwrable shiringury and Majelly, and seed upon their Wealth, which had been so many Years beaping together, taking Advantage som the Milupon their Wealth, which had been to many Years beaping together, taking Advantage poin the Alf-curringes of bumone Frailty, and their diffedure manner of Life. And withold be burned the Pretection of Articles, made againft those who appeal the Doctrine be the of the Church of Rome concerning Translaphantation. Each of the third the Streament of the Eucharift, the unmarry'd Life of Fright, Verse, Private Miffs, and Amicular Confession. Instrument as at one and the same time and viace, he read against the Posith, by the same time and place, he raged against the Papists by Langing, drawing and quartering, and cgainft the Prote-famts by burning them alive. Whereby he grew to flants by birning them alive. Whereby he grew to terrible at home, and was taken for Juch a Tream abroad, that he was rejected fift by Mary of Lotrain, the Duke of Guise his Daughtor, whom he wood, being Rival therein to James King of Scott, his Nephew; and then by Christiana of Denmatk, Duchest of Milan, Niese to Charles V. At length with much ado he obtain'd Ann of Cleve to Brife, Hetariki thereby endeavouring to secure the Friendling of the Ann of thereby and deavouring to secure the Friendling of the Ann of Pretestants in Germany: whom as soon as he had putting thereby the deavouring to giving birdles over as well to Arrogance as Lust; pretending the Cause to he, because the bad been formerly betreth d to the Duke of Lorrain's Son, and charging her with I know not what rain's Son, and charging her with I know not rebat womanish Impetency: and all to bring over her Head Katharine Howard, Daughter of Edmund Howard, Marties and Niece to Thomas Duke of Norfolk; whom the Katharis next Year after he beheaded, as guilty of Incontinence Beheads before the Marriage, and took to Wife Katharine her. Parr, of a Knightly Family, whom he left the second Hemaries time a Widow. Perceiving now his Body to be much decaid thro' the Parr, Intemperance of his Youth, and being inraged against the French King, because he had affisfed the Scots against the English, but more favourably inclined toward the He is re-Emperor Charles, (who forgetting the Divorce of his cocald to Aunt Q. Katharine, had fevretly given him fure Hopes Charles V., of Reconciliation to the Church of Rome, in which hufiness the French King had formerly deluded him) he entred into a Treaty with Charles against the French. Then designing to invade France, the more to engage the Emperor to him, and to quiet his exulcerated and g lld Emperor to him, and to quiet but exacteented and g had Conficience, be proposed to the Effects in Parliament, that if be fluedly die, and his Son Edward also without If-He fettled five, fift the Lady Marry, and, if the floudly fail of If, the warfure, then the Lady Elizabeth, floudly facced in the centon in the chief this Child Kingdom. But if all they floudled die isflueles, then the dren. Crown to be devolved upon such Persons to whom he Grown to be devoted upon Juch Perfors to whom he floudd either by Letters Patents, or by his laft Will and Testament, assign the same. Which was with the ready and chearful Consent of all men enacted and established, upon pain of High-Treason to the Opposit thereof. Assign his Return out of France, where he he wins had taken Bologne, with a wast Expence of Aso-Bologne. ney, whilft be lamented the Distraction of England ney, whilft be limented the Diffraction of England through new Opinens daily fringing up in it, and England berfelf fate fighing and growing to fee her Wealth exhaufted, her Money embasid and minglid with Copper, her Abbies demalified which were the Momments of antient Pietry, the Blood of her Nobility, Prelates, Papills and Protestants, premiscuosity spilt, and the Land embroid in a War with Scotland) being swell all with Et, he breathed out his last, of a virulent Instammation call'd S. Anthony's He dies; Fire in his Thigh, in the beginning of the Tear 1447. A magnanimous Prince he was, in whose great Mind were considedly mix'd many eminant Vertues with we were confusedly mix'd many eminent Vertues with no

les notorious Vices.

Prince

the Golpel brought happiness of the Eingdom Enfant-

Rdward Prince Edward bis Son, being yet scarce ten years VI. succeeded him; bis Uncle Edward Scimour, ceedshim. Duke of Somerfet, being made Protector: under Duke of Somerset, being made Protestor: under whole auspicious Government, a notable Victory was obtained over the Socts at Musselburg, while the English by Force of Arms, demanded the Performance of a Contract concerning Mary Queen of Socts espouling to King Edward. Also the erucl and bloody Law of the Six Articles, and other Laws made by King Henry VIII. against the Protestants, were repealed; those for abolishing the Pepes Authority confirmed; the Mass wholly abrogated; Images removed out of Churches; the Books of bot Testaments printed in the Vulgar Tongue; Dreime Service celebrated in the sum of the Sock of the Sock of the Collection of the Sock of the Sock of the Collection of the Sock of the Sock of the Sock of the Collection of the Sock of the Testaments of the Sock o n we some; and vow Kins assimilated in the Calchaviff. But facrilegious Avarice ravensulfy invaded Church-livings, Colleges, Chauntries, Hefpitals and Places dedicated to the Poor; as things superfittion:

mittion and Emulation among the Nobility, Presumption and Disobedience among the Common-people, grew To extravagant and infolent, that England feemd to be as it were in a downight Phrenfie, milerally lan-the as it were in a downright Privile, milerally lan-guilling at the very Heart, by reason of Rebellions, Timulis, Festiens, embassing of her Money, and all the Mijehust and Miscavinges that usually happen under an Infant-King. Hereupon also followed Da-miges advoad: the Strong-bolds of the English in Scotland and France were less: Bologne, which the Miscaving Miscaving and Strong-bolds of the English in cost so dear, with all the Forts rais'd by the English cost to dear, with all the Ports raise of the English in the Country about it, as also the Ordnance and Munition, were betrayd to the French for Money, to the incredible Dishonor of the English Nation: while English now vent with civil Seditions, was whilf England, now rest with civil Seditions, was not able to defend the same; and Charles the Emperor, being su'd to sor his Affssame, according to the late Consederacy, deny'd to relieve it, (as being won by the English after the Consederacy was made) and even resuled to take it into his own Hands, when it was offor'd him gratis. And, to increase the Inschicting of those Times, the Protector, not aware of the coming Practices of Dudley Duke of Northumberland, was condenied of Felony, by a Law newly made, for attempting to kill the King's Conneclious, (namely Northumberland and others) and be-

The Prc-follors, (namely Northumberland and others) and bethe vre- fewers, (names) worthiningeriatin and overs) and betecher be beaded; bis Son was by a private Law dipologle of the greatest part of his linevitance and his Father's Honoris; and the King himself, now destinate of the Assistance of his Friends, and exposed to the Cruelty.

Affifance of his Friends, and exposed to the Cruelty
The death of ambitions Persons, was taken away by an unime of R Ed. ly Death, (whether thro' any natural Disease, or wand VI, Poislon, is uncertain) leaving behind him an incredible Mis of himself among the People, for his singular and rare Vertues above his Years.

In this doleful Time, when Dudley had by his subtil Courricances dissolved the Roat of brothers Love between the Protector and Thomas Scimour his Brother, taking Occasion from a womanish Emulation betwirt the Queen Downger, now Thomas his Wife, and the Dutches of Somerset the Protector's Wife, among other things to convict Thomas of High Wife, and the Dutches of Somerier the Protector's Wife, among other things to conviet Thomas of High Treason, it was objected, that he intended to seize the King's Person, and to take the Lady Elizabeth, the King's Sifter, to Wife. All this she was unterly ignorant of, and far from any Suspicion, growing up daily to Piece Your Control of Something to Piece Wife. ram of, and for from any suspecting, growing up dat-ledy Eli-ly to Riper Tears, and continuing in great Grace and zabeth's Feweur with King Edward her Brother, (who call'd great her by no other Name than his sweet Sitter Tempegreat with the results have the bash is sweet Sister Tempegreat with the results have the sale with the Robither Brether. The results have the results of administable Beauty, and the Clustalter. In Wit, Reyal Soul, hoppy Almory, and indepting all given to the Study of Learning; informed as before the Latin, French, and Italian Tongues, and had a valifficant Knowlege of the Greek. Neither did the Latin, French, and Italian Tongues, and had a valifficant Knowlege of the Greek. Neither did the neglect Aldick, in far as it became a Princis, thoug able to fing liverly, and play bandfomly on the Late. With Roger Aldman, who was ber Tutor, the read over Melanchthon's Common-Places, all Lally, a german of the Histories of Titus Livius, certain felect Orations of Hociates, (whereof two she turn'd into Latin) Sophocles's Tragedies, and the New Testament in Greek: by which means she both New Testament in Greek: by which means she both framed her Tongue to a pure and elegant way of speaking, and inform'd her Alud with ope Documents and Instructions; daily applying herself to the Study of good Letters, not for Fomp and Ossentian, but no reder to Use in her Life, and the Prastice of Vertue; institute of the property of the property of the Tone. But these her liberal Studies were interrupted by the Death of her Brother King Edward; whose Breath was scarce out of his Body, when certain Messengers were sent from Dudley Duke of Northumberland, (who affected the Crown for Jane Grey, to whom he had betreth'd his Son) to move her to resign her Title to the Crown for a Sum of her to resign her Title to the Crown for a Sum of Money, and certain Lands to be settled on her. She modestly answer'd, that her elder Sister the Lady Mary modestly answerd, that her elder Sister the Lady Mary was suffice to be agreed without: for as long as the fail Lady Mary sived, she for her part could challenge no Right at all. Shortly after, the Lady Jane Grey, Grand-daughter to the second Sister of King Jane Grey Henry VIII. must publishly proclaimed Queen of England. To colour which, it was pretended, that the Ladies Mary and Elizabeth were by Ast of Parliament judgid illegitimate, which Ast was never duly repeal of someworth and great the King their Father had by the same Law declared, that they should succeed in order after Edward VI. in case he should fail of Issue: and that the said Sisters could not by the Law of England hereditarily succeed King Edward, Blood by Futher and Mother, but (as our Lawyers term it) of the half Blood. It was also alledg'd, term it) of the half blood. It was also alledged, that Henry VHI by his last Will and Testament conveyed the Title of the Crown to the said Lady Jane Grey. And withal it was objected, how dangerous SIEV. And viribal it was objected, bow dangerous it might be, if either the Lady Mary or the Lady Elizabeth should marry a forein Prince, who might restore the Bishop of Rome's Authority, at present thrown out of England, and subject the English to a forein Toke. And to the same purpose also they produced Letters Patents of Edward VI. made a little before he Death and Company Lett. before his Death, and figu'd with the Hands of many Noblemen, Bilhops, Judges, and others.

Neverthelefs, the ftrong Inclination and Affection of the Nobility and Commons, towards King Henry over England: who coming to LOTHEN with an Olden'd Army, the Ludy Elizabeth went to meet ber with claimed five hundred Horfe, left the should be wrinting to her Ludy Eli-Sifter's and her ewn Cause, which was then so much zaheth concern'd.

in the first Parliament which Queen Mary held, A Parlia-whatsoever had been decreed against the Marriage be-ment. unantipever had veen decreed against the sharringe vertween Lucen Katharine, her Musher, and K. Henry VIII. was repealed, and the said Marriage adjudged to be consonant to the Low of God, and walld to all Intents and Purposts, for these Reasons: Because it had been contracted and celebrated with the caufe it had been contracted and celebrated with the Confent of their Parents, wife and prudent Princet, by Advice of the gravest Men, as well in England as Spain, and upon mature Deliberation with the most learned Men of all Christendom, and completed and perfected by the Procretion of Children between them. The same Form also of Religion and Service of Popers God, and Administration of the Survaments, which testored, we will also got the Procretion of the Survaments, which restored them to the Survaments, which we have the survament of the Survaments, which we have the Survaments of the Survaments. was in use at the Death of Henry VIII. was restor'd; bowbeit without any Acknowledgment or Mention at all of the Pope's Authority: which very much troubl'd both the Queen and Cardinal Pool, who both of them were the area can material too, now with a form we've of opinion, that in the matter of the Marriage the Confent of the Parents and Judgmen of the wife and learned Men depended merely and folely upon the Dispendition of Pope Julius II. and were highly offended that the Use of the Sacraments was, without the Pope's Authority, promitted to such as were not set solemnly marries the Son,

Father.

conjugate to the treewy of them but increased that Effects by the Revenues of the Church. But the Revenues of the Church. But the news boundity defines it is try it down, as being prefued to that he whole Title to the Crown was inflied and frongelisted by no other means but by the Pener of the frengibied by no other means but by the Pener of the Rifliog of Rome, who had given Sentence in her behalf, after her Erder Lied pecew? I but to be deed the flegitimete. And indeed at that time many bore field an Harred on her the Pepe's Pener, and the Toughts Wyats of a fixih like, that Sir Thomas Wyat and fime Rebellion. Kentilh man, widin ton dissifter the Marriage between the time of the Rebellion, being perfunded that it was made up to no other wid, but, by the Pener of the Spaniarity, to hamper the English mens Necks more firstify under the Take of the Bifliop of Rome, and to make away the Lady Elizabeth, the next Heir to the Greun of Figland. And the Emperor Charles V.

make and the tang turner of the Emperor Charles V. well knowing the Timper of Men in England, laid fuch Ruks and Delays in Cardinal Pool's Way, (who was coming into England, in quality of a Legate from the Pope) and that not without the Queen's Privity, lest be should give occasion of Offence, while Matters were yet unfailed, that he came not into England till after fifteen Months, when the Queen's third Parlia-ment was now holden, and the Marriage between Q. Mary ment was now bolden, and the Marriage between Queen Mary and King Philip celebrated, by Diffenda-tion of Pepe Julius III. because they were within the feecad and third Degree of Confanguinity, and the field Charles the Emperor had formerly contracted Marriage de future with the Lady Marry, then a very Informa-Pool at last dismiss d by the Emperor, came into En-gland, and being responsed in Blood, proposed to the En-thance with Propers and greet tweethes that the Laycontra-cted to the states, with Prayers and great Intreaties, that the Laws against Hereticks might be revived and reinforced, that the Laws enacted against the See of Rome, since the Twentieth Year of Henry VIII. might be repeal d, and that the whole Body of the Realm might be receneild to the Church of Rome. All which with much ado he at last obtained, but not till such time as by the and Edward VI. from Abbies, Colleges, Bishopricks, &c. were confirmed to the Queen and the present Pef-session, left the Peace of the Kingdom should be whereon England is reconfessors, left the Peace of the Kingdom should be clied to the disturbed. Hereupon be presently absolved the Clergy Rome.

The man Lairy from the Guilt of Schism; a follown Mills must celebrated at Rome by Pope Julius III. himself Romes for for fer, Processors were decreed, a Jubilee appointed, thereat.

The man plenary Induspences granted to every one who should give God Thanks for the Re-uniting of the Kingdom of Fingland. To Rome were find Anthony Fiscant Mentacute, Thursbey Bishop of Ely, and Sir Edward Carrie, to give Thanks for Pardon of the Schism, and to tender in the name of the King, Queen and Realm, due Submission and Obedience to the Pope and See Appolletick. To above in the Appellish Palace is reconand See Appletick. To whom in the Appletick Palace and Cent of Kings, was granted by Paul IV. (for Julius was new dead) a publick Conflictor or Audience, their Obedience accepted, the Pardon and Abfolution their Obedience accepted, the Pardon and Abfolution given by Cardinal Pool, approved and confirmed. And the more to oblige Queen Warry and King Philip, the Pope, cut of his plenny Apoledical Power, excited tree-time time to Kingdom for every, and hone'd and adort rectures in with Regal Title, Dignity, and Preeminences, &c. landinto a Kingdom for the Preeminences, &c. all which notwithflunding the Effacts of Iteland had by their norm Authority before amply confer'd on Henry VIII, and the Queen brofelf already ufed and enjoy'd.

viii. and the zero weight already upen and enjoy a. But these things are not proper to this place.

Now the Romish Religion seemed to be fully established in England. Nevertheless, the Ecclessificks of the Realm, seeing small thepe of line by the Queen, who was now forly Years old, better and fields, still received into the Charles. But the Efacts of the find in Fow of the Lady Mizabeth: for they know that I the En-Renim (as Lacen Mary shoul) were afined to adjusted the miss and exhausting again the statisting of the Bifury to this the K. Rome, which her had man fisher off. Neither would they chief they are fixed by the state of the Speen floud by department to the speed of the England of the En as two reds the Kifing bins. Seriously therefore they ex-fulted from the fift beginning of the or Merry's Right, that the Religions in offered night receive no Dear ment by her ments. To make an ay a Princip of the Blood, by Sirvel or Poifen, from do the fibera part, and to Queen Muy berleft, (naturally a mile and Loving Princess, the slid net here have much Go to lewing Princefs, the flor did not bear her much G. Lewill, by reafon of the Grudges and Differfuces better their Arabers) a betimen Sim. Intellegate of childen flored Perforast hample the contrary, who were of crimon, that for the effablishing of the Catholick Religion, engine to be attempted, any thing committed, the in tieff never formfully. Each it fell out expreparation of the Catholick Sir Jenes & Crottes, and other Proteflants, but fellitudify with distinctly and Committens, and unknowned to make my a Mariner between the Lad Sir. vour'd to make up a Marriage between the Lady Elivoir a to make up a Althring vettice the Lady EAG-Labeth and Edward Courtney, Evel of Deventhire. Hereipon she, as prive to the Design, was committed to The Pripon; and stiff shing Reports used given out, that she tends was accellent to the Robellin; then some working she their Lives, and others put to the Robe. Crottes opentotal taces, and enjoying to the Ricke. Courtes opin-y offirmed with foliam Protestations, that she mus not acceptory to, or had any Hand in the Soldition. And Wyat (who they faid had secretly accused her) publickly declared the same, just before his Execution. Nevertheless she was harry'd to and fro, had Keepers fet over her, her Servants and Waiting women clast up in Prifen, and hofelf us d with more Severity, than is generally exercifed towards Perforages of her Rank and up by private Letters full of Love and Affection; and and K of promiting her great matters, invites her into France: constant whether cut of real Love I cannot fay, or whother it her.

Mean time, Henry II. King of France chears her Feen! K.

were with delign to render her more fulpicious, and make uay for the Quen of Scots (who was defined for his Dangher-in-law) to the Crown of Lingland after Queen Mary. Christian III. King of Domand (who had latel) prefoled the Pretestant Religion) makes curbo had lately profess of the Pretestian Religions makes her likewise many kind Ossers, and mithal addresseds her privately on behalf of his Son Frederick: which was no some proceived by the Papistis in England, but they again threaten her with new McGhess, and suspecting the state of the Papistis in England, but the American Realm, can never be sofes, while she is equal to the Auton and Realm, can never be sofes, while she is equal to the News mult she then be can off, either as a birth ratifes, or as an Hartick. At the same time, while the context Context was a birth as a single the Papass Context was a birth of the same Context was a birth of the same Context was a birth of the same thanks and the same than the same great Cruelty was us'd against the Protestants of lefter note, John Story, Doctor of Law, and other merciles Men declar'd in their Meetings, that the Root of Herefle (meaning her) was rather to be plucked up, than the fmaller Branches to be lept off. The Lady Elizabeth ine passer in most in terior of the life time the most guiding bestleff as Ship in bluftering Weather, beth beard Dixine Service after the Romith manne, Statical and was frequently confifed; and, at the profigural in temperature of the most and Almaces of Cardinal Pool, profess d ber-R mife. filf, for fear of Death, a Roman-Catholick: yet Religion did not Queen Mary believe her, as remembering that the hoefelf, in the like Fear, had, by Letters written pre majory, in the time Real, bady by Letters Written with her own Hand to her Father (which I myle have few) and only for ever renameed the Powe's matherity in England, but also acknowledged her Father to be Supreme Head of the Church of England under Christian All Madde Manner 1987. Christ, and ber Mother's Marriage with King Henry Chrift, and her Mother's Marriage with King Venry her Either to have here inceftious and unlawful. Neither could the Cordinal himfilf and the veil of the Riflops be perfounded the was read, who for fearing the Romift Refigion, with the wave made easily. But this way much grated the Eins of King Philips, Syran Mary's Husband, and the Spaciards, who were rose foreunable to the Lody Elizabeth; not fo much picking the Condition of the official Maidan-Vinial, Spacial Conditions of the official Condition The contained of their own particular Interestic Lawy For, they forestim, that if once the Lady Elizabeth etc. where the Lady Elizabeth etc. and Scotland, angles, or Naty Land Law and Scotland, angles, or Naty Land Law and Scotland, nest Heir to the Ceorn of England, and already e-fpould to the Daughiu of France, be united to the French Seepter; than which nothing could be med-desalful to the Spaniard's Grandum, who had then contiand Hars with the French.

to fend

Since therefore they could not without Impicty make away the Lady Elizabeth, some thought best to remove to fend away the Lady Elizabeth, fine thought heft to consove the Land her at a Diffence out of England, and to match her and exclude her did this pleafe the Spaniard, who had before defigned from the her for his Son Charles. And Sir Thomas Cornsuccetion wallis, one of the Queen's Council, difficulted it, alledging that the People of England would take it very it, noy, would not at all endure, that the next Heir to the Crown flould be conveyed out of the Land. At the fame time Queen Marry, out of her inveterate Harred to the Lady Elizabeth, and becaute the laid Lady was overfe Lady Elizabeth, and because the faid Lady was averse Lang Intraceing with a Savoyard, was to transferred with Anger, that see leaded her with Checks and Taunts, and fluck not ever and anon to affirm, that Mary Queen of Scots was the certain and undoubted Heir to the Crown of England, next after herself. War des These Confustations against the Lady Elizabeth were clared as diverted by a War declared by Elecabeth were gainst F. French, in Favour of her Husband: which tho is were the chief and principal Cause of the War, yet other Reasons also concurd, and those very real and planther Keljohs also concurs, and those very real and plan-fible, viz. That the French, contrary to the driviles of the former League, had, by his Ministers, encouraged and supported the Rebellions of the Duke of Northum-berland and Sir Thomas Wyat, and the Designs of Dudley and Ashton against the: That he had com-mission of Pirates against the English Merebants, surmilled Stafford with Arms and Shipping to feize upon a Quartan Ague. A Man much more renown d for his Scarborough-Cassle, attempting Calais by sinster Piety, Learning and Integrity, than for the Glory of bis Royal Descent, tho' he was Son to the Daughter of France, and invaded the Netherlands, which the English were bound by Agreement to protest. During King of England. nish d Stafford with Arms and Shipping to feize upon the Heat of this War, and while the Scots, whom the French had excited, infested the Marches of England, Calais, the Caffles of Risbank, Newnambrug, Calais and Mere, Oye, Hammes, Sandgate, and the Caffle other Planter. Death of many Bilhops, (which by a lad Prefige found to be we denoted the Wrath of God against the Jeem at a nove annunc a toe verain of soon agaings one Land) Queen Mary also, being neglected of her Husband, and languishing with Grief for the Los of Calais, (which had for the spece of two hundred Years been in the Hands of the English) departed this Life, The death November 17. 1558. of a fix months Fever and a of Queen Tympany, when she had reign'd five Years and four May, Import, norm we had regen a fee least and feter Months. A Princeft never infliciently to be commended of all men, for her pions and religious Demeanor, her Commiferation towards the Poor, and her Monifeence and Liberality towards the Nobility and Church men. However her Reign is ill paken of, by reason of the harman content of t Hawbett her Keign is it is poken og, by reason og ine ear-bowne Grueley of the Bishops, who (which wust a land speciacle to behold) pelluted England in all Parts thereef, by burning the Protestants alive. For they de-frey of more of all Ranks and Qualities, Bishops, Mi-nisters of God's Word, and of the Common-people, by this berible kind of Death, within the space of five Years, than (as some have observed) King Henry VIII. did in full seven and thirty Tears; or than En-gland ever saw so ferved ever since the time that, in the Reign of King John, Christians first began a-mongst m to tyrannize one over another with Fire Faggot, and

The same day that Queen Mary died, died also And of within few hours after, Cardinal Pool, Archbishop of Cardinal Canterbury, after he had for some time strugged with Pool.

ELI-

ELIZABETH,

Anno 1558.

Queen of ENGLAND.

1558. known.

FTER the Death of Queen Mary had been, for fome time, kept private; the first News thereof was brought to the Lords Spiritual and Temporal then in The death Parliament; (the Two Houses having lat for of Cueen some little time before.) They were seized at Mary first with a mighty Grief and Surprize, but soon made wore off those Impressions, and with an handsome Mixture of Joy and Sorrow, upon the Loss of a deceased, and the Prospect of a succeeding Princes, they betook themselves to Publick Butiness, and with one Confent agreed, that the Lady ELI-ZABETH should be declar'd the true and lawful Heir of the Kingdom, according to the Act of Succession, made 35 Henry VIII. Upon this, the Members of the Lower House were call d up, and Heath Archbishop of York and Lord Chancellor of England, acquaints 'em, (not without a deep and visible Concern) " That the "Church and State had loft a most pious and " excellent Queen; a Lofs which every private " Subject would have Reason to judge insup-"portable, had it not pleas'd God (in Mercy to the English Nation) to preferve flill the Lady ELIZABETH, the other and surviving " Daughter of King Henry; of whose Right of " Succession, since no Doubt could or ought to " be made, the House of Peers only wanted their "Consent, to proclaim her Queen, out of hand. No sooner had he said this, but there pass'd (as it were) a folemn and general Vote of a Long Life and Happy Reign to Queen ELIZABETH; and when the Seffion was ended, she was, with Sound of Trumpet, and the loudelt Acclamations of the People, first proclaim'd in Weltminster, and after at the Royal-Exchange, Queen of England, France and Ireland, Defender of the Faith. Thus happy and glorious was the Beginning of her Reign, and (to fay Truth) fhe poilefs d through the whole Piogrels of it, as firm and large an Interest in the Hearts of her People, and was carefed upon all occasions of a Publick Appearance, with as chearful Marks of Honor and Refpect, as any Prince before her. She was now about the Age of Twenty Five, and had been fo well disciplin'd in the excellent School of Adversity, as to become Mistress of a Prudence above her Years; and of this she gave an early Proof in the Choice of her Minifers:

Shemakes For the made of her Privy-Council, Nich. Heath Choice of Archbishop of York, a Person, as I hinted before, ber Counof fingular Prudence, and a well-temper'd Judgcil.
ment; as likewife, William Pavolet Marquess of ment; as Intervie, wintam Famili Manques of Winologies, Lord High-Treafurer, Henry Fitz-Allen Earl of Arundel, Francis Talbot Earl of Sbrewsbury, Edward Stanley Earl of Derby, William Hobert Earl of Pembroke, Edward Lord Clinton, Lord High-Admiral, and William Lord Howard of Effingham, Lord Chamberlain, Sir Thomas Cheiney, Sir William

Peter, Sir John Mason, Sir Richard Sackvill, Kts. and Nicolas Wotton Dean of Canterbury. All these 1558. had been of Queen Mary's Privy-Council, as Ann. 1. well as of her Religion, but then the better to conform herfelf to the prefent Pofture of Affairs, she joins with them these Servants of her own, William Parr Marquess of Northampton, Francis Russel Earl of Bedford, Thomas Parry, Edward Rogers, Ambrose Cave, Francis Knolles, and William Cecil, who had been Secretary to King Edward VI. and a Person of rare and uncommon Abilities; and not long after fhe admitted Nicolas Bacon, and made him Keeper of the Privy-Seal These were every Man of 'em Protestants, and had held no Places nor Employments under Queen Mary. On those, as well as on all others which she afterwards admitted into the Ministry, fhe bestow'd her Favours with so much Caution, and so little Diffinction, as to prevent either Party from gaining the Ascendant over her, whereby the remaind Mistress of her own felf, and preserv'd both their Affections, and her own Power and Authority entire.

Her first and great Concern, after her happy Queen's Settlement on the Throne, was to restore the Care for Reform'd Religion; and tho' she made but very the Fits-few privy to the Design, yet so well was she perfunded of its Purity and Orthodoxy, and had built gion. upon the Principles of Reason and Education such upon the Principles of Reafon and Education Iuch an high Opinion of its Princitive Tutab and Simplicity, that file was fully refolv'd to countenance and fupport it. Then file advifes with her Council, about fecuring the Ports, and entrubility of the Lieutenancy of the Tomer to fone perher affairs fon of approv'd Fidelity: That a new Committed at home, on should be dispatched to Thomas Earl of Suffer, and the state of Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, who had kept that Country (of itself mutinous enough) quiet and in good order, with but 320 Horle, and 860 Foot in Garrifon: That the Judges Patents fhould be renew'd, that (it being then Term-Time) the Course of the Law might not be stop'd; with this Clause inserted, that they should not dispose of any Offices: That new Justices and Sheriffs should be appointed in every County: That no flouid be appointed in every county. That no Bills of Exchange should be fent abroad; and that Preachers should decline all Controversal Points of Religion. Then for forein Affairs, it was advisid, That Ambassadors should be di-Andconwas advisid, That Ambassadors should be di- And confipatch'd to the Courts of Christian Princes, to censionein notify the Death of Queen Mary. Accordingly matters. Sir Thomas Challoner was fent as Envoy to Firdinand Emperor of Germany, with a Packet under the Queen's own Hand, wherein the advises him,

That her Sifter was dead, and that thro' the

"Goodness of God, and in virtue of the Herodiary Right, and the Peoples Consent, "The was now invested in the Succession; and herodiary Right porhips more, than the Pre-"that she desired nothing more, than the

O. Eli-Zabeth

claim'd.

" fervation and Improvement of that antient 1558. " Friendship which had been so long kept up Ann. 1. "between the Crown of England, and the House of Austria. The Lord Cobbam was afterwards fent to the Spanish Netherlands, with Instructions to the same purpose, as likewise with a Patent to impower the Earl of Arundel, Thurlby Bishop of Ely, and Dr. Wotton, who had been some time be-fore employ'd by Queen Mary, to negotiate a Peace at Cambray, to act afresh in the Queen's Name; and with them to join in Commission the Lord Howard of Effingham. About the same time was Sir Henry Killegrew privately employ'd to feel the Pulse of the German Princes, and to attempt the composing their Differences, by the Study of a Religion which was both pure and peaceable. D.B. was fent over to the King of Denmark, and Armigille Waad to the Duke of Hel-

> King Philip, upon the News of Queen Mary his Confort's Death, apprehending the utter Lois of his new Title, and Power with the English, (things of the weightiest Importance to him) as also that the Kingdoms of England, Scotland, and Ireland, would, in favour of the Queen of Scots, unite with Frame; thought it now time to press

K. Philip's in good earnest a Match with Q. Elizabeth, which Addresses he did by the Mediation of the Count of Feria; promising withal, to procure from the Pope a special Dispensation in favour of his Pretentions. This Motion could not but produce in the Queen very uneafie Refentments, when fhe reflected, that to reject the Suit of one of the first Princes of Europe, and one who had greatly obliged her, must carry with it an Appearance of Indiscretion, mix'd with Ingratitude. Nor could the King of France fit easie or unapprehensive under the Prospect of this new Alliance, which his Spanish Enemy was like to contract with England; wherefore he is busie at Rome, by his Engine the Bifhop of Argoulesme, in hindering the Grant of this Dispensation, forasmuch as Queen Elizabeth was not only suspected as a Favourer of the Reformation, but was accounted illegitimate beside: But all this was done in the dark, that he might give no Umbrage to the English, under the present Fluctuation of Affairs. The Count of Feria, to accomplish the Match, possesses the Roman-Catholicks then in England, "That "this was the only fure way to preferve their antient Religion, and the Dignity of it, which "fhould they not take hold of, he could not but pity the State of the English Nation, as a "Country draind of its Treatures, without Sol-diers, defencelefs, and expos'd for want of proper Forts and Ammunition; and, in a "word, as a Kingdom that wanted wife Men of " its Council. And, in truth, the Face of England look'd at this time difmally forlorn, being not only embarqu'd in a War with Scotland and France, but overcharg'd with a vast Debt, contracted by Henry VIII. and Edward VI. beside the

After a ferious Debate with herfelf, concerning the Proposals of the Marriage on foot, the Queen foon resolved, that the Marriage of a Woman with one who had been her Sifter's Huf-band, was, by a Parity of Reason, equally forbidden, and therefore equally unlawful, as one contracted by any Person with his Brother's Relict, and by necessary Consequence, no Bull or Decree of the Pope could make it otherwise. And Confumption of the Treasury, the scandalous and expensive Loss of Calais and the Country of Oye, the Religious Heats and Diffensions of the People: To which might be added, the Queen's being stripp'd of her most powerful Friends, and unsupported by the Alliance of sorein Princes.

She dea

clines the Propofal. the faw moreover, that the Espousing a Match upon these dispensing Terms, would be little less than a tacit Consession of her own llegismacy. fince her Father King Henry begot her upon Katharine of Spain, whom he had put away, as being his Brother's Widow. And when most of the Universities of Christendom, and the Convocation of Divines at London, had confirm'd and juffify'd this latter Match; whereas that with Queen Katharine was adjudg'd null and unlawful; being therefore at length determin'd, the difmiffes her Royal Suitor, with a modeft and respectful Answer, such as became the Reserv'dness of a bashful Virgin, but which proceeded in truth from the Scruples of a Religious Queen. But whilst he was urging the Queen to a Compliance by frequent Letters and repeated Instances, and the in the mean while receiv'd his Addresses, and treated his Character suitably to the advantageous Thoughts she had of so accomplish d a Prince; there was not wanting a Set of Courtiers, who made it their bufiness to exclaim a-gainst the Spaniards, as a stiff and haughty fort of People; and among these were some of the Privy-Council, who did not fail to infuse this Notion into the Queen, (being jealous, without doubt, that a Mind in suspence might at last pitch on the wrong side) "That he self and her Friends would be undone, and all England into the bargain, should she allow the Pope's " Dispensing Power in this or any other matter That two Popes had fucceffively "whatever. That two Popes had fucceffively declared her Mother's Marriage with Heavy " VIII. to be void and unlawful; and that un-" der the Shelter of their Verdicts, the Queen of Scots immediately laid Claim ro the Crown of England: That the Pope would never be " brought to revoke that Sentence, and that she " could not expect any Justice on the side of "Rome, which had already treated her Mother and herfelf with so much Baseness. And be-" fide all this, that the French King used all pos-"fible Efforts at Rome, to get Mary Queen of Scots declared lawful Queen of England. The Queen's Inclinations being now quite She con-

drawn off from fo dangerous an Alliance, and fultrabulent folely upon the Interest of the Protestant the Religion, she thought she could not do God better the Protestant State of the Protestant Stat ter Service, nor put a more effectual Stop to ligion.

Philip's Application, than to begin fome Alterations in the Church. For, when fhe had made a Change in Religion, she did not in the least doubt, but there would follow a proportionable one in his Affections: She therefore order'd that a Committee of her best Counsellors should forthwith fit, to concert proper measures for the suppreffing the Romifb, and re-fettling the Protestant Faith; To examine what the dangerous Consequences might be of such an Establishment, and to find out fit Expedients to prevent 'em. These they readily forefaw were of two forts; Such as threatned 'em from abroad, or elfe fuch as were like to fpring up at bone. The Dangers they most apprehended from abroad were either the Thunder from the Pope's Bulls, (the Sentence of Excommunication, which was a Surrendring the Kingdom to the Infults of forein Invaders) or elfe the Resentment of his Christian Majesty, who might possibly fnatch at a Pretence by this means to retard the Motions of the Peace begun at Cambray, if not to advance the Queen of Scots Quarrel into a War with the English, as being now profess'd Hereticks, as well as avow'd Enemies: At least 'twas fear'd he might raise Commotions in Scotland, which was but too much devoted to his Interest. Nor did things look better on the fide of Ireland, which was a Nation bigotted to Popery, and prone enough to Rebelstein.

1558.

Ann. I.

lion. And besides all this, the Spaniard bore too 1558. great a Sway in the Netherlands, to be look'd on r. as a good Neighbour at this Juncture. At length they came to this Conclusion, that as for the Popes Cenfure, it fignify'd not a Rush; but that 'twas necessary not only to embrace the Offer of a Peace, if tender'd, but rather than fail, to fue for it at the French King's Hands; in as much as Scotland would be concluded within the fame League. It was likewife judg'd necessary, that the Protestants of that Kingdom and France be protected, and Bernick, and the Frontiers of England towards Scotland and Ireland, secur'd and fortify'd with abler Garrifons: And no lefs adviseable, to cultivate in the first place a good Agreement with the Spaniard, at any Rate; and to ratific the ancient League with the House of Burgundy. But now on the other fide, the Milchiets impending nearer home, were most dreaded from those Peers who were removed from the Council-Table, from the Degradation of the Bishops and others of the Clergy, from the Influence of the feveral Judges, and the Justices of Peace in every County, and in a word from the Common-People, who made themfelves confiderable in Queen May's Reign, for embracing the same Perfusion the was of: Since thefe were all to be remov'd from their Places, and to be made fubject to stricter Penalties (a Course which Queen Mary took before with the Protestants) and none but those of the Reform'd Religion were to bear any Office in the Government, or take upon 'em the Headship of any College in either of the Two Univertities; and belide, all Popish Masters and Presidents were to be remov'd from the Universities, and all the School-Masters, that were so affected, were to quit the Charges of Eton and Winchester, and all other Schools: And as for fuch of the Reformation, as were for fetting up new Schemes and Models of Church-Discipline, they were to be fupprets'd betimes, and but one Religion to be countenanced and eftablish'd; because a Diverfity of Persuasions among Englishmen (who were known to be a warm and warlike People) would be likely to foment perpetual Broils and Quarrels between 'em. The Care of purging the Liturgy, which was published in English in Edward VI's Time, was committed to Parker, turgy is Edward V15 11mc, was command, Whitebead, ordered to Pilkington, Bill, Mry, Cox, Grindall, Whitebead, Divines of noted Learning and Moderation, and to the very ingenious Sir Thomas Smith, let. The Management of which Affair was left folely in the Hands of the Marquess of Northam-pton, the Larl of Bedford, John Grey of Pyrgo, and

Cecil. In the mean while, fome Eeelefiafticks there were, of a Temper too impatient to wait for the flower Remedies which the Laws might provide, who began to preach the Reform'd Doctrine with too unwary a Freedom, first in private Houses, and then more publickly in several Churches, and other form'd Assemblies: By which means, they drew after them a numerous Confluence of fuch Hearers, whose chief Property 'tis to have itching Ears; and at length proceeded fo far as to bandy controverfial Topicks among themfelves, and to wrangle about em with those of the Romillo Communion. Infomuch that, to cut off any farther Occasions of fuch Religious Heats, the Queen put out a very firiet Proclamation, forbidding any fuch Disputes for the future. Notwithstanding she She allows freely confented, that the Epiftles, the Golpels, and the Ten Commandments should be read in English to the People, but without any Comment or Paraphrase; as also that the Lords-

Prayer, the Apostles Creed, and the Litany should be repeated in the Vulgar-Tongue; That 1558. in other things the Romift Ritual should be kept Ann. 1. in use, till the Parliament thould fix the Method of Religious Worship. Mean while the Queen took care to perform her Sifters I uneral- An! fo-Rites, with great State and Magnificence, in the lone, Wessiminster-Abby; and not long after the paid raises of who in lefs than Two Years (by an Learning Change on or very common among Princes, but far more honorable than the most glorious Triumpis;) laid down his Empire, and bid adieu to the World, in order to enjoy the bleffed Leifure of ferving God, and faving his Soul.

The Second Year of br Reign.

In the Beginning of the New Year, the Q. She recreates William Parr, who had forfeited his Peer-free N.

age for Treaton in Queen Mary's Reign, once blemen, more Marquels of Northampton, and make, Ed- and ce ward Seimeur, Baron Beaucamp, and Earl of Hert- a'coothers ford, who had by an Act clandestinely obtaind, and back'd by the Malice of his Enemies, been dilpoffess'd of the Title, and a great Part of the Effette left by his Ancestors; Thomas H. w.rd Second Son of Thomas Duke of Norfolk, was ho-nour'd with the Character of Viscount Howard of Bindon, Hemy Cary of Hunsden, her Contin-German by Mary Bolen, and Oliver St. John of Bletnesho, were created Barons, who were all averse to the Romish Superstition. Now came on the Queen's Coronation, who advanced in a well-form'd Cavalcade, from the Tower of London to Westminster, and received the most grateful Acclamations of her Subjects in her Paffage through the City; a Tribute they were the more encouraged to pay, by the gracious Looks and Expressions the Queen us'd upon this Occasion. Is crowned The next day she was crown'd and anointed with the usual Ceremonies, by Oglethorp Bithop of Carlifle, the Archbithop of York and some others refuting to affift at the Solemnity, out of a ferupulous Regard and Tendernets to the Romish Religion, which it feems they grew the more folicitous for, by reason that the Q. had not only been feafon'd and brought up in that of the Proteflants, but had lately forbad the Bifhop in faying of Mafs, to elevate or lift up the Hoft, and had allow'd the Ute of the Litany. Epititles and Gotpels (meer Abominations with Men of their Temper) in the Vulgar-Tongue,

Tho' no Objection could be made to her Picty and Devotion, who not only paid her prity and Devotion, who not only paid her pri-vate and daily Addrelfes to God, the first thing after she rose, but attended the publick Service as her own Chappel, at the appointed Times, and always on Sandys and Holday; where she behaved hertelf with a Reverence and Devotion fuitable to her Greatnets. She used to frequent the Lent-Sermons drefs'd in Mourning, as the gravett and most primitive Habit; the she would often mention what the had read of her Predecessor Henry III. " That he had much ra" ther put up an humble devout Perition to " God himfelf, than hear the finest Harangues

" about him, from the Lips of others. the Doctrines relating to the Cross, the Bieffed

Virgin, and the Saints, the had very honourable Sentiments of them; and as the treated them with Regard herfelf, to would the never endure to hear them flighted or vilify d by others. Some few days after this, the Parliament niet, i.i. And estis the which it was in the first place Reloived, Ne- a Parlia mine contradicine, "That Queen Lizzeth was, ment "and (to use the Words of the As!) ought to " be, as well by the Law of God, as the Com-"mon and Scattle-Laws of the Realm, the

The Li. cted.

the publick Service in English.

" lawful, undoubted, and true Heir to the 1559. "Crown, lawfully defeended from the Bloodclim. 2. "Royal, according to the Order of Succeffion
"fertled in Parliament 35. Harry VIII.
Nevertheles that Let of her Father's, which related to the Exclusion of her and her Sister from the Succession, remain'd still unrepeal'd: And this was look'd on, in some Mens Opinion, as a great Flaw in Bacon's Politicks, (whom the Queen rely'd on as the very Oracle of the Law, in Cases of this Nature) and the rather, because Northumberland had used it as an Argument both against the Queen and Mary; for which Reason Queen Mary had got it repeal'd, fo far as her-felf was concern'd. And besides this, some factious Spirits might plot fome Mischief against her, as a pretended Usurper, tho' it be a standing Maxim of the Laws of England, "That the "Crown takes away all Defects. Another fort of Men there was, who thought this a very wife Part in Bacon, who confidering the Perplexity and Uncertainty of Parliamentary Laws and Statutes, and that the very fame things that feem'd to favour the Interest of Queen Elizabeth, laid a Stain upon the Caufe and Credit of her Sifter, was therefore very fly of rubbing an old Sore, which Time had now pretty well heal'd; and chose rather to refer to that Att of the 35. of Henry VIII. which feem'd to bear an equal and fair Regard to the Reputation of both. In this Seffion, after other Debates, an All

by renewing the Laws of Hemy VIII. repeal'd by Queen Many, againft the See of Reme; and thofe of Educard VI. in favour of the Reforma-tion: And likewise by Enacting, "That what-" ever Rights, Privileges, or Spiritual Preemi-nences, had been formerly in Use, and e-"flablish'd by any Ecclesiaftical Authority whatever, for vilining the Clergy, and corons in Re- " recting all kinds of Error, Herefie and Schifm, "with other Abuses and Disorders; should be for ever annexed to the Imperial Crown of " England: That the Queen and her Succeffors " might be empower'd to give their Letters Pa-" tents to fore particular Persons, for the due " Exercise of that Authority; on this Condi-" tion however, that they should not determine " any thing to be Herefie, but what had been " fo defined time out of mind, either from Ca-" nonical Scripture, the four first Occumenical "Councils, or fome other, according to the genuine Sense of Holy Writ; or should here-" after be fo defined by Authority of Parlia-"ment, with the Confent of the Clergy of "England, in Convocation: That all Ecclesia-"flical Persons, and Magistrates, who receiv'd Pensions from the Exchequer; such as should " take any Degree in the Univertities; Wards

pass'd for Restoring to the Crown its antient Juris-diction in Matters Ecclesiastical; which was done

" her Dominions. This Act was vigoroufly opposed in the House of Lords, by Nine Bilhops, (who were all that of the Lourteen yet living were then present) www. the Archbishop of York, Heath; the Bishop of Lenkin, Bonner; of Winebester, White; of Won-ester, Pare; of Landoff, Anthony; of Coventry, Boyne; of Exerce, Turbeville; of Chester, Seot; of

" that were to fue their Liveries, and be inve-" fted in their Livings; and fuch as were to " be admitted into the Queen's Service, &c.

" fhould take an Oath to acknowlege the Queen " to be the Supreme Governor of her Kingdoms,

" (for the Title of Supreme Head of the Church of " England did not at all relish) in all Causes, as well Spiritual as Civil; all forein Princes " and Potentates being excluded the Privilege

" of taking Cognizance of any Caufes within

Carlifle, Ogletberge; and by the Abbot of West-minster, Feekenbam. Of the Temporal Lords not 1559. one opposed it, but the Earl of Sbrewsbury, and Ann. 2. Anthony Brown Vifcount Mountague, whom in Q. Mary's Reign the Parliament had fent to Reme with Thurlby Bishop of Ely, to procure that England might be reflored to the Unity of the Church of Rome, and Obedience to the Apostolick See. He, out of a Sentiment of Zeal and Honor, preffes it very home, " That it would be a very difgraceful Reflexion for England, which was fo lately, and fo well reconciled to the Apoltolick See, to make fo fudden a Revolt from it: And moreover, that the Hazard would be as great as the Scandal, should the Pope thunder out his Excommunication, and expole the Nation, by that means, to the Referement of "its neighbouring Enemies, upon the Score of this Defection: That he, for his part, had by Authority of Parliament, and in the name of " the whole Body of England, tender d Obedience to the Pope; the Performance of which " he could by no means dispense with. He was therefore more and more importunate with them, that they would not withdraw themselves from the See of Rome, to which they were beholden for the first Propagation of the Christian Faith, and the constant Defence of it ever fince. But when this Matter came to be canvasid in the Lower House, it was carry'd by a confidera-ble Majority of Votes; the Papilts in the mean while being much difguited, and pretending that Protestants were chosen Knights of the Shires, and Burgesses for Cities and Corporations, on this very Defign; and that the Duke of Norfolk, and the Earl of Arundel, Men of the biggett Interest among the Nobility, had, to serve their own Turns, or Hopes at least, beg'd Voices; and that Cecil underhand play'd the fame Game.

Whilst these Differences held as to Points of Religion, it was order'd by Proclamation, that no Man should speak irreverently of the Sacrament of the Altar, and that the Communion should be administer'd in both kinds. A Conference A Confewas also appointed at Westminster, to be held be-rence held tween the Romanists and Protestants, before the between Two Houses, against the last of March. The the Fapilis and Pro Disputants chosen for those of the Reformation, testants; were Riebsrd Cox, Whitehead, Edmund Grindall, Robert Herne, Edwin Sands, Edmund Gueff, John Elmer, and John Jenel; Those on the Papilts fide, were John White Bishop of Winchesper, Ralph Bayne Bishop of Coventry and Liebsfeld, Thomas Watson Bp. of Lincoln, Dr. Cole Dean of S. Pauls, Dr. Langdall Archdeacon of Lewis, Dr. Harpsfield Archdeacon of Canterbury, Dr. Chadjey Archdeacon of Middlefex. The Questions propounded were, 1. Concerning the Reading Divine Service in the Vulgar-Tongue. 2. Of the Authority of the Church in appointing or abolishing Ceremonies, for Edification lake. And 3. Or the Sacrifice of the Mass.

But all this came to nothing: For, after they Butcomes had exchanged a few Words about penning down to nothe Arguments on both fides, because, it seems, thing. they could not agree upon a Method for managing the Dispute; those of the Protestant side began to triumph, as if they had the Advantage, whereas the Romanists complain'd of foul Play, inafmuch as they had not above a day or two's Notice of the Questions to be debated; and that Bacon the Keeper of the Great Seal (a very indifferent Divine, and a profess'd Enemy to the Papills) fat as Judge of the Conference. But the naked Truth of the Matter was, That they durst not, upon cool and better Thoughts, call into Quettion Points of fuch high Confequence, and which their own Church had never fub

A Propo fal is made tor fome Alteration

1559.

mitted to a Debate, without the Pope's Leave 1559- and Approbation; whereupon the great Cry a-Ann. 2. mong them was, "When shall Men be satisfy'd " about their Creed, if they were fuffer'd at all "Turns to call it into Queftion? That Disputes " about Religion always ended on the Court-" fide; and a great deal more to the fame purpose. Nay, so warm were the Bishops of Lincoln and Winchester, as to declare it their Opinion, "That the Queen, and all those that "were the Abettors of this Separation from the "Church of Rome, deferv'd to be excommuni-cated for their Pains: and for this they were imprison'd. But such as had better heads among the Party, thought it proper to refer this Cenfure to the Pope, left, as they were Subjects themselves, they should be taken for Men of rebellious Principles, or fo many Ringleaders or Trumpeters of Sedition. Neither was the Bi-fhop of Rome ignorant of these Transactions, who in a great Pett commanded Sir Edw. Carne a Welsh Knight and a Lawyer, who had manag'd Carnelays Three fuecessive Embassies at Rome, for Henry down the VIII. for Queen Mary, and now for Queen Eli-Character abeth, to lay down the Character of Envoy, of Embaf. and (to use the very Words of the Mandate) " by Virtue of the verbal Command, and ora-" cular Sentence of the most Holy Lord the " Pope, in Respect to the Holy Obedience due "to him, and under pain of the greater Ex-communication, and the Lofs of all his Goods, "not to depart the Gity, but to take upon him the Charge of the English Hospital. The Meaning of which was, to prevent his giving Intelligence at home, of any feeret Attempts the French were practifing against the Queen; a shing which the Love he bore his Country, had hitherto made him very carefully do; tho' some are of Opinion, that this crafty Gentleman made his Ablence from home his own Choice, out of the bigotted Zeal he bore to

> In the mean while, (not to inlift, at prefent, upon Parliamentary or Ecclefiaftical Matters, in Prejudice to the Order of Time, which is to be observ'd in the first place) the Commissioners of England and Spain (who managed the Negotiation of a Peace at Cambray) stickled hard with the French for the Restitution of Calars, but could by no means gain their Point; tho' they offer'd to discount above Three Millions of Crowns due from the French, upon a fair and legal Contract: The Spaniard, by Reason it was lost upon his Account, and foreseeing likewise that it would be for the Interest of the Netherlands, to have it under the Jurisdiction of the English, did really and generously side with England; whereas he would otherwise have rejected all Overtures of Peace: The French objected, on the other hand, That Calais alone was no competent Satisfaction for what Damages the English had done the French, fince by their Afliftance it was, that many Towns had been taken by the Spaniard, a great many Villages of Little Britain had been burnt and pillaged by the English Fleet, Trade (the very Sinews of a Common-Wealth) was ftopr and interrupted, and vaft Sums expended, in preventing any Descent the English might make upon them.

the Religion of the Place where he was.

And besides this, Calais was the antient Inheritance of the Crown of France, that had been lost and recover'd by feveral Wars, and was therefore by no means to be restored at this time of day; nay, that the Parliament of France had made an Order to this purpole; for, that the Restitution of it would be in effect, to put the Weapon once more into the Enemy's Hand, and to alienate for ever the Affections of the

of the English were, for that Reason, not only unjust, but irrational. The English pleaded, on Ann. 2. the other hand, the Reason and Lquity of their Claim, foralimich as Calais had been for forne hundred Years, reckon'd as a Branch of the Crown of England, was obtain'd by a Right both of Conquest and Inheritance, and given in lieu for fome other Places, which the Kings of England had refign'd: That as for the Damages they pretended, they ought to lie at the Spaniards Door, who drew the English into this War against their Wills; from whence, contidering the Loss of their Forts and Men, they received a very confiderable Damage, without one Advantage to balance it: Again, that all the Decrees of France, however well contrived for its own Interest, were never the more square and equitable on that account; and that Califa could not be refused under any Colour of juflice, when all the Places which had been taken in the last War, were already restored by Conpact to the other Princes. The French rejoin'd, That all this was done, on the fcore of fome Matches that were then on foot, between the other Princes: They made therefore this Motion, That a Marriage should be agreed to between the eldest Daughter of the Queen of Scots, and the eldest Son of Queen Elizabeth; That this Daughter should have Calais for her Dowry, and that the Queen of Scots should renounce all the Right she claim'd in England: Or elfe, that Queen Elizabeth's eldest Daughter fhould marry the eldest Son of the Queen of Scots, and the English at the fame Time relinquish their Title to the Kingdom of France: That all the Debts owing from France to England, should be remitted, and Calais remain still in the Hands of the French. To these Proposals the English gave little heed, looking on them as fo many Amusements, or things in Prospect only, contrived on purpose to spin out the time. Matters were come to this pass, when the Spaniard had Intelligence, that Queen Elizabeth did King of not only refuse the Offer of a Match from that Spain disfide, but had made great Alterations in Reli- obliged by the O.

People from their Trince; and that the Demands ?

So that from this time he began to flacken his Endeavours for the restoring of Calais, which before had been very zealous and hearty; and the Spanish Commissioners, not being able to brook these Delays, at a Time when the French and they seem'd well agreed in all other Points, pretended they would not engage themselves any farther in a War for Calais, unless the English would furnish them with larger Supplies both of Men and Money, to carry it on for fix Years. Hereupon the Cardinal of Lorain takes heart, and boldly affures the Spanish Delegates, " That "the Queen of Scats, his Niece, was the true and undoubted Queen of England, and that " the King of Spain, if he had any Regard to " Justice, ought to use his utmost Endeavours to get Calais deliver'd into the Hands of his Niece, who was the rightful Qu. of England. This was no good Musick in the Ears of the Spaniard, who was rather jealous of the growing Power of Fance, and endeavour'd therefore to the at-fteal out of England the Lady Kathanine Grey, tentus to Grand-daughter to Henry VIII's Silver, that the their might have one to fet up against the Queen of thorne Scots and the Franch, should things go otherwise Grey out than well with Queen Elizabeth; and so to pre- of En vent the Accession of England and Ireland to the gland Crown of France. And they made likewife very preffing Inflances for advancing a Truce between England and France, till Matters came to a full Accommodation; and that Calais, in the

Odor

A dispute arifes : bout CaThe O

makes a

Deace with France, including mean time, should be deliver'd into the Hands 1559. of the Spaniard, as an indifferent Umpire or Ann. 2. Guarantee: But this the French, as well as the English, refused to comply with.

Queen Elizabeth was aware of this before, and the was very fentible there was no Good to be expected from Spoin, after the Refufal of the Kings Addresses, and the Reformation she had made in Religion: She knew likewise well ehough, that the Treaty of Cambiay was fet on foot with no other defign, than to suppress the Protestant Religion; and in Truth, as she was a Woman, and her Exchequer in no very good Condition, the feem'd more difposed to a Peace, than to engage in a War, tho never fo just, it having been an usual Maxim with her, "That " there was more Honour in fettling a pruden-" tial and advantageous Peace, than to deter-" mine Matters by the longest Sword, and the " most powerful Ármies.

And the was of opinion befides, that it would not redound to the Honour of England, or her-felf, to be reduced to the Necessity of supporting her Interests by a Dependance on Spain: That it was therefore more convenient to make a feparate Peace, and to concert Meafures with the Ising of France, about the Bufiness of Calais, being folicited thereto by feveral Letters not from him only, but from Montmorency High-Constable of France, and Francis of Vendome, and by as many Meffiges from the Duke of Guife, convey'd by the Lord Grey, who having been taken Prifener at Guisses, was for that purpose discharged by him. The Care and Management of this Affair was committed to Guido Cavassani, a Nobleman of Florence, but brought up in England, with whom the French King having held a private Conference, judg'd it much the fafer way, that these Matters should be canvass'd in some obscure Corner of England or France, by Commissioners privately appointed, and without the Spaniards knowlege: But on the contrary, Q. Elizabeth being, tho a Maid, yet Mittress of a truly Masculine Spirit, roundly declared, that fhe was a Princels absolutely free to manage her own Affairs, by herfelf, or fuch Ministers as she should think fit to make use of: "That altho. " during her Sifters Reign, there was nothing "done without the Speniards Advice and Con-" fent, fhe for her own part would have this " Part acted, not in the dark, but at the Castle of Cambray, (which lay very near the Town) " between her own Deputies and those of France, " and the Spaniard be no way confulted in " the Matter. By this means she fell into as ill Terms with Spain, as fhe had done before upon her Refufal of the Match, and the Alterations Nevertheless, the fhe had made in Religion. French King used all possible Precaution; and the better to fift her Inclinations as to Spain and the Marriage, defired, in the first place, to be refolv'd in Two Scruples: One was, "That fhould he yield up Calais, before he knew " what Choice the Queen would make of an 66 Husband, Calais might very eafily fall into "the Hands of the Spaniard, who would be ready to purchase ir at any rate; and that " Wives would deny nothing to Husbands they "Wives would deny nothing to Husbands they boyd; "hovd: The other was, Whether or no (as the Spaniards braggd) the English had made such a forc of League with the Spaniards, as obliged them to wage War with any they should think fit to oppose? To this the Reply was, "That " the Queen had fo tender a Concern for her " Kingdom, and was fo true a Morher of her People, that the would never give up Calais in " compliment 10 an Husband, and were the in-" chiled to do fo, the People of England would " never fuffer it: That there was no fuch ~ League with Spain, but only a bare amicable 1559. " Correspondence; and that she was entirely at Ann. 2. " liberty to enter into fuch Articles with any o-"ther Prince, as might best serve to promote the Interest of England: That for this Rea-" fon it was thought adviseable, that the Com-" miffioners for both Parties should treat about " making up the Differences, and concluding a " Peace at the Castle. Those appointed on the Queen's fide, were Turrly Bilhop of Eliz, William Lord Howard of Effinghom, Lord High-Chamberlain to the Queen, and Nicolas Wetter Dean of the Metropolitan Churches of Canterbury and York : For the French King, Charles Cardinal of Lorrain, Archbp. and Duke of Rheemes, first Peer of France, Annas Duke of Moumorency, Peer, Conftable and great Matter of France Jaques Alban Seigneur of St. Andrew, Marquel's Fronfac, and Marshal of France, Merweiler Bishop of Orleance, and Claud Aubelfine, Secretary to the Privy-Council. Between these was there a Peace Peace concluded, in Terms to this effect:

I. That neither Prince should invade the other, or Articles assist any that should.

11. That if the Subjects of either should attempt any thing against this Peace, they should be punished, but the Peace not broken.

III That there should be a Free Trade.

IV. That Ships of War, before they put to Sea, should give Security, not to commit any Act of Piracy upon the other's Subjects.

V. That the Fort of Aymouth in Scotland should be razed

VI. That the French King should, for the Term of eight Years, peaceably enjoy the Town of Calais, with Appurtenances, and fixteen great Pieces of Ordnance. VII. That when this Term was expired, he should restore the same and the Town to Q. Elizabeth. VIII. That eight forein Merchants not subjects to the French King, should engage for the Payment of Five bundred thousand Crowns, as a Penal Fine for not re-foring Calais.

1X. That notwithfranding, the Queen's Title to the faid Town should hold good.

X. That five Hoftages should be deliver'd, till such Time as the Merchant's should fign the Bond.

XI. That if any thing, during the faid Term, should be attempted to be alter'd directly or indirectly, by Force of Arms, either by the Queen herfelf, or any of her Subjects, by her Command or Authority, against the mest Christian King, or the Queen of Scots, that then they should be free and disengaged from all Promises or Contracts whatever, and the Hostages and Fromjet or Contracts numeroes, and we regarded man Merchants be inflantly discharged.

XII. That if any thing floudd be attempted to be altered on the fide of the most Christian King, the 25 of Scots, or the Damphin, against the Queen of England, they floudd be obliged, from that Instant, to quit the Possession of Calais.

In the very same Place, at the same Time, and by the same Ministers, was the Peace concluded Peacewith between the Queen of England, and Francis and Scotland. Mary, King and Queen of Scotland; in which were certain Articles equally respecting both Were certain Articles equally respecting countries, concerning the Granting of Safe-Conduct to Murderers, Robbers, Plunderers, and Vagabonds. Which being fignid and ratify d at Upfalington, by Thomas Earl of Northumberland, Cutberd Tonffell Bilinop of Durbam, William Lord Dacres of Gillesland, James Cross Captain of the Town and Castle of Berwick, Managers for England; and the Earl of Morton, the Baron of Humes and S. Clere, Dean of Glaggov, Committi-oners for Scotland; Peace was proclaim'd thro the whole Kingdom, between the Queen of England, the King of France, the Dauphin, and the Queen of Sects: Which proved ungrateful

News to the People, who efteem'd it a great 1559. Difgrace to the English, that Calais which they dans. 2. had lost, might not be restored them. The Blame hereof was, by the Protestants, laid on the Papifts and Bishops; and they again return'd it upon the Governor, the Lord Wentworth, who was a Protestant. On this Pretence was this Gentleman call'd in question, in Queen Mary's Reign, without being heard, or fo much as prefent to plead for himfelf; but being again call'd to his Trial, upon the Turn of Affairs, he was both heard, and acquitted by his Peers. But Ralph Chamberlayne the Governor of Calais-Fort, and John Harleston, who had the Charge of the Tower at Rife-Bank, were afterwards con-demn'd as Traitors for quitting their Polls, tho' the Sentence was not executed.

The Parliament being now just ready to be diffolv'd, 'twas the general Opinion, that the Commons should address the Queen to marry as foon as might be; but the Peers refused to fecond this Motion, for fear they should be suspe-Ated of a Design to serve their own Ends by it. Wherefore Thomas Gargrave Speaker of the House of Commons, with some of the House, accosts the Queen, (having first obtain'd leave) and then making his Apology, from the Confideration of his Place and Office, the Queen's Candor, and the Importance of the Matter, he craved Audience, and then made a Speech in the following Terms:

The "There is nothing that we more earneftly speaker" "define of God in our daily Prayers, than that Address to "the Happiness we have hitherto enjoy'd, in the Queen "the Equity and Justice of Your Majesty's Go"vernment, may be continued to this Nation, "down to the latest Posterity. But how to ef-"feet this, amidst all the Variety of our Aims and Endeavours, we must profess our felves "at a loss, unless either your Majesty were to " reign for ever (a Bleffing which 'twere in " vain to hope for) or would vouchfafe to ac-" cept fome Match capable of supplying Heirs "to your Royal Virtues and Dominions, which "God grant, fince it is the hearry and united "Wifh of all your Subjects. It ought to be the "main Concern of Persons of all Ranks and "Degrees whatever, (of Princes efpecially) "that, fince they are mortal themfelves, they "may fecure the Kingdom from that Fare. " Now it is in your Majesty's Power to confer "this kind of Immortality upon your Kingdom of England, by accepting an Husband, who may prove a Support and Comfort to you, "in all Changes of Fortune; befides that your Majesty's Temper and Age, Person and For"tune seem to plead hard for such a Change "of State. For it cannot be doubted, but the "fingle Zeal and Affiduity of fuch a Relation "will dispatch more Business, and to better pur-"pose, than the joint Endeavours of a great many, who are less concern'd: Nor indeed " can any thing have a worfe Influence upon "the Publick, than that a Princess whose Mar-" riage must needs produce the Twin-Blessings "of Peace and Safety to a Kingdom, should, " like a Nun profest, condemn herself to a fin-"gle State. Since your Majesty has receiv'd the Kingdom by way of Inheritance, from

" your Royal Ancestors, you ought to continue

"it down to fuch, as may prove the Glory and

"the Security thereof. Bendes, the Kings of " England have ever shewn a more than ordina" ry Concern, that the Royal Family might not

"be extinct for want of Iffue : Hence was it, "that your Royal Grand-father Henry VII. did

"(within our freshest Memory) provide suitable Matches for his Sons Arthur and Henry,

"tho' they were both very young. And for the "fame Reafon, your Royai Father courted Ma"75 Queen of Scats, for his Son Prince Edward, 2hm. 2
"who was then but eight Yours old. And it is "who was then but eight Years old. And it is " not very long fince your Sifler Queen Mary, "though pretty well advanced in Years, was "married to Philip of Spain. Now, if the Lot " of Barrennels, whether it fell to the Share of "Princes or Peafants, was always looked on as the most grievous Missortune, what a weighty "Guilt muit that Princels contract, who fire I "make this Punishment her Option; from " whence innumerable Evils must arise to the "Common-wealth, and fuch Misfortunes as are " not even to be thought of without Dread and "Horror. That Matters may never come to "this fad Pass, not only the fmall Number of " us that are here prefent, but all England in " general, and every one of your Subjects in " particular, cast themselves at your Majesties "Feet, and with the deepest Concern tender "this humble but preffing and earnest Address. So far the Speaker; to whom the Queen made this Reply.

Gentlemen,

' The Refpect and Kindness which yourselves Queen's and the reit of my Subjects express for me, is too great and visible, though the Occasion is ungrateful, not to leave very grateful Impressions on me; because I am persuaded they flow from Hearts well affected both to me and my Government. As for the Match you feem fo preffingly to infift on, it has been my fettled Judgment a long time, that I was born into this World, to promote and advance the Glory of God in the first place, to the utmost of my Power. And to this end, I have made choice of fuch a State, as is freeft from the Incumbrance of Secular Purfuits, and gives me the most Leisure for the Service of God : And could the Applications of the most potent Princes, or the very Hazard of my Life, have diverted me from this Purpose, I had long a-go worn the Honours of a Bride. These were my Sentiments, when I was but a private Perfon; but now that the Care and Weight of a Kingdom lies upon my Shoulders, to add to thefe the Incumbrance of the married State, would be no point of Discretion in me: But that I may give you the best Satisfaction I can, I have long lince made choice of a Hufband, the Kingdom of England. And here, marriage-Contract, which I wonder you should so foon have forgot. (With that she fhew'd them her Finger, with the fame Gold-Ring upon it, with which she had folemnly and formally betroth'd herself to the Kingdom, at her Inauguration) After the had paus'd a little, 'I befeech you, faid the, Genziemen, 'charge me not with the Want of Chi dren, forafmuch as every one of you, and every English-man besides, are my Chindren and Rela-tions; of which if the Providence of God (which Heaven forbid) deprive me not, I cannot fairly be efteem'd childless. I cannot but in the mean time applaud your Generolity, for not imposing a Husband upon me, for that indeed would neither become you, who are born my Subjects, nor me, confider d as an absolute Princess. Nevertheless, should it so please God, that I should at any time after my Condition, I here promise to do nothing contrary to the Advantage of the Nation; but to make fuch a Choice, to the best of my Power, as that the Kingdom may enjoy a Nurfing-Father as well as Mother: But should it 1559.

of be my Lot, to continue as I am, a Virgin-1559. Queen, I doubt not, but the Providence of Ann. 2. God, feconded by your Counfels and my own Meafures, will fo difpofe Matters, as to put the Bufinels of a Successor out of all Debate, and provide one, who may ferve the Government more effectually, than any Heir of mine fince tis possible, that the Issue of the most excellent Princes may deviate from their Original. And, for my own part, I defire no better Character, nor fairer Remembrance of me to Posterity, than to have this Inscription on my Tomb, when I come to pay my last Debt to Nature; Here lies ELIZA BETH, who liv'd and died a Maiden-Queen.

Other

English.

The Pe-

priv'd.

During this Meeting were feveral Acts pass'd, befides those already mention a, resample and befides those already mention a, resample and before the Melina before the Restitution of Tithes and First-Course the Uniformity of the befides those already mention'd, relating to the cerning the Rethtution of Times and Time-Fruits to the Crown, the Uniformity of the Publick Service of the Church, viz. the Litur-gy and the Sacraments, which in Edward VI's time, were to be used and admitstred in all Churches, with very little Variation, under a certain Penalty to such as should prefume to corrupt them, or refort to any other. There pass'd likewise another for frequenting the Publick Service upon Sundays and Holidays, on pain of Twelve-pence Forfeiture, to all fuch as should absent themselves, to be employ'd for the Use of the Poor. Another there was, to supprefs factious Reports against the Queen; and leveral more about Merchandize, Shipping, the Cloth and Iron-Trade, and unlawful and riotous Meetings. One more there was, (not to name the Reft) concerning the Archbishops and Bishops Demeins, viz. That they should not give, grant or lease out the Livings of the Church, but for one and twenty Years, or three Lives, to any other than to the Queen and her Successors, referving the old Rents. But this Law was never printed. Howbeit that Exception (to the Queen) however prejudicial to the Church, turnd to the Account of fuch Cour-tiers as abufed the Queen's Favour, and of those Biflops who were of a narrow and co-verous Spirit; till at laft twas quite expunged, to the great Benefit of the Church, in the Beginning of King James's Reign.

In this Parliament there was not a Man attainted, a thing that had been very usual in the first Session of that Court in other Princes Reigns; Gregory Fines Lord Datres, and Thomas, his Brother, were restored to their Title and Eflates, forfeited by their Father's Attainder, who futfer'd in Henry VIII's Reign; Henry Howard, afterwards Earl of Northampton, and his three Sifters, the Children of Hony Howard, Earl of Surry, who was beheaded upon very flight Pretences, by Henry VIII. just before his Death; John Grey of Fyrgo, Brother to the Marquefs of Dorfet, Sit James Crofts, Sir Henry Gates, convicted of Treaton in Queen Mary's Reign; and der'd them, the very fame which most of them took in the Reign of Henry VIII. Such as refus'd the Oath were depriv'd of their Livings, Bishopricks, and other Ecclefiaftical Preferments. The number of whom all the Kingdom over, according to their own Accounts, (and we may reckon in England above 9400 Ecclefiaftical Preferments) amounted to no more than So Parish Rectors, 50 feveral others. Upon the Rifing of the Parliament, the Liturgy to be read in Liturgy is (by the Authority of the same) introduc'd into the Churches in the vulgar Tongue; Images are taken down with as little Difturbance as might be, and the Popish Bishops and others of the Clergy have the Oath of Supremacy ten-and as many Deans, 6 Abbats and Abbaffes, and And a many Deams, to Alberts and Albergles, and Albergles, being all that then far, (except only Antony Bishop of Landass, who was the Scourge of his Diocele). The Bishops were, 1. Richard Heath Archbishop of Tork, who had some time since quitted the Office of Lord Channellor, and bad lived army York. had lived many Years in an happy and religious Privacy at his Mannor of Cobham in Surry, being in fo good Favour with the Queen, that she made him many obliging Visits.

2. Edmund Bonner Bishop of London, who had been Ambassador to the Emperor, His Holiness, and the French King; but had always mix'd fuch a natural Roughness with his Commission, as to deferve to be generally conftrued as a cruel and barbarous Man, and on that account had been a Prisoner a great part of his Life.

Prebendaries, 15 Heads Of Colleges, 12 Arch-deacons,

2. Cuthbert Tunstall Bishop of Durham, a most exquisite Master of Critical Learning; one that had runthrough many Stages of Honour at Home, and discharg'd many Embassies abroad with much Reputation; and who in his Youthful Days had thifly opposed the Popes Supremacy in a long Letter to Cardinal Pool; and died at Lambeth in a confiderable old Age.

4. Thomas Thurlby Bishop of Ely, did likewise Refide here, after he had very commendably acquitted himfelf in a certain Embasly relating to the tendering of Obedience to the See of Rome, as well as in the management of the Treaty at Cambray.

5. Gilbert Bourn Bishop of Bath and Wells; a Person who had deserv'd very well of that See.

6. John Christopherson Bishop of Chester, an excellent Grecian, who had faithfully Translated many things out of Enfebius and Philo, for the benefit of the Christian Church.

7. John White Bishop of Winchester; a Man moderately Learned, and a tolerable Poet for those Times.

8. Thomas Watfon Bishop of Lincoln; a Person vers'd in the more knotty Points of Divinity; but of a stifness in his Humour next to fullen or morofe.

9. Ralph Payne Bishop of Coventry and Litchfield, a fecond Restorer of the Hebrew Tongue, and who had been Regius Professor thereof at Paris when Learning was encourag'd under Francis the First.

Owen Oglethorp Bishop of Carslile.
 James Turbervill Bishop of Exeter.
 David Poole Bishop of Peterborough.

Afterwards Fekenham Abbot of the Benedictines at Westminster was deprived, a learned and good Man, who liv'd to a great Age, and by many Publick Largesses to the Poor got the good Will and Effeem even of his Enemies.

These Persons were first sent to Prison; but most of them were foon after committed to the Custody of their Friends, or the Bishops, those two refractory Persons excepted, viz. Lincoln and Winchester, who threatned to Excommunicate the Queen. But three, viz. Cutbbert Scot of Exeter, Richard Pate of Worcester, and Thomas Gold-well of St. Asaph, and many Nuns, left the Kingdom of their own accord. And feveral Noblemen did afterwards follow their Example. The chief of which were Henry Lord Morley, Sir Francis Inglefield, Sir Robert Pecham, (both of them Privy-Counfellors to Queen Mary) Sir Thomas Shelly, and Sir John Gages.

The most Learned that could be found among the Protestant Divines were recommended to the vacant Sees of fuch Bishops as were deceas'd, or had quitted the Kingdom.

Matthew

Ann. 2.

Matthew Parker, a Person of great Learning and Piety, and of a Modelty equal to both, and who had been Chaplain to Henry VIII. and Dean of the Collegiate-Church of Stoke-Clare, was Elected to the Archbishoprick of Canterbury, and Confecrated at Lambeth, after the usual Solemnities of a Sermon, the Invocation of the Holy Ghoft, and the Administration of the Sacrament, together with the Imposition of Hands by three formerly depriv'd Bishops, viz. William Barlow Bilhop of Bath, John Scory Bilhop of Chichefter, Miles Coverdale Bilhop of Exeter, and John Suf-fragan of Bedford. He afterwards Confectated Edmund Grindall, a most excellent Divine, Bishop of London; Richard Cox, Tutor to Edward VI. Bishop of Ely; Edwin Sands, a fluent and eloquent Preacher, Bilhop of Worcefter; Rowland Merick, Bilhop of Bangor; Thomas Young, an ex-quilite Common Lawyer and Civilian, Bilhop of quinte Common Lawyer and Civinan, binop of St. Davids; Nicholas Bullingham, Doctor of Laws, Bithop of Lincoln; John Jewell, a Perfon of univerfal Learning, Bithop of Salisbury; Richard Davis, Bithop of St. Afaph; Edward Guef, Bithop of Rocheffer; Gilbert Barkley, Bithop of Bath; Common of Common and Linkshift. Thomas Bentham, Bishop of Coventry and Liebfield; Thomas Bentham, Bilinop of Everenry and Liehfield; William Alley, an eloquent Commentator, Bilinop of Exeter; John Pankhuft, a perfect Mafter of human Learning, Bilinop of Norwich; Robert Home, a Man of a fitrong and pregnant Wit, Bilinop of Winebeffer; Riehard Chiney, a strict Lutheran, Bilinop of Gleeffer; and Edmund Scambler, Bilinop of Peterborough; befides William Barlong, whom he feetled in the See of Chicheffer afree. whom he fettled in the See of Chichefter, after he had been, in the Reign of Hanry VIII. Successively Bishop of St. Davids and Wells; and John Scory he Confirm'd Bishop of Hereford, a Person of Sense and Learning, and who had been Bishop of Chichester before. In like manner Toung, being translated from St. Davids to the See of Tork, did in that Province confecrate James Pilkington, a Man of fingular Parts and Probity, Bifnop of Durefm; John Beff, Bifnop of Carliffs; and William Downham, Bifnop of Chefer. The Character of these Men, and the Sufferings they underwent during their Banishment in Q. Mary's Reign, or their Concealment in England, I leave to the Pen of Church-Hiftorians.

Now there being a very great Dearth of lear-ned Men, several Mechanicks, Men of the same level for Sense and Learning with the Romish Priefts, made a shift to work themselves into Ecclesiatical Promotions, and to compass good Prebends and fat Benefices. Nevertheless the greater part of the Popish Priests themselves thought it would turn to better account, in re-fpect of their Religion and Themselves, to renounce the Pope's Authority, and fwear Alle-giance to the Queen, were it for no other End than the Exclusion of the Protestants out of their Churches, and the Relief of fuch of their own Party who had been displac'd. This they judg'd a piece of Difcretion highly meritorious, and upon that score hop'd the Pope would be so good as to difpense with their Oath upon such an Occation.

The gra-

Changes

of Religia

Such were the Alterations of Religion made in England, to the aftonishment indeed of the whole Christian World, that they made so little noise and bustle. However, sudden they were not, (for such Changes are seldom suffer d) but fober and gradual: For (to repeat the fubstance of what I faid before in very few Words) Popery kept the same footing in England for an entire Month and more, which it had at the death of Queen Mary. 'Twas the 27th of December before the Epiftles, Gospels, the Decalogue, the Lord's Prayer, the Creed and the Litany were fuffer'd to be us'd in English; and it was not till the 22d of March that the Parliament agreed to re-220 of Manee that the transament agreed to repeal the Act of Edward VI. in favour of administring the Lord's Supper in both Kinds. On the 24th of Jane it was, that in virtue of an Act for the Uniformity of Publick Worthip, and the Celebration of the Sacraments, the Sacrifice of the Mass was put down, and the Liturgy ap pointed to be us'd in the Vulgar Tongue. In fuly the Oath of Supremacy was tender d to the Bishops and others; and in August the Images were pull'd down, broken and burnt. But foras fome four rilous Wits defamid her Majetty for having assum'd the Title of Supreme Head of the Church, and the Office of the Priesthood into the bargain, she was pleas'd to fignifie by an express and publick Writing That she pretended to no more than what had of a long time juftly belong'd to the Crown; i. e. to claim, under God, the Supreme Right and Government over all the Estates of the Realm, whether Ecclefiaftical or Temporal; " and, That no Foreign Power had or ought " to have any Authority or Jurifdiction over " them.

Twas this new Scene of Religion which, ac- The great cording to the Remark of Politicians, made Eng- advantage land the freest Nation in Christendom: For, accurate besides that 'twas now fairly rid of the Pope's from the foreign Yoke, twas a much Wealthier Kingdom than for some Ages it had been; for a vast Sum of Mony was now kept at Home, which, to the great impoverishing of the Nation, had been continually Exported to Rome for First Fruits, Indulgences, Appeals, Dispensations, Palls, and fuch

Trumpery

The Reform'd Religion being now Establish'd The by Parliament, the Queen's chief Care and Con-Queen's cern was how to guard and protect it from the care of feveral Attacks and Practifes of fuch as were its profess'd Enemies on that score: And as she Govern would admit of no Innovations herein, fo file ments fludied how to fquare her own Life and Actions by fo even a balance, as to preferve the Charaeffer of one not given to change. On which account it was that she chose for her Motto, Semper Eadem, i. e. Always the same. And as for all her Her Mctother Counsels or Deliberations, they feem'd to recenter in this Point, The Security of her Kingdoms. For 'twas a common faying with her, That she studied the Peoples Welfare so heartily, that it was a prejudice to her own. If fhe had any other aims, they were levell'd chiefly at these Marks, The gaining the Affections of her Subjects, the Dread of her Enemies, and the Efteem of all the World: For she was not to learn, that those things have a very sure and stable Foundation which are begun with Deliberation, and carry'd on with Industry and Care. How much she ex-ceeded even herself and her Sex in the strength and vigour of her Counfels and Endeavours, and the Sagacity fhe us'd in preventing, oppo-fing, or diverting any Mischies that threatned ftory and Affairs of this Kingdom. About this time the Emperor and the Catho- The lick Princes interpos'd, by feveral Letters, favour of the depriv'd Bishops, and that the Romanists might enjoy the Liberty of separate Af- quests of femblies in fome Towns and Cities of the King- Foreign om. To whom the Queen's Answer was, Princes in That altho' those Popish Bishops had openly the Pa dom. " and infolently brav'd the Laws and diffurb d pitts "the Peace of the Kingdom, and did ftill ob-ffinately reject that Doctrine which many of her Government, the present and succeeding

Times may learn from those authentick Record which are to deliver down to Posterity the Hi-

"themselves, when they enjoy'd Places of Honour and Trust under Henry VIII. and Ed-Vol. II Ccc Change of

in Queen's

1559.

ward VI. had recommended to others both by " their Pens and from their Pulpits; That she Ann. 2. " defign'd nevertheless to treat them very fa-"vourably, in regard to the Character and In-"terceffion of fo Great Princes, tho fine should " disoblige her better Subjects by it: But as for having any private Chappels for their use,
"That she could not grant, either in Honour or
"Conscience, nor indeed with any Safety to " her Government.

" Nor had she any reason to make such a " Grant, fince twas plain that England had not "embrac'd any strange or new-sangled Faith, but the very same which Christ commanded, the Primitive Catholick Church received, and " the Oldest of the Fathers jointly approved of. And more than this, That to allow of Chur-" ches, in which different Modes of Worship " were used, besides that 'twould be a plain and gross violation of the Legal and Parliamen-" tary Authority, it would amount to the fame "thing, as the Engrafting one Religion on the Stock of another, and by that means diffract-" ing Peoples Minds, nourifhing a Spirit of Mu-" tiny and Faction, and putting all things into " diforder. And this would be not only bad "cnough in itself, but a dangerous Precedent and of ill Consequence to Protestants and "Themselves too; nor indeed would there be any Advantage or Safety at all in it. That she had therefore resolved, of her natural Cle-"mency, and especially at the instance of those Great Persons, to try if she could cure the " haughty Spirit of fome by a feafonable Con-" nivance; but not fo neither, as to indulge and cherish the peevish Humour in them.

The King of Spain having cast off all Pretenfions to Elizabeth, and being upon his Marriage with the French King's Daughter, is not however a little perplexed about England, which he had no mind to see united to the Crown of the Emp. France: And the better to retain the Honour of fo confiderable a Kingdom in his own Family, he persuaded the Emperor Ferdinand, his Uncle, to the Q to offer one of his Sons in Marriage to Queen Elizabeth; which he did, by Letters full of Re-fpect; and preffed the Affair very closely by Gaspar Freinor, Free-Baron in Stibing; and the King of Spain himself offers her Majesty his best and heartieft Offices, to bring it about; whilst she in return has both her Ships and Ports at his Service, to facilitate his intended Voyage into Spain, and pays him other Services and Compliments by the Hands of Sir Thomas Chaloner.

The French King, on the other hand, in favour of the King, his Son, the Dauphin, and of Mary Queen of Scots, (but, we may suppose, with a glance upon England) forbore to draw his French Engester and Scotland according to his French Forces out of Scotland, according to his Agreement; but, instead of that, he sent over privately French Supplies, and deale more vigotemps to privately Frence supplies, and dean incoming make the roully with the Pope to get Queen Elizabeth de-Queen of clared an Hererick and Illegitimate, and Mary Scots Q. confirmed Lawful Queen of England. But these Chief of Cared an Alexenda and Lawful Queen of England. But thefe of Engl.

Policies the King of Spain and the Emperor did privately Countermine by their Agents at Rome. Nevertheless the Guises had footh d the Vanity and Ambition of the French King into fo fanguine an hope, that the Queen of Scots, their Niece, would prove the Instrument of uniting England to the Crown of France, that he makes an open Claim of England for his Son and Daughter-in-law; and gave orders, when he found he could do nothing at Rome, that this Title should he used in all publick Instruments, Francis and Mary, by the Grace of God, King and Queen of Scotland, England and Ireland: And every where appointed the Arms of England to be Quartered 1559with those of Scotland, whether in the common Houshold-Stuff upon the Walls, or in the Herald's Coats; whilst, in the mean time, the English Ambassador complained in vain, that this was an high Affront to his Royal Miffress Queen Elizabeth, with whom he had lately entred into a Friendly Alliance; whereas he had done no fuch thing in the Life-time of Queen Mary, who had proclaimed War against him. Besides, he had in Pay feveral Regiments of Horfe and Foor in readiness both in France and Germany, to be transported into those Parts of Scotland which bordered upon England. So that Queen Elizabeth could not but be jealous of the French King's Defigns, who feemed to intend nothing lefs than the absolute Ruin of the Protestants. feems all his Attempts were defeared by his fudden Death at a Tilt which was held at the So- The K. of lemnity of his Daughter's Marriage with the France is King of Spain, and his Sisters, with the Duke of cut off Saray: And very feafonably for the Queen, whose Prepara-Title he had prepared himfelf to oppose with all tions-his Might, both in Scotland and France. How- guidt ever this did not hinder her from paying all due England. Honours to his Ashes, and performing those Funeral Rites in St. Paul's which belonged to a Crowned Head and an Allie; and the fent be-fides a Compliment of Condolance to his Succeffor, Francis, by Charles, Son to the Lord Howard of Effingham, at this time Admiral of England and Ireland; who was likewife to Congratulate him upon his Succession, and to defire a continuance of that Friendship which so lately commenced between the two Crowns.

But Francis and the Queen of Scots, his Con-Fran. II. fort, (by the Advice of the Guises, who now and the Ruled all in France) began to act publickly as Queen of King and Queen of England, and were so far score the from disclaiming the borrowed Arms of England, Arms of that they made the greater flew and boast of Englands them : And when Sir Nicholas Throckmorton, the Queen's Ambassador in Ordinary, a Wise and Brave Man, demanded the reason of this Pro-ceeding, he received for answer, That the ceeding, he received for answer, That the Queen of Seas might very lawfully bear them, with some small note of distinction, were it but to flew her nearness of Relation to the Blood-Royal of England. But Throckmorton flatly denied it to be any way confiftent with the Law of Arms, for any one to usurp the Arms of another Family, who was not an Heir-Apparent of the fame. But they afterwards remonstrated, That she claimed the Arms of England for no other reason than to oblige the Queen of England to disclaim the Arms of France. To this he replied, by putting them in mind of what Dr. Wotton had urged before at the Treaty of Combany, viz. "That twelve of the Kings of Engle" land had carried the Arms of France, and that " by fo unquestionable a Right, that in all the "Treaties which had passed between the Eng-" lish and the French, not one single Exception " was used against it. At last this point was gain'd at the Instance of Mentmorency, a Rival of the Guifes, that the Title and Arms of England and Ireland should never be Quartered with theirs for the future; for he could not apprehend it for the Honour of the King of France, that any other Title or Arms should be used or engraven in the King's Seal than those of the King of France: That this one Title was as good as a great many; and that the former Kings of France affumed no other Character when they put in their claim to Naples and Milan, &c.

The Fr. King attempts to

nand.

of his Sons

a Suitor

The rels boween England and Scotlan!

The Fr.

break the Treaty with the English.

Soldiers

refuse to obey the Queen-

Regent,

into Scotland.

But, in good earnest, from these very Arms 1559. and Titular Pretences, which Henry of France be-Ann. 2. flowed on the young Queen of Scots, by the Counfel of the Guifes, have flow'd, as from their proper Fountain, all those Disasters in which she anonad of was afterwards involv'd. For this very thing it be Quar- was that occasion'd the Queen's profess'd Breach with the Guifes, and fomented a private Guidge in her against the Queen of Scots, which was blown up into a mighty Flame, by the Malice of fome Rival Parties on both fides; to the encrease of which likewise several Accidents concurred to raise it to such an height as not to be extinguish'd but by her Blood. So true is it, that the Crown admits no Competitor, and that Princes have a very nice sense of Injuries.

Some time after this three Hoftages only were fent over for Calais, whereas, according to the Treaties, there should have been four. The English Merchants are ill used in France, and a Servant belonging to Throckmorton the Embafficdor, is in the open Streets forced into the Gallies by Francis, Grand-Prior of France, and Brother to the D. of Guife. The Embaifador himfell had like to have been Piftoll'd in his own Houfe, and was abusively ferv'd in Plate which bore the Arms of England and France together. At the And fend fame time Monsieur de Broffy is fent with a form'd Body of Men into Scotland, and Galleys are haft-ned into the British-Seas from Marseilles, and the Mediterranean.

About this time the Protestants in Scotland, The Scots that still themselves Congregationers, being overperfuaded by fome clamorous Churchmen, and Knox especially, that furious Zealot against Kingly Government, that 'twas properly the Peer's bufiness to authorize the Suppressing of Idolatry, and to compel Princes to keep within the Bounds of the Laws; they did thereupon refuse to pay Obedience to the then Regent, the Queen's Mother, a Lady of great Virtue, and fell to making Alterations in the Church, Burning and Plundering all Places devoted to Religion in a most outragious manner, having drawn to their Party, Hamilton Duke of Chaftel Herault, (a Person of the first Interest in the Kingdom, and one who had been exasperated by the French) and decoy'd several others of the Chief Nobility in hope of sharing between them the Revenues of the Church: Infomuch, that they gave occasion to the Regent and the French Forces in Scotland to fuspect, that Religion was the least thing in their Thoughts, and that their real Design was a Revolt: And James Prior of St. Andrews, the Queen's base Brother, (afterwards E. of Murray) who was Ringleader of the Party, was accused of an Attempt to get the Crown from his Sifter's Head.

He, in the mean time, difowns the Charge, and folemnly protefts that he had no other aim than the Glory of God, and the Liberry of his Country, which he could not choose but bewail now he saw it oppress'd by the Regent and the

The Heads of the Congregation began now They aid to inform Queen Elizabeth of their Grievances, crave and to inform Queen Engagement of their order Meets of Queen in a pathetick Addrefs delivered by William Mait-hitzabeth land of Lidington, Lord-Secretary. The purport of which was, "That from the time the Queen

" of Scots was marry'd to the Dauphin, the Face " of the Government was changed, that foreign " Soldiers pillaged all that came to their Hands, " and that the best Places of the Kingdom were " bestowed on Frenchmen; that the Castles and "Forts were delivered up to their Custody, the

"Sterling Coin of the Kingdom was mixt and adulterated to enrich them; and that the " French, by these and such like Arts, were forming a Project to leaze on the Crovern Lent of " fhould things happen amils with the Queen. Cecil (whose excellent Advices and Athitance zan the Queen always made use of upon Emergencies of this kind) employ'd Horry Percy, afterward Earl of Northumberland, to fift the Intentions of the Heads of the Congregation, and the Meafures they defigned to take for compaffing their Ends; and on Condition that Succour should be fent them, upon what Terms a good Correspondence must be fer on foot between the two kingdoms.

They answered, with their Eyes lift up to Heaven, " That they had no other Defign in the World than the promotion of God's Glory, the fineere Preaching of his Word, the Ex-" of their Perfecutors, and the prefervation of " their ancient Liberry; thar, for their pairs, " they were at a loss how to being all this about, but hoped that God's Providence would happily finish what it had begun, to the Confunon of their Enemies; and for an Union between " the two Kingdoms, that was the very top of of their Wishes; and to cultivate and improve it they would contribute all the Money, Credit and Refolution they were Ma-" fters of.

The Debates concerning these Matters went These but slowly on in England, by reason the Scots Matters were but slenderly provided with Men and Mo- are Deney, and could not well trust one another. They bated in are advised only not to put things at all Adventures, to the hazard of a War. But as foon as it appeared that the Marquis of Albeuf, the Queen of Scots Uncle, levied Forces in Germany, by the Rhinegrave's affiftance, to carry on the Scottish War, that Pieces of Ordnance were convey'd to the Sea-Ports, and greater Preparations made than were necessary to quell a few unarmed Scots, (for that was the Pretence) and that the French, the better to win the Danes into a Confederacy with them, had promifed, that the Duke of Lorain should quit his Claim to the Kingdom of Denmark, and that they did more itrenuously endeavour to procure the Biflion of Rome's Cenfure against the Queen, and his De-claratory Sentence for the Queen of Scots Right to the Crown of England, Sir Ralph Sadler, a Person of great Difference, was dispatched to the Borders of Scotland to advise with the Earl of Northumberland, Warden of the Middle-March, and with Sir James Crofts, Governor of Berwick. For the Politicians in England were at a lofs where thefe things might end, unless it were in the Invasion of the Kingdom, and the attaining by force that which their Arms and Titles did alréady pretend to.

This Point was 'very feriously Canvass'd at 'Tis Reon one fide fince it would look like a tolvid that Home: very ill Precedent for a Prince to affift the Sedi- the Fr. be tion of his Neighbour's Subjects; on the other, of Scot'twas an act of Impiery to leave those in the Land. Lurch who embraced the fame Religion. And twould be but an odd piece of Politicks to let the French, the fworn Enemics of England, and the Pretenders to the Crown of it, when they enjoy'd a fettled Peace all round them, to remain in Arms in Scotland, a Neighbouring Nation, and so conveniently situated for Invading England on that fide where both the Nobles and Commons of the Kingdom were most affected to Popery. This would be much the fame in effect as to betray the Quiet and Safety of the whole Nation to its Enemies. That flower Counfels were now therefore to be laid afide, and Arms to be fpeedily provided, forafmuch as true English Wisdom had always chose to prevent their Enemies Approaches, rather than to wait for them : 1559. And that 'twas always lawful both to prevent and keep Dangers at a diffance, and that by the fame Arts and Stratagems used by the Enemy to promote or bring them forward. That as for England, it could never be fafe, but when powerfully Armed; and never fafer than when there was nothing to be apprehended from Scotland. To prevent any fear of this kind, that Succours were to be fent to the fuffering Protestants, and the French to be drove out of Scotland, for that they were to be wrought on by Force, not Advice; through the fatal neglect of which, not long fince, Ealass was loft, to the great Shame and Detriment of the Nation. And a very little before, upon a mighty fair pretence of Peace on their fide, Ambletad and the Forts about Boulegne, were lurprized and taken, whereby Bealegne it felf of Necessity surrender'd to

Vol. II.

> Nor could it be otherwise expected than that Berrick and the Frontier-Towns must run the fame Rifque, unlefs they took up Arms on the first Occasion, and were so wife not to trust the Imouth Difguifes used by the French in Scotland, as to their Inclinations for Peace, fince 'tis plain that the French are cunning Politicians in contriving their ambitious Dengns, and are Mafters of a vall Revenue to put them in execution: Informuch, that it has grown into an English Proverb, That France could neither be Poor nor Penceable for three Years together. And Queen Elizabeth used very frequently that Expression of Valentinian, the Euperor, Choose the French for your Friends, but not for your N. ighbours. This was therefore the refult of the whole Matter, That it was Just, Honeft, and even Necessary and Convenient, to drive the French, as foon as possible, out of Scotbury dies.

Er glish Soldiers.

Francis

Farl of

Accordingly William Winter, Mafter of the Naval-Stores, is fent with a Fleet into Bodotria, are fent by (now Edinborough-Frith) who, to the great Con-Land into fternation of the French, fails furiously on their S.o land. Men of War lying by the Shore, and also on the French Forces in the Isle of Inchkeith. The Duke of Nafolk was made Lord-Lieutenant of the North-Paus too tids Scotland; William Lord Grey, an excellent Soldier (who had made a brave but unfuccefful Defence of Guifnes against the French) was made Warden of the Middle and Eaft Marches; and Thomas Earl of Suffex , who had been Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland in Oucen Mary's Reign, was fent back in the fame Quality, with Inffructions to be very particulary careful that the Irifh (who were a People Rude and Wild enough, and fo by confequence the more Superaltious) were not Inveigled by the French into a Rebellion, on pretence of Religion. That he should Fortify Ophale with strong Garrifons, and should bestow large Parcels of Lands on the eldest and best-deserving Soldiers, to be possess by them and the Heirs-Male of their Body for ever. That he should restore Surley-Boy. a Scotch Irifhman, to those Possessions he claim d by Inheritance in Ulfter, to hold in Fee for Duties to be by him perform'd. That he should make a moderate Advance of the Queen's Revenues, and model her Exchequer there by that of England.

At this time Francis Talbot, one of the Lords of the Privy-Council, died. He was the fifth Earl of Shrewsbury of his Family, and left his only Son George to succeed him, whom he had by Mary, Daughter of Thomas Lord Dacres of Gillef-land. The Third Year of her Reign. :5

1760. Ann. :

As foon as the Duke of Norfolk arriv'd at Ber- The wick, he was join'd by James, the Bathard, Prior of St. Andrews; the Lord Rethuen, and others; who, on the behalf of the Duke of Caffle-Horault and other Allies, enters into a League with him in the name of the Queen of England, to this effect. Whereas the French endeavour against all Right and Reason to Subdue Scotland, and unite it to the Crown of France, the Queen of England shall ob-lige herself to take into her protection the Duke of Cathe Herault, Heir-Apparent to the Crown of Scot-land, together with the Nobles and Commons, as long as the King of France bolds Mary Queen of Scots in marriage, and one Year after. She shall furnish an Army at Land, and equip a Fleet at Sea with all necellary Supplies, in order to drive the French out of Scotland: That she shall not make Peace with the French, but on condition that Scotland have and enjoy its ancient Liberties. That the Forts which the ign in socion Leverius. That the Forts much the Englith help deto recover to the French fluil be rafed out of hand, and deliver'd to the Duke of Norfolk, to do with them as he shall think fit. The English shall fortify no places in Scotland but by the confent of the Duke of Cattle-Herault and the Pews of the Land. The shall he lived by English such as the the Dake of Cattle-Herattic and the every give Land. That they shall lend the English what Affi-fiance they can. That they shall treat all the Enemies of England as their own; and shall not establish an Uni-on between the Crewns of France and Scotland on the Company of France and Scotland on any other Terms, then these already fixed by right of Marriage. That if England should happen to be In-vaded by the French on this side the River Tine, the Scotch should be obliged to send 2000 Horse and a 1000 Foot under the Queen of England's Pay: But if the Invosion were beyond the Tine, they should assist the English with what possible Forces they could, and maintain them for 30 Days, as they used to do for the Defence of Scotland. The Earl of Argile, Lord-Defence of Scotland. The Earl of Argile, Lord-Chief-Justice of Scotland, shall do his best to reduce the North of Ireland to better Orders, upon such Teems as could be agreed on between him and the Licutionar of Ireland. Lastly: They egreed on the Measures to be taken on both sides in case Mac-Conel or any of the Party firm the Western Isles should attempt any thing in Scotland or Ireland. For the better performance of this Treaty, Hostages should be sent into England before the English Aimy entred Scotland; which Hostages might be changed every four or sive Months at the pleasure of the Scots, during the Marriage between the French King and the Queen of Scots, and a Year the French King and the Queen of Scots, and a Year after. The Duke of Castle-Herault, and the Earls and Barens of Parliament concern'd in the League, (ball sign these Articles with their Hands and Seals within 20 Days. And withal, in regard that the Queen takes these Measures purely in respect to a good Neighbourhood and Correspondence with the Scots, as well as the Rescue of them from a Toke of Slavery, they shall openly declare, That they will pay Allegiance to the Queen of Scots and her Husband in all things that do or shall not interfere with their ancient Libert And now was there a Discovery made, as well by several Dispatches from forein Princes, as private Letters that were intercepted, That the French were refolv'd to invade England; and Sebafian Martigues, a young Nobleman of the Maris House of Luxemburg, arrived in Scotland, with gues 1000 Foot, all discipling Men, and one or two comes with the control of the Maris and with D'oisely, a French-man, and with Cornets of Horfe. one of the Queen Regent's Council, made an Forces infolent Proposal to the Scotch Nobility at Ay- into Scot-mouth near Berwick, of investing by Force the land. King and Queen of Sectland, in the Pollefflon of England. But they, being well enough acquainted with the Difficulty of the Undertaking, and to avoid the Sufpicion of being inclined to break the Peace they fo lately agreed to, reje-

A!beuf

by foul

1560. eted the Morion. Nevertheless, the best Ad-Ann. 3. vice the Queen-Regent could give Martigues, could hardly give Check to that railing Ambition, which prompted him at any rate to in-vade England. But his Mettle was foon cool'd, when the Marquels of Albeut, who fer fail for Scalland with a bigger Force, after the Efcape of a violent Tempett on the Coaff of Holland, driven off was, with the Lofs of some Ships and a great many Men, driven back to Diep, from whence Weather, he had fet fail.

About this time arrived from Spain one Philip Stavely of Glaion, a Knight of the Golden-Fleece, and Mafter of the Ordnance, to remonstrate the Complaints of the French, against the Queen, in relation to Scaland, and to mediate a Peace, in the Name of the King, his Mafter; but withal, he privately advited the Queen to carry withat, he privately advited the Queen to carry on her Deligns in Scatland, with her utmost Vispaniards gour and Resolution; tho the King of Spain, ftopthe on the other hand, openly resulted the Transportation of her Navel Provisions to England, which provisions to the had made at Antwerp; infomuch that the was forced to get freth Supplies from Germany. Nor was Stavely's Proposal without some very suspicious Circumstances, viz. That some Spanish Troops should be sent to Seatland, in Conjunction with fome French Regiments, to quash the Rebellion there, and to be at the same time a Check upon the French, should they attempt any thing upon England. All this while Michael Seury the French King's Ambaffador in ordinary, urged

French labour the the Queen feveral times to call home her Fleet Recalling and Army out of Scotland: Nor did she feem averse to it, provided the French might be call'd home too. But both Parties using Pretences for of the English Delay, the Matter was shifted off from time to land. time, till J. Monluc, Bishop of Valence, a Person no way ill inclined to the Protestant Interest, came out of France; who, upon his Arrival, de-clared, that he had received no Orders relating to this Affair: However, being a Man of Sense and Address, he used all possible Persuasions for calling home the Land and Sca-Forces out of Scotland; and roundly maintain'd, that the bearing the Arms of England, was no Injury to the Queen, but a Credit rather to the Blood-Royal of England. But when neither the one nor the other Project would go down, the first being thought abfurd, and the other dangerous, Seury intreated Stavely, and the Bishop of Aquila, Am-bassador in ordinary from the King of Spain, that they would be prefent as Witnesses to his Protestation against the Queen, for her Breach of the Treaty of Peace; which they refused, as having no Warrant for such a Procedure. He They pro. made, nevertheless, his Protest, in a very long Speech: To which there was a printed Anpaint the fiver, in which her Majetty protested to the whole World, That the Breach of the Treaties, and all the Grounds of the War, had proceeded purely from the French; and that nothing could have been more grievous or diffafful to her, than this War; and answer'd. more of this kind, as may be easily collected from what has been faid already, and by a former Manifetto, wherein the declared, That the the bad received the basest Injuries and Affronts, in that her Arms and Title had been usurped, yet could she never be induced to believe, that this was done by the Consent of the King out Developed France, or the Princes of the Blood; but by the ill Practices of the Guises, who had abused the Wealth of the King and Kingdom of France, in order the better to wound England, through the Sides of the Scots: Wherefore, for her part, she could not be regardless of her own and her Peoples Safety. And without all question, the Guifes, out of their Affection to their Niece the Q.

of Scots, and their Enmity of Elizabeth, on the scote of Religion, and out of an Ambition to deferve well of France, by the Addition of new of Kingdoms to it, left no Stone unturn d to compass the Death of Queen Elizabeth; depending some on the Promifes of fome of her Sui jests " were no Favourers of the Reformation But the Feuds and Difcontents which forung up in house about transferring the Government from descin ces of the Blood, to the Guifer, diversed on their Purpote. And the herfelf used to write he a Precaucion against their base Michington that she became, from this Moment, the der of her Friends, and the Terror of her bar

The fame day that Grey came with his Force form into Scotland, Seary and Monlue made very professions. fing Inflances, to have the Army call'd home again; and fed the Queen with Hopes, that Calais would be reftored, as foon as the commanded it back. She answer'd plainly, That the very little valued Calais, a poor Tifhing-Town, in Andreje comparison of the Safety and Security of all cted. Britain. And the very fame day, she dispatch'd into Spain, Anthony Browne, Viscount Mentacute, a Person who had the Reputation of a wife Man, but a rigid Catholick withal, and one who was like to be more welcome, on that fcore; who with Sir Thomas Chamberlaine, her Majestics Resident there, flould acquaint the King of Spain, among other Matters, upon what just and warrantable Grounds she had sent an Army into Scotland, viz. the fame already mention'd. Scotland, VI. the tame attendy mention a. And fhould flicw him moreover, That the Queen of Scots, an infirm young Women, was marryd in France, to a cracy King, without hope of Illue: That by the Pratlices of the Guifes, a Plot was laid to enform Hamilton, Duke of Chattel-Herault, who was by Authority of Parliament declared Heir-cippation. rent to the Crown of Scotland; together with his Son, who was travelling in France: That their Defigns tended to an Union of the two Crowns of France and Scotland, and not to secure the latter for the Queen; which how dangerous Confequence it might be of to his Provinces in the Netherlands, as well as to of to bit Provinces in the Netherlands, at well as to Spain, he might pleafe to take into his feriom Confideration. On the ather hand, That the Confiderate Nobility of Scotland were not to be branked for Rebels, when they had no other Full than to prefer cures the kingdom (at they were in Duty bound) to the Contectance and her Luviul Successor; which they could rate, not, without a pulpable hipping to themselves and their ates, fully to be undermixed by the Stratagems of the Guifes, or made ever to the French.

In the Beginning of April, the English Army, consisting of 1200 Horle, and 6000 Foot, came Leith before Leith. This Town is structed on Edin-beinged.

before Leith. This Town is fituated on Edin- belieged, burgh-Frith, the greatest In-let of all Britain, where the River Leith discharges itself into the Sea; and yields a very convenient Harbour for Shipping, fearce Two Miles from Edinburgh, the Metropolis of Scotland: And by reason of so commodious a Situation, the French had fortify'd it as a Place of Referve for their Auxiliary-Troops. Martigues draws out his Companies of Foot, and attacks the English in the Van to keep them from a Hill, where he thought they would intrench themfelves: But after a Skirmish of about four Hours, he was beaten back to the Town, with the Lofs of fome on both fides: Then they began to cast up Trenches, and raise Batteries, from whence they annoy d the Town, as much as from their Ships. The French made fome Sallies, but with more Courage than Succefs, and gave many Proofs of their Bravery: They won the Trench (among other Advantages) on the 15th. of April, mail'd three great Pieces, and rook Sir Maurice Berkly Prifoner. But Sir James Crofts and Cuthbert Vaughan foon drove them from their Pott, and beat them into the

and are

Ann 3. Arrb ir

Crofts

accus'd.

Town, with a confiderable Slaughter. At the 1560. fame time Arthur Grey, Son to the Lord Grey, who commanded in chief, was flot in the Shoulder. After this, the Camp was remov'd nearer to the Town, because the great Shot fell short of the Lowin, because the great Shot felt more of it, by reason of their too great Diffance, wounded. And not long after, a Part of the Town, and fome Granaries, by chance took fire, to the great Terror of the Inhabitants. This the English endeavour'd to increase, by directing thitter their great Guns, and in the mean time they engred the Directs and rook the Height they enter'd the Ditches, and took the Height of the Walls. On the 6th, of May (according to an Agreement between the English and Scots) they attempt to feale the Walls, and take the Town; but by reason their Ladders were too short, and the More deep, upon their stopping the Sluice, they were repulsed, and put in Confution by a Shower of finall Shot from the Hills, which kill'd fome, and wounded more. Blame of this Diffrace lay at Crofts's door, for that he, not approving the Delign, (whether out of his real Opinion, or Favour to the French, or Malice to Grey, I will not take upon me to determine) had staid at his Post, like an idle Spectator, without offering to support the difire is d Party. Most certain it is, that Norfolk and Grey impeach'd him by private Letters to the Queen, not only on this Account, but also for holding a private Correspondence with the Oucer-Regent of Scotland, and opposing this Expedition: Whereupon being afterwards examined in the Council-Chamber, he was remov'd from his Government of Berwick, and Grey placed in his Room. Nevertheless, he was not quite out of the Queen's Favour, who afterwards made him (and that for good Reasons) Comptroller of her Houshold. The English and Scotch being a little balk'd by this ill Fortune, Norfolk encourages 'em forthwith, by fending fresh Supplies: After this they had fome little Skirmishes, till the French King, being advertised that his Men were so block'd up at Leith, that no Supplies could reach them, either by Sea or Land, by reason of the great Distance, and that new Tumults sprung up every day at home; granted Authority to the Bishop of Valence, and Charles Rochefancals Randon, to compound Matters with Q. Elizabeth's Com-Terms of missioners, who immediately dispatch'd into Scotland William Cecil and Nicolas Wotton Dean of Canterbury and York. For the King and Queen of France and Scotland, thought it too mean a Con-offers Peace.

The Queer-Regent dies, parted this Life; a pious and wife Princess, who had suffer'd the molt bitter Reproaches, from fome virulent and furious Preachers (as may be feen in their own Church-Hiftory, call'd in by Queen Elizabeth, when 'twas just going to the Press) as likewise from the Hands of the Congregation, who, as native Counfellors of the Kingdom, had, in the Name of the Q. of Scots and her Husband, by their own Authority, excluded her from the Regency, as one that opposed the Glory of God, and the Liberty of the Scots. The Articles agreed upon by the Commissioners, three Months after the Siege descention for Princes to debate Things on a Level with their own Subjects; and Murray made fuch Propofals, as, in Cecil's Opinion, were neither it for Princes to grant, nor Subjects to ask. During this Parley, Mary of Lorain, the Queen's Mother, and the Regent of Scaland, de-

The Treaty of Peace in the Castle of Cambray, bety at E- tween Queen Elizabeth and Henry II. of France, was laid, were as follow.

dubbsstage and fail be renewed and confirmed.
The Treaty made at the fame place between Engcles there:
and and Scotland shall be likewife ratify d.

Preparations for War shall be at an end on both 1560. The Fort at Aimouth in Scotland (hall be Ann. 3.

rafed.

The King of France and Queen Mary shall quit the Arms and Title of England and Ireland.

The Debate concerning Reparations to be made to Queen Elizabeth; and about Caution for the fifth Article is refer d to another Meeting to be held at London; and if it cannot then be adjusted, the Catholick King to decide the Matter.

The King and Queen shall be fully reconcild to the Peers of Scotland, their Subjects.

The Confederates, his Catholick Majesty more especially, shall be comprehended.

This Treaty shall be Sign'd within sixty Days, and an Oath taken on both sides for Confirmation

This Peace was Proclaim'd thro' the Camp and A Peace Town to the general Satisfaction; for all Sides Probegan to be weary of the War: The English, for the claim'd miserable Waste of the Country all about; the French for want of Victuais, and the Scots for want of Pay: And 'twas a Peace without doubt in which all Britain found its Advantages, as it tended to fecure the ancient Liberties of Scotland, and to preferve the Honour and Safety of England, which had now nothing to fear on the fide of Scotland; fo that the English were ready to acknowledge, with all possible Cheerfulness, that

Queen Elizabeth was the Author of their Safety, as on the other fide the Scots with equal Satiffaction own'd her the Defender of their Liberties. She, all this while, like a true Mother of her Country, was fo mightily Intent upon the Publick Welfare, that she feem'd to have no room in The Q. her Thoughts for the Addresses of the most Po- has more tent Princes. For the was at one and the fame Suitors. time Courted for Charles Duke of Austria, a youn-ger Son of the Emperor Ferdinand, by the Count Austria. of Elphenstein; and the Protettants of Scotland recommended to her James Earl of Arran, as the The Earl likelieft Method for uniting the divided King- of Arran. doms of England and Scotland. But this Motion was presently rejected, tho' without any Disparagement to the Character of the Person. Next appear'd Errick King of Sweedland, by the means Errick of his Brother the Duke of Finland, whom Gu- King of farons (their Father) had some time before his Sweed. death fent into England upon this Errand; and land. with the more hopes of Success, because he pro-fels'd the Queen's Religion: Nay, he was fo creduloufly bent on the business, that he had Thoughts of coming into England himself; the the Dane resolv'd, out of a Grudge to him, to intercept his Paffage, as thinking it no way for his Interest for England and Sweedland (which has Denmark just between them) to be united by this

The great Affection and Respect which this Prince express to the Queen, She most gratefully acknowledg'd, and affur'd him, 'That he' should be very welcome to England, but that fhe could not as yet prevail on herfelf to change a fingle Life, in which the had found fo much fatisfaction for the other State. She defir'd him therefore to ask any other Instance of her Friendship, and whether he succeeded or not, she would endeavour to let him see he had not thrown away his good Inclinations. She advised him likewife to use no Delays in the choice of a Wife, and wish dhe might gain one answerable to his Worth and Merit. With this Answer John Duke of Finland return'd Home about six Months after, having lest no Method unattempted for advancing the Match, by Court-

Match.

ing the Queen every Day, giving rich Prefents to the Courtiers, and drawing the Love and Re-Am. 3. spect of the Meanest, among whom he would often scatter some pieces of Silver, assuring them withal, that when his Brother came, he would be as free of his Gold. Notwithstanding he was ill used by his Brother at his return, who, it feems, was jealous, that he had manag'd the Courtship rather for his own felf than him. He therefore still continu'd his Suit for two Years together, and fent fresh Proposals by Nicholas Guldenstein. And fo lightly Amorous was he withal, as the fame time to make Love to Philip the Landgrave of Hesse's Daughter; and when that would not do neither, he took up with a Young Woman of very mean Extraction.

The Queen's Answer to Archduke

England.

But Charles of Austria could not but hope, that the House of Austria, which had the good Luck to make the most Honourable Alliances, would grow yet more Confiderable by the addition of England; and that he should be the happy Inftrument of getting a Toleration at least, if not an Establishment for the old Religion. Neither did the Queen dash all his Pretensions at once; for fhe declar'd before Elphenstein, and by Letters to the Emperor, ' That among the many Honourable Offers the had made her, there was not any more to than the Propotal of Charles of Austria; but that however the was not capable of being frighted by pass'd Dangers, nor footh'd by any prospect of Honour, out of her Resolution of living Single, which yet was not fo confirm'd as to make her abjure a marry'd State; and she had a very good affurance, that the God, upon whose Goodness she reflied in all things elfe, would direct all her Thoughts in this and other matters, to her own and her People's Welfare.

About this time Adolph Duke of Holftein, Un-Adolph D. cle to Frederick 11. King of Denmark, at the inftiof Hollern gation of the Dane, came into England, in order arrives in to break off the Match with the Sweed, and not without some hopes of a more Honourable one for himself, occasiond by a Letter, wherein the Queen, it feems, had wished, That he were as nearly Allied to the English as he had been in times past to the Spaniard; and moreover promis'd him great Civilities. To whom, besides an honourable Reception, fhe gave the Honour of the Garter, and a yearly Pension; and engag'd him to her Interests by so respectful a Treatment. He was a Prince that had acquir'd a mighty Reputation in the Wars, upon his late Conquests of the Dith-Marsians in Jutland.

Nor were there wanting at Home fome Perfons who fed themselves (as Lovers use to do) with Golden Dreams of marrying their Sove-Sir Will. reign. Sir William Pickering, (for inftance) a Pickering Gentleman well Born, of a narrow Estate, but much esteem'd for his Learning, his handsome way of Living, and the Management of fome Embaffies into France and Germany. Next to him The E. of was Henry Earl of Arundel, a Person of an anci-Arundel. ent and noble Family, and very Rich, but withal

The Queen's

Robert

Dudley.

declining in Years. Not to forget Robert Dudley, the Duke of Northumberland's younger Son, reftor'd by Queen Mary to his Honour and Estate, a Person of Youth and Vigour, and of a sine Shape and Proportion, whose Father and Grandfuther were not fo much hated by the People, but he was as high in the favour of Q. Elizabeth, who out of her Royal and Princely Clemency, Favour to heap'd Honours upon him, and fav'd his Life him. whose Father would have destroy'd ber's. Whether this was from any real Virtues in him, whereof he gave some appearances; or in regard of the common lot of their Imprisonment in Queen Mary's Days; or that there was fomething in his Birth or the Planets that rul'd it, which occafion'd this Sympathy of Thoughts, I cannot determine : But most certain it is, that the tayour Ann. 3 or disfavour of Princes to feveral Perfons is govern'd by a fecret kind of Fatality. For the Queen having made him Mafter of the Horfe, as the first token of her Friendship and Litzem, the made him Knight of the Garter (to the amazement of all) in the first Year of her Reign; and prefer'd to the fame most Honourable Orde the D.of Norfolk, the Marquis of Northampton, and Earl of Rutland.

In the interim the Lord Viscount Mentacute, Monta-Embaffador in Spain, thews the King the necesting energy En ty of the Scottiff War; and acquits the Scots, to bally in the best of his power, from the charge of Re- Spain. bellion. He did it, but after a very cool manner, and like one that was a firm Bigot to the Romish Religion, says that no other Faith was brought into England, but what was consonant to the Scriptures, and the four first Occumenical Councils; and infifts upon the renewing the The Spracety of Burgundy, that had been formerly mards made between the Predeceffors of the King of refule to England and Spain; but receives for answer, that Treaty.

The reftoring of this Treaty was neededs.

(Tho' it must be confest, that the renewing of Treaties is not only very customary among Princes, but highly reasonable, as being indeed the very life of all Covenants, and an evidence to the World of their mutual good Understanding, and he himself and his Father Charles, in the Treaty of Marriage with Queen Mary of England, in the Year 1553, had obliged them-felves to confirm the same Compact). He then proceeds to lament the Changes of Religion in England, as likewise the sending of an Army into Scotland, and relieving the Rebels, and complains that he had no Intelligence of thefe 'Matters till it was too late. Nevertheless he did indefatigably oppose the Practises of the French, who endeavoured to Excommunicate the Queen, and laboured by his Agents at Rome, that no fuch Cenfure might pass without his confent. He likewife gave fecret Intimations (for his own advantage) tho' they happen'd to be too late to have it inferted in the Articles with the French, That the English might be allowed to drive the French out of Scotland if they floudd offer to return again; and that a Caution should be put in for the restoring of Calair. The Viscount however easily law that the King was disoblig'd, and the Queen discover'd it likewise, not basely by the Marks I have mention'd, but by his return of the Garter into the The K, of Viscount's Hands, which seem'd to be a direct Spain breach of all future good Correspondence with fends back the English. But he was much more nettled at the Gara repulle he receiv'd afterward, when by the Solicitations of the Count of Feria, (who had married the Daughter of William Dormer by M. 19

Sidney) he fent an Embassador into England to interceed on behalf of Jane Dormer, the Daughter of Thomas Newdigate, Widow of Sir Robert Dormer Kt. and Grandmother to the Countels of Feria, as likewise of Clarentia, an old Lady that had been much in the Favour and Secrets of Queen Mary, and her chief Almoner to some poor Women; and of Richard Shelly, afterwards call'd the Prior of the Order of St. J. bn in England, and Thomas Harvey, great Favourers both of the Romish Religion, and in good Etteem with the King of Spain; that they might have leave to Refide in the Natherland and Spain, whither they had withdrawn themselves, without Licence obtain'd, on the account of their Religion, for twas a Proviso in the ancient Laws of England, That under Pain of the Forfeiture of Goods and Charrels, none but Peers of the first

Rank.

Rank, and Merchants fhould (without the King's 1560. special Licence) leave the Kingdom, or reside Ann. 3. in foreign Countries beyond such a fix'd Time; and that too, either for the recovery of their Health in a warmer Climate, or for the improve-ment of their Minds in the Universities, or the instructing themselves in the Art of War: And (as the wrote in answer to the King of Spain) 'Twasbeyond all Precedent, that fuch a Licence should be granted to Women, as to permit them to live always out of their own Country; and tho' the thing was not in itself of any great Concernment, yet fince they were not like to receive any advantage by luch an abfence which might prove equal to the bad in-fluence which fuch Examples might have upon the Commonwealth; She therefore thought it a Liberty no way fit to be granted. The Count of Feria taking this for an Injury of Ferra incenfeth Queen.

The Count of Ferral done to himself, that he might not pass it by unreveng'd, forc'd a Servant of Chamberlain's, the he Pope English Embassador in Ordinary for Spain, into gainst the the Inquisition, on pretence of Heresie: And being emag'd at the Queen and the English, he blew up the King's Resentments into a greater flame, his Wife not being able to draw him from thele measures. Nay, there goes a Report, that he temper'd with Pitts IV. the Bishop of Rome Flect, to get her Excommunicated : But he (on what pretence I cannot fay) fent unto her Vincentio Parpalia, Abbat of St. Saviour, with private Instructions and flattering Letters, which I shall here give you entire, tho' it may perhaps fubmit me to the Centure of having transgress d the exact Laws of History.

> To Our Dearest Daughter in Christ, ELIZABETH, Queen of England.

Thellopes Letter to the L

" Our most beloved Daughter in Christ, " Greeting and Apostolical Benediction, How " earnestly we defire (as by our Pastoral Dury bound) to take effectual care of your Salva-" tion, and to provide for your Honour and the " Establishment of your kingdom, both God, " the Scarcher of Hearts, knows, and you may " learn yourfelf, from the Instructions we have given to our beloved Son Vincentio Parpalia, Abbat of St. Saviour, a Person not unknown " to you, and well approv'd of us, to be com-" municated to you. We do therefore (most dear Daughter) exhort and persuade your " Highness again and again, that you would lay " by those ill Counsellors who love themselves " better than your Interest; and that you would proceed in the fear of God, and acknowledge the time of your Vilitation, and yield Obedi-"ence to our paternal and wholfom Admonitions: By doing which you may promife you felf every thing at our Hands that you " can defire, not only towards the Happiness " of your Soul, but the Establishment also of your Royal Dignity, according to the Autho-" rity, Place and Function intrufted to us by · God; who, if you return into the Bolom of " the Church, (as we hope and wish you may) " are ready to receive you with the fame Afrection, Joy and Honour, wherewith the Pa-rent in the Golpel received the Prodigal upon his return. The our fatisfaction will be fo much higher than his, as he rejoic'd for the " lake of one Child's Salvation only, whereas " you, as virtually containing all the People of " England, will give us occasion to Congrarulate " the happy Convertion of yourfelf and the "whole Nation; and the fame will you minifer to all our Brethren in general, (whom, " God willing, you will in a little time underfland to be Conven'd in an Occumenical and General Council, for the Extirpation of He-1560. refies) as well as to the whole Church: Nay, Ann. 3. you will fill Heaven irfelf with joyful Acclamations; and by fo memorable an Action, perpetuate the Glory of your Name, and purchase a much richer Diadem than what you now wear. But of this the abovemention'd Vincentio has Directions to transact with you more at large; and will declare unto you our "Fatherly Affection; whom we pray your Highness to treat with all possible Candour, to hear him cheerfully, and repole as entire a " Faith in what he fays, as you would in our-" felf.

> Given at Rome, at St. Peter's, &c. 15 of May 1560, in Our First Year.

What was the Substance of Parpalia's Instructi-... I have never learnt; for I do not think they were given in Writing, and to guess at random, I shall forcer as the Trick of common Histori-That Queen Elizabeth still consisted with her Motto, Semper Eaden; and that the Pope loft his aim, is a thing known to all. 'Tis faid loft his aim, is a thing known to all. 'Tis faid that the Pope plighted his Faith,' That he would His sup Difannul the Protest against her Mother's Mar- pos'd Ofriage as unjust, settle the English Liturgy by ters. his Authority, and grant the use of the Sacra-ments to the English under both Kinds, in case fhe would reconcile herself to the Romish Com-' munion, and Bow to the Supremacy of his 'Chair; and more than this, that feveral Thoueffect this.

The time was now come for confirming the The K.

Treaty of Edinborough; which after the Queen and Q of had Ratify'd by a folemn Oath, and fent it over France to the King and Queen of France, to be Sign'd by refuse to fignthe them, according to Agreement, Throckmorton, Treaty at the Queen's Residentiary in France, could by no Edinbomeans perfuade them to fign; no more could Sir rough. Peter Mentas Kt. who was fent into France on that Errand, altho' in that very Commission, which impower'd the Bishop of Valence to draw up the faid Treaty, they had most expresly engaged themselves to continue the same, bond Fide, and on the Word of a King. They alledged these on the Word of a King. They alledged these Reasons for their refusal: That the Scots had entred into the League of Berwick with the English, not by the King's Authority, but of their own Head, which they ought not to have done, for that it was entred upon by Rebels, and confirm'd by counterfeiting the Hands and Seals of their faithful Subjects; and besides, That they had not paid the Obedience confented to and promisid in the faid Agreement.

During these Debates, Francis II. King of Francis II. France departed this Life, before he was quite K of Francis II. 18 Years of Age, in the Second Year of his dies. Reign, leaving the Queen of Scots a Widow, whether to the greater Grief of the Popish, or Joy of the Protestant Party, all Britain over, is not easily faid.

Q. Elizabeth being now a little more fecure, to the end the Church might remain without any corrupt Mixtures, and gain furer Footing, and that the Nation might advance in Glory and Wealth, put out two very feafonable Proclamations The one was to command the Anabaptifle, A Proclamations and others of the fame Heretical Principles, mation If-which had flocked to the Sea-Coast-Towns from feed out Beyond-Sea, under pretence of escaping Perse- against Acution, and had Infected the Kingdom with the nabaptifle Venom of their Doctrines, to depart the Realm within twenty Days, whether they were Natives or Foreigners, on Pain of Imprisonment and Lofs of Goods and Chattels.

against

The other was

1560. Ann. 3. And Sarilegious

against all Sacrifegious Persons, who under colour of abolishing Superstition, began to pull down ancient Monuments, to deface the Epitaphs and Efcutcheons of the noblest Families. and other venerable Remains of Antiquity, which even the mad Zeal of fome profane Persons in King Henry VIII. and Edward VI.'s time left flanding, and likewise to rob the Steeples of their Bells, and to unroof the Churches for the fake of the Lead.

Weft minfter-Abby made a Collegiate

She likewife converted Westminster-Abby, a Place remarkable for the Coronation and Interment of the Kings of England, and the keeping of the Royal Standards, into a Collegiate-Church; where, to the Glory of God, and Improvement of Learning, fhe placed a Dean, Twelve Prebendaries, a Schoolmafter, an Usher, Forty Scholars, (call'd Queen-Scholars, whereof fix or more to be yearly fent to the Univertities) besides Chaplains, Singing-men, Twelve Pentioners, &c. Which Royal Bounty has not fail'd of producing a plentiful flock of learned Men, for the benefit of both Church and Coin are due'd to Glory, fine began by degrees to call in all the the intring fick value.

Brafs Money, and reftore Coin to its Current and Sterling Purity, and to repair the Honour of the Kingdom, by preventing the Cheats of those who adulterated the Coin both at home the contract of the Kingdom, by the Coin both at home the contract of the Kingdom, by the Coin both at home the contract of the Kingdom, by the Coin both at home the contract of the Kingdom, by the Coin both at home the contract of the Kingdom, by the Coin both at home the contract of the Coin both at home the Coin both at h and abroad, exchang'd the best Manufactures of the Nation for the world Money, and exported the Current Cash into Foreign Parts. She took care also, that the Prices of fuch Wares as were kept at too high a Price (to the great damage of the Publick) should be proportionably abated, especially where Soldiers, Pentioners, Servants and Day-Labourers, were like to be the Sufferers. And this fine happily effected, without the leaft Disturbance, in a very few Months. First, by prohibiting the melting down of any Money, whether Brass or Sterling: Then by reducing Brass Money to its just Value; the Brafs Penny to an Half-penny Sterling; the Two-penny Piece to Three-half-pence; the Sixpenny to a Groat, and another Telton to Twopence-farthing, which was as much as the Silver in them amounted to. And, in the last place, by purchasing the same from the Owners with good Money, (to her own loss) provided it were brought into the Mint within such a time. We may therefore own ourfelves indebted to Queen Elizabeth, that we have had better and pures Money in England than had been feen in two hundred Years before, or indeed than what had pass'd in any Part of Europe besides. Within a while after, she coin'd a pure fort of Money (which we call Sterling) for the Kingdom of Ireland, the fame Piece to pass for a Shilling in Ireland, and for Ninepence at Home. And a most glorious and memorable Action it was, and fuch an one as King Edward VI. could not, and Queen Mary durst not undertake. After K. Henry VIII. had made the first Experiment of any of the Kings of England, in mixing Brass with the Coin, to the great Disparagement of the Nation, and the Damaste of his People and Posterity, besides the feandalous Example he left the World of his Riot and Excess, considering that his Father had left him more Wealth than any other Prince before him had left his Succeffor. A grear flock he had amass'd by Taxes and other Collections, (tho' not so great as we are inform'd by Cardinal Poole, who tells us that he demanded more than all the kings before him fince the Norman Conquest). And a mighty Treasure he had rai-fed, besides, when by an Act of Parliament, he feized on all the Lands in Ireland, which the English held in their absence, all the First-Truits and Tenths of Ecclesiastical Preferments in England and belond; and all the Rones, Revenues 2000, and Moveables, of Abbies and Mona 2000 Beach of the Year died In nor Highest Tie deal Earl of Huntington, the second Earl of that Line, of how who had by Kasharine Pool, Daughter of Harr, Earl 4

Lord Montacute, Brother to Reginall Pool in Cardinal, Henry his Heir and Succeffor, and many other Children, who agreed better in Temper and Affection, than in Perfusion and Principle.

In Ireland Shan-Oncal, a Nobler is a recom-Power and Interest in Ulfer, the true and to an include Son of Con-Oncal, irman'd Bacco, crife is the an-(created by Henry VIII. Earl of Tir-ten) in the ar-the Laws should call him to account for the Murder of Matthew Lord Dungannon, his Bafe-Brother (falfely fuppos'd to be Legitimate) for depriving his Father, who foon after broke his Heart, of his Government, and taking upon himself the Title of Oneal, by no other Election than a wild call of his Shoe over his Head, thought it his best way to break out into an open Rebellion. Whereupon 500 Foot were fent out of England, and some Regiments of Horse rais'd in Ireland. But after some slight Skirmishes, when he found himself unable to cope with the Englifb, and that he was grown Odious to his Party, and was likewife oppos'd by Smly-Bog, James Maccomell, and O-donel, he threw down his Arms at the entreaty of his kinfman the Earl of Kildare, and promis'd to come to England and crave the Queen's Mercy; which he did, as shall be made appear in its proper place.

The Fourth Year of the Queen's Reign. 1561. In the beginning of the Year, Francis Earl of The O of

Bedford was Ient into France to Condole the Death Seons de-

of Francis, and to Congratulate his Succeffor by the Charles IX. upon his Acceffion to the Throne, figure of He, by himfelf, and with Throckmotton, made the Treats. repeated Instances to the Queen of Scats to confirm the Treaty at Edinborough; but all to no purpose: For all the answer she gave, was, That she must maturely Pause upon so grave a matter; and that she neither could nor would fign it without the Advice of the Scottish Nobility. Notwithstanding, Threckmorten was still very pressing upon this Head, both with her, the Cardinal of Lerum, the rest of the Guises, her Uncles, and her Base Brother, who was lately come into France. But when the matter was fhifted off from day to day, and fham Excuses made use of, Queen Elizabeth suspecting some dangerous Plot was hatching against England, resolved to prevent it. She dispatches therefore Sir Thomas Randolph into Scotland, to cultivate a Sir The, good Agreement amongst the Nobility, which Randolph into the first into when founded in the unity of Religion, is like fent into to last longest; and to give them also to underftand, that the Princes of Germany had entred in- bility Se, to a Combination against the Bishop of Rome, and that the Queen, his Mistress, heartily wish'd that the English and Scots were included in the That now was the fittest Opportunity (whilft the the Queen of Seats was a Widow to compose all Differences between the English and Scots, (who had maintain'd fo long a Variance, at fo vaft an Expense of Blood on both sides) either by their making a perpetual Truce with England, or by breaking off all those ancient Leagues and Engagements with France, which had been made the occations of to much Variance between the English and Scots. And laftly, to give private Intimations to the Scots, not to permit the Queen-Dovager to marry Vol. II.

Which had been embased Ly H. 8. again with any foreign Prince, and fo make use 1561, of his power in revenging herself on them, who 2m. 4. very lately opposed the French, and thereby possible endanger their Liberty a second time.

Mean while the Queen of Scots, designing a The Q. of The Q. of Scotland, (having fent d'Oisely, a deniedsate Frenchman, away before) requested Queen Elizabeth to grant her fafe Conduct for croffing into from France to Scotland, and that d Oisely might pass by the way Scotland. Of England. But the Queen in the presence of feveral, denied both Requests, alledging as the cause of this Denial, That she had not yet ratify'd the Treaty at Fdibborugh, according to her promise; which if she would sign, she assures her of all possible Civilities she could expect from a Queen, a Relation, or a Neighbour, whether fhe pleasd to go by Sea, or through England. The Queen of Stats being nettled at this Repulle, fent for Throckmorton, and held him in a long Discourse upon this matter, which I shall briefly hint out of his own Letters, (tho' I fhall have occasion to touch on some things already mention'd) on purpose to give a clearer Account of the Rise and Progress of those Heats and Divisions which have been between two the most Potent and Wife Princesses of the Age. This then was what fhe spoke to Throckmorton, when the had clear'd the Prefence of all her Attendants, and others.

The Q of Geots Expostulates the case with Garanton.

How Weak I may prove, or how far a Woman's Frailty may transport me, I cannot tell; however I have no mind to have fo many Witneffes of my Infirmity, as your Mistress had at her Audience of my Emballador d'Oifely. There is nothing diffurbs me fo much, as the having ask'd with fo much Importunity, things I could well enough have been without. I can (by God's leave) return to my own Country without hers, as I came hither in spite of the Teeth and Opposition of her Brother, King Edward; neither do I want Friends both able and wil-Ing to conduct me home, as they have brought me hither: But I was willing rather to make an Experiment of her Friendship than of any others. I have often heard you fay, that a good Correspondence between her and myself is very convenient for the fake of both our Kingdoms, yet were this her opinion, she had hardly deny'd me so small a Request. But per-But perhaps the bears a better Inclination to the Scots my Rebellious Subjects, than to me their Sovereign, her Equal in Royal Dignity, her near Relation, and the undoubted Heir of her Kingdoms. Do you imagine it possible there can ever be that real Fidelity and Affection between her and my Rebel-People, that may be entertain'd between her and me? Sure I am, fhe has reduc'd me to fuch Straits, that I have been fore'd to ask Aid and Affiftance where I had the leaft inclination to do it; and it has been a matter of great aftonishment to them, what should make her of late affist my own Subjects against me, and prevent my return, onow I'm a Widow, into my own Country. Be-fides her Friendship I ask nothing at her hands; I neither trouble her, nor meddle with the Affairs of her Government: Not that I am ignoe rant, that there are now in England a great maony Male-Contents, that are no Friends to the present Establishment. She is pleas'd to upbraid me as a Person little Experienc'd in the World. I freely own it: But Age will cure that Misfortune. However, I am old enough that Misfortune. to acquit myself honestly and courteously to my Friends and Relations, and to encourage no Reports of her which would misbecome a Queen and her Kinfwoman. I would also fay, by her leave, that I am a Queen as well as fhe,

and not altogether Friendless; and perhaps I have as great a Soul roo; so that methinks we should be upon the level, as to our Treatment Ann. 4. of one another. But I shall make no Comparifons, for they are odious, and but one remove from Strife and Envy. As for the Treaty of Edinborough, it was made in the King my Hufband's Life-time, whom I was oblig'd in Duty to fubmit to in all things; and if he delay'd the figning of it, 'tis he ought to bear the blame, After his death, the Parliament of not I. France left me to my own Council and Meafures. And as for my Uncles, they refused to concern themfelves in Scottifth Affairs, for fear of giving Offence either to Queen Elizabeth or the Scots. The Scots now here with me are private Perfons, and not fit to Advise with on fuch Critical Occasions: As soon as I have confulted the States of the Kingdom, I shall be ready to give a reasonable Answer; and I am the more intent on my Journey, that I may be able to make the quicker difpatch. But she, it feems, deligns to ftop my Journey; fo that either fhe will not let me give her Satisfaction, or elfe is refolv'd not to be fatisfy'd, perhaps on purpose to keep up the Disagreement between us. She has often reproach'd me with my being Young; and I must be very Young indeed, and as ill Advis'd, to Treat of Matters of such agreed Concern and Importance, without the Advice of my Parliament. The Wife, as I have been informal in desiring addition in the have been inform'd, is rfeither oblig'd in Honour nor Confeience, by what her Husband does. But that Point I don't difpute. But thus much I can fay with truth, that I have done nothing to my dear Sifter, but what I would be very willing should be done to myfelf. I have not been wanting in any friendly ' Offices to her; but she disbelieves or overlooks them. I could heartily wish I were as near to her Heart as I am to her Blood, for that would be a most valuable Alliance. God forgive them (if any fuch there are) that do ill Offices be-'tween us. But pray tell me, Sir, you that are her Embassador, why is she so very angry with 'me, who never disoblig'd her by Word or 'Deed?

To this Threekmorton answer'd: I have no other Threek-Commission than to hear your Majest's Answer relating morton's to the Confirmation of the Trenty at Edinborough. Answer. But if you please to hear the Grands of her Majesty's Resembnent, I shall give a brief Account of it, and lay essible the Embalsador till I have so done. As soon as the Queen was Crowned, your Majesty thought sit to assume the Arms and Title of the Kingdom of England, which you had not done in Queen Mary's Reign; I leave your Majesty to judge, whether a grosser Indignity could be well offer d to a Prince; private Person could, it may opinion, very ill digest such an Assume the Sprinces.

But (reply'd flee) My Husband and his Father The would have it fo, and it was by their orders. Queen Since their death, and the date of my Freedom Replya. and Difengagement, I have quite forborn those Arms and Title; and yet I cannot be satisfy'd that its any Injury to the Queen, if I, who am a Queen too, and Grand-daughter to King Hengy Will's eldest Sifter, should bear these Arms, ince others, more remotely Allied, have done so, and most certain it is, that Courtney, Marquis of Exeter, and the Dutches of Suffolk, Nicce to Henry VIII. by his younger Sister, did by special Grant bear the Arms of England, with Limbs or Borders for a difference.

Seeing that these things did not at all satisfie Queen Elizabeth, who was fully convinced, that the Queen of Scots used these Delays to cheriff some fine Prospect or new Hopes she had conceiv'd,

1561. the States of Scotland relating to the Treaty, al-Ann. 4. tho' they had feveral times met fince the death of her Husband. The Queen being now on her Journey, sends again for Throckmorton to Abbeville, Sheendes where fine mildiy demanded of him, by subst vours to Methods she might satisfie his Royal Mistress? By Con-faitly, frming (returns he) the Treaty of Edinborough, as O. Elia. Q. Eliz.

I have more than once told your Majesty. To which the reply'd, I defire you to bear me, and then judge whether they be not very cogent Reasons which the Queen takes for vain Excuses and Delays. The first Article in that Treaty, for confirming the Truce at Cambray, does not in the least concern me. The second, which relates to figuing the Treaty, there made between the English and Scots, was ratify'd by my Hushand and myself, and cannot be repeated, unless in my name only, whereas my Husband is expresly nam'd wy name only, whereas my Husband is expectly name at therein. The third, fourth and fifth Articles are alreads answerd and fulfilld; for there are no further Warlike Preparations: The French Garrifons are remanded from Scotland; the Fort at Aimouth is rated to the very Ground; I have, since my Husbands death, quitted the Arms and Title of England. To rase and strike them out of all the Moveables, Buildings and Chapter in Fance is a shear way with in ward. and Charters in France, is a thing no way in my power; and 'tis more than I can do to fend back the bishops of Valence and Randon, who are no Subjects Applys of Valence and Kalloull, who are no singless of mine, into England, to appear at a Conference about the fixth Article. As for the last Article, I hope my Rebel-Subjects will not complain of any great Severity toward them. But the, I proceive, designs to prevent any Proofs I might show of a merciful Disposition towards them, by resolving to hinder my return. What is there may about the title Testers that was my new york. Scretary. But I would advile you, who are an ame to biffedor, to act fuitably to that Churatter; I mean, rather to qualify and compole Matters, than to aggravate and make them worse.

But neither had those Letters their desir'd effect on the Queen, who could not fo eafily forget the Usurpation of her Arms and Title. And the began to be fomething uneasy left she should assume them a second time, were she not bound by a folemn Oath and figning of the Treaty to forbear the Encroachment.

The Q. of In the interim, the Queen of Scots finding a convenient Opportunity, fet fail from Calais, and Scotland, Ships in a Fog. These, some thought, were a Squadron in respect appointed for her Convoy: Others judg'd they were out for the suppression of Pirates: And some believ'd they were fent to intercept her Passage; for James the Ba-flard return'd very lately thro' England, and gave private Advices to intercept her, both for the Safety of the Queen, and the Interest of Religion. And Lidington was likewise of the same mind, (being pleas'd at d'Oisely's stay in England) lest (as his Letters intimate) her return should raise mighty Storms, put a stop to all Intercourse with England, whether by Posts or Expresses, weaken the Party best affected to the English, and, in a word, treat the Protestants of Scotland with extreme Rigour and Cruelty, not as Traytors, but Hereticks, as Queen Mary of England Her gentle had done before her. But, to fay truth, she used Governall possible Clemency to her Subjects upon her return, made no Changes in Religion, (tho Tu-multuously fet up) but began to Govern the Kingdom by wife and excellent Laws. And she fent to Queen Elizabeth, by Lidington, Letters from herfelf and the Nobility, wherein the exproffed an hearty defire to make and maintain a occiv'd, because she had mention'd nothing to good Correspondence; and requested her to think of fome Meafures for the fettling a firm 1561. and latting Peace between the two Kingdoms. Ann. 4 But she conceived there was no better or furer ther De-Mothod to effect this, than for Queen Elizabeth mand to to declare her, by Authority of Parliament, Heir- be decla-apparent to the Crown of England, in case her- red Heir felf should have no lifue. This was a great surprize to Queen Elizabeth, Ge, who had long expected the Ratification of the Treaty at Edinborough, which she had promis'd both in Writing and by Word of Mouth. Nevertheless she gave this Answer; "That as for Q. Elize" the Succession, she hoped the Queen of Scats beth? "would not rob her of the Scepter, or her Anlwer.

"Children, should she have any. She promis'd "not to diminish any part of her Title to the "Crown of England, tho' she had, through the Instigutions of some ambitious Spirits, assumed the Arms of it for which she make in Lusting " the Arms of it, for which she ought in Justice " to make Reparation. To declare her the Succeffor of her Kingdoms, the conceiv'd was the " way rather to dissolve than settle a good Un-" deritanding; because Successors are always " fuspected Persons to those who sit at the Helmi. "The People, out of a natural Levity, are apt "to court the rifing, and leave the fetting Sun, were it only that they are weary of the prefent : And those that are Successors declar'd, would find it impossible to contain their own "Ambition, and the Hopes of others, within "the bounds of Sobriety and Reason. So that, flould she consent to settle upon her the "Crown in Reversion, she should destroy her " best Security with her own Hands; and not only prepare her Winding-Sheet, but dig her " own Grave even in her Life-time.

Having given this Answer, she dispatches Let- She urges ters, by Sir Peter Mewtas, to urge once more the the fign. of Scott give a direct Refusal, yet fignify'd, that Ticay, it could not well be done till the Affairs of Scott land were in a more fettled Posture. Mean while, Queen Elizabeth gave a most Splendid and Courteous Reception to her Uncles in their return through England, namely Aumarle the Grand-Prior, and Albeuf, with other French Persons of Quality, who had conducted her into Scotland. However the English Merchants were, by the Duke of Guife's means, ill treated upon the Coast The Eng. of Bretaign, their Ships being feiz'd and made life Mi Prizes. And there were Engines fecretly at chants work at Rome to procure an Excommunication abuled, against the Queen. But Pius IV. the then Pope, thought a gentle Treatment would do best. For he press'd her, as I observed in the Passages of the last Year, by very fost and endearing Letthe fair Year, by very form and Succession.

ters. And now, there being a Day appointed The Person for the Council of Trent, (which was open d becours the fore, and flut up again by reafon of frequent English fore, and The Council of Trent of Wars) for taking away all Differences in Reli- to the Council of gion, and all the Princes, whether Catholicks or Trent.

Downright Enemies to Popery, having receiv'd a kind Invitation. The Pope fent the Abbat of Montinego with very obliging and affectionate Letters. But the Abbat flaid in the Netherlands till he had first fued for a fair Reception in England: For there was an ancient Act, which provided, That the Pope's Nuncio's should not fet a Foot in England without leave obtain'd, and an Oath taken, that they would attempt nothing there which might be any ways prejudicial to the King or the Libertics of the People. And the Council of the Nation judg'd it not very fafe to admit him, in regard that to many in all Parts of the Kingdom were fuch Implicite Slaves to Popery, and used all possible Endeavours both at home and abroad to embroil the Quiet of the Nation. After the refusal of the

Ddd2

Vol. II.

ment,

Scors returns to

Abbats admiffion, the Bishop of Vicerbo, the Pope's rebuild the Forts and Castles within 20 Miles of of the Borders of Scotland. She rigged out her Fleet with all manner of Tackling and Ammunition. Ambalfadors to the Council; and many Princes of Christendom, the Kings of France, Spain and Portugal, Henry Cardinal of Portugal, and above all, the Duke of Alva (who yet had a profound Respect for the Queen) persuaded her by Letters rather to acquiesce in the Council of Trent's Determination in cases of Religion, which was the only Pillar and Support of Christianity and good Government, than in the private Opinions of a few, however Learned and Confiderable. The Queen answer'd, That she desir'd, with all her Heart, The an Occumenical Council, but a Popillo one the would never bonour with an Zimbofflador: That she had no buffness with the Bishop of Rome, whose Authority was abrigated in England by Act of Parliament: Norwell this the England Queen's Antwer.

was it his but the Emperor's Prerogative to call Councils: Nor had he any Soveraign Power above other Bishops, as far as she could find.

The same time the Abbat (who was the last of the Pope's Nuncio's into England) was denied accefs hither, died at Rome Sir Henry Carne, whom The death we have mention'd before, a prudent Man, and a good Civilian, who was Knighted by the Emperor Charles V. and was the last Ambassador from the Crown of England to the See of

of Sir Henry Carne,

> When Chamberlayne, the English Ambassador in Spain, found that this Answer had still worse Effects on the Mind of that Prince and Nation, as implying in it an Affront to the Pope, (for the death of the French King had now remov'd all Apprehentions of the falling of England, Scotland and Ireland under the French Government; fo that the English were now less consider'd) he had his Audience of Leave to return home. his room was appointed Sir Thomas Chaloner, who no sooner arriv'd in Spain, but, being a Man that could not bear a Slight, and having been several times Ambassador in Germany, where he met with nothing but Complaifance, earnefly press'd to be call'd home again, because his Trunks and Portmantua's had been examin'd, according to the Culton of the Country. But Queen Elizabeth gave him to understand, That an Ambassador had no Affronts to resent, but the direct Violation of his Prince's Honour.
>
> And now this Wife and Careful Princes,

> (having pretty well fetled Church-Affairs) in order to prevent any Hostile Attempts, and secure herfelf and her Subjects in the fruition of a fet-Icd Peace, tho' her Treasure ran low, yet began to flock her Armory with all necessary Animunition, expending a vast Sum for Arms in Germ.my, because those she bought up at Answerp were stopt by the Spaniard. She caused a great number of Iron and Brass Pieces to be cast. And GOD, who feem'd to befriend all her Undertakings, discover'd a most rich Vein of pure Brass, which till now had lain unthought of, near Refivick in Cumberland, which not only sup-plied the Necessities of the Kingdom, but yield-ed Brass enough for other Countries too. About this time, the Stone call'd Lapis Calaminaris, fo necessary for Brass Works, was by the same good Providence found in England, in great abundance. She likewife caus'd the first making of Gunpowder in this Nation, that she might not be oblig'd to beg or purchace it of her Neighbours She increased also the Garrison of Berwick, which confifted before of 500 Men. She likewife advanced their Pay, that so it might be worth the while of gallant Men and brave Soldiers to serve. And the Town she fortify'd with several New Works, which were finish'd in a very short time.

She fent difcreet and worthy Men to repair and the Borders of Scotland. She rigg'd out her Fleet 1561. Ann. 4. so that it may be allow'd to have been the best Equipp'd Navy that was ever fet out by the English. For the defence whereof she built a Castie on the Banks of Medway near Upmore, (the usual Harbour for the Fleet) and augmented the Sailors and Mariners Pay: So that the was juffly still by Strangers, The Restorer of the Navul Glory, and the Queen of the North-Sea. Neither had the occasion to hire Ships from Hamburgh, Lubeck, Dantzick, Genoa and Venice, which was her Predeceffors cafe. The Wealthier Inhabitants of the Sea-Coasts did likewise follow the Queen's example, in building Ships of War with all ima-ginable Cheerfulness, infomuch that in a little time the Queen's Fleet, in conjunction with her Subject's Shipping, was fo Potent, that it was able to furnish out 20000 Fighting Men for Seafervice. Moreover, the Noblemen and Com-mons were every where as Industrious in providing themselves Arms; so that every Nobleman's House was a compleat Armory. There were also observed frequent Musters, and the young Men were trained up to the Arrs of War, and Exercis'd in Mock-Campaigns. And the Country-People, after an Act had pass'd for the Transportation of Grain, began to mind their Husbandry with double Diligence, and even beyond the Provision of the Laws, by breaking up Grounds which had lain fallow Time out of Mind. About that time the Queen did also put A Procla-a stop to the Avarice of those Merchants who mation in a ftop to the Avarice of those Merchants who medion afternish'd the Emperor of Russia, and other Encfavour of the Polomics of Christendom, with Arms and Warlike Stores man. against the Polonians. She likewise curb'd the Exorbitances of the Officers of the Exchequer, who had referved the Pensions assigned to those Ecclefiasticks who had been turn'd out of the Abbies: For flie gave orders, that all of them who were living, and not known to have fome Preferment, flould be paid to a Farthing.

She revoked likewise certain Warrants, which Warants had been iffued out for victualling the Fleet, revoked. giving Money to the Commissioners to buy it. without burdening the People. She defign'd likewise to have taken away the Commissions relating to the Provision for her own Houshold, fome Countries having agreed fome time after, to furnish it at a certain Rate, to get rid of the Collectors; a kind of Vermin, which the Queen call'd Harpies. Twas about this time too (if my Memory fail not) that she increas'd the Salary of the Judges, and first allow'd 'em Provision for their respective Circuits: And tho' in the main flie was a little faving, yet flie was not to learn where, when and how far to extend her Bounty, being indeed an equal Friend to Thrift, and Benefactor to Merit; for whereas King Herry her Father, notwithstanding he had three Children, fquander'd away a great part of his Royal Revenue; as also did King Edward and Queen Mary, who had none; fhe, tho' without Children, gave very little of her own Demefns, or indeed any thing befide, but on condition, it should (in default of listue-Male) return to the Crown. On which Ac-count, her thifty and prudent Management de-ferves a very grateful Remembrance from her Kingdom and Succeffors.

In the midst of this careful Emulation between Queen and People, for the Nation's Good, which began now to revive and flourish again; this sad Accident happen'd: The beautiful Spire of the Cathedral-Church of S. Paul in London, was fir'd Paul's by Lightning, near the Top: 'Twas a fingular Steeple Ornament to the City, and of a wonderful burnt.

Gunpow« der first England.

Q. Eliz.

prepares for War.

Berwick

Heighth, viz. Five hundred and twenty Foot | 1561. from the Ground, and Two hundred and fixty from the Tower on which it itood, being fram'd of Timber, and cover'd with Lead. And fo violent was the Rage of the Flame downward, (to the great Terror of the City) that in five Hours it quite confum'd it, and all the Roof of the Church, which was very large, and cover'd likewife with Lead. But the Arches, which were built of Stone, remain'd entire. However, by the large Bounty of the Queen, who supply'd a great Quantity of Money and Materials, and by Contributions from the Clergy and repair'd. This Year departed this Life John Bourchier, Death of Eof Bath a Person of antient Nobility, the second Earl of Bath, of that Name; and the Lord Fizzwarin, who left many Children by Eleanor, Daughter of George Lord Rosse. His Grandson William, by his eldest Son, came to the Estate and Title.

others, the Roof, and all but the Spire, was foon

The Fifth Year of her Reign. 1562.

Things now in France began to grow ripe for First civil WarinFr. Tumults and Commotions; whilft, during

Charles IX's Minority, the private Ambition of Rival Princes was cloak'd on each fide with the specious Pretence of Religion; and the Protestants, in the mean while, were very severely treated. And whereas the Papists in England began, on this occasion, upon what Views I cannot ghefs, to whifper about many things in private Clubs and Cabals, intimating that the Protestants in England would come under the same Reftraints. Every Place was fill'd with Jealousie and Apprehension. Margaret Countes of Lenox, Countels Countels Niece to Henry VIII. by his eidest Sister, was and her committed to the Custody of Sir Richard Sackville; and the Earl of Lonox, her Husband, who Husband commitheld a private Correspondence with the Queen of Scots, to the Cuffody of the Mafter of the Rolls; and both were under Confinement some The Pools time: Arthur Pool and his Brother, Great-grandand others children to George Duke of Clarence, Brother to arraign'd, Edward IV. Anthony Fortescue, who had marry'd their Sifter; and others, were try'd, for conspi-ring to withdraw into France, to the Duke of Guise; and from thence to return, with an Army, into Wales; and fo proclaim the Queen of Scots Queen of England, and Arthur Pool Duke of Clarence. All which they ingenuously confefs'd at the Bar; protesting notwithstanding, that they design'd not to put these Projects in Execution, during the Life-time of Q. Elizabeth, who, they believ'd, would die before the Year was at an end, (having, it feems, borrowd this Conjecture, from fome Pretenders to Judicial Aftrology.) Upon this, they were condemn'd; Conbut receiv'd their Pardon, for the fake of that demn'd, Royal Blood, that ran in their Veins. But the but are pardon'd. Lady Katharine Grey, Daughter to Henry Grey D. of Suffolk, who claim'd a much nearer Kindred to the Queen, was, in a great many Mens Thoughts, very feverely us'd. For, altho' flee was Grand-daughter to Henry VIII's other Silter, and marry'd to Henry, eldett Son to the Earl of and Contempt, and was fo far gone with Child, as to be very near her Time. She was commit-Lady Grey ted to the Tower, declaring then that she was lawfully marry'd to Edward Seymour Earl of Hertted.

And the Hereford.

ford, by whom the was now with Child. He therefore being fent for from France, whither he therefore peng tent for non-transc, which had, by the Queen's Leave, gone for his Pleafure, confest'd as much in publick, and was claim un under the fame Confinement. The clapt up under the same Confinement.

Pembroke; from whom the was foon after lawfully divorc'd, after she had suffer'd a long Stight

Archbishop of Canterbury and others were pointed Delegates to try this Caufe, without Appeal; and when he could not, within the Time fix'd, produce a fufficient Certificate of the Marriage; the Archbishop proceeded to pronounce a definitive Sentence: That his Cobabitation with her was unlawful, and that for their Incontinence they ought, buth he and she, to be punished according to their Deserts. This sentence was, by John Hales, a Person dogmatical enough, but withal of great Learning, argu'd against, as unjust and unreasonable; this being his Argument, That their very Confent made 'em Man and Wife ! Whereupon he was also committed to Gustody. Shortly after, she was brought to bed of her Lady Gro first Son, in the Tower; and afterwards had an brought other by Hertford, who had bribed the Keepers. To hed in But for this, Edward Warner, Lieutenant of the Tower, who was privy to the whole Intrigue, paid dear enough, by the Loss of his Place, and his Commitment afterwards. And Hertford himfelf was, in the Star-Chamber, impeach'd of three Crimes; I. That he had debauch'd a Virgin of Harfords the Blood-Royal, in the Queen's Palace 2. That he Impeach-had broken Prijon. And: That he had abus'd her ment, fecond time. The protested, That he was law- and Defully marry'd to ber; and did not deny, but the tence, he had pass d some Doors of the Prison, which stood. open, to support and comfort her, under the Rigar of her Sentence; and to pay her the Respects and Obli-gations of an Husband. Hereupon, he was tor every Offence nned Five thousand Pounds, and He's find-condemn'd to Nine Years Imprisonment: Nevertheless by the Advice of his Council, he fair'd not to enter his Appeal against the Archbishop's Sentence, and to continue fo to do under-hand, tho' lately he has publickly and freely retracted the same. She, after several Years past, in Pri-fon, (if I may make Mention of such distant Times and Things) being feiz'd with a grievous Sickness, beg'd the Queen's Pardon, before Hopson, Lieutenant of the Tower, that she had contracted Marriage without her Knowlege: And after fhe had recommended her Children, and her Husband's Difcharge, to the Queen's Mercy, fle took a quiet and peaceable Farewel of the World

The War at this time breaking out afresh in France, between the Princes of the Blood and the Guises, both sides (as I have observ'd) making Pretence of Religion, to serve their Cause and strengthen their Party; Queen Elizabeth began to entertain some Fears, less England should feel the Flames of the Neighbouring War. For, the had been inform'd, that the Guifes, to gain Anthony of Bourbon King ot Now Tre, The to their Party, had made a private Offer to him G. of of the Kingdom of Navarre, and to procus for a rice him in Marriage the Queen of Seets, with the Englishers Kingdom of England, for her Portion: And all this by the Wealth of Spain, and the Authority of the Pope, who should dissolve the Mariage of Navarre, with his Wife, who was an Heretick; and depose Queen Elizabeth, for the very same Reason. Hereupon, she dispatched thither Sir Henry Sidney, a Person of approv'd Abilities and Sir Henry Reputation, to dive into the Bottom of this Business, and to persuade the Heads of each frames, Parry to an Accommodation. But Things were now gone too far to admit of any Remedy of that kind; wherefore Sidney returned out of France, and immediately fent to the Queen of And into cots, to adjourn the Interview which she had southend. defired with the Queen in England, till the en- Debit fuing Year, or till the Wars of France were at about the an End. The great Debate now was, whether intended it would be convenient that fuch an Interview Interview it would be convenient that tuch an Internal between thould pass between the Two Queens; and the two whereas Queens.

1 ju2.

whereas the Queen of Scots was the first that de-1562. fired it, there was a fair Probability that she did Ann. 5. it to ferve her own Ends, and to nick the Jun-Eture ; that so she might either strengthen her Title to the Crown of England, or the Hopes at leaft, and Expectations of the Catholicks in England, and her Kinsmen, the Guises, in France, Others, on the contrary, were of opinion, that fuch a Conference might prove the Occasion of a happier and better Correspondence: That it might tend to break, by degrees, the Confederacy between the French and the Scots, and to win over the Queen of Scots to the Reform'd Religion. Others again observ'd, that such Interviews do generally lay the Foundation rather of Emulation than Friendship: That one side is always apt to envy the Wealth and Grandeur of the other: That Appearance does not always anfwer Report, as to the Point of Beauty and bodily Proportion, Wit, and other Qualities of the Mind; and on Confequence, that Faults will be found, on one fide or t'other. Neither did the Queen Elizabeth, with whom she had disputed her Claim to the Kingdom: And her Thoughts has for e icruples, were yet undetermin'd which fide to choose, when the heard, that Queen Elizabeth appear'd when the heard, that Queen Elizabeth appear openly for the Protestants of France; whillt she considered, (as she wrote herself) That on her Father's fide she was descended from England, and on her Mother's, from France: That in France she had been a crown of Queen, and was now a Queen Dowager, and Heir Expectant of the Crown of England: That she would much to her Uncles in France, who had been the the world much to be Uncles in France, who had been the world much to be used to the like with the she had. brought her up; and was as desirous likewise of standing fair in the Thoughts of her Sister 2. Elizabeth. Nevertheless, she was atraid, (so penetrating a Sense had she) that by engaging in a firmer Friendship with the Queen of England, she should lessen the Favour of the French King, be forsaken by the Guises, her Uncles, and lose her Portion, which was paid out of France; and all for preferring the precarious Favour of Q. Elizabeth, nal at best, before the steadier Friendship of her Allies the French. Hereupon, the Conference, which had fluck fo many Months on hand, after feveral Articles likewife proposed, came at last to nothing: Especially when the Queen of Scots refused any Interview, unless the Parlia-Interview, ment would declare her Heir Apparent to the unless on Crown of England, or Queen Elizabeth adopt her for her Heir, in order to establish a lasting Terms. Union between the Two Kingdoms, which had been fo often defir'd. If these Concessions were made, the faithfully promis'd the ftricteft Adherence to Queen Elizabeth's Service, without any Regard to the Refentments thereat of her Uncles the Guifes. She also hinted in her Letters, that fhe was the more earnest in these Particu> ligion, tho' she had given a Toleration for that of the Protestants, in Scotland.

But the Cardinal of Lorain using at the same time his utmost Persuations with the Emperour Fordinand, to get his Son the Archduke Charles, in Marriage, for the Queen of Scots, who was then a Suitor to Queen Elizabeth: The latter fent her word by Sir Thomas Randolph, that if the liften'd to the Cardinal, the great Enemy of the lars, because she was inform'd, there were some very bufie in fetting up another Pretender; and for no better Reason, than the Protection of Re-which, to use her own Expression, is but perso-

English Nation, as to any thing relating to that Match, twould prove the ready way to diffolve the good Agreement between England and Scothand; if not to exclude her from any Hopes of fucceeding to the Crown of England; which that she might not come short of, she warn'd her as a Friend, to make choice of fucl a Huf-band, out of the English Nation, as might be both 1562. acceptable to her, and lay the Foundation of a Ann. 5. farm Peace between the two Kingdoms at the farme time, and fecure her Succeffion to the Crown, which could never be declar'd till her choice were publickly known as to this mat-

Tho' fo many Cares together were enough to keep Queen Elizabeth's Mind in suspense, yet the had her Eye and Thoughts chiefly upon the Wars of France, that they might not from Normandy be translated to England. To avoid which, after serious and close Deliberation, she took under Protection the French King's Subjects in Normandy, who craved her Affiltance, and made a certain Contract with the Prince of Conde, Roban, Coligni, and others, 'That she would pay them Q Elizan Hundred thousand Angels; I had no wood entersual feel them over into France 6000 Men, whereof Leavue 3000 to be employed in the Defence of Diep and with the Roan; and that they should deliver up to her as French from the state of the st

a Cautionary-Town, Franciscopelis, a Town flants.
built by King Francis I. at the Mouth of the Seine, call'd by the English New-Haven, and by the French, Haure de Grace; which Town Three thousand English Soldiers should hold and defend 'in the French King's Name, till Calais should be restored. The very same Day that this Agreement was made, she publish'd a Manifesto, de-claring her defign herein, viz. 'That she sent an And pub-Army into Normandy, not to reduce that Coun-liftes ' try, tho' it had been the ancient Inheritance of Reasons. of the Kings of England, and wrested from them by force, without the least presence of Claim; but to preserve it indeed for the French King, being yet a Minor, and to rescue it from the Tyranny of the Guises, who had begun already to practice the utmost Barbarities upon those of the Reformation, to endeavour to defraud her of her Right and Title to Calais, and at last to feize on the Coasts of Normandy, from whence they might be ready on all occu-' fions to Invade England which lay fo near them, that they thought it in their Hands already. So that the could do no less than prevent their Defigns, unless she would have it thought that ' fhe intended to leave her Brother and Allie, the ' young King and his oppressed Subjects, in the ' lurch ; enviously oppose the Peace of Christendom, and (what was the greatest thing of all) unless she would appear the Betrayer of her own Religion, Peace and Security. whereas Paul Foix, the French Embaffador in England, much importun'd her that the Vidame of Chartres, Hayes, and others, who had fubscrib'd the Compact, might be given up to the King as Traytois to their Country, according to the Treaty of the Castle of Cambray; she excus'd it of War. In September one part of the English Army ar- And fords rived at New-Haven, under the Conduct of their Forces in-Commander Sir Adrian Poinings, and was receiv'd to France. by the Inhabitants with great demonstrations of Joy, as was likewife the other at Diep. Earl of Warwick, General of the whole Army, came fomewhat later to New-Haven, having been twice driven back into England by foul Weather. They made fome little Excursions into the Country thereabouts. To prevent which, the Rhinegrave came and encamp'd near them. lefs, feveral flight Skirmifhes pats'd between the French and English; and the Seamen belonging to the Fleet foour'd the Seas in the mean time.

by Letters to his Majesty, and exempted them She exfrom all Blame, laying it on the turbulent Spirit cufes the of the Guifes, who had engag'd his Father, and French Brother, and Himself, on this tempestuous Scene and brought many rich Prizes, feizing every

Cardinal makes Propofals of Marriage to Who is deter'd by () E. 17.

Ann. 5. abouts.

This Year John Vere, the fixteenth Earl of Ox-The death ford of that Honourable Line, paid his laft Debt fath of the East of to Nature; who by his first Wife, Daughter of Oxford. Ralph Nevill, Earl of Westmerland, had Katharine, afterwards Wife to the Lord Windson; by his feather was the Manage Colling by had Fehrand Fath. cond Wife, Margaret Golding, he had Edward Earl of Oxford, (who was in a fair way to spend his Estate) and Mary, afterwards married to Peregrine Berty Lord Willoughby. And now came Shan-Oneal out of Ireland to himfelf.

Shan-

He de-

fends.

Oneal perform the Promise he had made a Year ago, comesinto with a Guard of Gallo Glasses arm'd with Hatchets, England. all bare-headed, their Hair flowing in Locks upon their Shoulders, on which were yellow Sur-plices dyed with Saffron, or stain'd with Urine, with long Sleeves, fhort Coats, and Thrum-Jackets, which caus'd as much ftaring and gaping among the English People, as if they had come from China or America. He was received with great Kindnefs, when howling and falling down at the Queen's Feet, he own'd his Crime, and the control of the China of the and receiv'd her Majesty's Pardon. Being ask'd on what Pretence he had Excluded Hugh, his Brother Matthew's Son, from the Estate of his Ancestors, he sternly replyd, (as he had done in Ireland) 'That there was good Reason for'r, 'because himself, who was the lawful and un-'doubted Heir of Con, as being born of his law-ful Wife, was now invested in his Father's Eflate, whereas Matthew was the Son of a Blackfmith at Dandalk, and born after his Marriage with his Wife, one Alifon, but artificially Fa-ther'd upon Con, by his Mother, on purpose to rob him of the Honour and Patrimony of the O-neals; which tho' he had patiently fuffer'd, yet none of the fame Family would ever do it. That the furrender made by his Father to Hemy VIII. and the fecond grant of it from the King to him by his Letters-Pa-tents, did fignify just nothing, forafmuch as Con had no Effate he could make over beyond his own Life; nor could he furrender it, but by the confent of the Nobility and People who 'had conferr'd on him the Honour of O-neal. That fuch Letters-Patents were moreover infige nificant, unless there was a certain Heir of the Family acknowledg'd by twelve Men, which in this case was never done. For his part, the Laws of God and Man had made him the undoubted Heir, as being his Father's eldeft Son, born in lawful Wedlock, and entitul'd O-neal

by the joint confent of the Peers and Commons, according to the Law of that Country, seall'd Tanistry, by which a Man grown is to be preferr'd before a Child, and the Uncle before the Nephew, whose Grandfather outlives his Father. Nor did he usurp any Authority over the Nobility of Ulfter, but what his Ancestors " before him had legally exercis'd, as he was able to make very good Proof of. The Queen feem-

ing very well contented with this Account, difmis'd him with Honour; and in return he did her, for fome time, very good and faithful Service against the Hebridian Raparees,

The Sixth Year of her Reign.

In January the Parliament met at Westminster and made feveral good Laws for the Relief of the Poor, the Ordering of the Navy, the Support and Improvement of Tillage, belides others for Punishing Vagabonds, Forgers of Evidences, Conjurers and Fortune-tellers, and fuch as should commit Sodomy or Perjury; one there was likewise for Translating the Bible into the Welch

Queen's Majesty and the Realm, and avoiding those Inconveniences and Abuses for the future which had arofe from the ufurp'd Authority of the See of Rome. And the better to curb the Sawciness of those that maintain'd the same, twas made High-Treason for any Thrice to asfert by Writing, Word or Deed, the Authority of any foreign Prince, Prelate or State, in Spiritual Matters, in England, or any other of the Queen's Dominions; or to refuse the Outh of Supremacy to the Queen in matters Spiritual, or over Persons Ecclesiastical, after it had been twice tender'd; yet so, as that they so I not fall under an Attainder, nor forfeit Goods and Chattels; nor that this Oath. libe exacted from any Peer of the Realm, or any Perfon of eminent Quality, (whose Allegiance the Queen did not in the least question) nor indeed of any, but fuch who were, had been, or should be in Holy Orders, or did then bear, had born, or should bear some Ecclesiastical Office; or that, after warning given, should refuse to ob-ferve the Rites and Ceremonics of the Church of England; or should dishonour the same in Publick, whether by Word or Deed; or should celebrate or hear Mass, &c. as may be seen in the Statute. The Parliament moreover, as a Congratulatory Compliment upon the happy turn of Affairs, granted the Queen feveral Subfidies, viz. the Clergy one, and the Laity another, befides Subfidies two Fifteenths and Tenths, in confideration of granted to her having reform'd the Faith, reftor'd Peace to the oneen, her Kingdoms, rescu'd England and Scotland from and wny. her Kingdoms, referred England and September 110 in the Common Enemy, refind the Coin, rebuilt the Navy, provided Ammunition for Sea and Land, and, in a word, for the extraordinary Care file used in France for the Security of its young King, the Sasety of the Kingdom of England and the compinion of Calair. A Fifteenth and land, and the regaining of Calais. A Fifteenth and a Tenth (to take some notice of it for the sake of reenth and Strangers) is a certain Tax on every City, Burrough a Tenth, and Town, not upon every Man in particular, but a general Sum, in proportion to the Fifteenth part of the Wealth of the respective Places. A Substy we call that Subsidy, which is imposed on every fingle Person, as they are As-what.

[esid by Poll, according to the Volue of their Goods and Lands But neither is the one or the other Tax ever laid but by Act of Parliament. In the mean while the Prince of Condé, in his expeditious Journey to the English Auxiliary Troops in The P. of Normandy, was flopt in that remarkable Battel Conde and at Dreux, and taken Prisoner by the Duke of Threck-Guise, and with him and several more, Sir Ni- morton tacholas Throckmorton, who was in the Engagement, ken Frifa-and had before voluntarily furrender'd himfelf to ners. the Protestants, on purpose to communicate some private Advices to them. But in a little time he receiv'd his Liberty, and paid the Sum agreed upon to Coligny, who with the Auxiliary Forces marched to the Castle of Caen, which he prefently Besieged, and by their assistance spent less time in obliging Caen, Baieux, Falaife and St. Lo, to a Surrender.

Tongue, and another for the Prefervation of the Whilft these things were acting in France, Q. Eist. Queen Elizabeth fignify'd to the King of Spain, informs by Chaloner, Her Embassador there, 'That she the Spain, had fent over an Army into France to prevent mand of the Guifes (who were grown Infolent, and aim'd fent fine at her Ruin) from Transplanting the War into France. England, and to take Pollession of New-Haven, 'which had been deliver'd up to her till she re-'which had been deriver u up to he in the letceived Satisfaction for Calais. His answer was,

That if Calais was the whole of her Demand, he freely His ancomply'd with her: But if it was made a Religious wer.
War, he must, for his part, abide by the Oldest Religion. As for the Guiles, he could not but think them to Meah and Inconditionable for the most Petenh Queen too Weak and Inconfiderable for the most Potent Queen

Ann. 6

A Parliament called, and good Laws fram'd.

1563.

of England to fear, especially since they had no Interest 1563. or Alliance with the French at all, as formerly they
Ann. 6. had. The Bishop of Aquila likewise, the Spanish Embossidador then in England, frequently told the Queen, that the King, his Mosser, neither could nor result defer his Brother the King of France on the prefent Jundure. To whom the Queen made no other Reply, than that of an old English Proverb: Every Man must secure his own House, and I mine. Nor was the King of Spain infentible that the Queen, at the very fame time, was very importunate with the Protestant Princes of Germany, by Henry Knolls and Christopher Monts, for the Re-lief of Condé, and the Support of the common Interest of the Church; which the Spaniard being much offended at, fought what Occasions he could against her on the score of Religion likewise.

Hostages endeavour to efcape.

Mean while the French Hoftages, who were for Calais fent into England for Five hundred thousand Crowns for the reftoring of Calais, feeing things look fullenly and as if they would end in War, attempted to escape out of the Kingdom: But just as they were ready to take Shipping, they were brought back again, with John Ribbald the famous Pilot, who came privately into England to Convoy them away. There was a Peace agreed on in the mean time between the King of France and the Prince of Condé, (who pleas'd himself with the hopes of being Lieutenant-General of the Kingdom, and Husband to the () neen of Scots) as likewise the Protestants, without any regard to the Queen of England. And they declard unanimously, that unless the Eng-1/h would depart from Nov-Haven, the Agreement for refloring Calais, included in the Treaty at Cambray, should be null and void. And there was a Proclamation fent our, giving liberty to all Fenchmen to Affault, Seize and Plunder any Englishmen, as long as they held possession of New-Haven The same liberty did the Queen grant, by way of Reprifal, to the English, That bey should treat all the French, but what dwelt in London, as Enemies, fo long as they remain'd Mi-War Pro feers of Calais. Hereupon the English put to Sea was forced to excuse their Piracies, on the Spa-was forced to excuse their Piracies, on the Spa-tandon with an incredible large Fleet, and Block'd up both the French and Spaniard; fo that the Queen was forced to excuse their Piracies, on the Spaniards, by a special Embassador, and to restrain those Intolencies herein by a Proclamation.

The Fr. fent out of Nem-

Haren.

The French

Prote-

Stants de. fert the English.

> when he faw the French fo unsteady to their Duand, on the flightest Rumours of a Peace. caballing both among themselves and with the Rhinegrave (who lay with a Body of Forces in the adjoining Country) to betray the Town and disposless the English, he remov'd out of it all the French Protestants as well as Papists, and feiz'd on their Ships. This the French cook very heinously, complaining that the English design d not to much the Protection of the diffress d French as the bare Possession of the Place; and charg'd them as being injurious to Strangers. Certain it is, that nothing did so much alienate the Minds of the Normans, Aquitanes and Poictons formerly, and the Hearts of others who were under the English Jurisdiction in France, than that they were thought and treated as Foreigners. And now do the French begin to make all possible Preparations for a Seige; and at the same time the King and Condé make as preffing Motions, by Briquemot and d'Alvy, in England, for the re-delivery Haven. Neither did the Queen refuse it on these Terms, That the King of Spain Bould become Guarantee for the restoring of Catais within the time limited: That the Treaty of Cambray Bould be confirmed by the Onle of the Treaty of Cambray Bould be confirmed. by the Oaths of the King, the Queen-Mother, and the Princes of the Blood, and approved in every Parliament of France, and some of the first Nobility to be deliver'd as Hostages.

The Earl of Warwick, Governor of New-Haven,

as Hefrages.

In the mean while, there was a very raging 40.6.

Sicknels in the Garrifon at New-Hoven; and of American the Recruits fent thither for their Relief, Two and a merican features. hundred perish'd by Shipwreck, with their Com- mong the mander Sir The. Finch Lt. and two Brothers of the English Lord Wentworth; through which Misfortune, Soldiera when they almost despair d of keeping the Town, when they amnot depan of a keeping refer fown, is Thomas Smith, Embaffildor in ordinary in Frame, was ordered to propose the restoring of that Town in lieu of Calain, and that the Business flould be determined by the Umpirage of the King of Spain, who had married the French The Victor of the Particular and all their of the Calain of the King's Sifter. But this they rejected, alledging, Proposal that the King of France own'd no Superior, nor rejected would he refer his Concerns to the Arbitriment of any Prince whatever; and Sir Nieholas Throck-Violence morton, was by them roughly Treated, who was offerd to commission'd to inspect these Matters, on suspinguishment of the matters. cion that he being dexterous enough in raising morton, popular Tumults, was return'd for that purpose, and they charg'd him with coming into France without a Pafs, whereas he had Credential Letters, and others also from the French Embassador in England; nor would they so much as allow him an Hearing, affuring themselves, it feems, of the furrender of New-Haven, upon the account of the Sickness which was so violent there. The Constable Montmorency, with the chief of the Nobility, arriv'd there about this time, and Condé came foon after with the chief of the Protestants. The English, who could not but wonder for what reason the Minds of the French Protestants were fo fuddenly chang'd, were inform'd by them, that since the Peace was concluded, their Religion, in which they differ'd from their Countrymen, was no longer concern'd, but the Safety of their Country, in the defence of which every one ought to join. Montmorency lent a Trumpet to Warwick to Summon him to a Surrender; who was fent back with Sir Hugh Paylet to affire him, that the English were pre-par'd to suffer the last Extremities before they would yield up the Town without the Queen's Would yield up the Lown without the Science Orders. So the Works being finished, and the Batteries having play'd for feveral Days, some New-Ha-Breaches were made, the Conduits stopt, and we've-the West Advance out of the Direct which lay freed. the Water drawn out of the Ditch, which lay higher than the Sea. The French push on the Siege with Vigour, and the English give them as brave a Repulfe, but yet there perished more Souls by the Sickness than by the Sword.

fhe might no longer expose her bravest Men to the Fury of two Enemies, the Sickness and the Sword, she set out a Proclamation, wherein she commended the Valour of her Commanders and Soldiers, and gave orders to Warwick to Capitulate upon Honourable Terms. He immediately fent Pawlet, Sir Maurice Dennis, Treasurer of the And sura Garrison, Horsey and Pellbam to Montmorency, to renderd. agree upon Articles of Surrender. And foon after thefe were agreed on : That the Town, with all the Ammunition, Shipping and Furniture, which belong'd to the French King and his Subjects, should be surrender d: That the larger Tower should forthmith be deliver d up to Montmorency: That the Prisoners taken on both sides should be exchanged without Ransom; and, That the English should have free liberty to depart in fix Days, if the Wind ferv'd, with all things that belong'd to the Queen and them. The Hostages deliver d were Sir Oliver Manours, the Earl of Rutland's Brother, Leighton, Pelham and Horsey. The last that staid was Colonel Edward Randolph, who out of a Piety never enough to be commended carry'd upon his Shoulders the tick and difeafed

Queen Elizabeth having Intelligence of this, express'd with Tears her Commiseration of the fad flate her People were reduc'd to; and that Soldiers into the Ships. Thus was New-Haven, 1563. after it had flood the Siege of a Sickness more Ann. 6. violent than the Enemies Fire, left at last to the French, after the English had been Masters of it eleven Months; during which time there were Men of fwept away by the Plague, Someofet, John Zouch, badthre. Alberick Darcy, Drucy, Entwellel, Ormelly, Vagban, Croker, Cocklen, Provad, Saul, Kimis, all thou Commanders. There were flain likewise the two Tremaines, Brothers, Sanders, Bromfield the Ma-fter-Gunner, Robinson Bailist of the Town, Strangeavays an expert Seaman, and Goodall an excellent Miner.

Publick

for this in

The French King was very bountiful of his Rejoicing To Deum's for the recovery of this Town; the Papifts all over the Kingdom were mightily exalted, and made their boatts, That the English were thrust our of France by the some Protestants that invited them thither; and that this would prove the ground of a listing Dissenting between these Parties. D'Hospital, the Chancellor, made a fine Harangue to Congratulate the French on this Occasion, and to drefs up the matter, he reported on a falle Heatfay, That the English Fleet appeard with fresh Recruits before the Town the next Day after 'twas surrender'd: And he went to far as to declare, that the English had by this War quitted entirely all Claim and Pretentions to Calais. The Soldiers that were brought back to England fick of the Infection, fcarter'd the bad Influence thereof fo Plague at unhappily, that it feiz'd on the whole Kingdom in a miferable manner; and there were carry'd out of the City of London alone, which confifts of an hundred and twenty one Parishes, 21530

The Duke of Guise, Uncle to the Queen of Scots, being flain in the heat of the Civil War in France, her Dowly-Money, which used to be paid out of France, was stopt, Hamilton Duke of Castle-Herault turn d out of his Dukedom, and the Scots excluded from being of the Lifeguard to the French King; and this the Queen highly referred. The Cardinal of Lorgin, another of her Uncles, being apprehentive that this might provoke her other Match do to defert the French and court an English Interest, the Q. of once more fet on foot, by the Agency of Crock, a Match with Charles of Austria, and tender'd the County of Tyrol in Jointure. She imparts the matter to Queen Elizabeth, who by Randolph repeated the fame Advice the had given her before in relation to this Point: And farther, she recommended to her in plain terms Robert Dudley, (whose Wife, one Robsert's Heiress, died of a fall from fome high place) and engag'd farther, That if she would marry him, she should be declard by Act of Parliament, her Sister, Daughter, or Heir to the Crown, in case she herself died without Issue. As soon as the Queen-Mother, and her Uncles in France, had learnt this from Foix, the French Embaffador in England, they look'd on this Proposal with so much Contempt, and thought it so gross a Difparagement to her Royal Blood and Character, that they promis'd her not only the payment of her Jointure, but to fettle the Scots in the Poffeffions of their ancient Liberty, and to grant them new Privileges also, if she would adhere firmly to the French Interests, and have nothing to fay to that Motion. They moreover suggested to her, That Queen Elizabeth could never be in earnest when she made this Proposal, but under a disguife, as if the had a mind to Dudley herfelf. Nei-ther was there any trufting to Alls of Parliament; for in England, what one decreed another repeal d: Besides, twas the great aim of all the Politicks of England to keep her by all possible Arts from marrying at having her Thoughts mightily taken up with her ~ Affairs at Home, which now lay in great Con- 1503. fusion and Disorder; for Murray imprison d the Archbishop of St. zindren's for continuing to fay Mass; nor was he discharged from his Imprisonment, and Pardon'd, without much submission and entreaty. The warmer Party of Churchmen did also thro' Murray's Authority, outrage a certain Prieft that faid Mass at Court, (which the Laws allow'd) and yet came off with Impunity. Neither was flie able to suppress those who were up in Arms, the' fhe took all imaginable care of the Publick Welfare, by granting a general Annesty, The Scott augmenting the Judges Salaries, enacting whole-infult over fom Laws, punishing Adultery with Death, and then Q. often hearing Caules herfelf in Court, that she might carry things even with Perfons of every Rank or Degree.

> The Queen of Scots came not to any Refolution herein, but referr'd herfelf to a Conference,

In this Year of Troubles, to the great Grief of the Proreffants, died William I ord Grey of Wil- The death ton, Governor of Berwick, a Perfon who had of the gain'd a confiderable Reputation in the Wars, L. Greyand loft a great part of his Estate by the payment of a heavy Ranfom, when he was taken Prisoner in France. To whom succeeded, as Governor of Berwick, Francis Earl of Bedford. About this time ded also Alvares a Quadra, to the as and the great mortification of the Papifts. He had been Bifliop of Embaffador from Spain to England, and had fed Apails. his Countrymen with hopes of restoring the Roman Catholick Religion in Engl.nd; and was a mighty Intimate with the Peols, whom I have mention'd before. This made him look'd on with a jealous Eye, as one that aim'd at the Di-flurbance of the Publick Tranquility, and the Breach of Correspondence between the Queen and the Spaniard. Upon which the Queen moved the King of Spain to recal him home. But he excus'd it under the varuish of Religion, and wrote back to the Queen, That Princes were in a miferable case, if their Ministers must be called home upon every petty Disgust; nor did he a little resent to have his Embaffador confin'd to his own House, The Spawithout his knowledge or Confent, and fland the neard Test of publick Examinations and Reproofs; provoked and all for no other reason, than that he had against the given shelter to an Halian that sled thisher how. given shelter to an Italian that fled thither, having difcharg'd a Pittol at another, and afterwards fecretly carry'd him off.

From this time the Spaniard was more enrag'd against the English, making use of this pretence, That the English Pirates were very troublesome to the French upon the Coasts of Spain, and defign d to annoy the West-Indies. And twas not long before this glowing Rage broke out into a flame, the King of Spain fending Richard Shelly, who left England for his Religion, and was therefore a most implacable Enemy to his Prince, on an Honourable Embaffy to Maximilian the elected King of the Romans, to Congratulate him upon his Nomination: And moreover, he feiz'd on fome English Merchantmen in the Ports of Batica, (now call'd zindaluzia) because the English had, in giving chace to the French, taken some Ships from the Spaniards.

This Year likewife did William Lord Paget de- The death part this Life, a Person pretty Ancient, and of the whose good Qualities had advanc'd him to high L. Pager. Characters of Honour. For fo great was the merit of his Learning and fine Parts, that King Henry VIII. made him his Secretary, fent him Ambaffador to Charles the Emperor, and to Francis I. King of France; and nominated him as one who had of the Lords-Justices of the Kingdon during his been hos Son's Minority. King Edward VI. made him nourd with the Chancellor of the Dutchy of Lancafter, and Comptroller of his Houshold, rais'd him to the Ho-Charanour of a Baron, and made him Knight of the tters. Vol. II. Eee

A Propo-

The French diffinade her.

Garter, (which notwithstanding Dudley Duke of] 1563. Northumberland diffeonourably thript him of, and Ann. 6. Queen Mary as honourably reftor'd, as due to the Character of one who had deferv'd fo well at the Hands of the Government) and at last made him Lord Privy-Seal, which is the fourth Place or Degree of Temporal Honour. (For K. Henry VIII. had, by Act of Parliament, confign'd the first Place to the Lord-Chancellor, the second to the Lord-Treasurer, the third to the Prefident of his Majesty's Council, and the fourth to the Lord Privy-Seal; who were like-wife to take place of all Dukes, except those of the Royal Blood). Queen Elizabeth, by reason of his great Age, which rendred him untit for the Publick Service, eas'd him of that Care, at his own request, and retain'd an Affection and Value for him, the be was a frict Zealet of the Romish Church. He left three Sons, Henry and Thomas, who fucceeded one another in the Title, and Charles, whom I shall have frequent occasion to speak of. He marry'd likewise several Daughters into noble Families.

The death

And the fame Debt was paid to Nature by of Ruthard Manours, or de Maneriis, Earl of Ruthard, being Son to Themas the first Earl of this Family, and Nephew of George Lord Ross, by the Daughter of Thomas St. Leiger and Ann his Wife, (who being Sitter to Edmand IV. brought a great accession of Honour to this Family) and Great Grandson to Robert, who having marry'd the Daughter and Heir of the ancient Lord Ross, brought into his Family both a Barony and a most plentiful Estate. This Henry had by Margaret Nevil, Daughter of Ralph Earl of Westmorland, two Sons, Edward and John, both successively Earls of Rusland; besides a Daughter, marry'd to William Courtney of Powderham.

and of the

The same Year did Frances Dutchess of Suffolk end a miserable Life, being Daughter to Charles of Suffolk Brandon Duke of Suffolk, by Mary second Sister to Henry VIII. and Queen-Dowager of France, after the had feen her Daughter, the Lady Jane, Proclaim'd Queen of England, and not long after Beheaded, and her Husband undergo the fame Fate in fome little time. The Lady Katharine, her fecond Daughter, she liv'd to see marry'd to the Earl of Pembrook's Son, divorc'd from him, and confin'd to the Tower. And the Lady Mary, her third Daughter, thrown away, by an un-equal Match, upon Keyes the Groom-Porter at Court: And herfelf, lait of all, fo far forgetting the Greatness of her Descent, as to accept for an Husband Adrian Stokes, a Gentleman, but in mean Circumftances; which how much foever it might tend to her Difhonour, yet fle feem'd to do it for her own Security,

The Seventh Year of ber Reign.

Now did France begin to triumph, having once more Peace within her Borders; which indeed was in a great measure owing to Queen Elizabeth: For they were the more forward to agree among themselves, that they might stop the Torrent of the English Bravery, which what Havock it had made in former Times, when, upon a private Quarrel, they were called thither by the Duke of Furgundy, they could not eafily forget. When by this means the heat of the War betwixt England and France was rather smoother'd for a time, than any lafting Peace concluded, the Queen, having been ungratefully Treated by the Proteflants of France, refolv'd no longer to hazard her own Safety to fecure other Men's, and Peace bebegan to entertain cool and ferious Thoughts as to a Peace. This she Negotiated by Sir Thomas and Engl. Smith, a Person of excellent Sense and Conduct; | ferment the Spirits of the Clothiers in England, and the French agreed thereto. Threckmorton, who then liv'd in France, a kind of Pritoner at large, 1504. was join'd with him in the fame Commission. France submitted the matter to the Management of Morviller, Bishop of Orleans, and Jaques Burden, Secretary; who in April subscribed to these Articles at Troyes in Champaign. That neither Party The Ar-Should Invade the other: That the Alts of private Men ticles. Jounta invende the other: Dot the Acts of private Men Jountal bind beenfelves only: That there flowed be a Free Trade on both fides: That Rebels and Traytors flowed not be flester at: That no Letters of Reprifel flowed be granted: That all Hoffillities flowed be forgots: That we refervation of Rights and Tules of all Actions, Claims and Domes, Scilia. and Demands, which they have or pretend to have the one against the other respectively, shall remain to thus soften and entire; and That Defences and Exceptions shall likewise be reserved. The next Day these Articles were agreed on apart, viz. That a certain Sum of Money should be repaid to Queen Elizabeth at fet Times: That the Histages should be deliver'd and return'd from England, upon payment of Six hundred and twenty thousand Crowns; and, That after the Treaty was fettled, Throckmorton fould be at Liberty to return to England. The French express d their Joy at the Conclusion of this Peace, by publick Bonfires, as is usual on such Occasions. The Queen of England swore to the Treaty in presence of Gonor and Foix; and some time after the French King did the fame in presence of the Lord Hunsdon, who at the same time invested his The Fr.K. Majesty with the Order of the Garter, a Robe created of Honour, and a Collar of Rofes, having Ruisht of the Picture of St. George hanging at it, &c.

About this time arrived in England another D. Dege, Ambuffador, in the goon of the Biston of Acids D. Dege,

Ambassador, in the room of the Bishop of Aquila, Embassa who died fome Months before, viz Den Diego, der from Gu/man de Sylvas, Canon of Toledo; a Person of Spain a venerable Aspect and Gravity. In the interim, here. the English had met with very indifferent Usage in Spain, by the means of Roderico Gemes de Sylva, who bore them a Grudge, as being Pretistants. But the Duke of Alva found a Temper to qualify this; whether in respect to the English, as he The English pretended, or in spite to Gomez, is hard to fay. Int ill Nor had the English better Treatment in the Span used in mish Netherlands. Cardinal Granvill attempted Span and (on the score of Religion too) to foment a Dif- the Neference between the English and the Netberlanders, therlands. who had maintain'd an happy Union and Commerce hitherto. For he it was that made the Natherlanders complain, by Affonvile, of the Imposition of unreasonable Customs on their Wares in England, (which notwithstanding was done in The Ne. the Reign of Fbilip and Mary) and likewife of the Prohibition, by Act of Parliament, of many of their Manufactures. The English complained, plain of on the other hand, that their Goods were feiz d Guerances in the Netherlands on very flight Pretences, by on both virtue of some new Orders which forbad the Exportation of fome Goods: That Paffage was denied through the Netherlands for Horfes, Saltpeter and Gunpowder, out of Italy and Germany: That burdenfom and unheard of Imposts were strictly demanded for Provisions, Anchorages, Horses, &c. And all this contrary to the Treaty of Commerce concluded heretofore, call d, The Grand Treaty. Mean while the Dutchess of Parma, Governess English of the Low-Countries, Prohibits the Importation Commo-of fuch Wares and Manufactures into England dite profrom the Low-Countries, as were forbidden in hibited in England; and not long after forbids the bringing the Neof English Cloth into the Netherlands; using it for a Pretence, that the Piague very lately ragd in England to an high and dangerous degree. But, in truth, the Cardinal Granvill's Policy was ac the bottom of all, which aim'd at putting into a

m. 7.

English and the Nesher-

Gu∫man.

The

Nether-

bridge.

and many more that had an immediate Depen-1564. dance on them, when they perceiv'd their Cloth was not Exported, befides that the Cloth-Manuthe Eng. Detriment of the English. At this the English were so nettled that they bear took facture might be fet up in the Netherlands to the heir Mi- colour of fearing the Spanish Inquisition lately usactory brought into the Netherlands, and the prospect t Emden. they had of future Diffurbances there, to fettle the Manufactory for the Wares of England at Emden upon the River Ems in Friefland. On the other hand, the Governess of the Netherlands Interdicts all Commerce between the Netberlanders and the English at Emden, or elsewhere, or to bring any Merchandizes bought of them into the Low-Countries, on pain of Forseiture.

These were Methods which Gusman thought too sharp to do either side any good: For he was a wife Man, and knew well enough how great gainers the Netherlands were by Trading with England. And sor the same reason it was that Lodowick Malanus Earl of Flanders, about the Year 1338, inveigled the English, by the Grant of some large Privileges, to settle the Staple of English Wool at Bruges in Flanders. For, ever fince that time, the Refort has been so general of People of all Nations into Flanders, to buy off the Eng-lish Cloth, and other English Commodities, that 'tis incredible what an Advance it has made of the Merchants and Retale-Trade, and as much it has improv'd the Fishery and Shipping of the Netherlands. Infomuch, that the English Wool has prov'd to them more than an imaginary Golden-Fleece; and from thence was deriv'd that famous Order of the Golden-Fleece, and the full Coffers of the Dukes of Burgundy. 'Tis most unquestionably certain, (and I have it from good Books of Accounts) that the Trade between the English and the Netherlands, hath amounted yearly to above twelve Millions of Ducats. Hence Open Iy to above twelve willions of Education Trade be- it was, that he wrought fo hard to make up the tween the matter, and so effectually, that the Trade which English had been stopt was put in Statu quo, and all Orders and Decrees on both fides to the contrary, landers from the first of January, in the first Year of restord by Queen Elizabeth, were suspended till farther Orders from Commissioners appointed on both sides. But the Year following, when some Proposals were started on this Head, by the Lord Viscount Montacute, Nicholas Wotton, and Walter Had-don Master of the Requests, Deputies for the English ; Montigni, Assonville and Joachim Agidius, Commissioners for the Netherlanders, the Trou-Troubles bles in the Netherlands put a ftop to the Conference, after it had been agreed, that thereshould be an open Trade till one Prince should delands put nounce War against the other; and the Merthe Treaty. chants in that case to have forty Days No-tice to dispose of Themselves and their Ef-

These things being so far settled abroad, the Queen took a Progress for Pleasure into the Country, and visited the University of Cambridge, vilitsCame one of the Eyes of the Kingdom; where, after a fplendid and courteous Reception, and the Entertainment of the Schools and the Stage, Plays and Disputations, she took a view of the Colleges, and acknowledg'd their Civilities in a Latin Oracion, commending the plenty and variety of good Learning that abounded there, and re-commended the Study thereof as their first and greatest Care, with a Promise, that she would be always ready to Promote and Encourage

At her return, the created Robert Dudley, who was Mafter of the Horfe, and very much in her Favour, and whom the had mark'd out (as I hintted before) for an Husband to the Queen of Scots, lome Revenues thereto belonging; and the more effectually to recommend him to the Queen of Ann Scott's Favour, the next Day she made him Latt Robert of Leicester, a Title to be held by him and the Dudley Male-Heirs of his Body, lawfully begotten, for made ever. On which account, the had likewife ere i- ron of ted his eldest Brother Ambrile, Lord Life and Dubright Earl of Warwick. Dudley, after these Honours Leagues. were fo bountifully heap d upon him, to inguitiate himself with the Queen of Scots, whose Favour he was willing to purchase at any Rate, accus'd the Lord-Keeper Bacon to the Queen, as He accuses having interpos'd in the Business of the Succession L. Buson. to the prejudice of the Queen of Scots, and as heing privy to a Book, wherein Hales, whom I have had occasion to mention before, attempts, in case the Queen should die, to devolve the Crown, by a Lineal Descent, upon the House of Suffolk. Hereupon Hales was committed to the Tower: But Bacon (who denied the Charge) was, with much ado, reftor'd to the Queen's Fa-vout by Cecil, who in the Particular of the Succeffion ever declin'd to declare his Opinion, as he refolv'd always to do, unless the Queen demanded his Thoughts herein; of which there was little danger, fince the never heard any Difcourfe with to much uneatmets as that concerning her Succeffor. When on the other fide, those that had most Sense and good Estates were not concern'd for any thing more than this, for that the Differences in Eeligion had this Influence upon the Zealots of the Reformation, to make them think the Queen of Sour ought to be Excluded from the Succetsion upon a few nicer Punctilio's in Law, however clear and unquestionable her Title was in other respects. And among the Papists, the greatest Part, the cooler Heads at least of the Party, were of opinion her Pretentions were good, and ought to fland, being firm and according to Law: And others again were for fetting up Margaret, the Queen of Scots Aunt, and Wife to Matthew Stuart Earl of Lenox, and her Children, of whom they conceived mighty Hopes, as being English-Born. Thefe things the Queen of Scots was not alroge- The Q. of ther ignorant of; who, to prevent them what sees calls fhe could, fent for Matthew Earl of Lenax into Lenax Scotland, by Advice of her Aunt, the Countels of into Scot-Lenex, under pretence of restoring him to his an- land. cient Hereditary Estate, but in truth and reality, to advise with him in these Particulars. Who by his Wife's means obtain'd the Queen's Leave and Letters of Recommendation, when he had been Banished from his Country about twenty Years.

Baron of Denbeigh; and gave him the Place, and i

This Gentleman (to give fome light into the His Defmatter by going a little higher) was a branch of cent. the fame Family with the Stuarts, the Royal House of Scotland, and land Royal Blood in his Veins: For May, the Daughter of James II. Veins: For Mary, the Dangher of James H. King of Scots, bore to James Hamilton a Son, James I. Earl of Arran, of that Line, and a Daugh-ter Mary, Wife to Matthew Stuart Earl of Lenox, the first of this Christian Name. James Earl of Arran divorc'd his first Wife, and marry'd in her Life-time Jenetta of Betone, the Cardinal of Betone's Aunt, by whom he had James Duke of Castle-Herault, whom his Enemies hence would Arran's Sifter bore to Matthew, John Earl of Lenox, who being flain by the Hamiltons whill he was endeavouring the enlargement of James IV. left this Monthern Stuart, we are now speaking of, a Person in very high esteem with K. James V. for his Father's fake. But Matthew , after the King's death, and when 'twas visible that all pass'd through the Hands of the Hamiltons, with-Vol. II. Eee2 drew into France, from whence being fent back 1564. into Scotland by Henry the French King, to prevent Ann. 7. any Detriment to the Kingdom from Hamilton's Regency, he did his Country good Service. Neverthelefs, being a frank and open-temper'd Perfon, he fell into the Snare laid by the Cardinal of Betone and Hamilton; and in a little time lost the French King's Favour. And when 'twas come to that pass, that there was no staying at Home, nor returning to France, he came into England, and put himself under the Protection of Hen. VIII. who frankly receiv'd him as a Person whose Interest was considerable in the West of Scotland. And tho' the Hamiltons condemn'd him, and made fale of his Estate; yet King Henry acknowledg'd him next Heir to the Crown of Scotland, after Mary, then an Infant, and gave him Margaret Douglass, his Niece by his eldest Sitter, to Wise, with an Estate in England to the value of Seventeen hundred Marks per Annum: And this Agreement he made with him, That he fhould deliver into the King of England's Hands the Caftle of Panhvium, and the lile of Buth, with the Caftle of Ruthfay; which the' he resolutely

The Cauies why Lenox Home-

cence

undertook, yet the Success did not answer. This Matthew, Earl of Lenox, was now fent for Home, and his Banishment taken off by the Prules why dence and Forefight of the Queen of Scors; who was call'd restor'd him likewise to his Estate, as well to engage him againft any Attempts from James her base Brother, whom she had made Earl of Marray, as likewise to cut off all Pretensions to the Crown of England on the fide of Henry Lord Darley, the Son of this Matthew. For, should be, who was a young Person, of Royal Blood, born in England, and in great Favour with the English. happen to match into fome Powerful Family in England, fhe was afraid, that he, with fuch a fair Profpect before him, might be a Bar to her own Title to the Succession to the Crown of England; and the rather, because in most Men's Opinion he was look'd on as the Heir, immediately after her. Nor did she more earnestly defire any one thing, than that she might be so happy to devolve the two Kingdoms of England and Scotland on some Person of Scottish Extraction, who might entail the Succession thereof in the Name and Family of the Stuarts. This Queen Elizabeth got some notice of, and to prevent it, advertis'd the Queen of Scots, by Randolph, That that Marriage was fo far difapprov'd by all the English in general, that she had prorogu'd the Parliament contrary to the Advice of her Council, lest being at present disoblig'd, they should take this very Opportunity to promote some Act against her Title to the Succession. And that it might not hereafter come to this, and that fle might likewise give the greater Satisfaction to the English, she advis'd her to think of some new Match; and on this occasion, she once more press'd her to accept the Earl of Leicester, whom the had made an Earl on purpose to qualify him the better for her Favours.

Hereupon the Earl of Bedford, and Randolph 'A Confethe Earl of Murray and Lidington, were appointed Delegates to Treat about this Match at Berwick, Match be-The English Comin the Month of November. Iween the missioners promis'd a most inviolable Friendship, Queen of a confant Peace, and to fecure to her the Succeffion, provided she would accept this Offer: For on this condition Queen Elizabeth had prothe F of Leicester. mis'd to declare her by Act of Parliament her Adopted Daughter or Sifter, as foon as the Marriage was over. The Scottish Deputies maintain'd, on the other hand, that it fell much beneath the Character of a Princess, who had been Courted by Charles, the Emperor Ferdinand's Son, as well as by the French King, the Prince of Conde, and the Duke of Ferrara, to stoop so low as to Marry an Upstart Earl, and a Subject of England, 1564. with no other Settlement or Portion but that of Ann. 7 Expectation; nor was it much for the Queen of England's Honour to recommend fo mean an Alliance to a Princess and her Kinswoman: But the would give a very acceptable proof of regard for the Queen of Scots, would file permit her to make choice, by her own Inclination, of one who would be ready to make a Peace with Eng-Land, and make her a yearly Settlement, and would flee confirm her Title to the Succession by Act of Parliament.

It feem'd to be Queen Elizabeth's great aim, through the Management of this whole Affair, to fix the Succession to the two Crowns upon an English Bottom, tho' she went but slowly to work about it. The Queen of Scots, after two Years The Condelay, and when she had fix'd her Eye and good ference Inclinations upon the Lord Darly, suspected the proves in had been Trick'd, and that the true reason of effectual. Queen Elizabeth's propounding this Match, was to referve to herfelf the first Choice of all the reft, or at least to admit Leiegser's Addresses with more decency, after he had gain'd the consent and good-liking of a crown d Head. But the Scottish Commissioners being true to their Intereits, had refolv'd to break off any Match, no matter how, which they found likely to interfere with their Power over the Queen. Queen Elizabeth advis'd them to prevent her Marriage with Darly; and Leicester himself, in hopes of enjoying Queen Elizabeth, secretly advertis'd Bedford not to be too warm in the Business; and on the suppos'd ground of his entertaining these Hopes, he was thought to be an underhand Affistant to the Lord Darly's Pretentions.

The Eighth Year of her Reign.

1565.

The Lord Darly, in the mean time, at the im- The Lord portunate and humble Request of his Mother to Darb the Queen, got leave, tho with much Difficulty, to got into go into Scotland, and to make a flay of 8 Months, Soniand, under colour of enjoying a flare in his Father's Reftoration: And in that most sharp Winter, when the Thames was frozen over, he came to Edinborough in February. He was indeed a Gentleman whose Person might well become the Honour of a Crown, extreamly Handfone, and of a Temper as well mix'd as his outward Proportions. The Queen of The Q of Scots fell in love with him at the first fight; and Scots here the better to fmother the Flame, fhe was always him, and entertaining Randolph, the English Ambassador, with Discourses about a Match with Leicester. At the same time she was working at Rome to get a Dispensation; the Lord Darly and herself being fo near of Kin, that the Canon-Law demanded a Dispensation. Upon the discovery of all this, she sent Lidington to Queen Elizabeth to gain her confent for Confummating a Marriage with the Asks Lord Darly, and that the might not be debarr'd fo Q. Eliz. Natural a Privilege upon Hopes and Prospects consent. merely precarious.

Queen Elizabeth breaks the Business to the Sheadvi-Truftiest of her Privy-Council, who, through es with Murray's Insinuations, were easily led into the her Counbeliest, that the Queen of Scot's design in this ell Marriage, was to corroborate her Title to the Crown of England, to renew her old Claim, and to introduce Popery once more; and that she would not want fome Adherents on the score of the Succession's being hereby with more certainty fecured, fince there was a prospect of Heirs that would probably descend from this Match; and others also, out of the good Affection they bore to the old Superstition, inasmuch as to their own Knowledge, most of the Justices of the advice to the Q.

The

Council's

Methods nfed to Match

Darly.

Throck.

morton hinder

riage.

fent to the Mar-

with

Peace throughout England were Popishly affect-1565. ed. For the better prevention of these ill Effects, Ann. 8. they judg'd it adviseable, in the first place, to Address the Queen out of hand to marry some Person, and so secure and fix the Succession upon her own Iffue. (For the great fear was, that should the Queen of Scots Marry and have Iffue, the certainty of Succession would cast the Balance of the Peoples Affections on her fide). And then again, that this would be a means to encourage the Reform'd Religion, and keep down Popery: The one, by iome Abatements of things merely Indifferent to some war-mer Sticklers on the Protestant side; and the other, by committing fuch Popish Bishops to Custody afresh, as had been displaced, and were, in the Sickness time, dispers'd up and down the Countries, by empowering the Bishops to Exercise the Ecclesiastical Laws to their utmost extent against that Bug-bear, the Pramunire, which the Common-Law had thrown in their way, by fuppreffing Books fent by Harding and other Di vines (who had fled their Country) out of the Netherlands, by removing some Scottish Priests that were harbour'd in England; by depriving the English Fugitives of their Benefices, hitherto enjoyed by them; and by compelling the Judges (who were almost all of them Catholicks) to take an Oath of Supremacy. But in order to break off the Match with the Lord Darly, 'twas thought expedient to alarm Scotland, by railing of Soldiers in all the Parts adjacent thereto, and defeat the to put more Men into the Garrison of Berwick; that the Countess of Lenex, the Lord Darly's Mother, and her Son Charles, should be committed to Custody; that the Earl of Lenox and the Lord Darly, should be call'd back to England upon Pain of forfeiting their Chattels and Estates, before any Treaty were clap'd up with France and Spain; that the Scots who oppos'd the Marriage, should be Protected; and that the Lady Katharine Grey, with the Earl of Hertford, should now receive fome Countenance at Court, as being the only Persons the Queen of Scots seem'd to be jealous of as Co-rivals to her in the point of Succession. And this was look'd on as the most probable Expedient to put a stop to the Match. Hereupon Sir Nicholas Throckmorton was difpatch'd away to the Queen of Scots, to put her in mind, That what one could but once resolve on in one's whole Life, could never be too well consider d before-hand. That these who Mary's in hast, common-ly Repented at leisure, but chiefly indeed to push on the Business of a Match with my Lord Leicefter. That the defign'd Match with her Counn was directly against the Pope's Authority. 'twas Queen Elizabeth's great defire, that the Succession might reft in some Person whom she should choose of the English Blood, the' some again thought, that the Religion of both Kingdoms would fare better, should she die without doms would tare better; mould fine are without for of fiftie. She answer'd however, That Matters were Sears in more gone too far to be recalled, nor had Queen Elizabeth any reason to be dishblig'd, since by her Advice she had now made choice, not of a Foreigner, but an Englishman, and withal a Descendant of the Blood-Royal of bath Kingdoms, and the first Nobleman of all Britain. Lidington, who was all this while in Fuelnal, had everal times mention'd to Leicester. England, had several times mention'd to Leicester the Marriage with the Queen of Scots as no impracticable thing; as he also did to Norfolk, a Person who deserved better to be the Husband of a Queen: But he always wav'd it with a modest Refufal.

The Queen of England, to retard this Match Darly calwhich was now drawing to a Conclusion, calls home Lenox and the Lord Darly his Son, as her Subjects, according to the Tenour of the Licence granted by her; the Father modestly excufed himfelf by Letters; the Son humbly requests her Majesty not to oppose his Honour and 1565. Advancement, and reprefents it as probable, that he may by this means be capable of doing fome Their Service to England, his Native Country; and Excuse, makes a frank and generous Profession of his Efteem for the Queen of Scots, above all other Perfons whatever; who in Requital of it, foon after confer'd on him the Honor of Knighthood, and the Titles of Baron of Ardmanock, Earl of Roß, and Duke of Rothfay. And five Months after his Arrival in Scotland, the advanced him to Q of Scots her Royal Bed, by the Confent of most of the marries Nobility; and had him proclaimd King; But L. Darly, Marray, who had been all this white plotting to ferve his own ambitious Ends, and under the fine Cover of Religion, had drawn to his Party the Duke of Chaftel-Herault; was much offended at the Match: And others upon it broke out into an open Rebellion, making thefe Queries among themselves; Whether a apost might be lawfully made their King? Whether the Queen of Scotland was at liberty to make her own Choice? Whether the States of the Realm might not impose one merely by their own

Authority? The Queen of England, who was very well acquainted with the Modesty and good Temper Darly, and the fincere and honest Inclinations of his Father, was so far from being uneasie at Queen of the Matter, that she really pitied her Kinsman England bears it and the young Queen, who had to do with a with Mo boifterous kind of People, fo long exempt from detailion. the Discipline of Kingly Government, that they would now hardly bend their Necks to the Reyal Yoke. And the was now totally freed from all Jealousie or Apprehention on that side, when fine faw the Queen, her Rival, rather fink than advance in Power, by fo mean an Alliance, when she had likewise the Lord Darly's Mother in her own Hands, and forefaw that this would raife grear Commotions in Scotland, a Thing which very foon after happend: For, Some of fome of the Peers of Scotland, the chief of whom rebel.

were Murray and Hamilton, flighting the Match; the one, because 'twas carry'd on without the Queen of Fngland's Consent; the other, out of Envy to the House of Lenox; but both under a Religious Pretext; fet up their Standards in order to break it off: fo that the Queen was obliged to raife fome Forces, to folemnize her Wedding with the more Security. And fo briskly did the and her Husband profecute the Rebels, that they were driven into England, before the Succours promis d from thence could come to their Affiftance. The Queen of England gran- and find ted to Murray underhand a Retreat in her shelter in Kingdom, as being a Person well inclined to England.

the English; and fent him fecret Supplies of Money by the Earl of Bedford, till his Return into Scotland; which, as we than thew, happen'd to be the next day, after David Rizo was flain. The Causes of the Queen's harbouring Murray and the Scottish Rebels, in ngland, were these : Because the ueen of Scots had protected Taxley, Standon and Walfb, English Fugitives into Scotland and Oneal alfo, an Irishman; and had conspired with the Pope, against the inglish; and had not done Justice upon the Picates, de.

The Marriage of the Queen of Scots being now over, those who were for the real Advancement of the Protestant Interest, thought nothing could better or more effectually promote that End, than if Queen Flizabeth would be now pleas'd to think of marrying in earnest, and by that means defeat the Hopes the Queen of Scots might harbour, as to the Succession. And very important of scale of Succession and very important tuned to Maximilian II. make honourable Proposite of Succession and Succe Maximilian II. make honourable Proposals of a marry.

Lenoxand led home to EngAnn. 8. Emperor This cre-Quarrel between of Suffex and Leicester.

billador

flighted.

aulwer.

Q of Scals

Match with his Brother Charles, by Adam Smir-1565. cerite, his Ambaffador. About which time there inn. 8. arose (for what Reason, unless on the Score of this Marriage, is hard to ghefs at) very great Emperor Heats at Court, between the Earl of Suffex, who mend his was a Friend to the Match, and Leicefter, who Bother out of different Hopes and Views, privately oppos'd it: (So natural is it for Men advanced above their Pretentions, to entertain boundless and extravagant Hopes; tho' Suffex was highly to blame for upbraiding the other as an upitart Nobleman; who (as he nfed to fay by way of Reflexion) had but two Ancestors to boatt of, his Father and Grand-father; and both of them Traitors to their Country.) Hereupon the Court was divided into Parties and Factions; and the Earls, whenever they went abroad, carry'd great Retinues of Servants with Swords and Bucklers, with iron Pikes pointing out at the Bosses (according to the then Mode) as if they refolved to have a Trial of Skill for t. But after fome Days had pass'd, the Queen reconciled 'em, Which the or rather occasion'd em to imother their Resent-Q.com ments. As for the Fouds of the Nobility, and that common Motto [Divide & impera] 110w us'd as a Mock-Phrase, the Queen utterly con-demn'd them; as being of opinion, that the Force of Authority lay very much in the ready Inclinations of fuch as were to obey: However, the took fome kind of Delight, and made fome Use too, of the little Piques and Jealoufies which fometimes happen'd among her Women.

> In the mean time, she had not so far discarded from her Thoughts the Affairs of Scotland, but within a Month or two after the Confummation of the Marriage, she fent into Scotland, Tamworth, a Gentleman of her Privy-Chamber, to put the Queen of Scots in mind, not to break the Peace, and to expostulate with her the Business of her hasty Match, with a Native of England, and a Subject, without her Approbation; and to demand withal, the Return of Lenox and the Lord Darly, his Son, into England, according to the Tenour of the Treaty; as likewife, that Murray should be received into Favour. She having receiv'd private Notice of the Matter, gave the Ambaffador no Audience; but pronis'd, by Articles in writing, on the Word of a Prince, that neither the nor her Husband would attempt any thing prejudicial to the Queen of England, her lawful Heirs, or the Tranquillity of the Kingdom; either by harbouring Fugitives, making forein Treaties, or by any other means whatever; yea, that they should be ready to contract fuch an Alliance with the Queen and Kingdom of England, as might make for the Safety and Honor of both Nations: That they would make no Innovations in the Religion, Laws or Liberties of England, if ever the Crown should come to their Share: But all this on condition, the Queen would stand bound by the fame good Intentions, to Herfelf and Husband, and would, by Act of Parliament, establish the Succession in her Person and lawful Issue, and, in default thereof, in Margaret Counters of Lenox, her Husband's Mother, and her lawful Heirs. As for other Matters, she had acquainted the Queen with her Marriage with the Lord Darly, as foon as fhe had refolv'd to marry him, but that she had received no Answer: That she had answer'd her Majesty's Demands too, forafmuch as fhe had not accepted a Foreiner, but an English, and one of the highest Extraction, and the most worthy of her good Affections of any in all Britain. That it feem'd strange to her, she might not enjoy the Company of one, whom God and the Laws had made fo entirely her own, and be deny'd the Liberty of keeping Lenox at ? home, who was a Native Earl of Scotland. As 1565. for Murray, whom she had found her profes'd Ennemy, she earnestly requested her to leave her Ann. 8.Subjects at her own Disposal; since she pretended not to interpose, in the Cases of English Subjects. With this Answer Tamworth return'd, his Reception having been, in his Judgment, much beneath his Character; for being a forward and talkative Man, he had afpers'd the Queen of Scots with feveral reflecting Speeches, and re-fused to give her Husband the Title of King.

About this Time, there were fome lucky Emergencies, that tended much to the Honor of Queen Elizabeth: For the Fame and Opinion of her Vertue, had obliged Cecily, Sifter of Errick Cecily King of Swethland, and Wife of Christopher Marness of the Company of the Christopher Marness of the C quess of Baden, to undertake a Journey from the Baden farthest Parts of the North, through Germany, on comes to purpose to make her a Visit; tho at the same England, time she was big with Child. The Queen gave an honorable Entertainment both to her and her Husband, affign'd her a yearly Penfion, and flood God-mother to her Son, whom flue christned Edward-Fortunatus. And Donald Mus-carry Musearry More, an Irish Lord of Note, deliver'd a very surenders large Estate to the Queen, on his Knees; on his Estate purpose to receive it back from her, and hold it to the Q in Fee for himself, and the lawful Heirs of his Body; in default of which, he granted them to the Crown of England. She receiv'd him most graciously, (as indeed she was a Princess that feem'd borh to command the Love and Efteem of all the World) and in a folemn manner invefted him with the Earldom of Glencarn, his Son is created Teig with the Barony of Valentia, and bore the Earl of Expenses of their Journey; on purpose to en- Schizson gage their Service against Defmond, who was su-Baron of is the constant of the constan above 1590 Men in Garrifons; But he was foon recall'd, and his Patent given to Sir Henry Sidney, who had been in Queen Mary's Reign, Lord-Juflice and Treasurer of Ireland, and was at this time President of Wales. The first Viceroys of Several The land, now call'd in Latin, Poreges, were (to Name of take Notice of it by the by) ever line the first Entrance of the English, under Henry II. till K. Italian Latin, Poreges, and the land of the Land Latin Company of the Latin Latin C Edward III's Days, styled Justices and Guardians of Ireland; then Lieutenants, and their Vicegerents, Deputies: Afterwards, they were, at the Prince's Pleasure, term'd Justices, or Lieutenants, (which is the more honorable Appellation) but their Authority was generally one and the fame. And without all Doubt, those Justices of Ireland, as well as the Lord Chief Justice of England, were appointed for maintaining the publick Peace, and doing Right to the Subject; as the Proprators and Proconfuls of Rome formerly, who were fent into feveral Provinces, with absolute Commissions.

Sidney, having enter'd on his new Charge, found Munster, in the South of Ireland, in a very great Diforder; occasion'd by the private Diflensions, and open Rebellion of Ghald Earl of Defmond, who had promis'd to act all the Parts of a faithful Subject, and Thomas Earl of Ormond, with feveral others. Hereupon, the Queen fends for Defmond into England, to prevent farther Mifchiefs, and appointed a Justiciary President in First Pre-that Kingdom; with an Assistant, Two Law-sident of yers, and a Clerk: The Prefident named by her Munfter. Majesty, was Sir Wakter St. Leiger, a Person of known Experience and long Practice in the Affairs of that Nation.

1565. Ann. 8. Death of Sir Tho. Chaloner.

In the middle of October, this fame Year, died | Sir Thomas Chaloner, foon after his Return from his Embaffy in Spam; a Man of Eminence, who was born at London, and educated at Cambridge, and very well qualify'd, both as to Arts and Arms. When he was young, he ferv'd under Arms. When he was young, he lerv'd under Charles V. in the Expedition of Algier; where he fuffer'd Shipwreck, and having Iwam as long as his Arms and Legs would give him leave, at length he caught hold of a Cable with his teeth, and fo escaped, tho' with the Loss of some of them. In the Reign of Edward VI. he acquitted himself with so much Bravery, at Musselburough-Field, that he was Knighted by the Duke of Somerset. In Queen Elizabeth's Reign, he went on an honourable Embaify, to the Emperor Ferdinand, and remain'd in that quality almost Four Years; where he wrote Five elegant Books of Poems, De Republica Anglorum instauranda, whilst (as he phrased it) he lived Hyeme in furno, afterte in horreo, i. e. In Winter in a Stove, in Summer in a Barn. He was bury'd in S. Paul's Church in London, and had a Funeral answerable to his Worth, at which Cecil attended as chief Mourner: For, his Son Thomas, who was afterward Governor to Henry Prince of Wales, was not then advanced to Man's Estare.

1566.

Leicester

made

Knights

of the

The Ninth Year of her Reign.

The Beginning of this Year, Charles IX. King of France, fent Ramboulet into England, to com-pliment the squeen with the Privilege of conferring the Older of the Cockle-fhell of S. Michael, on what two Noblemen she thought six. She made choice of the Duke of Norfolk and the Earl & Norfolk of Leicester; of Leicester, as her Favourite; of Norfolk, as a Person of Honor of the first Rank.

These Persons Ramboulet install'd at the Queens of the French Court at Westminster, after that in the King his Order of Master's Room, he had taken his Place amongst S. Michiel, the Knights of S. George, at Windson. This French Order the Queen held as a great Honor; because she had not remember'd any Englishman to be elected into it, besides her Father Henry VIII. her Brother King Edward VI. and Charles Brandan Duke of Suffolk: And therefore the could not but appear greatly concern'd, as the was a true Esteemer of Honor, to find it at length prostituted and funk fo low, that any Man, without Distinction, might be created Knight of it; nor was she so tender of Punctilio's, as not to have at least an equal Regard to the Good and Welfare of her Subjects; for whereas the Unfeafonableness of the Weather gave some Cause to apprehend a Dearth, fhe not only forbad the Transportation of Grain out of the Kingdom; but took care for the Importing of vait Quantities thereof.

Oneen's Care, when a Dearth Was appre-

In the mean time, Harry Earl of Arundel, a Peer of the greatest Interest among the Nobility, after the Expence of a vast Treasure, on the vain Hopes of enjoying the Queen; and those Expectations being now defeated, (Leicefer growing apace in the Queen's Favour, and his Interest at Court declining as fast) got leave, under colour of mending his Health, but in reality to give himself some Diversion, under his Disappointment, to depart the Kingdom. But others of the English Nation, who conceived themselves framed by Nature for Arms, not Idleness; went into Hungary, to pursue the War against the Turk, at the fame time that Gentlemen from all Parts of Europe, upon the Rumor thereof, flock'd thither. Among whom, the chief Persons were, Sir John Smith Coufin-German to K. Edward VI. and Son to the Sifter of Jane Scimour, the king's Mother; Henry Champernoun, Philip Butshide, Richard Greenville, William Gorges, Thomas Cotton, and others.

In June following, was the Queen of Scots, June VI to the perpetual Advantage of all Britain, happily brought to hel of her Son James, (fince book King of Great Britains) of which she soon after inform'd the Queen of England, by James Mel-vin. The Queen, tho' she secretly envy'd her Rival the Honor of being a Mother before her, yet did she dispatch away Sir Henry Killigrem, to congratulate with her upon her fafe Delivery, and the Birth of a Son; and to caution her withal, not to favour any longer Shan-Onead who was then in Rebellion in Leland; nor to harbour Christopher Rokesby, who had fled from England: As likewife to punish some Rapparees, who infested the Frontiers.

Queen Elizabeth, as the was now taking her Q. Eli-Progress for Recreation, to shew herfelf as fa- wi vorable to the Muses at Orford, as she had done therefore at Cambridge already, made a Visit to that University; where she received a magnificent Welcome, and stay'd Seven Days; being extremely delighted with the Pleafantness of the Place, the Beauty of the Colleges, and the Wit and Learning of the Students, who diverted her Majetly a great part of the Night, with Plays; and spent the Day in graver Exercises: For which she return'd 'em her Thanks in a Latin Speech, and fo took of them and the Place a most gracious Farewel.

As foon as the return'd to London, the Parlia- TheParliament met, (and a very full one) the First of No- lument vember, being the Day appointed for their Meet- meets, And after the Palling of a Bill or two, ing: they began a close Debate about the Succession; inalmuch as the Queen feem'd to have made a Vow of Virginity, having never in eight Years time, entertain'd a ferious Thought of Marriage; Andurred whereas the Papifts, on the one hand, were big the Queen with the Hopes of finding it fix'd in the Queen a fuccellor of Scots, who had now born a Son; and the Protestants, on the other hand, purpos'd to themfelves, some one Person, some another, as they were feverally inclined; and every one (according to the Degree of his Refpect for his Religion, and its Security) foreboded fad and troublesome Times, should the Queen die without fettling the Point of the Succellion. Nay, they broke out at length into that Heat and Clamour, as roundly to tax the Queen with a Difregard of her Country and Posterity; defamed cecil with flanderous Libels, as a pernicious Counsellor, and curs'd Huie the Queen's Physician, as having diffuaded the Queen from marrying, on Pretence of some Impediment and Defect in her. The Earls of Pembroke and Leicester did likewise openly, and the Duke of Norfolk with more Caution, profess it their Opinion, that the Queen ought to be obliged to a Husband, or a Succeffor declared by Act of Parliament, even against the Queen's Will: But they foon made their Submission, and obtain'd their Pardon.

Yet they and the rest of the Upper-House being very folicitous on the matter of a Succeffor, belought the Queen, by their Speaker, the Lord Buen, according to the Duty they ow'd to God, their Allegiance to their Prince, and Love to their Country, 'That fince at pretent they found themselves Blessed by her Instruence, with all the Advantages of Peace, Justice and Clemenay, 'fhe would provide them a lafting continuance thereof: But this they affirm'd could never be ' their Fortune till fne pleas'd to Marry, and fix the Succession. They therefore humbly intreat ' and befeech her in the first place to make her Choice how, where and when the thall think

Aruntel travels.

fit, and fo to blefs the Kingdom with the firmest | 1566. Supports thereof, the Heirs of her Body. And Ann. 9. that the would likewife agree with her Parlia-' ment, to determine and appoint a Successor in cafe fhe or her Children (which God forbid) should die without Issue. They profess'd they had several Reasons for making this so importunate Request, viz. The fresh Apprehensions every Body was feiz'd with upon the ill State of her Majesty's Health: The Occasion that presented, when the Parliament was now fitting, and ready to Debate that Point with the utmoft Application: The Terrour she would by this means strike into her Enemies; and the im-6 mortal Joy she would kindle in the Breasts of 'all her Subjects. They applaud the Actions of her Predecessors, who in the same Instance had ' made wife Provisions for their Posterity, and condemn'd that Saying of Pyrrhus, who resolv'd to leave the Kingdom to him that had the sharpest Sword. Moreover, they humbly Reprefented, what a Labyrinth of Miseries this unhappy Kingdom would needs be plung'd in, "thould the depart this Life without appointing a Successor: That this would occasion such 6 Civil Wars and Commotions, as would leave 6 the Conquerors in pofferfion of nothing but That she was going the way to De-' Mifery. stroy Religion, Eclipse the Laws, and stop the Course of Justice, were it so that she left the Nation without a Prince, who is the very Soul of the Law, and that the Kingdom must needs become a Prey to a foreign Power. Other Calamities they reckon up, and urge them under all possible Aggravations, which must needs oppress the whole Nation, should it so happen that the should die without Issue. Nor did they omit to press her by Advices, Precepts and Examples, borrowed from Scripture itself. But thefe things were not manag'd with the

The Com-The Com-fame Temperance in the Lower-Hossle; for Bell spreighte and Monfen, great Lawyers, with Dutton, Paul Quern in Wentworth, and others, grated hard on the Queen's a rougher Royal Prerogative; and maintain'd amongst other Points, 'That Kings are bound to appoint 'a Successor: That the Affection of the Subject is the most impregnable Bulwark and Support of the Prince; but that Princes can no other-wise gain this Affection, than by providing for the Welfare of their Subjects, both whilft they live and after their death; which can by no means be done, but where its certainly known who shall succeed to the Throne. That the Queen, by not appointing a Succeffor, did at once provoke the Wrath of God, and alienate the Hearts of her People; whereas, would she posless the Affections of her Subjects, and the Favour of God, and live for ever in the Remembrance of her People, the must of courfe nominate a Successor: If not, she would be rather a Step-mother of her Country, or something worle, than the Nursing-mother thereof, as being feemingly desirous that England, which 'liv'd as it were in her, should rather expire with than furvive or outlast her. That none but timorous Princes, or fuch as were hated by their People, or fainthearted Women, did ever I fland in fear of their Succeffors; nor can that Prince with any reason apprehend Dangers from a Succeffor, who is fortif 'd and fecur'd by the Love and Duty of his Subjects.

The Queen heard all this with no little Regret, tho for a while fhe either overlook'd it, or at least feem'd so to do: For she knew by Experience what the Hazard would be in nominating Succeifor; foratmuch as in Queen Mary's Reign many of the Nobility and Commons had already withdrawn their Loyal Respects, and fix'd their Eve on her as the Perfon to fucceed. Whatever was done in the Queen's Bed-Chamber Ann. 9. was prefently brought to her; and Wiat and others, Men greedy of Innovations, had plotted \ againft the Queen, to advance her to the Throne even againft her knowledge, and without the leaft confent from her. She knew very well, that the way to curb the hopes of Competitors, and keep them within bounds of Duty, was to keep every one of them in fulpenfe, and not declare a Succeffor at all. She was not ignorant, that Sons had been fo fired with an ambitious defire of Governing, as to take up Arms against their Parents; nor could it be thought that re-moter Kindred should act with more Duty and Affection. She had likewise collected from her own Conversation with Books, and sometimes took occasion to him it in Difcourfe, That there had feldom been any Dengnation of Successor in a Collateral-Line. That Lewis of Orleans, Successor of Charles V. and Francis of Angoulefine, Successfor to Laws in the Throne of France, were never Declared, and they fucceeded for all that without the least disturbance. That the Deelaration of Succeffors in England, had generally prov'd the Ruin of the Perfons to Declar'd: For Reger Mortimer, Earl of March, appointed Heir of the Crown by King Richard II. was in a little time cut off. His son Edmand, on the lame account, fuffer'd twenty Years Impriforment in Feland, and there died. John de la Pool, Earl of Lincoln, delign'd Successor by Richard III. after his Son's death, was always look'd on with a jealous Eye by Henry VII. and in concluion was flain in the Field, whillt he attempted to bring about his Defigns; and afterward his Brother Edmund was beheaded under Henry VIII. But thefe things may perhaps appear fomewhat forein to the matter.

Now there being fome flill who did not for- She pacibear to infift with too much Heat and Infolence fier these on the Points already mention'd; and to back kind their Pertness with Invectives and Abuses, the Words. Queen commanded Thirty to be call'd out of each House and make their Appearance before These she endeavour'd to smooth and qualify by the most obliging Expressions; and after a Reproof that carry'd Sweetness mix'd with Majesty, she diverted them from their Resolution, and promis'd them to manage things not only with the Care of a Prince, but the Tenderness of a Parent. And whereas the House had offer'd greater Subfidies than ufual, on condition she would declare a Successor, she utterly refus'd those extraordinary Grants, accepted a fmaller Sum, and with a Commendation of their Refpects to her, abated the fourth Payment of the Q-the Supply already Granted, faying, That Money in her Subject's Purse, was as good as in her own Ex-Subsect

The last Day of this Session she made a short and makes Speech to both Houses, the Abridgment of which a tart take as follows. "Whereas the Words of Prin"ces are observed to make the deepest Impress the wo sion on the Minds of their Subjects, I have this therefore to offer to you. I have been " always a most unaffected lover of Truth, and " have ever pleas'd myfelf with the Thoughts that you are fo too. But it feems I have been " deceiv'd: For I had the Leifure to observe this Session, that Hypocrific has walk'd it's "Rounds under the Mask of Liberty and Succeffion; and there have not been wanting fome among themselves who have stickled for the full Grant or the absolute Resusal of the " Privilege to Dispute the Point of the Succes-" fion, and its Establishment. Had this been " granted, these Persons had been gratify'd so 1566.

The Q. drefs.

" far as even to occasion their Triumphs. And 1566. "fhould we have denied, they had been pro-" our People, which our worst Enemies have " never yet been able to do. But their Politicks "were ill tim'd, their Counfels precipitate, and they were not quick-fighted enough to " look into the Event : However they have by "this means given us an hint to diftinguish our Friends from our Foes. 'Tis easie to observe, " that this entire Assembly is made up of four " forts of Men. Some have been Contrivers and " Abetters, some Actors and Advisers in these " Affairs, whereas a third fort has been cajol'd " and decoy'd by these fair Speeches, whilft a "fourth fort again have said nothing, but stood
" amaz'd at such bold Freedoms, and these cer" tainly are the least to blame. Can you imagine, Gentlemen, that as to the Affair of the Succession, your Safety and Security is no " way confulted or provided for? Or, that we defign to increach on your Liberties? That be ffill as far from us as it has yet been ever remov'd from our Thoughts. We cannot deny " indeed but that we thought it necessary to stop you when you were just upon the brink of the Precipice. There is a time for every " the Precipice. "thing: 'Tis possible you may have a wifer Prince after me, but you will hardly enjoy one more truly Affectionate to you. For our part, we cannot tell whether we shall ever have the Opportunity of meeting such a Par-"liament again; 'tis however your best course "not to try Experiments on the Patience of " your Prince; tho' we do leave with you this " Affurance, That we have still a favourable " Opinion of the greater part of you, and con-" tinue to every one the same place in our good Will and Affection.

Thus did the Discretion of a Woman lay asleep quiet and all these Commotions; which were in time so fettled and compos'd, that very few but Male-contents and Traytors appear'd very folicitous in the business of a Successor. Certain it is, that most Men, whatever they may pretend, have no other Regards, as to National Affairs, but what relate to their own Peculiar. Nevertheless, that the Succession might not lie altogether in the dark, nor the Person whose undoubted Claim the Queen afferted, fhe cast Thornton, who was then a Reader of I aw in Lincolns-Inn, into the Tower, upon the Queen of Scots Complaint, that openly favours the Queen of he had call'd her Title in question.

During this Parliament, befides other things for the publick Advantage, it was unanimously declar'd, That the Election, Conferration, Confirmation and Instalment of the Archbishops and Bishops of England (which some had abusively called in question) were Lawful; and that the said Bishops were Elected and Consecrated duly, and

And it was likewife Enacted, That both they, and all fuch as should be hereafter Confecrated, were and should be effected as duly and lawfully Confefecrated, notwithstanding any former Law or Canon to the contrary. For the Papifts had traduc'd their Ordination as false and counterfeit; perhaps because the Unction, the Ring, the Crotier-Staff, and the Benediction were omitted, and for their not being duly Ordained by three Bifhops, who were able to derive their Ordination, by a regular Succession, down from the Apostles and our Saviour's time; †‡† which notwithstanding they might really have done, (as appear'd by the Re-cords) having receiv'd their Ordination, with the Solemnity of Prayers, Invocation of the Holy Ghoft, the Imposition of three Bishops Hands. the Devotion of a Sermon, and the Celebration of the Lord's-Supper. About this time there were Restraints laid, and proper Punishment inflicted on fome riotous People, who Mobb'd and Infulted in the open Streets those Reformers commonly call'd Promoters.

And now came on likewife the Day appointed The E. of for the Baptism of the young Prince of Scotland; goes Emfor whom the Queen of England being important distributions. to fland Godmother, the fent the Earl of Bedjord to Seot-with a Font of Gold for a Present, and expressly land on commanded, that neither he, nor any of his Re-ling of the ning of the tinue, should give the Title of King to the Lord young Darly. This Solemnity being over, the Earl of Prince. Bedford, according to his Instructions, transacted with the Q. of Scots a Reconciliation between herself and her Husband, (for it seems there were some Enemies on both sides, who had used ill Arts to impair that Friendship and good Agreement that had been between them) and likewise a Confirmation of the Treaty of Edinborough. The latter fhe flatly refus'd, alledging there was fomewhat in the Treaty which might prejudice her and her Children's Claim to the Crown of England. Yet she promis'd to send Commissioners to England to Treat of that Matter with fome Alteration, viz. That the should diffe the Arms and Title of England so long as 2. Elizabeth and her Heirs should live; as if she conceived hersist engagd by the Treaty to renounce them for good and all. These Commissioners were likewise to inform her how basely she was impos'd on by the mischievous Arts of those who made an ill use of the Openness and Good-nature of her Husband. She began now to grow Weak and out of Order, and commended the young Prince, her Son, to the Protection of Queen Elizabeth, by feveral Prince of Letters, wherein (to use her own Words) The Sociana. she knew herself to be the undoubted Heir of England recom-

after the Queen, and that there were many Attempt; mended to used to invalidate her Title, she promised however no of Queen longer to insist on that Point; but to assist and serve her Etzabeth unger to righe on tout roun; but to alight and lerve wer antivered with the truther Friendflip ngainft all Perform what fewer of the death the Privy-Council, John Mafon, Treafurer of findfore, the Queen's Chamber, a Man of Learning and according to the Acts and Laws of the Land. |

[2] 10.1045 In the end of Archbiftop Brambal's Works, printed at Dublin, are to be found [a] the Order of the Ceremmies used at [4] 0.1052 ele Conjectation of Archbiftop Parker, taken out of the Register of the See of Camerbury's and before it, out of the same Resease and Franciscopies of the Conjectation of Archbiftop Parker, taken out of the Register of the See of Camerbury's and before it, out of the same Resease and Franciscopies of Camerbury's and before it, out of the same Resease and Franciscopies of Camerbury, to proceed to a Choice of an Archbiftop Ele Balter, on Letter of Lience treat Outer Department of Camerbury, to proceed to a Choice of an Archbiftop: The Dean and Chapters [d] Decree of Electron, whereby see [eq. they choole Dr. Parkers, and their whole Proceedings therein: The Instrument whereby the Archbiftop Fleck gives [e] bis Conferns [e] 10.00 to the sad Bledion: The Queen's Letters Patents, wherein are declared [f] the Royal Association to the Sad Bledion: The Cueen's Letters Patents, wherein are declared [f] the Royal Association of the Archbiftop Ele 3; together with all other Instruments and Forms which are alledged for the proof of the legality of any Election.

After an account of the Greder of the Conferention of the Archbistop's Procuratorial Letter, whereby he appoint his Chaplains to be his Extension for the Archbistop and Instruments and Association is the Archbistop of Corpus Christ Conference on the Committee of the Conference on the Library of Corpus Christ Cape in Cambridge's which differs in [f] 10 pass to inconsiderable and minute Circumlances from that taken from the Register of the See of Camerbury, that their differences are rather one proof of the financies and authentication of them.

rather one proof of the fineerity and authenticalness of both of them.

This Manulcript account, together with the Teitimonials of the Mafter and Fellows of Corpus Christis College of its authenticalnels, as also the Certificates of the University, Publick Notary, and Heads of several Colleges concerning it, are inserted in the Appendix to this Life of Queen Elizabeth. Numb. 2.

Ail is again.

Queen

Tule.

made up

Gravity, but a great Devourer of Church-Lands, 1566. and Sir Richard Sackvill, Under-Treasurer of the Ann.9. Exchequer, a Person of wise Foresight, and the Cucen's Kinsman by his Mother, who was a The dath Belen. Into Sackvill's Place succeeded Sir Walter olsackell Mildmay, a Person of Probity and Discretion:

And the other's Place was supplyed by Sir Francis

Kinells, who had marry'd Katharine Cary, the Queen's Coufin-German by Mary Bolen.

The Tenth Year of her Reign. 1567.

> But before the return of the Commissioners from the Queen of Scots, and a Month or two after the Solemnity of the Christning, the Queen's Husband was by some bloody and barbasous Hands murder'd in his Bed at Midnight, being then in the 21st Year of his Age; and to make the Surprize the greater, the House was blown up by Gunpowder, and his Body cast our into the Orchard. This was soon nois'd all Britain over, and the Fact cast upon Morton, Murray, and others of the Conspiracy; but they were fo Infolent as to lay it at the Queen's door. What George Buchanan has related of this Passage, both in his Hiftory, and a little Book of his, entituled, The Detection, every one may learn from the Books themselves. But forafmuch as Murray's Gold may be prefum'd to have fet a Byass on his Temper, and to have made him as being Partial enough to have his Writings condemn'd as spurious and false by the States of Scotland, upon whose Credit one may more fasely depend; and he himself having (as I am inform d) often blam'd himself with Teats in the King's Presence, to whom he was Tutor, for having employ'd his Pen in too virulent a strain against that excellent Princess; and having wish'd on his Death-bed that he might live so long as to recal the aruth of that Fact, and wipe off those Aspersions he had rashly and unjustly fix'd on her Credit, if his Age would give him leave, and People not take him for a Dotard. Give me leave on this account to offer on the other fide as much as I can learn of the whole Story, and that without the least tincture of Prejudice or Favour, and according to the best Informations I can borrow from those Writings which came out at that time, (but which in favour to Murray and ill-will to the Queen, were suppressed in England) as well as from the Letters of Ambassadors and other Persons of Credit and Consideration.

In the Year 1558, at the time of the Marriage of Francis the Dauphin and Mary Queen of Scots, James the Queen's base Brother, commonly called the Prior of St. Andrews, (as being Head of the Religious Order of the Metropolitical Church of that name) being out of humour with fo grave Title, press'd hard for some more splendid Character of Honour and Diffinction: which the Queen refusing him, by the advice of the Guises, her Uncles, he return'd to Seotland in a Discontent, and under the specious colour of Reformation and Liberty, began to diffurb the publick Peace; and fo far he went, as in a Juncto of Confederates to alter the Face of Re-S. Andrew, ligion without the Queen's knowledge, and to sims at the remove the French out of Scotland by the help of English Torces he had call'd in for that purpose. When Francis the French King was dead, he haftened to his Sifter in France, and endeavour'd to clear himfelf of all that had been done in Scotland in prejudice to her Honour or Interest, and folemnly promis'd and gave his Oath, to do her all the good Offices a Sifter might reafonably expect from a Brother. And being in hopes that the Queen, who had been Bred up from a Child in the Pleasures of France, would hardly return her Subjects that she should Marry, and learnst into Scotland, he manag'd the Matter with the Guises to have some Scottish Nobleman made Re-1567. gent of that Kingdom, and made broad figns Ann. to. that none was fitter than himself. But when he was fent back into Scotland with a bare Commiffion, impowering the States of the Realm to Meet and Confult about the Publick Good, he was fo netled at the Disappointment, that he return'd by the way of England, and infinuated to the English, that if they defir'd the Church fhould flourish in Seastand, Peace be preferr'd at Home, and the Queen's Person fase and secure, they ought to use all possible Endeavours to prevent ought to the an pointore Linearous to protein the Queen of Seots paffage into Scotland. She however paffing by the English Ships in hazy Weather, arriv'd fafely in Scotland, and was ftill fo kind to her Brother, as in a manner to place the entire Administration on his Hands. not this enough to clip or cure his Ambition, which he made every day and every way fresh discoveries of: For he could not forbear perpetually complaining to his Friends, that the Warlike Nation of the Scots as well as the English, was Rul'd by the Diftaff: And he often quoted Knox, whom he efteem'd beyond a primitive Father, for this scrap of Politicks, That Kingdoms are the claim of Virtue, not Extraction: That Women were never made to Govern Kingdoms; and, That they were mere Monsters on a Throne. He set his Friends likewise to persuade the Queen to depute four Perfons of the Royal Family of the Simuris to fucceed one another in the Kingdom, provided fine flould die without flue, without diffinguishing whether they were legitimate or not; hoping, no doubt, that he should make one in the number, as being the King's Son, tho' by the wrong way. But the Queen wifely confidering, The that such a Constitution was repugnant to the Queen re-Laws of the Land, that 'twould be a prejudice prove the to the right Heirs, a very ill Precedent, and of Prior's dangerous Confequence to the Substitutes them- motion, felves, as well as a Bar to her own Marriage, gently answer'd, That she would take some time to advise with the States about an Affair of that Importance. And to shew her Generosity to her Brotance. And to thew her Generotty to the Dro-ther, the conferr'd on him the Earldom of Marre, Shemikes and afterward of Murray, (because the former Murray. Title was contested) and preferr'd him to an honourable and advantagious Match, not knowing at the same time that he aim'd at the Regency, and gave it out, that he was the true and law-ful Son of King James V. To clear his way to the Throne, he used his Interest with the Queen to crush the Noble Family of the Gordons, who had a great many powerful Adherents; fo that he was jealous of this Family on his own account, and in regard of the reform'd Religion. Hamilton, the Duke of Castle-Herault, (the next reputed Heir to the Crown) he procur'd to be Banish'd the Court; and Arran, his Son, to be Imprifon'd; Bothwell he Banish'd into England, and all that he thought capable of standing in his way, he stript of their Titles and Preferments; nay the Queen herself seem'd to be under the Discipline of a Pupil; and his great Art and Care was to keep her from fo much as thinking of an Husband. And no fooner did he perceive that the Emperor Courted her for his Brother on the one hand, and on the other the King of Spain for his Son, but he firentoutly endeavourd to The E of divert her from both Matches, alledging, That Maray a forein Prince was really, and would be thought diffusdes incompatible with the Liberties of Scotland; and the queen that in former Times, whenever the Throne de-volv'd on a Female Heir, they had taken no Husbands but of the fame Blood and Nation. But when he found it was the general Defire of Digreffion affaire of Scotland.

Prior of ment of Scotland.

why fome Intimations from the Countess of Lenox, 1567. that fhe was dispos'd in favour of the L. Darly, Ann. 10. he was forward to recommend him among the the reft, expecting to find him, as he was very Young, fo as ductile and pliant to his Managery. Notwithstanding, when he found the Queen had a real Passion for the Lord Darly, and grew more indifferent to him, he repented his Project, and tamper'd with Queen Elizabeth to cross the Match.

Difturbs her Nuptials.

Flies to at odds.

to Rule.

The Marriage being now Confummated, and the Lord Darly declar'd King, and the Queen revoking at the same time the Grants made to him and others in her Minority, contrary to Law, he with others join'd in a Rebellion against the King and Queen, under pretence, that the new King was no Friend to the Protestant Religion, and had marry'd without the Queen of England's confent. But without putting it to the hazard of a Battel, he fled to England, and there despairing to find any Abettors, he transacted with Morton, a Man of Depth and Subtilty, and his England. intimate Friend and Affiftant, that feeing the Marriage could not be disannull'd, yet some Method might be contriv'd to dissolve that closer Union by which their Affections were rivetted one to another. Nor was it long before they found a very feafonable Opportunity; for there happening some Difference between them, the Queen, to keep down the Afpirings of the young He endean Prince, and preferve the Royal Prerogative to herfelf, began to place her Husband's Name last in all publick Acts, and to leave it out in all the Stamp for Coin. Morton being a Man unluckily K. and Q. Dexterous in fomenting Divisions, infinuates himself, by Flattery and Wheedles, into the King's good Opinion; and persuades him to wear the Crown of Scotland against the Queen's will, and to get rid of a Woman's Government, fince 'twas the business of that Sex to Obey, not

By this Advice, he had hopes not only of alienating the Queen, but the Peers and Commons too, from the King. And to work the Effect on the Queen in the first place, he makes use of several slanderous Reports to move the King to take away the Life of David Rizo, a Piemontois, left he, by the Forefight he was Mafter of, might give a check to their Designs. (This Riz_0 was a Musician, and came the Year before into Scotland with Morett the Ambassador; and for his exquisite Skill was entertain'd at Court; and fo far got the Queen's Favour, as to be employ'd in writing French Letters; and in her Secretary's absence, did in great measure supply his room). And then, to instame the Queen the more, he perfuades the King to affift in Perfon at the Murder, with Reuven, and the reft of the Affaffinates, who, together with him, breaking, at Supper-time, into the Queen's Privy Chamber, while she was sitting with the Countess of λ rgyle, Affaulted Rizo as he was Eating at a Sideboard of fomething from the Queen's Table; (as the Waiters of the Privy-Chamber usually do) and all this in the Queen's Eye, who was big with Child, and had like to have Mifcarry'd for Fear; afterwards they clapt a Piftol to his Breaft. This done, they dragg'd him into a Lobby hard by, and murder'd him in a most barbarous man-

This Murder was committed the Day before Murray was, according to his Summons, to make Appearance, and answer to the Charge of Rebellion before the Parliament He appear'd the very next Day, when he was least expected; and fuch was the Confusion of Affairs, that no

ner, locking the Queen up in her Privy Chamber, whilft in the mean time Morton guarded all

Evidence came at that time against him; info-much that it look'd as if Rizo's Murd n had been dispatch'd the sooner in regard to Murray's In- Ann. 10. demnity. Nevertheless the Queen, at her Husband's Requests gave a courteous Reception, and feem'd to place an unfulpeded Confidence in him. But the King beginning by this time to reflect on the foulpess of the late horrid Fact, and perceiving the Queen did very much regra it, was himfelf much concern'd thereat, begg'd her Favour and Pardon with Tears in his Tyes, and freely own'd, that Murray and Morton had over-perfuaded him to the Murder. And from that time he conceiv'd fo mortal an Aversion to Murray, (for as for Morton, Reuven and others, Martin they were fled to England with Murray's Letters and others of Recommendation to the Earl of Bedford) that fly to he was contriving to remove him out of the way. Englands But being not Old and Wife enough to conceal his Thoughts, or Couragious enough to put them in execution, he was fo much a Courtier and kind Husband, as to tell his Wife, the Queen, that it would be for the Interest of the Kingdom, and the Security of the Royal Family, to have Murray made away. She abhorring the very Motion, fell to diffuade him by Threats from fuch a Defign, hoping that they might be reconcil'd again. But the King being vex'd to find the Baltard fland fo well in the Queen's Favour, unadvisedly communicated the same Design to others. When this came to Murray's Ears, he begins to Plot upon the King's Life; tho' covertly, and under the mask of a most officious Allegiance, and makes use of Morton's Counsel, tho' absent, to this purpose. Twas the opinion of these two Persons, that Queen is the best method to be taken, was to draw off the alterated Queen's Affection from the King, it being not from the Well hair force it has a superior to the superior from the King.

well knit fince the late Breach, and that Bothwell King.

ought to be engag'd in the Defign, who was lately reconcil'd to Murray, and in fo good Terms with the Queen, that 'twas the easier to flatter him with the hope of a Divorce from his Wife, and the Poffession of the Queen, when she was a Widow. To bring this about, and to abet and skreen him from all Opposition, they oblig d themselves under their Hands and Seals; imagining that if the Project took effect, they could by one and the same Act, murder the King, befpatter and leffen the Queen among Persons of all Ranks, suppress Bothwell, and get the entire Regency into their own Hands. Bothwell, being The King a lewd and ill-principl'd Man, and mad as well murder'd, as blind with Ambition, accepted the Terms, and villainoufly acted the Murder, whilft Murray had withdrawn himfelf to a Country Seat he had at some distance, not above fisteen Hours before, not only to avoid fuspicion, but to affift the Complotters to the betrer advantage, and derive the Odium and Jealoutie of the Fact upon the Queen. No fooner was he return'd to Court, but he and the rest of the Juncto recommended Bothwell to the Queen for an Husband, as not altogether unworthy of her Regard, on the score of his Family and good Services against the Englift, and his fingular Fidelity withal. They inupp, and ins ingular redesity withal. I ney in-finuated farther, That at five was a fingle and foli-tary Perfon, she was the less capable of stemming the Tide of Tumult and Sedition, of preventing the trea-cherous Designs of her Enemies, and suffaining the weight of while I for The Land of the could be seen of publick Affairs: That therefore she would do well of publick Alfarrs: That therefore he would do wellto admit him to her Bed, and Board, and CouncilTable; who had the Will, the Power, and the Courage to Enterprize any thing. And so powerfully did the Posson work, that she, being scard out of the Judgment by two such Tragical Murders, and having in her Thoughts the fresh impression

That the Council of the Posson of the Council of the Posson of the Council of the Posson of the Council of the Council of the Posson of the Poss of Bothwell's Fidelity and Services to herfelf and

Vol. III

Fffz

David Rizo murdered.

the Avenues.

her Mother, was prevail'd on to give her 🦠

A Protest concern-

1567. fent; but with this Provifo, that her young son Ann. 10. should be every way securd, and Bothwell legal-Very ly acquitted of the Murder, and from his former Marriage.

It may not be amiss to infert here the publick Protestation made by George Earl of Huntley, and ing the Muder of the Earl of Argyle, relating to this Matter; of the Lord which I myself have seen a Copy, under their own Hands, directed to Queen Elizabeth. 'Forasmuch as Murray and others, to conceal their Rebellion against the Queen, whose Authority they would fain usurp, do openly calumniate her, as guilty of the Murder of her Husband; we do publickly proteft and witness these things following: In the Month of December, ray and Lidington acknowledg'd before us, that Morton Lindley and Rewoon flew David Rizo, with no other Delign, than to fave Murray, who was at that very time to be profcribed: That therefore they might not appear ungrateful, they greatly defir'd, that Morton and the rest, that withdrew themselves, on the Murder of Rizo, might be permitted to rerurn: But this, they ' faid, was impossible, unless the Queen were divorced from her Husband; which they pro-' mis'd to effect, would we but give our Confent. Afterwards Murray promis'd to me Huntley, that my antient Eltate should be restored to me; and that I should be an eternal Favourite with the e Perfons now abroad, if I would favour the Divorce. Then we apply d to Bothwell for his · Confent ; and last of all we addrest the Queen, ' and Lidington intreated her, in the Name of us all, to reverse the Banishment of Morton, Lindfey, and Reuven. The King's Errors and Mifcarriages, those especially against the Queen, he fail'd not to aggravate with all imaginable Bitterness; and shew'd how much it concern'd the Queen and State, to have a Divorce drawn up; it being impossible for the King and Queen to be fafe together in Scotland. She made Anfwer, the had rather retire for some time into France, till her Husband came to be fensible of his youthful Heats; for she would not willingly have any thing done to the Prejudice of her Son, or her own Diffunour. To this Lidington reply'd, we, who are of your Majefly's Council, will look to that. But I command you, fays the, to do nothing that may flick either upon my Honour or Conscience: Let things remain as they are, till God pleases to provide a Remedy: That which you imagine may be a Remedy: for my Good, may possibly have a contrary Ef-To which Lidington answer'd, Please to feet. e leave Matters to us, and you shall find we will do nothing unfit, or what the Authority of Parliament shall not well approve of. Hereupon, fince the King happen'd to be basely murder'd a few days after, we do, from the real Perfuafion of our Conscience, fully and certainly be-lieve, that Murray and Lidington were the Authors, Abettors, and Contrivers of this Regicide, whoever were the Actors. (So far they.)
The great and tole Concern of the Conspirators now was, to get Bothwell clear'd of the Guilt of the King's Murder. A Parliament therefore is call'd on this very Account, and a Proclamation iffu'd out, for the Apprehending fuch as were suspected of the Fact. And whereas Lenox, the deceased King's Father, impeached Bothwell, as the Regicide, and presid hard that he might be brought to his Trial in Parliament; this was also granted, and Lenox commanded to appear in two and twenty Days, in order to profecute the Defendant. On the Day appointed was Bothwell arraign'd, and acquitted by his Judges, and Mor- vernment to her Son and some of the Nobility, ton's Management, the Queen of England not having fene any Instructions to Lenox, who could 1567. not appear in the City, where he had so many Ann. 10. Enemies, without visible Hazard of his Life.)

This Bufiness thus dispatch'd, the Confederacy And marfo manag'd the matter, as to work up a great ries the part of the Nobility to comply with the Mar-Queen. riage, and to fet their Hands to a Writing to that purpole, for fear, if he had funk from his Hopes, he fhould have betray'd the whole bloody Secret. This Match with Bothwell (who was created Duke of Orkney, or the Oreades) help'd very much to increase the Suspicion of the Queen's being acceffory to the Murder; and this was heightned by feveral Letters which the Complotters difpers'd and fent about ; and they conspir'd, in A Conspiprivate Cabals held at Dunkeld, to depose the Q. racy a and destroy Bothwell. Yet Murray, to make him- gainst the felf appear innocent of the whole Intrigue, ask'd the Queen's Leave to go into France, and to re- Murry move the leaft Shadow of Jealousie, recommen- gos into ded his whole Estate to the Care and Manage-France, ment of the Queen and Bothwell. He had scarce got out of England, when the very same Persons that had acquitted Bothwell of the King's Murder, and gave him their Confent to marry the Queen, under their own Hands; were up in Arms against and ready to seize him: But in truth they gave him fecret Notice to pro- Bothwell vide for himfelf; and all, left he should discover flies. the whole Plot, after he was taken; and that they might make this Use of his Flight, to charge the Queen, with the better Face, with the King's Murder. Next they went fo far, as to feize on her Person, and treated her in the vilest and most contumelious manner; and allowing her but poor and ordinary Cloathing, they imprison'd Qof Sons her at Loch-Levin, and put her in the Custody of impri-Murray's Mother; who having been fames V's Mistris, insulted basely the captiv'd Queen's Misfortune, and made her Brags, that five was the lawful Wife of James V. and that her Son Murray was his legitimate Isfue. As foon as Oueen Elizabeth had certain Advices of thefe things, she was touch'd with so hearty a Refentment of this infufferable Infolence of the Queen her Sister and Neighbour's Subjects, (on whom the would fometimes beftow the Epithets of perfidious, cruel, and ungrateful) that she Q Elifent Sir Nicolas Throckmorton into Scotland, to ex- 7abeth in postulate with the Confederates this rude and inin the humane Treatment of their Queen, and to con-matter, cert Measures for Restoring her to her Liberty and Authority, for Punishing the King's Murderers, and Conveying the young Prince into England, rather than France, for his better Security. What I shall from this time deliver concerning these Matters, during the Stay of Throckmorton in Scotland, you are to take on the Credit of his own Letters, which, without all Doubt, were fair and authentick. Throckmorton found in Scotland a great many inveterate Enemies against the Queen; who refus'd, in plain terms, both him and the French Ambassadors Croc and Villeroy, the Freedom of Accels to her: And yet what Meafures to take, as to the Queen, they could not agree among themselves. Lidington and some others judg'd it the sittest Course to restore her to her Authority, on thele Terms: That the King's Manderers should be punish a according to Law: Tost Care should be taken about preserving the Person of the Prince: That Bothwell should be divored from her, in the Authority Chamber 2018. and Religion established. Others conceived it would be much better to remove her to England or France, there to remain in perpetual Exile, on condition the French King or the Queen of England would be Guarantees, that flie should give up the Go-and abdicate the Kingdom. Others were of O-1567 pinion, that she should be try'd, and condemn'd Ann. 10. to perpetual Confinement; and her Son crown'd in her Room. And others again, That the ought to lofe her Crown and her Life together; and this was the Doctrine which Knon and others of that Brotherhood, made the Pulpits ring with. Throckmorton, on the other fide, quoted feveral Paffages out of the Scriptures, to show the Ne-

Rothmell arquitted of the Eine's

York.

Throckdefends the Q of Scots Caule.

ceffity of obeying the higher Powers; and vigo-roufly maintain'd, That the Queen was fubject to no Tribunal, but that of the Judge of Heaven and Earth: That not one Magistrate in Seatland, but carry'd an Authority deriv'd from her; and therefore to be revok'd at her Pleafure. Against this they objected a special Privilege of their Kingdom, and that in extraordinary Emergencies particular Acts must be made; borrowing their Arguments from Buchanan, who about that time, at the Instance of Murray, wrote his pernicious Dialogue, De Jure Regni apud Scotos; wherein he maintains, That the People have the Power of creating nan's Arguments and deposing Princes, quite contrary to the Tenour of made use the History of Scotland. However this did not dif-

Throckmorton defires the Freedom of.

Bucha-

courage Throckmorton from afferting the Queen's injur'd Right, and defiring Admission to her; tho' Lidington would fometimes answer, That he must not expect a Freedom which had already been deny'd to the French Envoy: That they must not disob-Freedom Mrs. I determine the Succession of France, to gratify the Succession of France, to gratify the Succession for the O. gland, whom they had lately experienced to promote but in only her own Interests, when, to leve her own Turn, vain. The removed the French out of Scotland; and (to give a later Instance) as she gave but a cold Treatment, and a kind of unwilling Protection, to the Scots who had withdrawn themselves, on the score of David Ri-20's Murder: Moreover, That he ought to take Care, his pressing Importanity upon this Head did not urge the Scots to crave Affiltance from the French, in Neglect of the English: And by the I rench Proverb, II perd le jeu, qui laisse le parti, i. e. He loses the Game, that quits the Side ; the English ought not to defert the Scots, their Friends.

After this, they deliver'd to Throckmorton a long

Scroll, in form of a Proteft, though without any Names subscribed; That the sole Design of put-ting the Queen under her present Confinement, was to separate her from Bothwell, (for whom she had an Affection, that might prove fatal to the State) till the Heat of two Passions, her Love for him, and her Anger against them, were a little qualify'd and appeas'd: And they defired him to acquiesce in this Answer, till the rest of the Peers were assembl'd. The Queen however was committed to more close and severe Restraints, after all the Tears she shed, and Intreaties she us'd, for a better Treatment; if not as fhe was a Queen, yet at leaft as fhe was the Daughter of a Crown'd Head, and the Mother of their Prince; a Sight of whom she often requested, but in vain. But (not to insist on evequested, but in vain. But (not to insist on every private Affront she suffer'd at their Hands) they at length endeavour'd, by fmooth Words, to wheedle her into a Refignation of the Kingdom; and to excuse herfelf, on the score of Sickness, or the Fatigue of Government; or (as orhers more politickly advis'd) first to abdicate, and then to get away, when her Guard was leffen'd, and her Confinement relax'd When thefe with the Crimes of Incontinence, Regicide, and Ty-ranny: Of the last, as she had broken the Laws and Privileges of the Kingdom, viz. those which

King of France's Name. At last they so far prevail'd, by threatning her with Death, as to engage her, without being heard, to fet her Hand to three Writings: By the first of which, she refign'd the Crown to her Son, who was scarce 13 Months old: The fecond confer'd the Regency Ann. 10 on Marray, during the Minority of her Son: She ligns And in the third, these Governors were nomi- an Institumated for the young Prince, (flould Marray Icment of fufe the Charge) James Duke of Chiftel-Hernall, Religional Matthew Earl of Lenox, Gillespic Earl of Argyle, John Earl of Athol, James Earl of Morton, Alexan-der Earl of Glencarn, and John Earl of Morre. Next, she represented to the Queen of England, by Throckmorton, that she had relign'd upon Force, and fign'd the Instrument by the Persuasion of Throckmorton, who had affur'd her, that a Refignation extorted in Prifon, was a real Act of Force; and fo, void of itself. But we shall have occasion to touch these Passages more largely, when we come to the Occurrences of the next Year, and the Accusations and Defences of both Parties, before the Delegates commission'd at

The fifth day after her Refignation, James, the

Queen's young Son, was anointed and crown'd Jam's VI

King; and John Knex preach'd the Coronation-crown Sermon: And the Hamiltons enter'd a Protesta-That it should not prejudice the Duke of Chaftel-Herault's Title to the Succession, in Opposition to the House of Lenox. But Queen Elizabeth order'd Throckmorton not to attend at the Coronation; left fhe fhould be thought to encourage the injurious dethroning of a Prince, by the Prefence of her Ambassador. The twentieth day after the Refignation, returns Murray from Murray France into Scotland, and three days after that he return waits on the Queen, with fome others of the Ca-bal, charges her with a great Heap of Crimes, and like a holy Confessor as he was, advis'd her to a ferious Repentance, and Invocation of the divine Mercy. She then began to lament the Irregularities of her Life paft, acknowleged fome of the Faults she was charg'd with, excus'd others, and fome the extenuated on the account of humane Frailty; but the greatest part she ut-terly deny'd: She intreated him to undertake the Charge of the Government, in her Son's Name; and beg'd him, with repeated Importunity, to spare her Reputation and her Life. He said, it was not in his Power to grant the last, but that twas a Request proper to be made to the Estates of the Realm: But yet, the best way to secure both, would be to take and follow these Advices;

Not to disturb the Quiet of the King and Kingdom: Not to endeavour an Escape from her Confinement : Not to engage the Queen of England, or the King of Frames, to make an Invalion upon Scotland; or foment a War at home: And to throw off all Affection for Bothwell, and all Thoughts of a Revenge upon his

The Q. roughly treated.

They press Methods would not take, they began to threaten her to re- her with a publick Trial, and to impeach her fign the Government.

· Enémies. And now being declar'd Regent, he obliges and is himself by an Instrument under his hand, not to made Remeddle with the Business of War or Peace, the gent. King's Person and Marriage, or the Queen's Liberty; without the Advice and Confent of the rest of the Association; and he sends Lidington to desire and caution Throckmorton, not to interpose any more on the Queen's behalf. For he and the rest would rather suffer the worst that could happen, than agree to her Enlarge-ment; the Effect of which would be, that the ment; the Effect of which would be, son into would ftill carefs Babwell, bring her Son into Danger, and her Country into Trouble, and Danger, and Different and Different. We know, fays be, what Harm England can do us by a War: You can ravage our Borders, and we can do as much for yours; and we know as well, that the French will have a better Regard to the antient Treaty between us and very

The Q cleared

der.

them, than ever to forfake us. But for this, 1567. he refus d to Lignerol the French Embassador any Ann. 10. interview with the Queen till Bothwell was secured; and he added more Weight every Day to the Queen's Sorrows, and Strictness to her Confinement, contrary to his Promife to the French King. Thus far out of Throckmorton's

Shortly after Murray caus'd to be Executed, Murray John Hepborn, Paris a Frenchman, Daglish and some other of Bothwell's Servants, who were present fome of the Regi cides to be at the King's Murder. But they (quite contrary Executed to his expectation) protested before God and his Angels, that they were inform'd by Bothwell that

Murray and Morton were the chief Agents in the King's Death. The Queen they acquitted from any share in the Fact; as also Bothwell himself, when he was Prisoner in Denmark; attesting se-veral times in his Health, and on his Death-bed, and that with the most folemn Asseverations, that the Queen was in no degree privy to the Regicide. And about fourteen Years after, when Morton was to fuffer, he confess'd that Bothwell from has ving any hand in had tamper'd with him to consent to the Murder; which when he absolutely refus'd, un-less he had the Queen's Hand for his Warrant, the Mur-Bothwell made answer, That this could not be, for that she was not to have the least Intimation of such a Defign. This rash Procedure in deposing the Queen, join'd with the infolent Carriage of the The K. of Cabal towards the Ambassador, was highly sto-France & mach'd both by Queen Elizabeth and the French Q Eliz. King, as an Affront to the Royal Prerogative. attempt the Liber on that they began to appear for the Hamiltons, the Liber who adher'd to the Queen. And Pasquier, the Queen of French Ambassador, folicited the Queen of England to attempt her Restoration by force. But the thought it the better method to put a ftop to their Trade both with France and England, till the were fet at Liberty; and by this means to fet the Lords and Commons at odds, who at present seem'd but too firmly united against the Royal Interest. But to adjourn a little from the Affairs of Scotland.

At the end of eight Years, when Calais was, according to the Articles of the Treaty at Cambray, to be restor'd to the English, Sir Tho. Smith was sent into France, with Sir William Winter, Master of the Naval-Stores, and there they demanded with Sound of Trumper, and with an Audible Voice, in the French Tongue, before the Gate of Calair de Calair next to the Sea, the Town and Territory Calais de Calais next to the Sea, the 1001 and 1671tory manded of Calais, with a proportion of Ammunition, according to the Treaty. And prefently was there an Act of this Register'd by a Publick Notary, and certain Merchants of Germany, and others of Halland, were call'd as Witnesses thereto. Some time after, he went to the King at Fossat-Castle, and there he and Sir Henry Norris, at rojar-tajtis, and there is and sin tany form, Ambaffador in Ordinary, made the fame Demand again. The King referr'd the Matter to his Council; and Michael Hospital, Chancellor, debated the Cafe in a grave and form'd Speech to this purpole. By the fame Right the English demand Calais, they may as well lay claim to Paris; for the one as well as the other was won by Arms, and both were loft the fame way. The English plead a new Title to Calais, whereas the Title of the French is of the fame date with the Kingdom itself. Altho the English had it in Postession about Two hundred and thirty Years, yet the Right was as much in the Kings of France, as were the Oukedoms of Guiene and Normandy, which the English detain'd a long time by force. Now Calas with those Dukedoms the French had not purchas'd, but recover'd by the Sword. The prescription of Time by them pretended, is of Tables, the Authority remains perpetual against Ann. 10. an Enemy. The English use great Precautions in making of Treaties, and yet in the late one at Troys, after they had commenc'd a War for the fake of Calais principally, yet Calais was not fo much as mention'd; so that they seem'd to have quite abandon'd their Pretentions to that place. The Treaty of Troys was but a renewing of a former Treaty; fo that the same League was but made twice over; nor is that Clause, relating to the Reservation of Rights, any manner of Objection, because it concerns merely small and inlignificant matters, whereas this of Calais is of the weightiest Consideration. The Attempts of Francis II. in Scotland, could by no means affect the Right of Char IX. Indeed the very Aims of private Perfons are in some respects liable to the Laws; but the case of Princes is quite different. As for the Attempts in Scotland being a Kingdom held as a Jointure, the English ought to expostulate the matter with the Queen of Scots, fince they are fo expert at gueffing the Defigns of Francis and the Queen: But as for themselves, they made bold to seize on New-Haven in France, under colour of keeping it for the King, held it by force, and put a strong Garison therein with fuicable Provisions; and at the same time fur-nish'd Conde and the Consederates with Money. And therefore they have forfeited their claim to Calais through their own Milconduct. It hath pleas'd God to reduce Calais into the Hands of the French, and fo to end the War between France and England, Nations which his ' Providence had parted by the Interpolition of ' a very wide Channel; as 'tis in the Poet.

no Confideration among Princes, but the Right always takes place, and by the Law of the 12 1567-

Et penitus toto divisos Orbe Britannos.

Britain (a lovely Isle) which Seas divide, As a choice Tract, from all the World beside.

The Queen of England would also much better confult her own Welfare and Convenience, by keeping on a fair Correspondence with France, than by re-demanding Calais. In a word, none would be found Sanguine enough to perfuade the King to restore Calais; or had any the Assurance to do so, he would deserve Death, if not a worse Doom, after it, for his

To this Smith reply'd, 'That he did not ex- Smith's pect to find the antiquated Title which the rep'y. French had to Calais infifted on at this time of Day: But he now perceiv'd that whatever the French had got, right or wrong, into their Clutches, they would make bold to call their own, as if their Title hung at their Sword's point; and they matter'd not whether they held it with a good or an ill Conscience. The French perfuade themselves they hold Calais by right of Recovery, whereas they only hold it on Compact: Nor will they admit of any later Treaty; and feem fully refolv'd not to ftand to one Tittle of their Promife in reference to the Restitution of Calais. But these Pretences must bear down all Reason and Sense. As for the Encomiums bestow'd on the English, for their Coolness and Discretion in the management of Treaties, those the French have generally affum'd to themfelves in derogation from the English; besides, the renewing of Treaties is what may be turn'd upon the French as a sitting Repartee, for that the Queen demanded Calais, because the French forfeited their claim when they attempted Changes and raifed Com-6 motions

Hespital's answer to the demand.

1567. Ann. 10.

motions in Scotland: On the contrary, the French would exclude the English from Calais, on pretence that the Queen afterwards made an Affault upon New-Haven, When neither fide (continues he) would abate any thing in this Dispute, a Peace was concluded at Trojes; and f if a Renovation was the effect of that, this very fresh Claim cancell'd the Right of the French to Calais, and confirm'd that of the English, whose turn was not yet come, their claim to Calais being not to commence till the end of eight Years. Here riling from his Seat, and applying himfelf to the Council of France, I appeal, fays he, to the Consciences of you who are here prefent, whether upon the Motion we made to have our Right to Calais referv'd in express Terms, and their urging the omission of that Clause, because the Time was not yet expired, it were not agreed on by mutual conexpired, it were not agreed on by mutual con-fent, that it flould be tacitly imply'd under that Paragraph, vix. All other Claims, and De-mands fluill remain fafe and entire; and in like man-ner the Executions and Defences fluil be referv'd. As for New-Haven, the English made a peaceable Entry, being invited by the Inhabitants and Noblemen of Normandy, and under Protesta-tions to keep and secure it for the French King. So then, they made no Hostile Attempts upon the French King, nor any Alterations in prejudice of the Treaty: And tho' they held it, twas not in any Right of Property, but as a Pledge or Security that they should have Right done 'em as to Calais, which had been fo long The claim whereof, both as to the detain'd. The claim whereof, both as to the Point of Possession and Propriety, did devolve " upon the Queen, upon the Attempts made by the French in Scotland directly contrary to the Treaty. As for the Money, it was lent to Conde and the Confederates, with no other intent than to pay off the German Soldiers, who were ready to Mutiny, that they might not Ravage the King's Countries and Towns; all which the King had owned in his Edict to have been done, !A bon fin, & pour noire Service; that is, To a good end, and for our Service. This, and more to the same purpose was urged by Smith. Then the Conflable, Monimorency, held up a Sword without a Scabbard fet with Flower-de-Luces, (the Badge of his Place) and talked much of the mighty Provisions the English made in New-Haven, as if they had been enough to conquer all Nor-mandy initead of one poor Town. There is no reafon, Tays Smith, to wonder at this, because the English, who lie upon the Sea, know very well that they cannot command the Winds, which command that; and therefore they made sufficient and seasonable Provifions for the future. The French, after this, making heavy Complaints that the Protestant French Refugees were not deliver'd (according to Agreement) to the French Embassador on de-mand, adjourn'd the Business till another time, till at length it dwindled into nothing on the account of a Civil War which foon after fprung up in France. And it cannot be doubted but the French had fully determin'd not to restore Calais. For, as foon as 'twas taken, they demolished the old Forts and began new ones, and Let the Houses and Lands, besides those they gave away quite, for fifty Years.

Whilft thefe things were transacting in France, Count Stolberg came into England from the Emperor Maximilian, to treat about a Match with the to Treat for Maximilian, to treat about a Match with the ofamith Archduke Charles, and the Queen had a little before dispatched the Earl of Suffex to the Emperor Archduke on the same occasion, and with a Compliment of the Order of St. George. He, out of Respect to his Country, and the Envy he bore to Leicefer, used all possible Efforts to bring about a Match between the Queen and fome foreign Prince, that Leicester's Hopes might be defeated. Ann. And Suffex had it commonly in his Mouth, That And Soffex had it commonly in his Mouth, I had a foreign Prince had the preference of any Englishman, tho of the fielk Rank, in respect to 1 house, Power and Wealth. Which occasioned one, of another Opinion, to say pleasantly in his presence, Where However, Power and Ribers, are the three things only considered in a Marriage, the Devil and the World are the Match-makers. Yet Leticsfer soothing bimself the Match-makers. Yet Leticsfer soothing bimself the same house morth's with the ftill with the same hopes, practis d with the Lord North (who travell'd as a Companion with Suffex) to make Remarks upon all that was faid and done, and privately to defeat all the Advances Suffex should make with the Archduke, by some tacit hints, that the Queen was not at all inclin'd to marry, whatever she pretended, or Sussex endeavour'd to make appear to the contrary. Nor was he less busy at home in filling the Queen's Ears with the feveral Inconveniences attending on a foreign Alliance. He represented to her the effects of a late Match between Queen Mary her Sifter, and Philip of Spain, which embroil'd her in continual Troubles, and brought England under the danger of a Spanish Yoke. He pleaded, that the Cultoms and Tempers of Foreigners could hardly be learnt, which yet are things absolutely necessary to be discover'd in an Husband, who should be of the same Spirit and Disposition, as well as of the same Flesh with his Wife. That 'twas a very instem and uneaste Life to converse with a Language and Deportment altogether flrange and foreign. That the Off-spring of such foreign Marriages was usually uncouth and defective. That Strangers infeeted a Kingdom with new Methods and odd Customs. That when Princes match'd abroad, they augmented others Kingdoms, not their own, subject themselves and theirs to a foreign Dominion, and difcover the Secrets of their Government to Strangers. That an Husband who is a Stranger, will, out of a natural Regard for his Country, prefer his own Countrymen to the English. That England needs no foreign Aid, fince the is ftrong enough to defend herfelf and others against all foreign Assaults. That the addition of a new Kingdom brings nothing but Care, Trouble and Expence, along with it; And that Empires, like human Bodies, fink under their own weight. That the usual Saying (that Marriages at home lessen the Royal Character is applied by fome Persons in meer Affront to the Nobility, whereas the Queen herfelf, whose Virtues have raifed her to the Dignity of a Throne, owes her Extraction to, and borrows her Regal Title from, the Noble Blood of England: And therefore 'tis that the Kings of England have in their occasional Letters to Dukes, Marquesses, Earls and Viscounts, always given them the Title of Coufins.

Suffex, in the mean time, paffed with a very Difficul-fine Retinue by Antwerp, Cologn, Mentz, Worms, ties arise Spires, Ulm and Ausburgh, in his way to Austria; as to the where he was honourably Entertain 4, Months strongether at the Emperor's Charge, and held together at the Emperor's Charge and held daily Conferences with him about Affairs of moment; and among others, the Marriage with the Archduke. After this, on a Day fix'd for the purpose, he Installed the Emperor, at Evening Service, Knight of the Garrer, tho his Conficience would not allow him to be present at Mass. From this Negotiation there sprang some Difficulties relating to Religion, the Duke's Maintenance, the Title of King, and the Point of Succession; all which were warmly canvals'd on both fides. For the Title, the Archduke was to bear that of King of England; then for the Succession, the Laws of the Land debarred 1567. him of that, because twould be an Injury to the Ann. 10. Children they might have. But 'twas agreed however, that he should be their Guardian during their Minority; and this was all that was granted to Philip of Spain when he marry'd Queen Mary. Now in relation to his Maintenance, if he would confent to maintain at his own Charge the Train and Equipage he brought into the Kingdom, the Queen would be ready to furnish all other points of Grandeur answerable to the an orner points of Grandeur aniwerable to the State of a Prince, and bear the other Expences too rather than fail. But touching Religion, there the matter fluck. The Emperor demanded, and his Son likewife, the Privilege of a Publick Church for himfelf and his Servants, where might be perform'd Divine Service after the Re-milb manner. When this Point could not be gain'd, the Emperor contrived a middle Way, which was, the having a private Chappel in some Worship of God quietly, (as the Ambassadors of Catholick Princes were allow'd to do in their Houses) And this to be permitted on these Conditions: That no Englishman should be admitted to ditions: Ibat no Englishman spould be admitted to it; nor himself, nor any of his Donnesticks, speak any thing to the Disparagement of the Religion establish d; nor countenance any that do: That if his Way of Working happen'd to give any Offence, he should oblige himself to forbear it for a time; and that he should also be present with the Queen, at the Service of the Church of England. To be short, after this Business has a passed a lange and thought Consideration in Fernanda. pass'd a long and thorow Consultation in England, the Queen's Answer was: That should she grams, the Queen's Milliver was: 18st foodd five admit of this, five mift wrong her Conficience, and make a palpable Violation of the Laws, if not endanger her Honour and Security. But if the Arch-duke Charles thought fit to come over into England, and wifit the Queen; his Voyage might perhaps be worth his while! When the whole. Sufeways hoposphy 46is/ic/ Upon the whole, Suffex was honorably difinifed, and went fomething out of his Way to Gratz, to take his leave of the Arch-duke, who was not to look for any other or more favorable Answer from the Queen: For a very little Time ferv'd to offace the very Traces of those Designs, which had been carrying on for Seven Years together;

The matter is let delay.

Suffex fent to the Emperor

The Neeotiation. proves un-fuccefsful.

ing and Friendship between the Two Princes, as made the Emperor, on all occasions, thwart the Pope's Practices against Queen Elizabeth. It Archduke was not long after, that the Arch-duke married marries. Mary, the Daughter of Albert V. Duke of Bavamarries. ria, by whom he had the Queens of Spain and Poland, besides other Children.

and by very honorable Steps and Applications:

There remain'd, however, that good Understand-

About this time arriv'd in England Stephen Twerdice and Theodore Pogorella, from the most potent Emperor John Bafilides, Emperor of Russia and Molecula, with rich Furs of Sables, Lucerns, &c. which did then, and in former times, bear a mighty Value with the Englift, both for their Ornament and Ufe. They made great Profession ons and Tenders of Friendship to the Queen and the Nation; as the Emperor had already done, on the occasion of some Particulars I shall-here

English

hly, ory.

Whillt fome Merchants of the City of London, find a Paf the chief of which were Andrew Judd, George tage into Barnes, William Gerard, and Anthony Husley, were attempting a Passage thro' the North-Channel into Cathay, in the Year 1553, under the Conduct of Sir Hugh Willoughby, who was frozen to death; Rich. Chanceller, who was the next Adventurer, was fo lucky as to discover one into Russia, till then unknown, by the Mouth of the River Dwina, lying in 64 Degrees of Northern Latitude; where stands a little Monastery dedicated to St. Nicholar. Hither the Emperor fent some Sleds to carry 'em upon the Ice to Molcow, after the Custom of the Country. He received and 1567. dismiss'd 'em with extreme Courtese, and pro-dom. 10. mis'd the English vast Advantages, if they would open a Trade into his Country. Nor was he a open a Trade into his Country. Nor was he a little pleas'd to find that forein Wares might be fo easily imported by Sea into Russia; which the Ruffians had before brought to em, with a great deal of Difficulty, by the way of Nerva, and the Countries of Poland; which held no good Agreement with them.

As foon as Chanceller return'd, and gave this Account, and how high a Rate English Cloaths were fold at in those Parts, and what a cheap Price Flax and Hemp, Wax, and richer forts of Furs, went at there; those Merchants procured original the Queen's Parent to establish themselves into of the Queen's raterit to enabling inclineaves into a Company, call'd The Mufcovy-Cempany; who having many Privileges granted 'em by the Emperor, fettl'd a vaft Trade, and fent a Fleet thicher once a Year. But that which rais'd their Advantage to the Height, was this, that Queen Elizabeth so well improved her Interest with Bafilides, as to obtain a Grant, in the Year 1569, that none but the English Company should be allowed to trade into the North of Russia, or have Liberty to disperse or vend their Commodities in any part of rhat spatious and large Empire; as shall be shewn in its place.

With these Ruffian Ambassadors return'd Anthony fenkinson into England, who had taken a most accurate Map of Russia, and was the first Englishman who adventur'd thro the Caspian Sea, to the Country of the Bastrians. To him the Emperor gave fome Instructions, which he did not take care to communicate to his Countrymen, viz. That he to communicate to his Countrymen, viz. Loan no should earneftly preß the Queen to fettle a League offen-five and defenfeve; and to fupply Russia viish Shipverights, Sailors, and simmunition; and to endeavour to get an Oath from her, that she would assort his shifted private and Family a safe Reveat, should be happen to lefe his Message Ringdom, by the Sword of forein or donestick Enemies. So little secure was this Tyrant in his own Museovy. Thoughts, who had endanger'd the Safety and Quiet of fo many; Nor can we believe he took it well at the Queen's hands, that she gave so little Notice to these Remonstrances, notwithstanding he still ply'd the same Affair both by Letters and Embaffies, fometimes requiring that the faid fenkinfon should be tent home, as having been falle to the weighty Trust reposed in him.

In the very first Month of this Year, died Ni- Death of colas Wotton, Doctor of the Common and Civil Dr. Nic. Law, Dean both of Canterbury and York, at the Wotton, fame time : A Person well descended, but far more valuable for his wife Conduct of Affairs, both at home and abroad. For he had been Privy-Counfellor, not only to King Henry VIII. Edward VI. Queen Mary, and Queen Elizabeth; but was fent Nine feveral times Ambassador to the Emperor, the Kings of France, Spain, and other Princes: Thrice was he a Commissioner for fettling Peace between the English, French, and Scots; and was chosen by King Henry VIII. One of the Sixteen Overseers of his last Will and Testament.

The same Year, died Elizabeth Leibourne, the Andofthe third Wife of Thomas Duke of Norfolk, who had Duchels of been Widow to the Lord Dacres, and marry'd to Norfolk. the Duke about a Year; but brought him never a Child. Her former Husband had by her George Lord Dacres, who died young, by the Misfortune of the great Horse's Falling upon him, as he was learning to vault; besides three Daughters, who were engaged by Contract to three of the Duke's

I have already given an Account, how, in the Year 1560, and 1562, Shan-Oneal, the lawful Son of Con-Oneal, nicknamed Bacco, or the Lame, a

Mulcovy Company,

Shan O. neal riles in Arms.

Man of the first Interest in the North of Ireland, | 1567. call'd Ulfter, came into England, and begg'd the Ann.10. Queen's Pardon for having been in Rebellion. Upon his return, he bravely defended that Part of Ireland against the Insults of the Scots, from the Quarters of Cantire and the Hebrides, and flew their Leaders, James Mac-Conel, who was his Father-in-law, and his Brother Agne. Being flushed with this Conquest, he began to lord and domineer it over the Petry Lords of Ulster, and burnt down Armagh, the Metropolis of Ireland, in pure hatred to the Primate. He stripp'd O-donell, whose Estate lay nearest to him, of his House and Land, took him Prisoner, and committed a Rape upon his Wife. He Robb'd Mac-Guise of his Paternal Estate, and Treated Mac-Genis and others much after the same rate. when the English undertook the Redress of these Grievances, he fet up his rebellious Colours against the Queen, but presently took them down again thro' the perfuation of Sir Tho. Cufack Kt. and deliver'd his Son for a Pledge of his future Loyalty and Obedience. To keep him firm herein; the Queen refolv'd to cancel the Patent of King Henry VIII. wherein he declared Matthew (fallely supposed to be the Son of Con) his Father's Successor, and to confer the Honour of Earl of Tir-Oen, and Baron of Dungannon, upon this Shan, who was the undoubted Son and Heir. But he, being a Man of an unquiet and turbulent Spirit, when he found himfelf strong enough to raife 1000 Horse and 4000 Foot among his own Creatures and Followers, and had already a Guard of 700 Men about his Perfon, through a Pride and Savageness very natural to him, difdained these as petty and infignificant Titles, compared with the Name of O-neal, and gave himself the Title of King of Ulster, training up the Country-People to Martial Discipline, and offering the Government of Ireland to the Queen of Scots. And so inveterate an Hatred did he bear the English, that he named a Castle which he built in the Lake Eaugh, Feoghnegall; i. e. The Hatred of the English: And so far was he transported therewith, as to strangle some of his Men for but feeding upon English Bread. And yet for all this, he never mention'd the Queen but with terms of Respect.

Sir Henry Sidney, the Lord-Deputy, receiv'd Orders to advance against this Rebel. And Edward Randolph, an excellent Commander, was fent by Sea, with a Corner of Horfe and Seven hundred Foot to the Coasts of Ulster, as far as Derry, a fmall Bifhop's See, to charge him in the Rear, at the same time that the Lord-Deputy attack'd him in the Front. Shan, having got fome Intelligence thereof, made a furious Affault upon Dundalk; but was beaten off by the Garifon, and received a shameful Defeat both here and at Whites-Castle. After which, he was routed and put to Flight by a small Handful of English, and with a confiderable lofs on his fide, just as he was going to destroy the Country of Louth with Fire and Sword. His next March was to Derry, where he Infulted the English Garifon, and Ra vag'd the Country round about: But the English having ranged themselves in order of Battel, foon made a shift to break through a Crowd of raw and undisciplin'd Fellows, and to deseat and disperse them. But a very dear Conquest it was, since it cost the Life of Randolph, the chief Commander, who was killed Fighting amongst the thickest of the Enemies. And certainly never did Man deserve a fairer and more honourable Remembrance, for the Authority he maintained, and the Love and Respect he deservedly fhared among the Soldiers. His Commission was given to Edward Saint Lo, who proved a severe Scourge to the Rebels in thole Parts, till by a fad and fudden Difafter the Town and Garifon 1567. took Fire, and the Powder and Provinons, with a Ann. 10. great many of his Men, were blown up and de hery troy'd. Upon this Accident, he put his Foot burnt by aboard fone small Veifels he had, and he him-accident, of the wind her troy'd. felf with the Troop of Horle, Commanded by George Harvey, broke through the midth of the Enemies Forces; and by a four Days March joined the Lord-Deputy, who was then in Mourning for Randolph, whose Bravery he had an high efteem for.

And now the Lord-Deputy marches into Uller. and Shan retires into the Woods and Thickets, making now and then some faint Attacks on the Enemies Rear near Clogber and Salmen, a Cadle belonging to Turleugh Leinigh, who had a little before revolted from Shan: But as foon as the Lord-Deputy's Men were put into Garifon, and O-donell put in Possession of his Estate, and was return'd in order to make up some Differences between the Earls of Ormond and Defmend, who were engag'd in a most fatal Quarrel; Shan takes Courage again, Pillages the Country all about, stan and lays a fecond Siege to Dundalk. But he was maker foon oblig'd to raife it, with equal Damage and other Difgrace, and a vaft Slaughter of his Men be- hairbes fides; whereupon the Savage Humour gain'd anaultthe ascendant, and put him upon the Exercise of extreme Barbarities to his own Men, which occasion'd the Revolt of a great many; fo that when he found the poor and shatter'd Condition of his Troops, (there being, belides Deferters, 4000 flain) when he saw all the Avenues secur'd, and the Passes guarded by the English, he then took up a kind of Resolution to cast himfelf on the Lord-Deputy's Mercy, with an Halter about his Neck, and a Confession in his Mouth: But his Secretary diffuaded him, and ad vised him first to try the Friendship of the Highland Scots, who, during the brunt of the War, had recreated to Clinde-boy, from whence they were driven out a little before, under the Conduct of Alexander Oge and Mac-Gillespick, whose two Brothers, Agne and James M.c-Conell, himfelf had slain in the Field. To these he ar length betakes himfelf with O-donell's Wife whom he had ravish'd, and to regain their good whom he had rayin d, and to regain their good opinion, he fent before-hand their Brother Surfy-Boy, or the Yellow, whom he had a long time detain'd a Prifoner. They, to revenge the death of their Brethren and Kinfmen flain by him, treated him with a kind of diffembling Courtefy; but having got him into their Tents, and fall-ling in their Cups to hot Words, they fell upon Heis distra-him and murder'd him and most of his Affociates, for fome defamatory Expressions of his against their Mother.

the middle of June, after he had 10bb'd his Father of his Government, and his Brother of his Life. A Man he was who had fained his Hinds with Blood, and dealt in all the Pollutions of unchast this class. with about, and dealt in all the Fallitions of unclosed Hit Car-Embraces; and so familialism as distribution and Drunkerd Tacher and was be befide, that he would often lie up to the Chin in Dirt to cool the feverifib Heats of his intemperare Luft. The Children he left by his Wife were Henry and Sham, but he had feveral more by O-donell's Wife, and others of his Miltreffes. His O-done is when and denois of his Afficients. This Goods and Chattels were forfeited by Aft of Parliament; and Turlough Leineigh, a Man of the first Interest of his Family, and of a modest and peaceable Spirit, was by the Queen's leasure that the agents with the Chatter. chose and faluted by the People with the Character of O-neal. Nevertheless Hugh, commonly called Baron of Dungannon, Shan's Nephew by his Brother Matthew's fide, a young Person of an indifferent Character, and who liv'd afterwards

Ggg

Vol. II.

Thus did Shan come to this bloody End about

Randelph

Forces ลยลเกสี

him.

He is puifed.

Troubles

in Mun-

to be the Scourge and Pest of his Country, was 1567. received into the Queen's Favour, as a necessary Ann. 10. Instrument to be made use of against Turlough, fhould he happen to quit his Duty and Allemade E. of Thus was Ulfter refettled in a peaceable Condition; but Munster was in the mean time under as violent Commotions, occasioned by the unhappy Rivalry of two Kinfmen, the Earls of Ormond and Defmond, who could not agree about the Extent of their Jurisdiction; insomuch that the matter came to a Battel near Dromelin, and the Litigants were fent for into England to argue the matter before the Council-Board. Neverthe thatter to case being surricate, they were re-fer'd to the Lord-Deputy in Ireland, where the Evidence and Witnesses were nearer at hand. But as they were upon the level as to Power and Interest, and had Spirits formed in the same Mould, fo they refolv'd the matter should be decided not by the best Law, but by the longest Sword. The Lord-Deputy interpos'd his Authority and Forces; but Ormand, willing to fet the better Face upon his Caufe, procur'd the Deputy to be Impeach'd as a favourer of Desmond, and got Orders to feize on his Person. Whereupon he was foon after furprized at Kilmanock, together with his Uncle John Defmond, and fent into England, where they were both committed to £ 568.

Hugh it giance.

The Eleventh Year of her Reign.

Popish Priests grant Ab-folution.

The Dif-

fenters difcover

thom-

felves.

Whilst Thomas Harding, Nicholas Sanders and T. P. (Clergymen who had withdrawn from England) were much taken up in exercifing the Epilcopal Authority they had lately received from the Bishop of Rome, of absolving the Consciences of fuch as returned to the Bosom of the Church, and difpenfing with feveral Diforders, fuch only excepted as related to cases of wilful Murder, or fell under the cognizance of a Judicial Court; as likewife of granting Abfolution in the case of Herefy, provided the Persons to be absolved abstain from the Service of the Altar for three Years: Coleman, Rutton, Hallingham, Benson, and others, who professed a more pure and reformed Religion with more Zeal than Knowledge, whether it was that they would admit of nothing which could not be immediately proved from Scripture, or that they affected a purer Reformation, or were really addicted to Novelty and Divilions, these Persons openly opposed the received Discipline of the Church of England, disputing the Liturgy and the regular Ordination of Bishops, and condemning them as having a mixture of Popish Superstition; (which they thought to be highly impious and abominable) fo that they used all possible Atof England new form'd upon the Geneva-Model. And tho' the Queen commanded them to be put under Confinement, yet 'tis almost incredible how this Sect, called then by an invidious Name, the Puritans, gathered and encreased every where, through a felfish Obstinacy on their side, the Bishops Indiscretion, and the secret Countenance of certain Noblemen, who gaped after a Mor-fel of Church-Lands. Not long before this time, the French, who Civil War had likewife attempted a Reformation of Reliin France. gion, out of an apprehension that the Papists had formed the Holy League against them, ap-plied themselves in an humble Address to his Majetly: From whence arose soon after a second Civil War; to compose which, the Queen commanded Norris, her Embaffador, to use his ut-most Mediations; and there ensued a Peace thereon; but fuch an one as feemed to carry ncthing but Treachery and ill Defigns at the bortom. And now it was that the Queen-Mother Ann. 11. of France began to treat the Embassador and others of the English Nation, with a cajoling kind of Civility, and to drop fome dark Hints and The D. of of Civility, and to drop iome data finds and incoming infinite of a find and an arriage betwire Queen Ell-drop and rescaled and her Son Heart, Duke of Anjan, who content was scarce Seventeen Years of Age. And this de to with no other defign (as feveral were of opinion) than to keep her from fending any Succours to the French Protestants under a third Civil War, which she thought was very near breaking out. But Man, the English Embassador in Spain, re-ceived but very course Entertainment; for ha-bissador ving been taxed with dropping some disrespect-ill treated ful Expressions about the Pope, he was forbid in Spain. the Court, and fent from Madrid to the Confinement of a Country Village, and his Servants forced in the mean time to be present at Mass, whilft the exercife of his own Religion was altogether forbid. Whether this was done in spite to the Queen, or her Perfuasion, is not easily gueßd; but certain it is, that the treated Guf-man, the Spanish Embassador, after a manner of Gvillity quite contrary to this fort of Treatment, and allow d him the free use of his own Reliability in the gion. She could not therefore but regret this ill kins in deliberation of the Embaffador, as a dishonour done to herfelf, as she did likewise the Injury done by the Spaniards to Sir John Hawkins at the same This Gentleman had put in at St. Fohn de Ullua, in the Bay of Mexico, with five Merchant Ships laden with Goods and Negroes, Commo-dities which were bought up in Africa by the Spaniards, and from them by the English, to make a better Market of in America. The very next Day the King of Spain's Royal Fleet arrived at the fame Port; which tho' he could have prevented from coming into the Bay, yet he allow'd them fafe Harbour, on Security given and certain Conditions made, that he might be no ways charged with a breach of the Treaty. The Spaniards being now got in, and fcorning to be tied down to Terms within their own Dominions, watched their opportunity, fet upon the English, slew a great many, and took and rifled three Ships. But this Victory was not by them without much Bloodshed obtain'd. This bred very ill Blood in the English Sailors and Soldiers, who now began to grow importunate for a War with Spain, and to exclaim against them as breakers of the Truce; inasmuch as 'twas made an Article in the Treaty between the Emperor Charles V. and King Henry VIII. That there should be free Commerce settled between the Subjects of both Princes, in all and each of their Kingdoms, Isles and Dominions, not excepting America, which did at that time belong to the Emperor. But the Queen took little notice of this, having enough to do with the Affairs of Scotland. For about this time, on the 2d of May, The Q of the Captive Queen made her escape from her scots Confinement in Lough-Levin in Scotland, to Ha-makes her Commencer in Longo Section in Sections, Color and Markon in Milton-Caffle, by the affitance of George Douglas, scape of Brother to the Person under whose Custody she of Prison was. Where, upon hearing the Affidavits of Rebert Melvin and others, a Sentence Declaratory was pronounced by the unanimous Confent of a great Body of Noblemen there conven'd, fignifying, That the Relignation extorted from the Queen under her Tears in Prison, was Ipso facto null and void, and that it was obtain'd by force, of which the Queen's Oath, who was then pre-fent, was a fufficient Confirmation. Hereupon, there gather'd to her in two or 3 Days time fuch a vaft throng and confluence of People, as furnish'd her with an Army of 6000 fighting Men, who were notwithstanding easily routed by Mur-1568. ray, as having engag'd with more Heat than eiquite disheartned with this bad Success, thought Kalles an it best to sty, and secur'd herself by Riding that Day 60 Miles; and after this she travelled by Night to the House of Maxwell, Baron of Heris, and chose rather to trust to the Mercy of the Sea and Queen Elizabeth's Courtesy, than the Loyalty of her own Subjects. However, to prepare the way to her better Reception, the fent the Queen a Diamond by John Beton, (the very fame the had received from her as a Pledge of mutual and lafting Friendship) and let her Majesty understand withal, that she designed to come into England and put herfelf under the Queen's Protection, if her Subjects continued their rebellious Hostilities against her. Queen promised her all the Aid and Friendship she could expect from so near a Relation as a She comes Sifter. But before the Messenger's return, she into Eng- had taken Boat with the Lords Heris and Fleming, and a few more, (contrary to the Persuasions of all her Friends) and on the 17th of May arrived at Wirkinson in Cumberland, near the Mouth of the Derwent; and the same Day wrote a Letter to Queen Elizabeth in French under her own The chief Contents of which I have thought fit to give you from the Original here fet down, because it contains the History of her Sufferings in Scotland in a fuller way of Relation than I have yet offer'd. The Words are as follows.

A Gecond

quished.

Her Letter to

"You cannot but be fensible (most dear Sister) "What Plots have been fram'd to imprison my-" felf and Husband, even by those Men whom " I have raised to an envied pitch of Greatness; " and likewise, how ready I was, at your Ma-" jesty's Intercession, to receive them again in-" to Favour, after they had been forcibly driven " from my Kingdom; yet had these Men the Considence to break into my Chamber, to ec murder my Servant in the most barbarous "manner before my Face, and to confine my own Perfon when I was great with Child.
"And when they had got a fecond Pardon from " me, they went fo far as to charge me with a " new pretended Crime, and fign this Accusa-tion with their own Hands; and had, it "feems, an Army ready to oppose me. But I was willing to spare the effusion of my Sub-" jects Blood, and fo put myfelf, under the "Guard of my own Innocence, into your Hands. They immediately cast me into Pri-" fon, stript me of my Servants, all but a Maid " or two, my Cook, and my Physician, threat-" ned and terrify'd me into the Resignation of " my Kingdom, and refus'd an Hearing to my-" felf and Council in a Convention or Juncto which they afterwards called. The next " which they afterwards called. "thing was the feizing on my Goods, and debarring me the Privilege of any Conversation. After this, it pleas'd God to savour my escape from Prison. And being now guarded "by the very Flower of the Nobility, who "cheerfully gather'd to me from all Parts, I re-" minded my rebellious Subjects of the Duty " and Allegiance they ow'd to me, I offer'd "them a free Pardon, and propos'd an Hearing in Parliament of the Caufes or Grievances on " both fides, that the Government might be no " longer embroil'd by Civil Diffentions: Two "Meffengers I fent on this very Errand, and they were both clapt up: Those that affifted me they proclaim'd Traytors, and comman-" ded them by publick Order to defert my Per-" fon and Interest. I desir'd them to accept of " the Lord Boyd as an impartial Umpire between us, to fettle and accommodate Matters on o both fides: But this was refus'd. However, 1562. I hoped fill that your Majeffy's Mediation and have work'd them up to a dutiful Compliance. But when I faw twas come to that, that I must either be a Sacrifice or a Plisoner once more, I took up a Resolution to go to Dunbritton. They were as much resolv'd to flop my Journey, and in a following Skir-mith, killed fome of my Men, and put the rest to slight. I at last got fafe to my Lord Heris, who has accompany'd me into your Kingdom; and I promife myfelf from your Friendship and Generosity, the Aid and Protection I want; and that you will influence others to Affilt me, by your own Example. I therefore most earnestly request the Favour " of a safe Conduct to your Majesty, for I am " now under the most preffing Exigences, as I "fhall fatisfy you more at large, if you shall think my Condition worth your Pity or Re-gard. God grant you a Life long and happy, and me Comfort and Patience; which " hope and pray that his Providence may make " you the bleffed Instrument of procuring to me. Queen Elizabeth fent her the most obliging

Letters by Sir Francis Knolls, and others; and

promis'd her all the Protection which was due to the Justice of her Cause. However, she would not consent to admit her to her Presence, because she stood charg'd with many Mismanagements; and therefore order'd fhe should be con-wey'd to Carlisle, by Louder, Depucy-Warden of veyed to that City, and the Gentlemen of the County, Carisle. as to a Place of more Security, should her Enemies make any Attempts against her. Upon the receipt of this Answer, and the Queen's refusing to see her, she renew'd her Request both by Letters, and by Maxwell Baron Heris: "That Her 2d fhe might have leave to remonstrate the Letter. "Wrongs which had been done, and clear her-" felf of the Crimes laid to her charge; infift-"ing, how reasonable a thing it was, that the "Queen, her near Kinswoman, should afford " her a patient Hearing, Support her Exile by "her Company and Presence, and restore her to her Crown and Kingdom, in opposition to "those whom she had pardon'd and restor'd, af-"ter their Rebellion had made them run their "Country, to her own absolute Ruin, unless "timely prevented. She intreated her therefore " either to admit her to her Prefence, in order " to fome redrefs of her Misfortunes; or elfe to " have leave to depart immediately out of the "Kingdom, to crave fome Succours elfewhere; "and that the might no longer live like a Pri-" foner in Carlifle Castle, since her coming into

" kens These Letters, join'd with Heris's Representa-tions, had such an effect on Queen Eliz. beth, that fhe feem'd at least touch'd (for who can dive into the Hearts of Princes, of which they who are Wife always keep the Key?) with an hearty and feeling Sense of her Kinswoman's Disasters; who was not only feiz'd and imprison'd by her own Subjects, but hunted almost to Death, condemn'd without Hearing, and robb'd of her Kingdom, contrary to all the Laws of Equity between Man and Man, and at hit forc'd to fly into England in hope of the Queen's Aid and Pro tection. And the rather was the Queen inclin'd to hear her, because she had freely submitted her Cause to a fair and equal Debate, and engag'd

" England was a voluntary Act of her own, in

" confidence of that Friendship the Queen had

" made fo many honourable profettions and pro-" mifes of, by Letters, Meifages, and other To-

> Vol. II. Ggg2

to prove her Adversaries guilty of all the Misferious Debate.

1568. carriages they had unjustly loaded her with. But Ann. 11. whatever tender Resentments Queen Elizabeth might have of her case, the Council entred into might have of her cale, the Council entred into condition of her. If the were still entertain'd in England, TheCounthey were apprehensive she might, by the adcil hold a vantage of that Fluency and Eloquence fhe was fo great a Mistress of, win many to her Interests, who already savour'd her Title to the Succession, and this would ferve to nourish her Ambition, and perhaps encourage fome Attempts to place the Crown upon her Head. And as foreign Embaffadors would give an helping Hand to fuch a Project, so would the Scots themselves turn good Subjects again, when they were like to be fuch gainers by the Bargain. Besides, twas very possible Keepers might betray their Trust; and farther, should she die in England, tho' in the common way of a Difease, it might draw after it a great many ill Consequences, besides the Calumny and Censure it might occa-sion. Then again, should she be sent over into France, they were afraid the Guiles, her Kinfmen, would again revive the Profecution of her claim to England, out a notion of some great Feats she might be capable of doing in England, by the Influence she had on some, on a religious Account; and the Interest she bore with others, as they stood affected to the Firmness of her Claim, or the Itch of Change and Novelty. Befides, 'twas a ready way to break the Union between England and Scotland, which was of much greater Consequence, and to revive the Treaty between the latter and France; which would have worfe Effects now than heretofore, when Burgundy was upon terms of Peace with England, which had now no Friends but the Scots to trust. And should they fend her back to Scotland, the fear was, that all those in the English Interest must lose their Places, and the French be advanc'd in their flead. That the young Prince would be exposed, changes made in Religion, and the French and other Foreigners let into the King-dom: In a word, That the Highland Scots would be more troublefome to Ireland, and the Queen herfelf be in more hazard of her Life from her Enemies at home. 'Twas therefore the Judgment of the far greater part of the Council, to have her detain'd as a Prisoner of War; and that she should not be surrender'd till she gave Satisfaction for usurping the Title to the Crown, and fome Answer to the Point of her Husband the Lord Darly's death, who was a Native and Subject of England. For the Lord Darly's Mo-Countels h-r Comther, the Countess of Lenox, had lately made very mournful Complaints to the Queen in her own and her Husband's name, and humbly beg'd the Queen of Scots might be brought to her Trial for the Murder of her Son. But the Queen gave her both Comfort and Advice, telling her The Q of how careful fhe ought to be of fixing a Charge England's of that heinous nature upon fo great a Princess and a Kinfwoman of hers, when there was no certain Proof or Evidence of the Fact. And she faid withal, That the Iniquity of the Times and the Partiality of the World was fuch, that a blind Malice would charge guilt upon the most Innocent Head, whereas Justice was more quicklighted, and God would not fail to make Actions.

proper to

of Lenex

plaint,

use of it in the punishment of lewd and wicked Murray The Lord Heris intreated the Queen on the calls a Par- other hand, not to afford too ready an Ear or too hafty a Belief to any Untruths that might pass about a Queen, whose Cause had not yet been heard; nor to consent to Murray's hurrying on the Sellion of a Parliament in Scotland to the prejudice of the ejected Queen, and the confequent Ruin of her good Subjects. This the 1578. Queen of England profs'd very home: But for Ann II. all that, Murray, the Regent, call'd a Parliament in the King's Name, and feiz'd on the Goods and Chattels of several who adher'd to the Queen's Caufe. Queen Elizabeth being much The Q.of incens'd at this Proceeding, fent the Regent a England tharp Message by Middlemore; letting him know, dillikes it. That she took it very ill he should encourage a Precedent of fuch dangerous Confequence to Kingly Power, which would be fure to bring the Crown into contempt with the Subject, and Submit it to the Lust and Faction of the Popu-But how far foever they might forget the Duty and Allegiance owing to their Prince, yet could not the neglect any Office of Piety or Humanity to the Queen, her Sifter and Neighbour. That he ought either to come in Perlon, or fend fitting Deputies to answer the Com- Deputies plaints the Queen made against him and his Par- appointed ty, and to give sufficient Reasons for deposing to the her. Otherwise she would directly order her Enlargement, and lend her what Affiftance she could to recover her Crown and Kingdom. And fhe caution'd him withal, not to dispose of the Queen's Wardrobe and Jewels, tho' the Parliament should permit or connive at it.

Murray obey'd the Queen, but unwillingly, and only as he was beholding to England to sup port his Regency. And whereas the Lords of the Kingdom who were pitched upon for Deputies, refus'd to act or appear in the matter Marray came himself to York, (the Place assign'd for this Business) and brought with him seven of his Bosom-Friends, to act as Commissioners for the Infanc-King, viz. James E. of Morton, Adam Bishop of Orkney, Robert Commendator of Dunser-melin, Patrick Baron of Lindsey, James Mac-Gilly, Henry Balnaw: And Lidington too came in the fame company, Murray having made him round Deputies Promifes, and being afraid, intruth, to leave from him at home; as did also George Buchanan, ano-Q Lliz. ther of Murray's most obsequious Creatures. The same Day came thither Thomas Howard Duke of Norfolk, Thomas Rateliff Eard of Sulfex, who was made fome time before Lord-Prelident of the North, and Sir Ralph Sadler Kt. one of the Privy-Council, Commissioners appointed to commis-Hear and Examine the Caufe of the Queen's be- fioners for ing Deposed. On the Queen of Scots side ap- the Q of pear'd fobn Lesley Bishop of Ross, William Baron of Scots. Levingston, Robert Baron of Boyd, Gawin Commendator of Kihvinin, John Gordon, and James Cock-burn. And this the Queen of Scots refented as very hard Measure, That Queen Elizabeth would not allow her a Personal Hearing, and yet gave Orders, that the Allegations of her Subjects should be heard before her Commissioners, tho' fhe, who was an Abfolute Princess, could not be oblig'd to answer the Charge of her own Subjects but when and how she pleas'd. When they were met, on the 7th of October, and had open'd their Commissions, and shewn their Authority, Lidington, who ftood by, ap-Liding-ply'd himfelf to his Countrymen with extraordi- ton's adnary Freedom, to this purpole: 'That foraf- rice to the much as it appear'd by the Authority granted by Queen Elizabeth to her Commissioners, that ' fhe defign'd nothing elfe but that the Deputies of Scotland should throw a Blemish on the Credit of their King's Mother, and so the Cafe might fall within her own Sentence and Umpirage: They would therefore do well to confider carefully before-hand, what an Odium and ' Hazard they should draw upon themselves, not only from those of Scotland, who favourd the Queen's Case; but likewise from other Chriliament.

' flian Princes, and her Kinfmen in France, should 1068. 'they impeach her of a Guilt which must stain Enn. 11. ' her Reputation, and that in fo publick and for-'mal a way, before the English who were profes'd 'Enemies to the Scots. He likewise demanded ' what Account they should be able to give their 'new King hereafter of fuch a bold and infolent 'Charge, and one fo prejudicial to the State of this 'Kingdom; when he, without all peradventure, as 'foon as he arriv'd at Man's Estate, wou'd consider 'it as a foul Reflection not only upon his own and his Mother's, but also upon his Country's Honour. He therefore, for his part, thought it the best Prudence to wave so scandalous an Im-' peachment, unless the Q of England would enter ' into a League offensive and defensive, to bear them out in fuch a Procedure. These things, 'he faid, he could not but give fome hints of, 'both as their Friend, and in regard to his Office, 'as he was Secretary of Scotland. But this Motion produc'd no other Effects, than a profound Silence, and a general Consternation.

The Queen of Scots Deputies, who had the preference at this Interview, before they were Sworn, protested, That altho' the Queen of Scots was willing to have the Cause depending between herself and her disloyal Subjects, Tried

A Prote-Ration of the Q. of Scors Deputies.

A counter Protest from the English.

Commif-

fioners

before the English; yet did she not thereby submit herself to the sovereign Jurisdiction of any Perfon whatever, because the was a free Princes, and no way subject to the Authority of any other. The English Commissioners protested at the same time, That they did in no wife admit of that Protestation in prejudice to that Claim the Kings of England had long fince made, of being fuperiour Lords of the Kingdom of Scotland. The next Day, the Queen of Scots Commissioners de-liver'd a Declaration in Writing, fetting forth, That James Earl of Morton, John Earl of Marry, Alexander Earl of Glenearn, Humes, Lindley, Rethuen, Sempil, &c. bad rais'd an Army in the Declara. Queen's Name, againft ber Perfon; and baving five dition of the and wretebedly abuid ber, bad likewife imprifor'd ber Settlich. at Lough-Levin, broken open the Royal Mint, taken away the Stamps, with all the Gold and Silver, whether coin'd or not, and Crown'd her Infant-Son, whose Authority James Earl of Murray had usury'd under the Title of Regent, and had seiz'd on all the Forts, Wealth and Revenues of the Kingdom. They farther tet forth, How the Zueen, fince her escape after ele-ven Months Imprisonment, had publickly declar'd upon Oath, That whatever she had done in Prison, had been Sand, Init wontever he had a one in right, had been extested from her by Force and Thrests. Nevertbelefs, the had, in order to restore the publick Peace, authorized and empower'd the Earls of Argile, Eglington, Castills and Rothlay, amicably to compound these Mitters with her Enemies; who notwithstanding, when she had designed to cross the Country to Dunbri-

and Country

A few Days after, Murray, the Regent, and the Commissioners for the young King, (as they stil'd themselves) put in their Answer to this purpole: 'That after the Lord Darly, the King's 'Father was made away, James Hephum Earl of 'Besthwell (fuppos'd to be the Regicide) had to 'far wrought himfelf into the Queen's Affections, for the K. c as to carry her by a feeming Force, but really with her own Confent, away to Dunbar, and there marry her, after having put away his former Wife. That the Lords of Scotland were ton, forcibly opposed her Passage, slew a great many of her good Subjects, and carry'd some to Prison, and others they forc'd from their Houses and Estates, and all this for no better reason, than their Fidelity to their Prince. These were the Injuries which had drove her into England for Sanctuary, and to crave Assistance at the Queen's hands, which had been so often promis'd and by the means of which she might recover her Crown

fo mov'd at this Procedure, that they thought they could not do better, fince the King's Murthey could not do better, fince the King's Murder was imputed to the Confpiracy of feveral Noblemen, than to punish Bethwell, release the Queen from those unlawful Bonds, and confile the young King's Safety, and the National fult the young King's Safety, and the Nation's Security. That when the matter was just ready to be decided by the Sword, the Queen had fent away Bothwell, feverely threatining the Lords, and thought of nothing but Revenge; infomuch that there feem'd to be a necessity to confine her Person, till Bothwell should be apprehended and brought to Justice. That she bending as it were under the care and weight of a Crown, had voluntarily refign'd the Kingdom, transfer'd it to her Son, and constituted Murray Viceroy; and that hereupon her Son was anointed King, with the usual Ceremonies. That all these Steps were approved of, and fign'd by the Lords in Parliament; and the Government began to breath afresh under a more impartial Administration: Till some Men, who were no Friends to their Country's Peace, cunningly contriv'd the Queen's Escape; and, contrary to their Oaths and Fealty to the King, took up Arms against his Authority; and tho it pleas'd God to give them a Defeat, yet are they not difcourag'd, even at this very time, from carrying on their Hostilities against their King and Country. It appears therefore high-ly necessary, that the King's Authority be af-ferted against all the Attempts and Contrivances of fuch factious People.

To this the Queen of Scots Deputies, after having repeated the former Protest, made their Reply as follows.
Whereas Murray and the Conspirators af-Reply of this pretence will by no means clear them of the imputation of unfaithful Subjects, forafmuch as the Queen was altogether ignorant that he had any hand in the Murder; nay she knew every well that he was by his Peers acquitted of the Fact, and that his Acquital was confirm'd by Act of Parliament, with and by the con-' fent of those very Persons who are now his Accusers, and were then Instruments in perfuading the Queen to accept him for her Hufband, as the fittest Man, in their opinion, to suffain the weight of the Government: And fo far they went, as to subscribe a Writing, wherein they promis'd him Fealty and Alle giance, and did not utter one Breath against the Match, till they had debauch'd to their Party the Captain of Edinborough-Caftle, and the Provost of the City. Then did they in the dead time of the Night affault the Calle of Borthwick, where the Queen lay, and she hap-penning to make her Escape under the favour of the Night, they immediately rais'd Forces under colour of defending the Queen, and then march'd with Colours flying to incercept cher in the way to Edinborough, whether she intended to go. Grange they sent before to warn her not to protect Bothwell, till he had flood his Trial; which rather than occasion the fledding of any Blood, she readily consented to. But Grange gave Bothwell private notice to be gone, and engag'd his Word that he should not be purfu'd; fo that 'tis plain he went away by their confent, and might have been taken afterwards with very great eafe. But having fecur'd the Queen, they matter'd not him, but were now for steering the Course their Ambition directed. And whereas they were Subiects to the Queen, and bound by Oaths of Allegiance, firm, that they took up Arms against the Queen, the Q. of because Bothwell, who stands charg'd with the Scott De-King's Murder, was so much in her Esteem; puties.

The anfiver of the Scots Commif-

"Allegiance, and yet had treated her in a way 1567. Sunworthy of the Royal Character, 'twas no domino. wonder if the used some Methods more rigorous than ordinary. When the was willing to refer her Cause to the Decision of a Parliament, and intimated as much by Lidington, her Secretary, they would not fo much as give him the Hearing, but convey'd her by Night to Lough-Levin, and there confind her. And whereas they pretend, that the Troubles deri-ved on her from her Crown were the true Mo-tives why the religned it, nothing can be more falle: For fine was neither made incapable by Age or Sickness, but had Vigour enough, both of Mind and Body, to manage the Affairs of her Throne. This cannot be denyid, That the Earls of Arbel, Tullihardhe and Lillington. (who were of her Council) advised her to fign · the Instrument of Resignation, to avoid the certain Fate she had otherwise undergone. And they affirm'd moreover, that this could not pre-judice herfelf or her Heirs, fince 'twas done under Confinement, Forassmed as being imprisond infinites a suit Fear, and a Premise made by one in that Condition, is, in the opinion of the best Lawyers, of no free or walidity. That Sir Nicholas Torockof morton had also given her the same Instructions under his own Hand, whom she had desir'd to make the Queen of England acquainted that file had retign'd only upon force and comput-tion. They unged yet further, That Lindfey, when he deliver d her the Instrument to be subscribed, ' threatned her with Death, and whatever was s most frightful, and made her fign it at a time s when she could not read it for Tears; and that ' the Lord of Lough-Levin-Cuftle refus'd to let his Hand as a Witness, being convined that what the Queen had done, was against her will. That it was therefore a most unjust and unreareasonable Resignation, in the stead of which file had neither Maintenance, Liberty, nor Safety allow'd her; fo that in the judgment of Perfons indifferent, fuch an Abdication could not be supposed to place any Bar against her Right and Prerogative, when the revok'd it as unjust and extorted, as foon as the was at Liberty, and that by a publick Declaration before feveral Peers of the Realm. Nor ought the Cueen to receive any prejudice from the pretended Acts of Parliament they fo much boaft of: For whereas about an hundred Earls, Bi-fliops and Barons, have Votes in the Parliament Scotland, there were not in this tumultuary 'Affembly rather than Parliament, above four 'Earls, one Bishop, one or two Abbots, and fix Barons: And even of that fmall Number, fome entred their Procest, That mothing aught to be translated against the Queen or her Successions, now that she was a Prisoner. Nor could the English or French Embassadors obtain the liberty of Accels to her, to learn the true state and manner of 6 the Refignation, tho' they prefs'd very earnest-'ly for it. And then for the state of the Kingdom, so far has it been from faring the better, fince it came into the Hands of the prefent Usurper. That Impiety and Sacrilege were never more practised or less punished; there being nothing more common at prefent, than the pulling down of religious Houses, the ruin and subversion of the best Families, and the general Oppression of the poor Commons. They did therefore most earnestly request, that Queen Elizabeth would be pleas'd to Succour, Aid and Affift, by all means poffible, the diftress'd Condition of the Queen, her Kinswowoman, who had received the most unworthy and injurious Treatment. This I have seen and copied from the original Papers of the Com-1568. millioners themselves

When the English Deputies, upon hearing what Ann. 11. had been alledged, demanded Marry to give the Reasons of so rugged a Procedure against an absolute Queen, and to produce more substantial Proofs than had hitherto been brought; for there appear'd no Witnesses, nor any thing but a few forg'd, or at least suspected, Papers) and Liding- Maran wag u, or at rean tupected, Papers) and Liding-Minn ton having, it feems, given them private notice, given that he had more than once counterfeited the Realo's Queen's Hand, Minnay had but this to fay, That to dopo he was lab to impeach his Sifen further before Stran-ing that gers, unless the Queen of England wante engage for Queen the Protection of the values Kine and a chief the? the Protection of the young King, and to abandon the Cause and Interest of the Queen of Scots. But since their Commission did not warrant them to promife any fuch thing, one or two of the Agents on both fides were fummon'd up to London. To whom Queen Elizabeth declared, 'That she was flill of opinion the Subjects of Scotland were much to blame in respect of the Queen: But ' however, fhe would interpose with her on their ' behalf, and hear whether they had any farther or better Defence to make for themselves. Marray follow'd them up, but utterly refus'd to accuse his Sifter, unless upon the fame Terms insisted on at 2006.

And now were the Deputies recall'd, and their TheDeput Commission expiral, to the great Satisfaction of the Commission in the Duke of Norfolk, who had always heartily espous the Queen of Scott Title to the Succession at an end. fion; and was of opinion, that all that was aim'd at in the late Debate, was to fix a lafting Mark of Infamy upon herfelf and her Son, and to to exclude them both, as unworthy to succeed to the Throne of England. And he thought more-over, That he was now happily rid of a double Danger: For he was afraid, had he given Sentence against her, he must have wrong d his own Conscience, and utterly ruin'd her: And should he have determin'd in her favour, he must of course have incurr'd the Queen's high Displea-fure, and drawn on himself the Odium of all that were ill-affected to the Queen of Scots, on the fcore of Religion, or any other account.

But there happening about this time fome Tumults in Scotland, occasion'd by some of the Queen's Friends, and they requiring Murray's Presence, to compose and resettle things, he drew up an Accufation before the Queen and New the Lord Keeper Bacon, the Duke of Norfolk, the Commit-Earls of Arundel, Sufex, Leisefter, Clinton Lord-appointed, Admiral, Sir William Cecil and Sir Ralph Sadler, who were conflituted by a new Patent the Examiners of this Matter. And before them, he produc'd fome conjectural Proofs and Circum-flances, fome few Affidavits, and the Acts and Refolutions of the late Convention. But what he laid the greatest stress upon, were certain Love-Letters and Poems, wrote, as he affirm'd, with the Queen's own Hand; and this was to prove her guilty of her Husband's Murder: To back the Evidence, he gave them Enchunar's Book, entituid 4, The Detection, to pertule But that found but very little credit with the greater part of them; for the Book was Partial, and the Author look'd on as a mercenary Writer. for the Letters and Verses, (there being no Name nor Date to them, and too many abroad who are very dexterous at Counterfeiting other Men's Hands and Subscriptions) they gain'd little belief with Queen Elizabeth, tho' the did not want a certain degree of Emulation so natural to the Sex: And it were enough for that, if the Queen of Scots Reputation were only something impair'd by this Impeachment.

excepts against fome of the new

fion.

Debate

the Go-

land.

touching

vernment of Scot-

Now, as foon as the Committioners for the Q. 1568. of Scots understood, how scandalous an Accusa-Ann. 11. tion Murray had bestow'd upon her; they were prepar'd and ready to answer the Charge: But the had already cancel'd and revok'd their Commission; being secretly inform'd by some Perfons well skill'd in the Laws, that fhe might do 10, forafmuch as Queen Elizabeth's Committion granted to the Duke and others, for adjudging the same Cause, was already recall'd. One or two of the New Deputies, whom she knew to be Q of Scots ill-affected to her Interest, she excepted against; unless the French and spanish Ambassadors might be join'd with them, and the might be allow'd the Privilege of making a publick Defence, be-Commis fore the Queen and them, and Murray likewife might be stopt and brought upon his Trial, who, fhe faid, might, with little Difficulty, be made to appear the Author of the Lord Darly's Death. All this appearing highly reasonable to Norfolk, Arundel, Sullen, Leicester, and Clinton, Q. Elizabeth, not over well pleas'd at the matter, faid publick. ly, That the Queen of Scots would never want an Advocate, as long as Norfolk liv'd. And 'twas enough, as she thought, to convene her Privy-Council, and the Earls of Northumberland, West-morland, Shrewsbury, Worcester, Huntington, and Warwick; and to communicate to them the Allegations made by Murray; having first engaged them, by an Oath of Secrecy, that neither Party might receive Prejudice. And whereas Murray was call'd home, and the Lord Boyd, as the Report went, attempted privately the Queen of The mat. Scots Escape; the Bulinels was put off till anoter falls. ther Opportunity; the Queen of England having profess d an utter Abhorrence of the Scots Info-

About this time, Hamilton, Duke of Chassell-Herault, return'd from France, being sent by the Guises, to get the Question again debated, Whether Murray should continue to have the Regency of Scotland, in the King's Minority? He very resolutely maintain'd, before Queen Elizabeth, That by the Laws and Cuftoms of that King " dom, he had the best Right to the Ministry;

" as being nearer akin to the King, than Murray, " who was illegitimate. Murray and the King's Commissioners made it out, to the contrary,
"That the Regency was to be entrusted, not with the next of kin, but to such as the States " fhould pitch on, as the fittest Persons: And, " that it would be unreasonable indeed, to deli-" ver the young King into his Hands, who a-

" fpir'd fo high, on the score of his Alliance to "the Crown, that it may be suspected, his Ambition would prompt him to catch at it, before " his time: And, that there was more Reason "to be jealous of the Hamilton, than any other, on this account, Because they bore an inveterate Grudge to the King's Predecessors, the " Earls of Lenox; and had barbarously murder'd "the King's Great-grand father, by the Father's fide; and drove Matthew, the King's diffres'd

"Grand-father, out of Scotland. And this very "Hamilton had been very troublesom and vexa-"tious to Henry, the King's Father; and had put his Mother into the King of France's Hands, "to get, with the more Eafe, his own Foot up"on the Throne. Queen Elizabeth, after flie had heard this, told Hamilton, that he made a most unreasonable Demand; and order'd him withal, not to leave England, till Murray were return'd into Scotland.

Murray had, just before his Departure, made Marriage the Duke of Norfolk (as shall be shewn presently) between a subtil kind of Proposal, relating to a Marriage Norfolk with the Open of Serve and had likewise single the Queen with the Queen of Scots; and had likewise given of Scars. her, by Melvin, some Shadow of an Hope, that the should be restord again to her Kingdom; tho' at the same time he endeavour'd to draw off 1568. Queen Elizabeth's Effect, by spreading false Re-Ann. 11. to the Succession, to the Duke of Anjon; and, that the Conveyance was confirm'd at Rome. He likewise produc'd Letters, whether true, or counterfeit, I do not determine, which the Queen of Scots had written to her Friends; wherein she charg'd Queen Elizabeth with a Breach of Promife, and brag'd of certain Aids flie was to receive elsewhere. This indeed gave Q. Elizabeth fome Uneafiness, as not being able to ghess on what Grounds this new Dependence was supported: For the Civil-War in France was now grown fo flagrant, that the Bishop of Rhemes was fent from the King to Queen Elizabeth, to defire her not to interpose in the Affairs of France; and the Duke of Alva, who came into the Netherlands, the Year before, to extirpate the Protestant Religion, was capable of doing her no Service, his own Hands were fo full already.

But it has been fince discover'd, and left in Writing by Hieronimo Catena, Secretary to Cardinal Alexandrine, That Robert Ridolph, a Florentine, who had liv'd for a long time a Factor in London, was employ'd by Pope Pius V. (for he durft not, it feems, fend a publick Nuntio) to animate the Papists in England, to an Insurrection; a Charge he was very diligent in the Performance of. There arose also some little Suspicion, on the account of fome private Conferences, held between Lidington, the Bp. of Roß, and the Duke of Norfolk, at York: The last of which was importun'd by the other two, to use his best Endeavours, for the Preservation of the Queen, under her Afflictions; and an Offer was made him, to marry her, if he pleas'd: But this he modestly declin'd, as not over fafe. Nevertheless, he promis'd his best Service to the distress'd Queen, as far as it confifted with his Honour and Loyalty. This Jealoufy was much increas'd, by the frequent Refort of Ligon, the Duke of Norfolk's Servant, and a rank Papist, to Bolton, (a Castle of the Lord Scroop's) where the Queen of Scots resided, in the Custody of Sir Francis Knolles, on pretence only, of paying the Compliment of a Visit to the Lord Scroop's Lady, who was the Duke of Norfolk's Sifter. And the there could be nothing gather'd from all this, that amounted to a Certainty; yet it occasion'd the Removal of the Queen of Scots, from Bolton, which lay in a Qof Scots Popilh Neighbourhood, to Tutbury, a more Incommitted to the Country; where the was completed to the Cuttody of George Earl of Shrewf-Shrewf-Shrewf-

Twas now time for Queen Elizabeth to look well after the Safety of the Church, the State, and her own Perion; and the rather, because both the Guises in France, and the Duke of Alva in the Netherlands, had begun their Projects laid at Bayonne, for the Extirpation of the Protestant Religion. For in France, the Peace treated of The third in the Beginning of the Year, dwindled into no- Coul-War thing; and Edicts were publish d, to prohibit the in France. Exercise of the Reform'd Religion, to displace the Professors of it from any Offices of Trust, and to command the Protestant Clergy to leave the Kingdom, within fuch a time. And now did they suffer every where extreme Persecution, notwithstanding Queen Elizabeth had solicited very hard, by her Embassador Norris, that a firm and hearty Peace might be established; and had feveral times advis'd the King, not to incense 'em by trying odd and dangerous Experiments; but to have a Care of those, in the first place, who, by driving away and endeavour'd to weaken the Power of France, to fuch place, who, by driving away his best Subjects, ted to the

Murray propounds Country-

Wars.

from

Spain to

And de-from the Freuch,

fended

fuch a degree, as to leave it an easy and ready 1568. Prey to those who were inclin'd to disturb it.

Ann. 11. But when he was deaf to these Intreaties, and rais'd Money and Soldiers out of Italy, Germany, and Spain; the Queen likewise, that she might not baulk the Common-Caufe, generously fent 100000 Angels to the Protestants, with Ammunition proportionable, (for they now made a folemn Protestation, that they did not take up Arms against the King, but purely in their own Defence) And she likewise gave a courteous Reception to such of the French, as were forc'd, on the fcore of Religion, to fly their Country: The fame she did to the Netherlanders; who flock'd to England in vast Multitudes; as a Retreat, from the Storm of the Duke of Alva's Cruelties practis'd against 'em. She gave them the Liberty of Sertling themselves at Norwich, Colchefter, Sandwich, Maidston, and Southampton; which turn'd to the great Advantage of England; for they were the first that brought into the Nation the Art of making those slight Stuffs, call'd Bays and Says, and other Linnen and Woollen-Cloths, of the fame kind.

And here, it may not be altogether impertinent, to give a brief Account of the Rife and Original of Caufes of the War, which broke out, about this the Low- time, in the Netherlands; fince 'tis fo interwoven with the Affairs of England, that it will of courfe

When the Spaniard could by no means be prevailed on, to remit any Part of that Severity, which was practised in the Low-Countries, on a Religious Account; but tyrannized over Mens Conficiences, by the Authority of the new-erefted Court the Inquisition, and would not permit the States of the United Provinces to affemble and meet, (whereby they were hinder'd from con-fulting and taking Measures for the Security of their Affairs, the only Remedy they could have Recourse to, under their Calamities) but govern'd 'em by Laws and Statutes, fetch'd from Spain; and not by the Customs and Usages of their own Country: It happen'd, that a few of the Mob rais'd a Tumult, and pull'd down and broke the Images and Pictures in all the Churches. And tho' the Hurly-burly was foon appeas'd, yet the King of Spain, hearkning to those who were for putting a Yoke of Servitude on the Neck of a Free People, tax'd the whole Country with a publick Rebellion, for the private Mutiny a fmall Number of 'em were engag'd in : And, let 'em fee, their Liberty was now at the last Gasp, he sent Don Ferdinando Alvarez Duke of Alva, a Person of noted Cruelty, to take upon him the Charge of the Government. This D. of Alva was not in the least Degree ally'd to the Royal Family; but got the supreme Command, contrary to all the Customs and Usages of the Country: Upon which, he stripp'd the Ordinary Provincial Synods of all Authority, erected new Courts of Justice, and condemn'd and executed the Noblemen by incompetent Judges, placing Spanish Garrisons in all the Cities and Towns, and building Forts to keep 'em in awe, and forcibly demanding the Twentieth Penny upon every Alienation of Lands, and the Tenths upon Goods and Moveables. And this ended in a long and dangerous War.

About this time, the Genoa Merchants, and fome of Italy, fent a valt Sum of Money out of Spain into the Netherlands, to raise a Bank. Twas Mor y fent the Nebrought in a great Ship of Bifeay, and four leffer Veffels; which, after having been chaced by Tury Chaftelleric, a Frenchman, and brought off by William Winter, an Englishman, did, with much a-Freuch, do, escape into Plimouth, Falmouth, and Southamby the English pion, English Sea-ports. As soon as the Queen heard of it, the order'd the Officers belonging to those Places, to treat the Spaniards very civilly, 1568. and protect their Ships against the French. And Ann.11. Gerard de Spess, Knight of the Order of Calacrava, the King of Spain's Embaffador in England, ap-Spamard prehending some Danger from the French, soli-owns the cited the Queen (who took his Word, that it Money, was the King of Spain's Money) to iffue out fresh Warrants, for securing of the Vessels from the French, who lay hard-by, ready to feize 'em. Having obtain'd this, he made a fecond Address, that the Money might be carry'd thro' England, and so fent, by a safer Passage by Sea, to Antpromisd them Security both by Sea and Land. In the mean time, the French were very ne r taking one of the Ships, had they not been beaten off by the English. Therefore to secure the Mony, twas thought the wifest way to get it landed; but before twas all on shore, De Spess, being over-credulous on the wrong fide, inform'd the Duke of Alva, that the Queen had feiz'd on the Money: And whilft he was advising with the Duke about the matter, Odet Cardinal of chaftillion, who had retir'd hither from the Troubles in France, gave the Queen Intelligence, that the Money did not belong to the King of Spain, but to certain Merchants of Genoa; and that the D. of Alva defign'd to apply it, against their Will and Consent, to the Ruin of the Protestants. Hereupon, a Debate was held in Council, Whether the Money was to be feiz'd or not? Moft were of opinion, that the best way would be to fend it over into the Netberlands, lest the King of Spain, who was a very potent Prince, should by this means incr. afe the Animofity, he at prefent bore to the English. But Queen Elizabeth, being certainly inform'd by one or two of the right Owners, who were mightily afraid, left the Duke of Alva should seize upon ir, that it really and folely belong'd to the Merchants, and not one Piece of it to the King of Spain; refolv'd to borrow it of the Merchants, and give 'em Se- Q.ftopsit curity, as Princes usually do, in the cafe of Goods found in their Harbours; and as the King of Spain had done himfelf, not long fince. And this the declared to the Spanish Ambassador, when he deliver'd the Duke of Alva's Letters, for fending the Money over; and folemnly promis'd to return the Money, as foon as the King of Spain made it appear, he had a Righte to it. Upon the fame day, which was the sigh of December, the English Duke of Alva, in a violent Difguit, arrested all Goods the English Goods in the Low Countries, and kept arrested in the Owners Prisoners under a Guard; so that the Netherlands. one might ghess, from the very timing of the matter, that the Duke design'd to aw the English, let the Queen make what Satisfaction she pleas'd for the Money: But she was so far from being scared, that she commanded, by way of Reprifal, that the Netherlanders, their Ships and Goods, And the should be all seiz'd; which were found to be a- Notherbundantly more, than the English Merchandize, Luders which the Duke detain'd in the Low Countries; stop'd in that he now repented too late of his Proceedings, and that he had brought the Wound to a Gangrene, which at first might have been heal'd with all the Ease imaginable. The last day but one of this Year, was the last that Roger Afcham liv'd. (The Memory of a va- Death of luable Person must excuse a short Digression) Roger He was born in Yorkshire, and educated at Cam- disham. bridge, and was one of the first of our Countrymen, that refin'd the Style of the Latin and Greek Tongues, and reftord'e to a Purity and Exactness, which deserv'd Commendation. He for fome time Tutor to Queen Elizabeth, and her Secretary for the Latin Tongue; but being too much addicted to Dicing and Cock-matches, he 1768. liv'd and died a poor Man. He left behind him Ann.11. Two excellent Pieces, as Monuments of his Wit; both wrote in English, and entitl'd, the one Toxo-philm, and the other Scholarcha. But to return to our History.

1569.

The Twelfth Year of her Reign.

tion conthe Engl. Spanish Embaffador's anfwer.

On the 6th of January, came out at London, a Proclamation concerning the Commodities of the English, which the D. of Alva had arrefted; wherein there was Mention made of most of Proclamaftopt, &, those things already touch'd upon; and the Blame was laid upon De Spess, who publish'd another Paper, and signify'd therein, that the said Proclamation was not fet forth by the Queen's Order, but in the Queen's Name only, by fome, that had no Kindness for the King of Spain, and were dispos'd to favour the Netherland-Rebels. He bestow'd large Encomiums on the Queen, for her former Favours shewn to the Spaniards, was forry to find her Affections so much warp'd, and took it ill, that his Character found no better Credit; especially when seconded by the Duke of Alva's Letters: He wonder'd that the Money should be detain'd; whereas, in his Judgment, it were more for the Queen's Advantage, to supby the King of Spain with Money, againth his bad Subjects, than take any from him, at fuch a Juncture. In fine, he tax'd her Majefty as the first Aggressor, and excus'd the Proceedings of the Duke of Alva and himself. But this did not fatisfy him; and fo he dispers'd abroad an Heap of scandalous Libels, that contain'd grating Re-flexions upon the Queen's Reputation, under the sictitious Name of Amadu Oriana. For this he receiv'd a Reprimand, and was, for a day or two, kept under a Guard; and the Queen did not fail to remonstrate to the K. of Spain this ill Treatment, tho' to no purpose.

Confpira cy against Cecal.

On the account of the Moneys being detain'd, certain Peers of England, and amongst others, certain reers of England, and amongst others, the Marquels of Winobefer, the Duke of Norfolk, the Earls of Arundel, Northumberland, Westmoreland, Pembroke, Leicester, and others, began to clamour against Ceci; as they had done once or twice before, about the Supplies sent to the Prosenter of England States. testants of France. But the real Cause was this, that they envy'd the Interest he had in the Queen, were jealous of his favouring the House of Suffolk, in the point of the Succession, and apprehended him as a main Bar to the Progress of their Designs. They therefore laid their Heads together, to get him thrown into the Tower, Throckmorton (another of those who could not bear his Greatness) having infinuated to them, that could they once get him clapt up, 'twould be no difficult thing to effect his Ruin. But the be no difficult thing to effect his Ruin. Queen had timely Intelligence of thefe Defigns, by what means, I know not; and Cecil had the Happinefs of finding the whole Project dafh'd by the fole Bravery of his Royal Miftrefs, who furpriz'd them in the very Instant, and, by the Authority of her Royal Presence, aw'd 'em out of these base Measures. She likewise deseated another Plot of theirs, which was more closely laid; and that was, to proclaim the Queen of Scots undoubted Heir of the Crown, should Q. Elizabeth do otherwife than well: And this was in opposition to a Pamphlet, which was disperst, in favour of the Suffolk-Title.

About this time comes D'Assorville, in the D. of Alva's Name, to require the Money which was The Spamardide. mand the feiz'd; but having no Letters of Demand from the Spaniard, he was refered, by the Queen, to her Council; to whom he refused, at first, to apply himself: But soon after, he changed his Money.

Mind, had an Hearing at the Board, and return'd home, without dispatching the Business he came

1569. Ann. 12.

The English Merchants were now fetting up a new Factory at Hamburgh, in Germany, fince the Duke of Alva prohibited all Trade with the Englib, and appointed Searchers to hinder them from bringing in, or exporting any Goods from the Netherland: An active and buffe Man among these Commissioners, was John Story, an English Renegade-Lawyer, who had practised with one Beffall, a fort of Conjurer, against the Queen's Life; and had given the Duke of Alva Directions, how to invade his Native Country. But being kid nap'd on board a Ship, which was reported to have brought over English Goods, and fome heretical Books and Writings, they presently fet Sail, and carry'd him to England, where he was afterwards executed; as we shall shew, in its proper Place.

The Duke of Alva, not satisfy'd with what The D of had pass'd, order'd, that no Ships, but Men of Alva en-War, should fail out of the Netherlands; and that they should attack the English, where-ever they English, met them. He procured the same Game to be play'd in Spain; where the English Merchants and Seamen were hook'd into the Inquisition, con-Seamen were nooked into the Inquition, con-demn'd to the Gallies, and their Goods put to Sale. And the King of Spain fent Letters of Command to the Count of Mont-Agund, Gover-nor of Andulazia, that no Oil, Allum, Sugar, Spices, or other Commodities of that fort, flould be transported to England; supposing that the English, when deprived of these Conveniences, would not be long, before they rebell'd: And he dealt likewise with the Duke of Norfolk and the Earl of Ormond, underhand, to give the Q, what Trouble they could; the one at home, and the other in Ireland; and this they were fo loyal and ingenuous as to discover themselves. But no fooner had the Sailors and Seamen an account of all this, but they put to Sea with incredible Chearfulness, on purpose to annoy and rifle the Spaniards. So that the Queen was fore'd to restrain them by Proclamations, and to pro-hibit the buying of any Merchandizes from Pri-

At this time also was there a stop to the Ruf- Trade in fun Trade, as well as that with the Netherlands, Ruffic occasioned partly by the unfaithfulness of the feveral Factors, and the unhappy Quarrels among themselves; and partly through the Odium they lay under with the Germans and Russians; the latter complaining of their fraudulent Arts in raifing the Prices of their Goods; and the Germans and English, that belong'd not to the Russia Company, That they had engros'd the Trade, and fet up a Monopoly. To heal these Differences, Sir Thomas Randolph was fent the Year before into Russia. And tho he was not very welcome to the Emperor, because he not only mention'd the matter of Trade without taking the least notice of the Treaty, which I had occasion to mention in the Year 1567. Yet at his request, and out of the profound respect he bore to the Queen and Kingdom of England, he granted the English Rusfian Company an Exemption from all Cultoms, and leave to vend and dispose of their Manufactures where-ever they would through his whole Dominions; and to transport them into Persian and Media by the Caspian-Sea. (the Merchants of other Nations being not permitted to Trade be-yond Molcow) He likewife gave them Rope-Houses for twifting their Cables for Shipping; his have and a woody piece of Ground of five Miles cir- new Pricumserence to forge the Iron, and adopted the vileges in English for an Opprisiney, i. e. for the Elect Seed of Russia his People.

Hhh

And

England.

And now did the English venture up tarther in-to those Countries, and transported their Goods 1509 to thote countries, and transported their 900cs

Ann. 12. along the River Dwina in Boats made of one entire Tree, which they towed and rowed up

Their

the Stream with Oars and Halfers, as far as WoTrade in holeParts

Logda. From thence they carried them feven

those Parts

Days Journey by Land to Tradfaw; and then thirty Days and as many Nights down the River which is glown a Mile to to Astracan, by the Wolga, which is about a Mile over, and runs through a clayish Soil planted with Oaks and Birch-Trees. From Afracan, where they used to build their Ships, they ventur'd often (which was a very remarkable and memorable Attempt) to cross the Caspian-Sea, which is full of Flats and Shelves, and made their way through the vaft Defarts of Hyrcania and Baltriana to Teverin and Cashin, Cities of Perfia, in hopes at the long run to discover Cathay. But the War between the Turks and Persians encreasing to a great height, and the Robberies committed by the Barbarians being very frequent, the Londoners had not flomach to purfue this glorious Enterprize any farther. The Emperor dif-mis d Randolph with Presents, and with him An-Embally dreas Gregorivitz Saviena, with a fplendid Reti-fia into nue, after the fashion of that Country; who found an honourable Entertainment from the City of London, and a courteous Reception at the Queen's Hands. He exhibited a certain Treaty written in Ruffian Characters, which he infifted might be confirm'd (by private Letters) in the very fame Words, in his Prefence, and be translated into the Russian Tongue, and ratify'd by the Oucen's Hand and Seal, and Oath; and that the Queen would likewise dispatch an Embaffador into Russia, in order to receive private Letters from the Emperor to the same purpose, and fign'd with his Hand and Seal, and the ceremony of Saluting the Crofs being to be perform'd at the fame time in his Presence. The Queen fign'd the Treaty with a Claufe of Referve. So far as she might lawfully do it without prejudice to any Contracts made with other Princes to jupport and aid one another against the common Enemy, and so fir as might be no infringment of Law or Right.

And should he be fored by any Missortune of publick Wars or private Treachery to quit his Country, the promisd him faithfully, on the Word of a Christian Princes, before his Embassador and the chief of her Privy-Council, and confirm'd it with her Seal, That she would Receive and Entertain him, with his Wife and Children, in a manner becoming fo great a Prince, and affign him a convenient Residence, grant him the free use of his Religion, and leave him at liberty to depart when he pleas'd: For this was the fum and fubstance of those private Letters. But so far was this from satisfying the wild Caprice of one whose Will was his Law, that he wrote a long Letter fluff'd with the repetition of what Civilities they had found at his Hands; upbraiding them as Ungrateful; and was very angry with the Queen for not fending an Embaffador along with his, to receive his Oath. In a word, he taxed the Queen for having neglected his Affairs, and minded only those of her Merchants (matters beneath the Thoughts of a Prince). Then he began to treat the English too with Slights and Affronts, as a fort of People who regarded their own Purse more than their Prince's Honour. And having entertain'd a fufpicion, that they might put fome ftop to his De-ligns, he threatned hard to revoke the Privileges he had before granted them. But this he forbore to do, the Queen having fent him a kind and pacitying Letter by Fenkinson, which had this effect, That he ever after confider'd and respected her as his Sifter, prefs'd her at feveral times to a more folemn Ratification of the Treaty, and retain'd a greater value for the English than 1569. any other Nation whatever.

Now when Marray had procur'd himfelf a fafe Murray return into Scotland, by putting the Queen of deals is Scots, the Duke of Norfelk and others, in hopes weely that he would get her reftor'd to the Crown; with the on which account, she had, it seems, prevented Qen's the Delign of some of her own Subjects, who had refolv'd to way-lay and murder him, he was no fooner got to Edinborough, but he fummon'd together those of the Nobility, who were of the Loyal side, in pretence of consulting with them about the Queen's Restoration. And Hamilton, Duke of Caftle-Herault (who was nominated Viceroy by the Queen) and Herris happening to come before the rest, in compliance with the credulous Queen's Letters; Murray fearing the worst, circumvents and imprisons them, without staying for the rest; and then proceeds to har-rass the rest of the Queen's Friends with all the

Calamities of a Civil War. Hereupon several Reports were spread of Mur- Reports of

ray over the whole Kingdom: That he had agreed Murray. with Queen Elizabeth to find the young King to be Educated in England; That the Castles of Edinborough and Sterling were to have English Garisons in them: That Dunbriton was to be put into the Hands of the English: That Murray was to be pro-claimed the lawful Successor to the Crown of Scotland, Should the King die without Iffue: And that he was This was so common and general a Report, and carry'd such a face of Probability, as to give the Nation a great deal of Trouble, and to make the Queen herfelf believe she was concern'd in respect to her own Reputation to clear off these Aspersions. To this end she put forth a Declara- Q. Eliztion, in which she protested, in the Word of a contra-Queen, That these things were absolutely false, ditta'em. and contriv'd by fome who were no well-wishers to either Kingdom: And that there had not been (to her knowledge) any manner of Contract made by Word or Writing between herfelf or her Ministers and Murray, since he came last into England. But the Earl of Lenox, Grandfather to the young King, requested the Queen, That if his Grandson could not be fafe in Scotland from the designing Practises of ill Men, he might be sent into England. She declar'd moreover, That fhe looked on another Report that went about concerning a Contract between Murray and Hertford, to be a mere Forgery, the purport of which was this, That they had obligd themfelves to be mutually Affifant to one another, in feizing on the Crowns of both Kingdoms. To be flort, fhe affirm'd, That it was no fault at all of hers that Things were not rightly concerted between the Queen of Scots and her Son, and that it should be her business to adjust them. And most certainly the Queen was as good as her word, altho' it was not without fome of those Pangs and Conflicts springing from the Jealousie and Emulation which never dies in the Breasts of Princes. And which were heightned very much by the compassionate Sense she had of the common Frailties of human Nature.

As this Sentiment was more and more in- She pitter creas'd from a view of the afflicted Queen's Cir- the Q. of cumitances; so did the Queen of England's Fears Scots. abate in proportion, when she had receiv'd several Letters from her full of an affectionate Respect, and wherein she promis'd, That in Gra-titude for the Civil Treatment she had found, as well as in regard to the nearness of Alliance, fhe would be far from attempting any thing against Queen Elizabeth, or from borrowing any foreign Aid in order to her Restoration: Info-

much that the Queen of England used very pref- | for all Faults committed against here by her Sub-1569 fing Mediations with Murray and other Scottiff Ann. 12. Noblemen, by Wood, Murray's Secretary, for Reforation of the Queen to her Regal Authority. However, that she might at least be permitted to fhare the Government with her Son; or, if this would not be granted, fhe might live amongst her own People as a private Person, without any Incroachments upon her Honour, Freedom, or Safety. But Murray was not to be won to any Terms, when he was now mounted to an absolute pitch of Sovereignty.

Secret Confultationmoon the rumor of Nortolk's being to marry the Queen of Scots.

It was whifper'd about this time, among Perfons of better Note, That the Duke of Norfolk was to marry the Queen of Scots. And this feveral Persons wish'd heartily, according as their Interests ran or their Affections were engag'd. The Papifts, they hoped for the Advancement of their Religion by this means; and others promis'd themselves, that the Publick would be the better for it. Most certain it is, that a great many, who observed the Queen's averseness to Marriage, and that foreign Princes, who were Enemies to England, consider'd the Queen of Scots as the undoubted Heir of the Crown of England, believ'd it would tend more to the Settlement of Affairs, and the Fixing of the Queen ttement of Attars, and the Fixing of the Queen of Scots to jut Measures of Government, should she marry the Duke of Norfolk the first Nobleman in England, a Man of popular Interest, and bred up in the Protssant Religion; than should she admit of a foreign Prince, who might, by her bely, embroil both Kingdoms, and at last inherit them; whereas 'twas the general wish to have them united in a Person of English Beach should be some First Scots. English Blood, should the young King of Scots do otherwise than well. Nor did they spare some private Endeavours to get him over into England; that since he was Heir to the Crown of it, he might be Educated in the National Religion, and so the more firmly engage the Love and Esteem of the English, be a means of removing all points of Scruple as to the Sucmeans of removing the points of Scripte as to the Suc-cession, and free Queen Elizabeth from any apprehen-sions of danger from the Duke or the Queen of Scots, when she had such a Pledge of Security in her own Moreover, to prevent any Enterprize of the Duke's against him, and to excite in him a greater Affection for the young Prince, a Project was put on the Anvil, That the Duke's young and only Daughter should be contracted to him. mong these Projectors, were the Earls of Northumberland, Westmoreland, Sussex, Pembroke and Southampton, and a great many Barons; as also Leicester himself (but whether his engaging herein had any other aim than the Duke's Ruin, is not certain). However they all agreed in opinion, that the matter ought to be hift communicated to the Queen, and purfued as should feem fitting to her Royal Pleafure and Confent, fince the was to appoint the Measures for the Security of her Person, Religion and Government. But the fubstance of this entire Matter I shall give you from the written Confession of the Duke himself, which I have seen; and out of the Diary and Memoirs of the Bishop of Rofs, who acted a confiderable Part in this Transaction.

When the Commissioners met at York about a Year fince, Lidington and the Bishop of Ross proposd to the Duke, as they were Hawking, a Marriage with the Queen of Scats, the fame that Proposal forty of the Jordan States of Marray, being in private Diffcourfe with the Norfole Duke and a few more, made as if he defir'd nothing fo much, as that matters might be well compos'd in Scotland, and his dear Sifter, the Queen, reftor'd to her just Authority, on condition she would pass a general Act of Amnesty jects. He could not however diffemble his Apprehentions, That should the Queen marry out of France, Spain or Austria, the would be apt to revenge the Indignities the had futter'd, alter the Religion Establish d, and involve England in hazardous Circumstances.

To prevent all which, he promis'd his utmost Endeavours, that after his Sifter had married a mere Boy, and then a wild and improvident young Fellow, (to use his own Expression) she should now enjoy a good Hufband and a wife Man in the Person of the Duke; a thing which could not but mightily promote the Tranquillity of both Kingdoms, the Security of the two Queens, and the firm Settlement of Religion itself. And as he, for his part, had an high value and veneration for the Queen of England; fo he should make it his study to cultivate and improve a good Understanding between England and Scotland, and by that means reconcile with more ease the Queen of Scots to the Persuation himfelf had embrac'd.

The fame Thoughts did Murray impart Melvin, to the Queen of Scots, and tender'd her his best Offices for the bringing it about. But the Duke made answer, That he could resolve no TheDukes thing as to a Proposal of that kind, before the gueen flood acquitted of the Crimes laid to her harge. Yet the Bishop of Ross, after all this Indifference in the Duke, used all possible Essays to work him up to a Compliance. Twas not many Days after, that Sir Nicolas Throckmorton meeting the Leiester Duke as Whitehall signified to him after care pro-Duke at Whitehall, fignify'd to him, after great proprofessions of Respect and Civility, That he un- the fire derstood the Earl of Leicester design'd to transact Marriage. with him about a Marriage between him and the Queen of Scots, which, Throckmorton faid, was very strange to him, because 'twas not long ago that Leicester was carrying on the same Design for himself. But he beg'd leave to advise the Duke as a Friend, That whenever Leicester made such a Motion, he should offer him the advantage of wish (continu'd Throckmorton) with all my Heart, that the were your own, both for the take and benefit of the true Religion, and to bring the Queen of Scors to an entire Dependance on the Queen of England. Let me nevertheless leave this Caution with you, to take Leicester's Advice, if you make any farther steps in this ' matter, for you will hardly compass the

it, as being the first Pretender: But should he infift upon it with any urgency, that then he should decline it, on the score of those heavy Impeachments the Q. lay under. 'Yet I could Queen's confent without him.

Within a Day or two, Leicester propos'd the He promatter to the Duke, who made much fuch an pose the Answer as Throckmoston had advis'd him; and Match to when they came to touch upon the Point of the Queen's Impeachment, Leicester put the best face upon every thing, and made use of Candish his Name and Reputation, whom he recommended to the Duke's Service, tho' he had not the highest opinion of his Fidelity. Afrer this, Leicester broke the matter to the Earl of Pembroke, and the Duke to Arundel; and both they and Throckmorton join in recommending him by feveral Letters to the Queen of Scots Bed. The Duke likewife fent her another full of amorous Respects, and the offers of his best Service: And from this very time, he made them privy to all the Letters he wrote to or received from her; and there were frequent Conferences held with the Bishop of Rofs about the properest means to confummate the Marriage: And in May 1568, they offer'd to the Queen of Scots, by the Hand of Candish, the following Articles, written with Leicester's own

1509

Queen of

1. That she should attempt nothing to the Prejudice 1569 of the Queen of England, or her Heirs, as to the Suc-Ann.12. coffien.

2. That she should make a League Offensive and De-Articles of fensive between the two Kingdoms Marriage 3. That she should establish the Protestant Religion in propounded to the Scotland.

4. That She should receive such of her Subjects into Favour as had appear'd against ber.

5. That she should revoke her assignment of the Kingdom to the Duke of Anjou.

6. That she should marry some Nobleman of Eng-nd, and particularly and expressy the Duke of Norland, and particularly and expressy the Duke of folk, the first Peer of the Realm.

If she would give her consent to these Articles, they engag'd to get the Queen of England's concurrence, and to effect in a little time her restoration to her Crown, and the confirmation of her Title as to that of England. These Terms cepts 'em. fhe readily clos'd with, all but the business of the Treaty, which she could not comply with without confulting the French King. She protested there was no fuch thing as an Affignment made to the Duke of Anjou; but however, she would procure his Renunciation if required. She advisid them, in the first place, to secure the Queen's Consent, to keep off any Inconvenience that might arife to the Duke or herfelf, a thing she had already had a fad experience of in the inflance of her March with the Lord Darly, which was made up without the Queen's privity. However, they thought it best to lift the Inclinations of some more of the Nobility; who, most of them, gave their consents with this Proviso, That the Queen were not against it. Neither did the Business meet with any opposition from the Kings of France or Spain; they were only jealous of Marray, that, altho' he had appear'd the most officious Promoter of it, he would at the long run prove the greatest Obstacle to the Twas however the general Refolution, That Lidington, who was just then expected, should be employ'd to learn the Queen's Thoughts. The Duke, in the mean time, acquaints the Lord Lumly with all the Steps that had been taken; and with much ado prevail'd on Leicester to allow him the liberty of confulting fome other Friends of his about the matter: And not long after he discover'd the business to Ceeil, with the confent of the Earl of Pembroke.

A Contri-'Twas about this time that Leonard Dacres was vance on forming a Contrivance to get the Queen out of foot to her Confinement at Whinfield in the County of get the Cofscors Derby, in Custody of the Earl of Shrewsbury. Northumberland, who had a hand in the Plot, difout of Cuftody. cover'd the matter to the Duke; but he put a ftop to the execution, for fear they should contrive to marry her into Spain, and in hopes too that Queen Elizabeth would in a little time give her confent.

Twas not long before the Queen had a very full and certain account of this intended Match, by the Intelligence of fome Court-Ladies, who are excellent at the discovery of fuch Intrigues. But when the Duke came to understand this, he earnestly intreated Leicester, both himself and by his Friends Pembroke and Throckmorton, instantly to acquaint the Queen with the whole Proceed-Leicester used a great many Traverses and Delays, as if he delign d to watch the fairest Op-portunity. But Cecil observing a great uneasiness in the Duke, advis'd him to be his own Intelligencer, and remove all Scruples from his own and the Queen's Thoughts, by laying the whole matter before her. Leicefter gives him the clean contrary Advice, and promifes to break the bufiQueen took the Duke to Dinner at Farnham, and pleafantly advis'd him to be very careful on what 1569. Pillow he laid his Head. At last Leicester falls sick Ann.12. at Tichfield, or feigns himself so at least, and the Queen coming to make him a Visit, found his Blood and Spirits withdrew as fast as she apply'd Expressions of Comfort to him. However, he fo far recover'd his Fears, as to open to her the whole Business from the very beginning, and Leicester beg'd her Pardon with all possible appearance of opens the businesto concern.

After this, the Queen call'd the Duke to her into the Gallery, and roundly reprimanded him She diffor attempting a Match with the Queen of Scots courages without her cognizance, and commanded him, the Duke, on his Allegiance, to give over those Pretensions. The Duke made her a very hearty and cheerful Promife, that he would; and, as it he had a very flight regard for the Queen of Scots, was not shy to affirm, That his Estate in England was worth little less than the whole Kingdom of Scotland, in the ill state the Wars had now reduc'd it to; and that when he was at his own Tennis-Court in Norwich, he thought himfelf at least a Petty Prince. However, his Mettle was confiderably abated after this Interview; and when he perceiv'd both in the Queen's Looks and Behaviour a greater Indifference to him than before, that Leicester had now laid aside the Friend, and many He retires of the first Nobility shrinking by degrees from Court, his Interest, and declining his Conversation, paying him now and then, as they happen'd to meet, a fhort Compliment, and away; he re-folved to go for London without taking leave; and took up his Residence with the Earl of Pembroke, who gave him all the Hopes and Encouragements he was capable of. The very fame Day, the Queen, in a great difgust, refus'd the Suit of the Spanish Embassador, in reference to the Enlargement of the Queen of Seots; and advis'd her to bear her Condition with less Impatience, or otherwise she might chance to find fome, on whom she had grounded her best hopes, the Head shorter in a very little time.

When the report of this Marriage was more and more blazed abroad, and the French Embaffador was mighty Importunate with the Queen to fet at Liberty the Queen of Scots, which he did more by the Instigation of some English Gentlemen, than in obedience to the Orders of his Prince, as it afterwards appear'd; fresh Jealoufies sprang up on both fides; and Cecil, who had always express'd a most pious concern for Religion and his Country, apply'd himfelf, with all possible Dexterity, to trace out the matter. To Cecilap this purpose he wrote Letters to Sullex, Lord President of the North, who was the Duke's left or great Familiar and Friend, to request him to let learn the the Queen know the utmost of what related to the Secret of Duke's Marriage. What answer he gave, I cannot tell. But whereas it had been observed, that there pass'd feveral Interviews at Hampton-Court between the Duke and Murray, Regent of Scotland, Sir George Carry, the Lord Hunfden's Son, was privately fent to Murray, to fift him, whether the Duke had acquainted him with any part of his Defign in relation to the Marriage. Duke in the mean time, terrify'd with a falfe Report of a Rebellion in the North; and hearing from Leicester, that he was most certainly to go to the Tower, he wirhdrew himself to Norfolk, The Duke deligning to continue there till by the manage- retires to ment of his Friends at Court the prefent Storm Norfolks fhould blow over, or he could appeale the Queen by fubmissive Letters at that distance. However, he had Spys fet over him, who had their Di-rections to observe his very Looks and Gestures, nels to the Queen in her Progress. But whilst rections to observe his very Looks and Gestures, he used these fair Words and long Delays, the as well as his general Conduct and Deportment.

And when he found there was little to be expect-1569. ed from his Friends, and that 'twas the Opinion Ann. 12. and Advice of Heydon and Cornwallis, and others of the first Rank and Quality in those Parts, that if he knew himself Guilty, he ought to fling himself upon the Queen's Mercy, he was half diftracted with a throng of different Thoughts and Scruples. The Court, in the mean time, The Court were nor without Suspicions and Fears left this fears a Re- should end in a Rebellion: And 'twas commonly rumour'd, that if it did so, the Queen of Scots was to be put to death. But the Duke, being easie within, and conscious of no ill Designs that might bring him under the charge of High-Treason, (for that Act of Henry VIII. That none should marry with the Children of the Sisters, Brothers, or Aunts of the King, without the King's knowledge, on pain of High-Treason, was, it seems, repeal'd by Edward VI.) and being apprehensive withal, that the Queen of Scots would find the harder Treatment on the score of these popular Surmifes, he fent some more Letters to his Friends at Court, to affure and acquaint them, That he had retir'd to his Seat for fear of being imprison'd; defiring them withal, to remove, if possible, The Duke Competition Reports which had been fpread at Court, whither he was now preparing to come, in order to receive the Queen's Pardon.

returns to Court.

Murray

of the whole

Defign.

makes a discovery

When he was got on his Journey as far as St. Albans, Owen the Earl of Arundel's Man, being privately fent from Throckmorton and the Lord Lumly, (then in Custody) advis'd him, in their Names, to take the whole matter upon himfelf, without charging Leicester, or any Body else, for fear he should make his Friends his Enemies. At the fame Place he was met and complimented by Edward Fitz-Gerard, Brother to the Earl of Kildare, Lieutenant of the Band of Gentlemen-Pensioners; by whom he was convey'd to Burnham, about 3 Miles from Windsor, where the Queen and Court were. Four Days after, the Abbot of Dunfermelin deliver'd Letters to the Queen from Murray Regent of Scotland, intimating, That the Duke had been practifing with him at Hampton-Court to favour and affift his Marriage with the Queen of Scots; and that he threatned him hard, if he did not comply: That he promis'd to him what Service he could, to prevent a defign upon his Life, to be put in execution, upon his return, by one Norton. Whereupon the Duke engaged for his fafe Paffage, and that he fhould not be for his late Panage, and that he mount not on Affanlted by Norton, or any other. That filortly after, the Duke fent him a Letter, written in private Characters, wherein he defir'd his Contirence to the Match; and that he fent him Word likewife by Boyd, That he would never forfake the Queen of Scots. And more than all this. That the Ministers of the said Queen had almost possess'd him with a belief, that the Queen of England had confented to the Marriage, and given the Queen of Scots great Encouragement in the Point of Succession. Oueen Elizabeth perceiv'd moreover, that she had made draw them to her Interest, pretending she had an Affair in hand which would secure the Queen, and promote the Advantage of both Kingdoms.

The Duke, who carry'd on a very cautious Correspondence with the Bishop of Ross, Leicefer and Throckmorton, by Letters convey'd in cer-tain Ale-Veffels, or Bottles, was about this time examin'd upon the business of his intended Marriage with the Queen of Scots, and his private Conferences with the Bishop of Ross; and upon The D, of conferences with the billion of Any, and Prover Norfeld conference and the Cuffody of Sir Henry Nevil, after he Tower. had receiv'd a fharp Reprimand for withdrawing from Court without leave, and tax'd with a defign to diffurb the Tranquillity of the Nation. Two Days after, the Bishop of Ross receiv'd his Examination, and Robert Ridolph, (the Gentleman of Florence) that was so intimate with Ross, Others asand the rest, was committed to Sir Francis Wal- ter him. fingham's custody. The Earl of Pembroke was confin'd to his own House, where he was privately Examin'd; but in respect to his great Age and Quality, he found the Favour of having his Confession not fet down in Writing, it being his own Request, because he was not able to Write himfelf. Certain Noblemen, who were privy to the matter, ask'd the Queen's Pardon, and own'd they had given the Duke their Advice and Confent to the Match, which Murray himfelf was the first Propounder of, but with this restriction, that all the Parties concern'd flood engag'd to make the Queen acquainted with the Matters before it came to any conclusion. In like manner, the Earls of Northumberland and Westmorland, who had a fhare in the Plot, submitted themselves to the Earl of Suffex, Lord-President of the North, and beg'd the favour of his Mediation with the Queen on their behalf. There were likewise feveral Pamphlets printed against this Match, Books and in opposition to the Queen of Scots, and her printed as

Title to the Succession; but in so per and fawcy ginft the a way, that Queen Elizabeth refolv'd to call them in by a Proclamation; and conniv'd at the Bishop of Ross's putting out an Answer to them. He immediately printed one under the Title of And and Morgan Philips; wherein he afferted the Honour of his Royal Mistress, defended her Title to the Crown of England, and wrote for the Lawfulness of a FemaleReign; for that also was a Subject now in dispute: But he afterwards freely own'd, in his Commentaries, that the Arguments he had pro-

duc'd in defence of her Title, as Successor, were privately borrow'd from Sir Antony Brown, Lord-Chief-Justice of the Common-Pleas; and Carell, two of the most eminent and judicious Lawyers in England.

About this time arriv'd Chapine Vitelli, Marquis of Cetona, with Letters of a very ancient Date from the Duke of Alva, under colour of composing the Differences about Trade: But in reality, his Errand was to watch the issues of a Rebellion just ready to break forth, and to take the Command of certain Forces which the Duke of Alva had promis'd under-hand to fend out of the Netherlands. He had dispatch'd away La-Mot, Governor of Dunkirk, before (as he confes'd himfelf) in the Habit of a Sailor to found the Ports: But it appearing that this Marquis had only the Duke of Alva's Commission for what he did, who was no more himfelf than a Deputy-Governor, there was fome fcruple made, whether he was to be admitted under the Character of Embaffador or not. Yet the Queen was pleas'd to fignifie, that fhe would confider him as an Embaffador from Spain. But when he produc'd no other Orders than a bare Demand of the Mony that had been ftopt, the Queen being much dispos'd to preferve a Peace, advis'd him to procure a more ample Authority for the Accommodation of Matters; which whilft he waited for, there was a current Report of a Rebellion just breaking out A Rebelin the North of England. There went about a lion in the flight Rumour of fuch a Rifing (to fetch the North, matter fomething higher) in the beginning of Autumn; but it foon dropt, as having little or no Foundation: But it spread very much in a little time after, by reason of the frequent Confultations of Northumberland, Westmorland, and others; infomuch that Suffee, the Lord-President, fent for them, and examin'd them about the faid Report. They confes'd that they had heard fuch a Rumour, but flatly deny'd that they were the Authors or Abettors of it; and they made the 1509. most folemn Asseverations, that they were ready Ann. 12. to venture their Lives for the Queen, against all her Enemies whatsoever. Hereupon they were discharg'd, and commission'd to enquire after the Spreaders of this Report. However, it increas'd to that degree, that the Queen (tho' fhe was not forward to believe any thing to the Prejudice of Persons of their Quality) commanded, however, the Earl of Suffex to warn them up to London, to avoid Suspicion: But Suffex order'd 'em to meet him, to confult barely about the Affairs of that Province. (On what defign is hard to ghess at!) They hereupon made use of dilatory Excuses at first, and foon after flatly refus'd to come; which made the Queen fend 'em her peremptory Orders, to appear presently before her, (all Excuses and Pretences apart) to the end she might either awe them out of any rebellious Pursuits, or else drive 'em to that Extreme, before they had Forces and Materials ready for fuch a Defign. For it appear'd not long after, that there were certain Supplies and Recruits from the Scottish Confederates, and from the Duke of Alva, appointed to be landed at Hartlepool, in the Bishoprick of

1569.

> As fcon as Northumberland had read the Letters, between the Softness of his Nature, and the Confcioufness of his Guilt, the Bigottry of his Per-fuation, and the Violence of his Refentment for a conceiv'd Wrong done to him, in relation to a rich Copper-Mine found upon his Estate; but which was Granted away from him, by Vertue of the Oueen's Right to Royal Mines; yet not without some Reserve of Favour to be expected from the Queen: he feem'd to labour under a very great Sufpense, whether 'twere best to apply to her Majesty, to seek his Sasety by Flight, or fairly turn Rebel. His Friends and Servants, who were ripe for Mischief and Sedition, obferving their Mafter's Cowardice and Irrefolution, alarm'd him at Midnight with the furprizing Cry, That Ofmald, Ulfrop, and Vaughan, his Enemies, were ready, with Arms and Men, to take him Prifoner. They intreated him not to betray himself, his Friends, and the Faith of his Ancestors; and represented to him, that the Catholicks were ready, all England over, to affert the Romish Religion, and that the Bells were rung backwards almost in every Parish, to encourage the People to an Infurrection. At this the Earl in a Panick Fear got out of Bed, and withdrew to a Lodg in his own Park, near Topcliff; and the next Night he retir'd to Branspeth, a Seat belonging to the Earl of Westmoreland; where he found a great Number of People, who were no Strangers to the Secret.

> The better to raise and amuse the Multitude, fome were commanded to arm themfelves, and join their Forces in the Queen's Defence : Others were possess'd, that all the Peers of England did now act in Conjunction with them, for the refloring of Popery: To others they pretended, that they were forc'd to take up Arms, to prevent the Encroachments of Upftarts, upon the ancient Nobility of England, and the Betraying thereof to a forein Power. Under this colour, thereof to a forein Power. they broke out into an immediate Rebellion, and were the first that disturb'd the Tranquility of the Nation, which had now lasted Eleven Years without Interruption, under the Reign of Queen Elizabeth. Nicolas Morton, a Priest, was the great Incendiary, who had been fent from the Pope, to pronounce Queen Elizabeth an Heretick; and therefore to have no farther Right to her Crown and Kingdom. Twas not long before they published a Manifesto, declaring, That they took up Arms with no other Defign, than to restore the Religion of their Ancestors, to remove ill Counsellors from the Queen, to restore the Duke and other faithful Peers, who were 1569. deprived of their Title and Honour, to their Liberty and Ann. 12. the Queen's Favour; and, that they attempted nothing against the Queen, to whom they vow d. a most con-fant Fidelity and Allegiance. They likewise sent Letters Letters to the Papitts all round the Kingdom; fort the and advis'd 'em to come in to their Affiltance; Papitts. But so far were they from joining with them. that most of 'em fent the Letters they had receiv'd, with the Bearers thereof, to the Queen: Every one strove who should be foremost in the Tenders of his Service, and the Offers of his Purfe and Perfon, towards reducing the Rebels. Nor was Norfolk himself the last, upon this occasion; so that from hence the Queen had a fair Opportunity of discerning the good Affection of her Subjects towards her; and was not backward in acknowledging the abundant Goodness of God to her, upon that account.

The Rebels march'd first to Durbam, a Bishop's See hard-by; where they abus'd and defac'd all the English Bibles and Books of Common-Prayer, which they found in the Churches. From thence they proceeded, by fmall Journeys, faying Mafs in all Places they came to, and marching in their in all Places they came to, and marching in their Ranks, with Colours flying (fome of em bear-Their ing the Five Wounds of Chrift, and others the Banners Chalice) whilf Richard Norton, a Reverend old Gentleman, bore a Crofs, with a Streamer, before them, as far as Chifford-Moor, not far from Watherbey; where they made a Muster, the 12th. day after the Infurrection commenc'd; and rec- Their kon'd not above 600 Horfe, and 4000 Foot. Numbers. Having learnt here, that the Queen of Scots, (upon whose Account they had undertaken this Rifing) was remov'd from Tutbury to Coventry, a very strong City; and committed to the Custody of the Earls of Shrewsbury and Huntington; That Sullex was just by them, with a strong Party of new-rais'd Forces; That Sir George Bowes was behind them, with a choice Detachment, and had fortify'd Bernard-Caftle; And that the Lord Scroop and the Earl of Cumberland had strengthned Carlifle, and were then raising a Body of Men; they retir'd back almost the same way they came, and got to Raby, the chief Seat of the Earl of Westmoreland: From thence they made a Fetch, and befieg'd Bernard-Caffle; which, for want of Rebels Provision, was foon oblig'd to furrender upon take Bera Terms; Sir George Bowes, with his Brother Robert, ward and the Soldiers of the Garrison, being permitted, by the Agreement, to march out with their

On the fame day they were proclaim'd Traitors to their Country, and Suffer march'd against them with 7000 Men, attended with Edward Earl of Rutland, the Lord Hunsdon, the Lord Evers, and the Lord Willoughby of Parham. As foon as Suffex was come to Aukland, the Rebels fled in They fly great Confternation, to Hexbam; and foon after fereral straggl'd in Companies, and by private Roads, to ways. Navorth-Castle: Where, receiving Intelligence, that the Earl of Warwick, and Clinton Lord Admiral, purfu'd 'em closely with 12000 Men, from the South of England, the Two Earls, with a fmall Company besides, withdrew themselves, unknown to the rest, into the Neighbourhood of Scotland. Northumberland was forced to skulk in fome of the poor Cottages at Harcland, among the Grahams, who were notorious Robbers, and, after some time, betray'd him into Murray's hands. Westmoreland was conceal'd by Carr of Ferniburst. and Buckley; and at last made his Escape, with fome few Engliffmen, into the Netberlands; where he liv'd wretchedly poor to the laft, under a flender Penfion allow'd him by the King of Spain. The rest, being dispers'd several ways, made a fhift to fave themselves, some by Flight, and o-1569, there by lying hid. Threefcore and Six Petty-Ann.12- Constables were hang'd up at Durbam, for an E-xample; and among em the most noted Muti-66 Petty-neer was one Plomtree, a Prict. At York were executed, xecuted Simon Digby, J. Fulthorpe, Thomas Bifloop, Robert Peneman; and a few Months after, at London, Christopher and Thomas Norton; and some o-others in other places.

Pretences of the Rebels

After this, some of the first-rate Malecontents were convicted of High-Treason, and outlaw'd; viz. Charles Earl of Westmoreland, Thomas Earl of Northumberland, Anne Counters of Northumberland, Nortumbersand, ame Countes of Nortumbersand, Daughter to Hemy East of Worefley, Edw. Dieres of Morton, John Newel of Leverfege, J. Swinborne, Thomas Markenfeld, Egremond Ruteliff, the Earl of Saffex's Brother, Christopher Nevil, Richard Norton of Norton-Coniers, Christopher, Marmadake and Themas of the Norton Family, Robert and Michael Tempeft, George Stofford, and about Forty more, of Noble Extraction. The Conviction and Outlawry of these Gentlemen, was confirm'd in the next enfuing Parliament; and the reft who had no Effates, and did not fly for't, receiv'd their

Thus came this Rebellion to an happy End,

Chapine Vitelli, who, as I before observ'd, was privy to this Design, seeming to stand in Admiration, before the Q. and feveral of the Lords, that fo great a Flame was fo fuddenly extinguish'd; tho' it stung him to the quick, that his Errand into England was, by this means, fo foully disappointed. But the Embers of this Rebellion Rebellion were not fo totally quench'd; for they afforded breaktout Sparks enough, to burft into a new Flame, at Naworth in Cumberland, near a Place calld Val-lum Severi, or The Picts-Wull. The Bellows to this Blaze was Leonard Daeres, fecond Son to Wil-liam Lord Daeres of Gillefland. It happen'd, that the Lord Dacres, the Nephew of this Gentleman, by his elder Brother, died young, as I before hinted; and it fluck very much in his Stomach, that so plentiful an Estate would, by the Law, de-scend to his Nieces, who were contracted, by the D. of Norfolk, their Father-in-law, to Two of his Sons: On which account he enter'd a Suit against 'em. But the Cause going against him, he fell to plotting, and fiding with the traiterous Party; and attempted (tho in vain) to refcue the Queen of Scots from her Confinement: But when he faw the Rebellion was in a greater Forwardness than he expected, and that the Rebels were proclaim'd Traitors; whilft he was at Court, as he was introduc'd to kifs the Queen's Hand, he offer'd her Majesty his best Service against the Rebels, and thereupon was fent home again: But, as it appear'd afterwards, he held Correfpondence with them, by the way; fent'em encouraging Meffages, and Promifes withal, of great Matters from the Ambaifadors of forein Princes; and among other things, that he would be fure to make use of the Forces he had rais'd in the Queen's Name, to cut off the Lord Scroop, Warden of the Weft-March, and the Biflop of Carlifle. Which not being able to do, he fent recommendatory Letters after those Earls who were making for Scotland, feiz'd on the Castle of Greyffock, and the other Seats belonging to the Dacres, and fortify'd Naworth-Caftle, as his own, by Right of Inheritance: Then, under pretence of securing his own Estate, and relisting the Rebels, he got together a Gang of 2000 bordering Robbers, and others who had a Respect for the very Name of Dacres; as being by much the no-bleft Family in those Parts.

Against these the Lord Hunsdon march'd, with the Garrison-Troops of Berwick; and they not daring to trust to their Fortifications, came on to encounter them; and being flank d with their Cavalry, and placed in a Triangle, prepared to 1569, receive them, at the little River Gelt. The Fight Ann. 12. was hotly maintain'd on both lides, and Lean of (tho' he was crook-backd, yet) performed every thing that could be expected from a brave Commander: But having loft a great many of his Men, he was forc'd to quit the hield to Handlen, Vehelare it coft him dear) and retire, as well as he touted could, to the nearest Part of Scotland; from whence foon after he went over into Ilul'and, and ended his Days at Louvain, in a poor Condition; infomuch that his Father, who on his Death-bed pray'd to God to afflict him plantifully, for his Disobedience, seem'd to have some-thing in him of the true Prophet. The Lord Hunfdon retook the Cailles, and deliver'd them to the Care of Norfolk's Servents; and the Q. publish'd an Act of Indomnity to all that had taken up Arms in the late Rebellion.

Altho' the Queen had her Hands full of thefe O. Elic. Disorders at home, yet was she not wanting ei- assists be ther in Affittance or Commisferation to the poor Protedistress'd Hugonots of France: For having profed Hante the feveral Princes of the fame Perfusiion, to lend their Hands to the Common-Caufe; the fupply'd the Queen of Navarre with Money, and took her Jewels as a Pledge; and also permitted Henry Champernoon (whose Coulin-German Gawin had marry'd the Earl of Mongomery's Daughter) to command a Regiment of Volunteers, confifting of 100 Gentlemen, all well mounted, into France; and with this Motto in his Colours, Finem det mibi Virtus, viz. Let Valour decide the Laufe. In this Lift of Volunteers, were Philip Butshide, Francis Barkley, and Walter Raleigh, a very young Perfon, who now first began to be taken notice of. These things were no Secret to the French King, who, out of a Delign to drain the Wealth of England, which flow'd away apace in the Relief of the French Protestants; or to divert it at least into some other Channel, resolv'd to raise a new Combustion in Scotland, by sending Supplies to those, who maintain'd the Castle of Dumbriton, for the Queen of Scots. To this purpose, he defign'd to dispatch thither Sebastian Martigues, a Person eminent enough for Martial Exploits; but he happen'd to be shot at the Siege of S. John d' Angeli; and fo this Stratagem fell to the Ground.

Nor was Ireland at this time free from fonce Commotions: For Edmund and Peter Boteler, Bro thers to the Earl of Ormand, after they had infulted their Neighbours in Munster, grew too big to A Rebeibe restrain'd within the Bounds of Law, and de-lion in the Bounds of Law, and de-lion Sword, they enter'd into a Confederacy with James Fire and Sword, they enter'd into a Confederacy with James Fire More, of the House of Defound, Miceleanacy With James Fire More, of the House of Defound, Miceleanacy With Sword S dringer, fire-i-dmind Steward of Inokelly, and others; to do all they could, in Conjunction with the Bishop of Rone and the Spaniards, to maintain Popery, and dispossels Queen Elizabeth of her Kingdom of Ireland. Hereupon, they were proclaim'd Traitors, and Sir Peter Carew the elder had feveral Skirmishes with them, but with various Success. Nevertheless, they at last got together a Gang of desperate Fellows, and befieg'd Kilkenny; commanding the Citizens to deliver Warham St. Legere's Wife, into their Hands. But being repuls'd by feveral Sallies from the Garrison, they made a miserable Waste of the Country all about: And to feed and pamper the Murineers Humour to the Height, Juin Mendozis was fent privately from Spain, when at the fame time came the Earl of Ormand out of England, to compose and direct it; and had the Good-luck to effect his Design, by prevailing on his Brothers to submit themselves, which they did; but were nevertheless imprison'd, tho' the Earl prevail'd kept such restless Ministers about him; that War and Peace were a kind of alternate Diversion to Ann. 12. that they were not brought to their Trial, as their Offences deferv'd: For he could not but their Offences deferv'd: For he could not but be much concern'd, that they should prove the Instruments of bringing such a Slur on so noble a Family. That which went a great way to procure this Grace, was, the near Relation between them and the Queen, who us'd sometimes to triumph and please herself in the unfully'd Grandeur of this Family. But the Lord-Deputy briskly pursu'd the remaining Parties of the Rebels; and, by the Help of Sir Humpbrey Gilbert; soon routed and dispers'd 'em. foon routed and dispers'd 'em.

Another In Ulfer likewise they were up in Arms; for in Ulfer. Turlough Leinigh was so wavering himself, and and Peace were a kind of alternate Diversion to 1569.

N

him. But if the English Garrifons were not able Ann.12. how to keep him within Bounds, by quitting the lean Paftures of their own Illands, and making bold with the Forage of his fatter Country: But to prevent their Incursions on that side, there were feveral large Sums fent out of England, to fortify the Sea-Coalt. But all to no purpose; by reason of an Inconvenience common to England, as well as Ireland; where for the most part such Men push forward, and are countenanc'd and employ'd, as are so wholly engag'd in their own, that they absolutely neglect the publick Intereft.

The End of the FIRST BOOK.

ELI-

ELIZABETH,

Anno 1570.

Queen of ENGLAND.

OOK II.

The Thirteenth Year of her Reign.

HE Rebellion in England being now fuppress'd, Murray, Regent of Scotland, did all he could to have the Queen of Scots in his Hands. To this end he offer'd Ho-1570. Ann. 13. stages, promis'd to deliver up the Earls of Nor-Murray fues to thumberland and Westmorland, and by his means the Bishop of Ross, the suppos'd Author of the Rehave the Oct Seets Bilhop of Rols, the Juppos d Author of the Rein his Hands.
Heparties with Queen Elizabeth by fome meritorious Exhib Rebeis which borders upon England, at the Head of an Army, in fearch of the English Rebeis: A few of them he rook, but those of no Note; till at last he feiz'd upon the Earl of Northumberland, betravid by his Hoft as he Jurk'd among the Pilla-Qof Scots tray'd by his Host as he lurk'd among the Pillagers on the Frontiers. Him he fent Prisoner to Lough-Levin, and put the Borderers under fevere Hardships.

€le ia Ωain.

But the same Month, when, after the Fatigues he had endur'd, he feem'd now fecure, he was shot below the Navel by one in Ambuscade, as he was riding through the Streets of Limnuch, by the Scots call'd Lithquo. One Hamilton was the the Scots call'd Litbyuo. One Hamilton was the Affaffin, who prefently fled over to France, where he liv'd for feveral Years after, often declaring that he reveng'd himfelf thus privately of Marray, fince his Patience could no longer away with the Injustice he had done him. For Marray, because of his Loyalty to the Queen, had profcrib'd him, clapt him up in Prison, and threatned often to hang him, till he had furrender'd up a Farm that fell to him by his Wife to a Creature of Marray's. Hope his the Women's a Creature of Murray's. Upon this the Woman fell diffracted, and he himself in a rage broke out of Prison, and committed the Murder. Nor could he afterwards be persuaded in France, tho' look'd upon as a Man of a daring Spirit, to attempt the like against the Admiral Coligny; giving out, That he had indeed, to his Sorrow, reveng'd his own just Grievances, but that neither Reward nor Interest should draw him on to revenge another Man's Quarrel.

Hereupon all Britain was full of Discourse ahour the Regent's Murder, many making Wonders of Trifles; fuch as his Mother's Dream after her Night's Lodging by ftealth with King James V. of a Lion and a Dragon fighting together in her Womb. But the more fober Perfons pass'd their Judgments upon him, according to the Party they fided with. Some commended him for expelling the Romish Religion out of Scotland, for preferving the young King, for his im1570.

partial administration of Judice, and for his don.13.
Bounty to learned Men, especially Euchanan.
Others blam d him, for making a Cloak of Religion to hearned with himself and him gion, the better to enrich himself and his Creatures with the Spoils of the Church; for his most unaccountable Ingratitude to the Queen his Si-fter, to whom he was many ways obliged; and for his unmanly infulfing over her Female Weak-nefs. And thefo, by their Surmifes and Conjectures, and from the bad Inclinations of feveral outed the Mother of her Kingdom, would hardly spare the Son. The Queen of Scatt was troubled that he met with to fudden and violent a Death, before he had (as the faid) repented fa-riously of his Offences to God, his Country and his Prince. But the English that favour'd Norfolk, accus'd him, as far as they durft, as a fly and cunning Diffembler.

The Night after the Regent's Murder, Thomas An Incur-Carr of Ferniburs, and Walter Scot of Buckluy, two fion of the floutest Men among the Scotch Borderes, Seesa and great Loyalists to the Scottish Queen, and who Rebels for their adhering to her Interests were banished into Engand outed of all they had, brake the Peace, made an Incussion into Enganderic for their adhering to her find the same an Incussion into Enganderic for the same for the an Incursion into England at the Head of the Score and some English Rebels, and laid waste the Frontiers with Fire and Sword. This they did to be tiers with Fire and Sword. This they did to be reveng'd of the Queen of England, because for her fake the late Regent had uted the Borderers fo feverely. Upon this Mr. Thomas Randolph was fent Express into Sectland, to represent before the Sectiff Lords, in a publick Assembly, this so great an Injury; and to inform them, That if Complaint they (because of the Disorders now in Sectland) thereof could not suppress the Violators of the Peace, the made in Concept would with her Forces chastlife the Ostenher fake the late Regent had used the Borderers Queen would with her Forces chastise the Offenders, without hurring the Innocent. There was no Answer made to this, because they had not as yet appointed a Regent. Yet, to protect the English Borderers from Wrong, and to curb the Intolence of the Enemy, the Earl of Sulfex re-surex Infolence of the Enemy, the Earl of Suffex re-suff-x ceiv'd Orders to levy Forces, and march againt feat to Buckluy and Ferniburf; with Infractions only to fight those who had lately, with the English Rebels, invaded and ravaged England, or had or should countenance the English Rebels, contrary to the Confederacy. Nor could be be staid, tho' the Earls of Angyle and Huntley, who favour'd the Queen of Sects, sent Triboun to crave a Truce till they could inform Queen Elizabeth of the Seatch Affairs: But when they could not distingle her Affairs: But when they could not diffuade her from profecuting her Defigns, they first fell to 1570. Threatning, and then to Praying and BefeeckAnn. 13. ing her, that certain Laws enacted and established in Scotland the last two Years, might be repeal'd.

Various of him.

The En-

Nevertheless, in the middle of April, Suffex, with the Lord Hunsdom and Drury Marshal of Berglish rewick, entred Scotland with an Army; and coming venge wick, entred Scotland with an rully, since Countered into Tividale, laid waste great part of the Countered with a count ty, burning all the Towns and Villages belonging to Buckluy and the two Carrs, and plundering all their Estates; the two Castles of Ferniburst and Craling, belonging to Thomas Carr, were rafed, and demolished: While, at the same time, Henry Lord Scroop entring the Western Borders of Scotland, laid waste the Estate and Possessions of Johnson in Anandale, and plunder'd fome others, who, with him, had favour'd the English Rebels; and in these Expeditions three hundred Towns and Villages were burnt, and near fifty Castles demolish'd.

Within a few Days, Suffex, with the L. Hunsdon, makes a fecond Inroad into Scotland, and lay down before Humes Castle, whither the English Rebels used to fly: And after he had batter'd it with his Ordnance, it furrender'd upon Articles. There were not above two of the Rebels found therein, who were immediately hang'd, and a Garison put in the Castle. After which Drury was sent to besiege Fast Castle, another Fort belonging to the Lord Humes, which was foon yielded up to him. When the English Rebels had now betaken the King's themselves to the utmost Parts of Scotland, and Party in joining with others of the same Stamp with them-scotland. felves, threatned the Borderers in England, and the Royalists in Scotland, with Fire and Sword; Suffex, at Drury's return, fent him back again feven Days after into Scotland with 1200 Foot and 400 Horse; who at Coldingham receiv'd Hostages for the Earls of Angus, Morton, Marr and Glencarne; and for the Barons of Reuven and Lindsey, who had with much ardency invited in the English. Afterwards Sussex himself, attended by Sir George Cary, Sir Thomas Mannaurs, Sir Robert Con-fiable, (whom with Drury he had Knighted) Hie-rom Bons, William Knolls, Tho. Brickwell, Robert Games, Elrington, Carrit, and other Commanders, march'd to Edinberough, and join'd his Forces with the faid Earls, and with Lerex newly return'd from England; tho' at the fame time they fufspected he favour'd Norfolk and the Q. of Scot's Party. They march'd by Lithque to Glascow, from whence Hamilton D. of Chastle-Herault had withdrawn himfelf. From thence they drew off to Hamilton-Castle, which after the great Guns had play'd against, was foon furrender'd, and half They take demolified. They likewise fired a goodly Town Hamilton of the Hamiltons, laid waste their Territories all over Chifdall, and in their return did the fame to Hamilton's Palace ar Lithquo.

They aid

Cattle.

Now the Lords of Scotland that were of the King's Party having removed the Hamiltons, and made Re- the reft which had flood for the deposed Q. met gent of Scotland. together about choosing a new Regent, and sent for Queen Elizabeth's Counsel. Her Answer was, That he would not concern berself in the creating a Regent, self the might seem to act in prejudice to the Queen of Scots, whose Cause was not yet decided. But they created Matthew Earl of Lenox, the Queen's Grandfather, first of all Interrex, and soon after Regent, Queen Elizabeth not opposing it. For the knew he would out of natural Affection be most tender of his young Grandson, and most affectionate to the English for the Civilities he had received; and doubted not but he would be at her devotion, fince she had his Wife in her power.

Whilft Queen Elizabeth thus favour'd the Royalists in Scotland, the Spaniard was not wanting 1570. to the Captive Queen; but by the contrivance of Ann. 13. Hamilton, Rector of the Church of Dunbar, fent The Spa-privately out of the Netherlands great flore of mard Arms and Powder, feven great Guns, and fome fends Aid Money, to Hunley, the Queen's Lieutenant in against Scotland. In the mean time Hunley, the Duke of alits. Chaftel-Herault and Argyle, the Queen's Lieutenants, agreed, by the Queen's confent, to dif- Seaton's patch George Lord Seaton in Quality of Embaffa- Embady dor to the Duke d'Alva; who having Audience, to the D, deliver'd himself in these Terms. 'That he was d'Alva. fent from a Kingdom depriv'd of its publick Peace, and of a most excellent Princes, thro's the Treachery of disloyal Subjects. That the ' fum of his Embaffy was this: They defir'd that Supplies might be fent over to redeem the Q. from a wretched Captivity in a strange Land, ' and the Realm from the Oppression of Foreig-That the Scotch Rebels might be prohiners. bited from Trafficking in the Spanish Dominions; and that the Ten thousand Ducats promised to the Queen of Scots, might be paid. That the Queen had thrown herfelf under the Spaniards Protection, as one whose sole regard was to Honour, Juffice and Piety, (Objects most worthy of a Catholick Prince). That she made use of the Duke d'Alva as a Mediator, on whose Endeavours did depend the performance of those laudable Intentions of his Catholick 'Majesty. That he could propose no Advantage to the Spaniard hereby, that being a thing ' unworthy of fo great a Monarch: But that he offer'd him the eternal Alliance of a most re-' nown'd Queen, and of a very valiant Nation, and their affurd Submiffion with thankful Hearts. That the Glory of his Father Charles 1.

was spread over all the World, by restoring the Duke of Florence and the Mahometan Prince to ' their former Dignity. But should he restore a Chriftian Queen, a conftant Favourer of the Chriftian Religion, an absolute Princes, al'ly'd both by Blood and Confederacy to the ' greatest Princes in Christendom, and the most undoubted Heir of two most flourishing King-doms; how glorious a Thing would that be, and how incomparable an Argument of his Piety? That hereby he might not only oblige France, Denmark, Lorain, the Guifes, his Holiness, and the whole Catholick Church in general; but likewise, by following his Father's Example, in relieving and reftoring deposed Princes. he might equal, yea and far transcend his Fa-ther's Glory. That it highly concern'd him to revenge this dangerous Example of deposing ' Hereditary Kings, fince he was thegreatest Mo-'narch of Europe, and his own Dominions being fo far afunder, might very eafily be exposed to the like Infolency. Neither could there be ' offer'd him a moré fignal or advantagious Mark of Justice. For by restoring her, he would entirely bring over to his Alliance and Confederacy, a Queen-Dowager of France, an Abfo-lute Queen of Scotland, the undoubted Heir of England, and the whole Scottift Nation, whofe unthaken Fidelity in observing the League with France ever fince the Reign of Charles the Great, is very well known to the whole World. 'fides, (had he a Mind worthy of himfelf) by this means he had an opportunity of revenging the Wrongs offer'd him by the Queen of England, who favours his Rebels in the Netherlands, had intercepted his Money, abus'd his Embassador, and feiz'd upon his Subjects Goods. That ' to lie still till Scotland should have submitted to the Queen of England, would argue him to be fupinely Careless and Slothful. That this Wo-

a man beving made fuch an addition to her Empire, 1570. and fecur'd all at Home, would be a Terror to in. 13. her Neighbours; and her Mafeuline Spirit, of join'd with the Humour of her Sex, that is aiways are vitious of Command, would foon find out Methods of it onling Spain in a long War. But were her Dengas prevented, the might foon be curo'd with the fearful apprehention of her owr Condition; lince the Captive Queen had run lew Enemies in Scotland; most of the 'Nobility, and generally all the Catholicks of both Kingdoms on her tide, and all the Ports of Sectland in her power: And for carry-ing on fo Holy a War as this, his Holiness would not spare the very Revenues of the Church. The only thing now wanting is, That his Catholick Majetty would do his ut- moft in fo juft, fo pious, and fo bleffed a Caufe.
 From him alone all the Catholicks of Britain do ' now expect either their Happiness, or their final Ruin.

The Duke d'Alva reply'd, That he would freely and readily do his utmost to promote this Business with the King of Spain; but that he could not prohibit the Commerce of the Scotch Rebels, since it was contrary to the Privileges of the Netherlands: But as for the Money, he primit d it should be forthwith paid. In the mean time Section, the better to oblige the Spaniard and the Duke d'Alva, went in Difguife to the Confederate Netherlanders, and by smooth Words, Feaflings, and other infinuating Artifices, drew the Scots that ferv'd under them to revolt; and when he was to be Tortur'd for it, he narrowly escap'd with his Life to the Duke A Alva, who promis'd bim fix Months Pay for Ten thousand Men. But it came to nothing, fince by reason of the great Disorders in the Netherlands, he could fend no Men into Scot-

In the mean time the Bishop of R_0 (who had industriously solicited the Queen of S_{cots} Affairs in England, and had been committed to the Cuflody of the Bishop of London, as the private fo-menter of the late Rebellion) being now fet at Liberty, procur'd the French King, by his Embassador and Montlue, to be Earnest with Oueen Elizabeth for the Delivery of the Queen of Scots: They complain'd of her close Confinement, and that under the Earl of Huntington, her most bitter Adversary and Competitor, for that he made as open Pretentions to the Kingdom of England as the did. The fame thing, by the procurement of Ref., was very through urgd by the Spanish Embassador in his Mistrels's Name. But the Queen, after she had reckon'd up the many fly Stratagems fome had used to fet the Queen of Scots at Liberty, (whom she obscurely tax'd as accessary to the late Rebellion) answer'd, 'That it would be a piece of inconfiderate and most dangerous Folly to fet her at Liberty, who by unlawful Artifices to openly afpir'd to the Kingdom of England: That necessity had forc'd her to confine her more closely, to cut off some of her superstuous Train, and to join the Earl of 'Huntington (whom she acknowledg'd indeed to be her Kinfman, but yet had no Right to the *Crown) with the Earl of Strewsbury, her for-mer Keeper, who lately began to suspect the *Trustiness of his own Servants, many of whom ' he had perceiv'd were daily drawn in to favour the Queen of Scots. That notwithstanding this, the Earl of Huntington had been removed form her fome time ago. She likewife promifed, That the would do all the could to compose · Matters between the Queen of Scots and her Subjects. And withal protested, she would not e revenge the Injuries she had receiv'd. But yet c fhe hoped, the French King, the Spaniard, and the Queen of Scots, would give her leave to provide for her own and her Peoples Security and Quiet, according as Nature, Reason, and Ann. 13. her Princely Reputation or Honour jultly require. If any of them could devite a more 'likely Expedient to ward off the Danger, the would very willingly hearken to it and embrace it.

After this, there were frequent Debates at Debates Court, whether the Queen of Scots fhould be about fet-lent Home, or kept fill in England? And how GofSects the Safety of the Kingdom, the Queen, and at liberty.

Religion, might be helt fecur'd?

At this juncture, William Herbert, Earl of Pembroke, the Son of Richard, Son of William Herbert The Earl Sonior Larl of Pembroke, prefaging fome Diffarter by the committee of hintelf, departed this Life in his Chimacterical Death and Vanna Larley and Charles Year; leaving behind him three Children, Hen- Character ry, Edward, and Ann; and, after a ftately Funcral, was laid under a fumptuous Monument in St. Paul's Church. An extraordinary Man, who was in some fort the raiser of his own Fortune. With Henry VIII. he got into great Favour, and was made his Chamberlain. By his wife Conduct he encreas'd his Wealth, especially after the King had married Katharine Parr, his Wife's Si-fter. Under Edward VI, whilft the Court was distracted with Factions, he was made Knight of the Garter, Master of the Horse, Baron Herbert of Caerdiss, and Earl of Pembroke. Under Queen Mary, he commanded her Forces against Wist, was General of the English Army at St. Quintin's, Lord-President of Wales, and twice Governor of Calais. Under Queen Elizabeth he was made Great Mafter of the Houshold; whose Favour he loft for a time, because he was the chief Promoter of Norfolk's Marriage with the Queen of Scots, tho' he had no ill Design in it. After he was dead, they were ready to proferibe him upon some Discoveries made, and some strong Prefumptions against him.

Pius V. Bishop of Rome, who had hitherto car-Find V. Bilhop of Rome, who had intherto carried on his Defigns privately against Queen Elizabeth; and the last Year, by his Declaratory Bull, without any previous Admonition or Citation, had pass'd a private Sentence of Excommunication, and rais'd Rebellions against her, now caus'd the same to be published and fix'd upon the Bilhop of London's Palace Gates, in these Weets.

these Words.

A Declaratory Sentence of Pope Pius V. against Eliza- A Ball beth the pretended Queen of England, and the He- public d reticks her Adberents. Wherein likewife all her Sub-jetts are declar'd abfole'd from their Oath of Alle-giance, and any other Duty they owe unto her: And whoever flull hencforward obey her, are included in the sum of the subthe same Curfe.

Pope PIUS, the Servant of God's Servants, for a standing Memorial of the matter.

' He that Reigneth on high, to whom is afcrib'd all Power both in Heaven and Earth, hath committed the Absolute Government of his One, Holy, Carholick and Apoftolick Church (our of which there is no Salvation) to only One upon Earth, namely, to Peter, the chief of the Apoftles, and to Peter's Succeffor, the Bishop of Rome. Him alone has he made Prince over all Nations and Kingdoms, to pluck up, deftroy, featter, confume, plant, and build; that he may preferve the Faithful (knit together with one common Band of Charity) in the Unity of the Spirit, and prefent them fafe and found to their Saviour. discharge of which Function, We, who are by the divine Favour call'd to the Government of Iii 2 Vol. II.

The Duke a Alva's an(wer.

the faid Church, spare no Labour; but strive 1570. earneitly, that Unity and the Catholick ReAnn. 13. ligion (which, for the Trial of the faithful, and our Amendment, hath, by its Author's Permission, been expos'd to so many Troubles) might be preferv'd entire. But the ungodly are grown fo numerous and powerful, that now there is no Place in the Universe, but ' what they have endeavour'd to taint with their most pernicious Doctrines: To which, among others, Elizabeth, the pretended Queen of England, abandon'd to all Wickedness, is an Abettor; under whose Protection the most pro-fligate Persons have found a Retreat. Which very Woman, having feiz'd on the Kingdom, and wickedly usurpd to herself the Supremacy over the whole Church of England, and the chief Authority and Jurisdiction thereof; has re-duc'd that Kingdom to a miserable Apostacy; which had been fo lately reclaim'd to the Ca-tholick Faith, and a thriving Condition. tholick Fairth, and a thirving Collution.

Tor having firitfly prohibited the Exercise of the true Religion, (which Mary, the lawful Queen, of famous Memory, had, by the Affifance of this See, reftor'd; after it had been lately suppressed by Harry VIII. an Apostate therefrom) and following and embracing the Errors of Hereticks; the has diffolv'd the Privy-Council, conflitting of the English Nobility, and fill'd it up with Hereticks of an obscure Descent; suppress'd the Embracers of the Cathoc lick Faith, and fet up, in their flead, wicked Preachers, and Ministers of Impiety; abolish'd the Sacrince of the Mass, Prayers, Fastings, the Choice of Meats, Celibacy, and the Rites of the Catholick Church; and commanded Books containing in them downright Herefie, to be publish'd throughout the whole Realm; and order'd impious Rites and Ceremonies (which she herself entertain'd and observ'd, according to Calvin's Institution) to be likewise observ'd by her Subjects; presum'd to eject Bifhops, Rectors, and other Catholick Priefts, out of their Churches and Benefices; and to bestow them, and other Church-Livings, on Hereticks; and to determine Ecclesiastical Causes; prohibited the Prelates, Clergy, and Laity, from acknowledging the Church of Rome, or obeying its Injunctions, and Canonical Sanctions; compell'd most of 'em, by Oath, to submit to her wicked Laws, to abjure the Authority and Obedience of the Pope, and to acknowledge her the fole Head over Temporal and Spiritual Matters; impos'd Penalties and Pu-6 nishments upon those who obey'd not her Commands, and executed 'em upon those who continu'd in the Unity of the Faith, and their former Obedience; cast the Catholic Prelates and Rectors of Churches into Prison, where many of 'em, worn out with continual Afflictions and Grief, have died miferably. All which things are fo manifelt and notorious to the whole World, and confirm'd by the ferious Testimony of so very many; that no Excuse, Defence, or Evasion can be made. We therefore, feeing that Impiety and Wickedness receives daily Growth, and that the faithful are perfecuted, and Religion abus'd, every day more than other, by the In-fligation and Endeavours of the faid Elizabeth: And fince we perceive her Heart so harden'd and obdurate, that the has not only contemn'd the folemn Intreaties and Admonitions of Catholick Princes, for her Safety and Conversion; but has also deny'd the Nuntio's of this See, to crofs the Seas into England, for that purpofe:
We; I fay, are conftrain'd, at last, to make use of the Arms of Justice, against her; and

" cannot but lament, that we are forc'd to pu-!

nish One, whose Ancestors have been signally \sigma ferviceable to the whole State of Christendom. 1579. We therefore, supported by his Authority, Ann. 13. whose Pleasure it was to place us (tho' too weak for fo weighty a Burden) on the Su-preme Throne of Juffice, do, by Vertue of our Apotholick Power, declare the faid Elizabeth an Heretick, and a Favourer of Hereticks, and her Adherents in the Crimes aforefaid, to have incurr'd the Sentence of Excommunication, and to be cut off from the Unity of the Body of Christ. Moreover, We declare her to be deprived of her pretended Title to the faid King-dom, and of all Dominion, Dignity, and Privilege whatsoever. And the Nobility, Sub-jects, and People of the faid Kingdom, and all others who have taken an Oath to her, to be for ever abfolv'd from any fuch Oath, and all other Duty, Allegiance, and Obedience: We do likewise, by Authority of these Presents, absolve them, and deprive the said Elizabeth of her pretended Title to the Kingdom, and all other things before-mention'd. And We charge and command all and every the Noblemen, Subjects, People, and others aforefaid, That they presume not to obey her, or her Orders, Mandates, and Laws: And those who shall do otherwise, are subject to the like Excommunication. But because it cannot be expected, that these Presents should be publish'd in all places, where they are needful; Our Will is, that the Copies of 'em, under a Publick Notary's Hand, and the Seal of an Ecclefiaftical Prelate, or his Court; be of the fame Force with all Men, judicially and extrajudicially, as these Presents flouid be, if they were exhibited and shewn. Given at Rome, at S. Peter's, in the Year of the Incarnation of our Lord, 1569, March 28. and the Fifth Year of Our Papacy. Ca. Glorierius.

Hereupon new Surmifes arofe, that fomething extraordinary was to be expected. And truly, & Rebelanother Rebellion was like to break out in Nornoncer recommon was use to break out in Normalist folk; but was crush'd in its very Birth. Several Norfolk Gentlemen, willing to fet the Duke at presented liberty, (for whom all of them had a singular Respect) laid a Plot, that at Harlestone-Fair, they would gather the Mob possible by the Sound would gather the Mob together, by the Sound of a Trumpet, under pretence of driving the Netherlanders out of England; who, to avoid the Duke of Alva's Tyranny, had many of 'em fled over to that County. Some of thele Gentlemen The Au-were brought to a Trial, and found guilty of bostry'd High-Treafon: Three only were executed. (So and exe-merciful was the Queen) The most noted of them was fobn Throckmorton; who at his Trial confess'd nothing, but at the Gallows, to excuse the rest, own'd himself the principal Author and Promoter of the Fact.

John Felton, who fet up the Pope's Bull on the Felton Bishop of London's Palace-Gates, was now taken, bang'd. (for fly he would not) arraign'd, and boldly confels'd the Fact, (which yet he would not allow to be a Fault) for which he was hang'd near the Place where he had fet it up; getting thereby the empty Repute of a glorious Martyrdom. But most of the moderate Papists secretly distance The Bu'll liked the Bull; because there had been no previous Admonition, as Juffice required; and pitts. withal forefaw the Storms that hung over their Heads, who before fecurely exercis'd their Religion within their own private Houses, or had made no Scruple of frequenting the Service of God, as now received in the English Church. And from that time, many of 'em continu'd firm And by in their Allegiance; efpecially when they faw most of the neighbouring Princes, and the Catholick them Countries, keep up their usual Correspondence with the Queen, and the Bull to be flighted, as 1570 an empty Noise of Words.

other

Marriage.

The day Felton was arraign'd, the D. of Nor-The Dake felk (having confels'd, that through the head done amils, and having lo far repented abovered he had done that his Mind was averse the Tower. from thinking on, and his Ears from hearing any Mention of the Match; and having bound himfelf in a Bond, not to concern himfelf any farther in the Marriage with the Queen of Scots. without Queen Elizabeth's Knowledge) was difcharg'd from the Tower of London, wherein the Plague was then hot; and remitted, to the Satisfaction of all Men, to his own House, where he liv'd under the eatie Confinement of Sir Henry Nevil. Neither could he be proceeded against by the Statute of the 25 Edward III. concerning Cecil per-High-Treason, as Cecil intimated; who, favour-fuadeshim ing the Duke, did all he could to work him over, to marry any other Woman; whereby he would afterwards be free from Suspicion, and the State be out of Fear. Notwithstanding there were fome, who thought he was now fet at liberty on purpose, that he might be brought into some greater Danger. This is certain; that more things came to light afterwards, than he was aware of; and the Fidelity of those, who were his greatest Confidents, either by Hope or Bribery, began to fail him.

These Times were very subject to Suspicions Many im- and Conspiracies. For a Plot was laid, to free prison'd. the Queen of Scots out of Prison, by Thomas and Edward Stanley, the Earl of Derby's younger Sons, (which he had by the Daughter of Thomas Duke of Norfolk) and by Thomas Gerard, Rollfon, Hall, and others, in the County of Derby: But Rolfon's Son, one of the Band of Gente-men-Penfioners, difcover'd the Plot; and they were all imprison'd, except Hall, who sed to the Ifle of Man; from thence was fent over to Dunbriton, by the Bishop of Ross's Recommendations, afterwards, upon taking the Castle, was seiz'd and executed at London. And the Bishop of Roß himself, lately set at liberty, was now again confin d to the Bishop of London's Palace, for holding fecret Conferences with the Earl of Southampton, a violent Catholick.

An Expe-

In the mean time, Suffex and the Lord Scroop, ditioninto with fome light arm'd Soldiers, made another Scotland. Incursion into Scotland; fir'd the Villages all over Anandale, demolish'd Anand a Fort of Herri's, and Caer-Laveroc a Fort of Maxwell's; because thefe two had made Inroads into England, and plunder'd it: And he press'd so hard on those who stood firm to the Queen of Scots, that the Duke of Chaftel-Herault, Huntley, and Argyle, fent him a Bond, under their Hands and Seals, whereby they oblig'd themselves to forbear all Acts of Hostility, and withdraw themselves from the English Rebels. Suffex, upon his Return, knighted Edward Haftings, Francis Russel, Valentine Brown, William Hilton, Robert Staplaton, Henry Curwen, and Simon Mulgrave; for their Valour: And himself was afterwards, for his approv'd Prumade Pridence and Virtue, made one of the Queen's Privy-Council.

vy coun-fellor-

Sussex

with the

Queen Elizabeth (being full of Jealousies about the Bull, and the Norfolk-Conspiracy) sent Cecil and Walter Mildmay, to the Queen of Scots, Quiscors. then at Chattesworth, in the County of Derby; to consult with her, how the Difference in Scotland might be best compos'd; the restor'd to her former Dignity; and the Security of Queen Eliza-beth, and the Safety of the young Prince, be best provided for. When they came thither in October, after a dangerous Journey, occasion'd by the Overslowing of the Waters; she did nothing but bemoan her forlorn Condition, complain of the treacherous Artifices of Murray, excuse Norfolk, and repose all her Confidence in Queen Elizabeth's Goodnets; on whose Power she un- Ann. 13. derstood all the Affairs of Scotland, as well as England, wholly depended. They proposed,

That for making a latting Peace between both Proposition Kingdoms, the Treaty of Edinburary floudd on of the be ratify d: That she should renounce her Ti- Eng span tle and Claim to the Crown of England, during the Survival of Queen Elizabeth, and her Heirs lawfully begotten : That the should not renew or maintain Confederacy with any against England: That she should not permit any forein Forces to come into Setland That the thould not hold any Correspondence with the English or Irish, without the Queen's Knowledge: That she should deliver up the English Fugitives and Rebels: That she should requite the Damages fuffer'd in the English Frontiers: That the thould enquire, according to Law, as well into the Murder of her Hulband the Lord Darly, as of Murray: That the should fend her Son into England, as an Hostage: That she should not marry any Englishman, without the Queen of England's Knowledge; nor any other, without the Consent of the States of Scotland: That the Scots should not cross into Ireland, without the Queen of England's Leave: That for the Ratification of these things, the Queen and the Delegates to be appointed should give it under their Hands and Seals: That fix Hostages, of the Queen of England's naming, should be fent into England: That if the Queen of Scots, by herself or Agents, attempt any thing against Queen Elizabeth, she should ipso facto forseit all the Right she claims to the Crown of England: That Humes-Caftle and Fast-Castle be three Years in possession of the English: That some other Fort in Galloway or Cantyr be put into the English hands, to hinder the Scotch-Irish from infefting Ireland: Laftly, That the States of Scotland ratify the Premisses, by Act of Parliament.

To these things she presently made a prudent and wary Reply; but refer'd them, for a fuller Answer, to the Bishop of Ros, her Ambassador in England, to Alexander Gorden Bishop of Galloway, the Earl of Huntley's Unkle, and to William Baron of Levingstone; Delegates from her Lieutenants in Scotland: Who afterwards accepted fome of these Articles, and others they rejected. Their Answer was this: 'That the Edinborough-Treaty flould be confirm'd: That the Title Aufwer.

should be renounc'd, during the Life of Queen Elizabeth: That the antient League with the French was to be confider'd of; which if they did not observe, the Queen would lose her Dowry, and the Scotch Nation be endamag'd, of whom 100 Cuirasliers, and 124 Archers were maintain'd for a Guard: That the Merchants, Students, and many who had purchas'd Estates in France, and were in Church-Livings, would be turn'd out, and depriv'd of very great Penfions and Privileges which they enjoy'd; and Scotland would be robb'd of the Alliance and Affiftance of a most potent Nation: That unless the English would fully make amends for these things, they could by no means renounce the French Confederacy: That they would not admit of any forein Forces, unless such a Rebellion should break out, as could not be sup-

press'd by their own Arms at home: That the Oucen of Scots should hold no Correspondence with the Subjects of England, to the Damage of England; provided the Queen of England likewife would hold none with the Scotch jects, to the Prejudice of Scotlant: That if dnn.13. 6 Charles .

there were any English Fugitives and Rebels in being the Anniversary of the Beginning of her Scatland, they were among the Scotch Rebels, and to be demanded of them: That the Injuries which were done should be examin'd by Delegates: That they would enquire into the Murder of the Lord Darly and Murray, according to the Laws of Scotland: That they could not deliver the King for Hoftage, fince he was in their Hands, who, under his Name, rebell'd against the Queen: That it was a new and an unheard of thing, that an absolute Princess should marry none but whom a forein Prince, and her own Subjects flould prefcribe: That the Scots should not go over to Ircland, to the Prejudice of the Queen of England, without her Leave; if, on the other hand, in the same Article, the Irish be prohibited from coming over into Scotland: That for the ratifying the Premisses, they were willing to give Hostages, any the Queen of England should name; exany the Queen of England Mobile hame; except the Duke of Cheffel-Hersalt, Huntley, eiggle, and Athol. Belides, they agreed, That the Queen of England, if ever fine attempted any thing against the Queen of England's Title; provided the Queen of England would oblige herfelf, under the like Penalty, if she fhould attempt any thing against the Queen of Scots: As for Humes-Caftle and Fast-Cattle. they defire that they be reftor'd to the Lord Hames, the proper Owner of them; and no longer held by the English: That to deliver up a Fort in Galloway or Cantry, into a Foreiners Hands, would be nothing else but adding fresh Fuel to the Flames.

They can When they could not agree upon these Terms, not agree, nor any Delegates arrived from the Regent of Scotland; and because there went Reports about that the Pope, the French King, and the Duke d'Alva, were folicited to fend Succours, for the Delivery of the Queen of Scots; and the English Rebels, Westmereland, the Countess of Northumberland, and the rest, were withdrawn from Scot-land, (to whom the Pope had remitted 12000 Crowns, by the Hands of the Bishop of Ress. this Treaty came to nothing: Only Queen Elicabeth (who fat Mittress and Umpire, at the Helm of all Britain order'd, by her Authority, the States of Scotland to be prorogu'd, and a Treaty to be frequently debated; fince the Heads of both Parties were a very great Annovance to all Scotland.

Rofs craves delivery of Q of Scots, but in

The Heads of this Treaty were fent by the aid for the Bishop of Ross, to the Pope, the French King, and the Spaniard; and he gave them to understand. that the Queen of Scots would be fore'd to confent to them, unless they fent her timely Aid and Advice; which he very earneftly desir'd, tho' to no purpose. For they had their Hands full of other Business; and the Spaniard was wholly taken up in his Preparations for a Marringe with Anne of Austria, the Emperor Maximilian's, and his own Sifter's Daughter, who at this time fet fail out of Zealand, towards Spain; Queen E. for whole Convoy over the British Seas to Spain, Iszabeti's Queen Elizabeth dispatch'd Charles Howard, with Respect to a Fleet of Men of War, and several Noblemen; of Auftria. in teltimony of the Love and Efteen that fhe bore to the House of Auftria.

The Twelfth Year of Oueen Elizabeth's Reign being now happily expir'd (wherein the credulous Rom mifts expected, according to the Prediction of Conjurers, to fee their Golden-Day, Anniverfor the full of Joy, and with Thankfgivings, Sermons, Regarist repeated Prayers, Turnaments, melodious Ringselebrated, ing of Bells, and other fuel like Expressions of Joy, began to folemnize the 17th. of November,

Reign; which was continu'd as a Testimony of 1570. the Good-Will and Esteem they bore her, all Ann. 13. her Life long.

About this time died Horry Clifford, the Second Death of Earl of Cumberland of that Name; the Son of Eufumi-Honry Clifford, whom H.my VIII. had rais'd to berland, that Honour, in the Year 1525, but descended of an ancient and noble Family; very famous for their Marriages with the Heirs of the Vefeii, and Viponts, or de veteri ponte; who were former-ly Hereditary Vifcounts of Westmoreland. He had by his first Wife Eleanor, one of the Daughters of Charles Brandon Duke of Suffolk, and Mary, King Hony VIII's Sifter) one Daughter, namely, Margaret, who marry'd with great Hopes and Splendor, to Henry, the Earl of Derby's Son, as being to le Heirels to the Family of the Cliffords. But thefe Hopes were cut off, when, by a Second Wife, Anne Dacres, he had Two Sons, who fucceeded each other in their Father's Honour

At the same time died Nicolas Throckmorton, And of Sir whom we have often mention'd; the fourth Son N. Torcekof Sir Geo. Throckmerton, by Katherine the Daughter of Nicolas Lord Vaux: A Man of a large Experience, piercing Judgment, and fingular Prudence; who being very buffe in Queen Mary's days, had very near loft his Life, for all his extraordinary Prudence: And under Queen Elizabeth, the' he discharg'd several Embassies, with a great deal of Diligence, and much to his Praife, yet could be not be Master of much Wealth, nor rife higher than to those small Digweath, nor the inguer than to those man Dag-nities (tho' glorious in Tide) of Chief Cup-bearer of England, and Chamberlain of the Ex-chequer; and this, because he acted in Favour of Leiesser, against Ceell; whose Greatness he envyd. It was in Ceell's Houle, where, as he was feeding heartily at Supper, upon a Sallad; he was feiz'd, as fome fay, with an Inflammation of the Lungs; as others, with a Catarrh, not without Suspicion of Poison; and died very luckily for himself and Family, his Life and Estate being in great Danger, by reason of his turbulent Spirit.

In Ireland, Connogher O-Brian, Earl of Twomund, Rebellion not being able to bear with Edward Fitton, Go. in belads vernour of Connaugh, (who began to be very comes to thrick in his Government, and to cut off all the Hopes the Irifb Lords had, of living on the Spoils of their Subjects) had laid a private Plot with feveral to raife a Rebellion; which very fortunately was crush'd in its very Birth. For, the day before they defign'd to rife, Fitton, a perfect Stranger to the whole Intrigue, very civilly told Twomand, that he and some of his Friends would come and dine with him, on the morrow. Twomund, his Confcience flying in his Face, and feiz'd with Fear, (the worft Gheffer in fuch a doubtful Case) prefently thought his Plot was difcover'd, and that he must expect an Enemy, not a Guett, of the Governour: Whereupon he forthwith crofs'd over to France, all Men wondering what was become of him; and the Confpirators, fearing he was gone into England, to difcover the Buffnels, remain'd quiet. came to understand how Cases stood, he repent-

Intercession, was re-admitted into Q. Elizabeth's Favour, and reftor'd to his Eftate.

But Thomas Stukely, an Engliffman, a lewd, pro-Stukely fufe, and vaunting Rafeal, (who, after fpending flier out his Eftate, had thed into Ireland) being difap-of Ireland, pointed of the Hoeps he had, of being Steward of Wexford; having vented many base and scur-

ed seriously of what he had done, made an ingenuous Consession of the whole Matter, to Norm, the Ambassador in France; and, by his rilous things against his Princess, who deserv'd 1570. far better from his hands; and being so contem-Januaria, prible a Wretch, that he was not able to raife any Diffurbances; at laft escaped from Ireland to Italy, to Pope Pins V. Where, by the cunning Arts of Infinuation, he wheed'd himself into an incredible degree of Credit and Reputation with the Pope, who then desir'd nothing so much as the utter Ruin of Queen Elizabeth. For he promis'd, and boldly braggd, that with 3000 Italians, he would drive the Englift out of Ireland, and burn the Englift Fleet. Which afterwards he, like a Vil-lain, attempted to do; but fell in the Enterprize, as we shall shew hereaster.

1571.

Royal-

Barons.

The Fourteenth Year of her Reign.

In the very first Month of this Year, Queen Elizabeth enter'd London, in great State; where fhe visited that sumptuous Burse, which Sir Thomas Exchange. Gresham, Citizen of London, and her Majesty's Merchant, had erected for the Use of Merchants : and by Sound of Trumpet, after the Manner of a Dedication, her Herald nam'd it, The Royal-Exchange.

A few days after, she who had been so sparing in dispensing of Honours, that for Twelve whole Years, she had advanced but Four to the Dignity of Barons; by her Royal Letters Pa-Cecil cre-tents, folemnly created William Cecil, her Secreated Baron tary, being invefted in Barons Robes, Baron Burlesgh, Burleigh in this Form: In confideration not only of Burleigh, in this Form: In consideration not only of the continual Services, in the time of our Predecessors, Kings of England; but also of the faithful and acof creating ceptable Duty he bath, from the very Beginning of our Reign, always perform'd, and continues still to perform; not only in the great and weighty Affairs of projorm; not only in the great and weighty Affairs of the Council Board, but in the general Administration of the State: And for his Circumspection, Courage, Prudence, Dearchity, Probity of Life, Previdence, Care, and Faithfulness; We, out of Our special Grace, most other to by certain Experience, have created, advanced, and which it his work. and preferrd him, to the State, Degree, Dignity and Honour of Baron of Burleigh; and bave impoled, gi-wen, and befourd upon him, the Name, Stile, and Title of Baron of Burleigh; to have and to bold, to him and his Heirs-Male, begotten of his Body, for ever, &c. I have the more willingly mention'd, and fhall mention him and others, whom she rais'd to the Dignity of Barons; because 'tis one of the highest Degrees of Honour. For the Parliamentary Barons of England are Peers, Nobles and Counsellors of the Realm, by Birth; who enjoy a great many Immunities and Privileges, which 'tis not proper to mention here; especi-

Dignity.

Their

tice of elfewhere. Letters Juff before this, Ridolpho, the Florentine we alfent by ready mention'd, who had, for fifteen Years to-the Pope to the O convey'd the Pope's Letters to the Queen of Scotts.

Wherein he promised a great deal of Zeal, Aid, and Affiftance, for advancing the Catholick Religion, and her Interest; desiring she would fayour and truft Ridolpho with all her Secrets, and let his Holiness know by him (who then defign'd for Italy) by what means the Catholick Religion, and the common Grievances of Britain might be redress'd. Ridolpho likewise, by his own private Letters, begg'd the Queen to communicate these things, and recommend him to the Duke of Norfolk, and the rest of her Friends. the wav'd answering it, (tho the French King, the Spaniard, and the Duke d'Alva had written to her upon the fame account) till she saw, what the Treaty on foot would come to.

ally, fince fome of them I have already taken no-

For, there came to England, in the King's Name, the Earl of Morton, Petcarn Abbot of Dun-fermelin, and James Mic-Gilly, about the Affairs of Scotland; who being commanded by Queen Elizabeth, to give her a more clear Account of Ann. 14. their Caufes for deposing the Queen, and to prove them to be lawful; gave in a large Remonstrance in Writing: Wherein, by an info-dent fort of Freedom, and with Boldness of Expressions, they endeavourd to prove, by an angual Remonstrance in Writing in the Sector of the cient Law of Scotland, by fome antiquated In- gal Power, ftances, and other new ones gather'd up, no one knows where: That the People of Scotland are superiour to the King: And that upon Calvin's Authoperson to the King: Ana that upon Catvill Autority, Popular Magifrates are every where confitted to curb in the Ambition of Kings: And that its lawful for them to imprifon and depose had Kings. But they bragged much of their Clemency rowards the depos'd Queen; in that they had given her leave to substitute her Son in her Room, and to appoint him Tutors: That it was by the Peoples Favour, not her Innocence, that she liv'd; with many other fuch like things, which turbulent Spirits infolently invent, against the Majesty of Prin-Queen Elizabeth perus'd the Paper, but not without Displeasure; and privately con- Condemdemn'd it, as defign'd for the weakning of Re-gal Authority. But to the Delegates she an- of Engl. Iwer'd, That she could not yet see any just Cause for being so severe upon the Queen; therefore she order'd them to consult immediately, about Methods for healing the Differences in Scotland.

Hereupon, it was propos'd at the Lord-Keeper

Bacon's Houle, to the Bishop of Ross, the Bishop of Galloway, and the Baron of Levingstone, the Queen of Scots Delegates; 'That for the Security of the Kingdom and Queen of England, propos'd by the and of fuch Nobles in Scatland, as were of the English, as were of the English and Averle, the Lord Humes, as were of the English of Humber and Averle, the Lord Humes, as were the Earls of Huntley and Argyle, the Lord Humes, of Scott. the Lord Herris, and another of the Barons, should be given for Hostages: And that the 'Forts of Dunbritton and Humes, should be in the Policifion of the English, for 3 Years. They answerd, 'That no doubt but the Queen of 'Scots, who had freely thrown herself under the ber Deube Queen of England's Protection, would be willing to fatisfie her, ar far as conveniently she might: But to deliver up fo great Men, and ' fo itrong Forts, would wholly rob the miferable Queen, of the Strength of all her trueft Friends, and fafest Garrisons; and so expose her an easie Prey to her Enemies. However, they offer'd two Earls, whereof one should be one of the three abovemention'd, and two Barons, in Hostage, for two Years. But as for the Castles. they could not by the League be put into the Hands of the English; unless as many were deliver'd up to the French. But (faid Bacon) all English Scotland, your Prince, Nobles, and Castles, are too little to fecure the Queen and the most flourishing Kingdom of England: therefore the Queen of Scots was not to be fet at liberty, upon any Security the Scots thought fit to propose.

their OS

Upon this, they presently concluded, and gave out publickly, that they were at last sensible, that the English were fully design'd and resolv'd, to keep the Queen a Prisoner for ever in England; and withal, to break off the Treaty; fince they so stiffly insisted upon such Security, ance they lo firmy inlitted upon fach Security, as Scatland was never able to give. However, the reft of the English Council declar'd, that they heartily defir'd the Queen of Sests night be fet at liberty, provided fufficient Security were given. And for this purpofe, they confer'd with Morton and his Collegues, about these Matters, and fending the King into England: who anfwer'd flatly, That they had no Commission to consult, either about receiving the Queen into Scotland, or de-1571. livering the King. But the Queen of Scots Dele-Ann. 14. gates rejected this, as an idle Come-off; 'Since they who were the Authors of the Queen's de-Jangling between poling, were fufficiently empower'd to con-the Seach fult about fetting her at liberty. Nor was Commif- there any Reason, why they should require a fioners of Commission from the rest of the Conspirators, both Pare 6 fince their Crime had made them all Equals.

6 As for the Prince, being scarce five Years old, he could give them no Authority; and as for the Regent, he had referr'd all to Q. Elizabeth's Disposal. They therefore defired, that either the Commissioners might be compell'd to a Conference, or elfe that Matters might be reasonably adjusted without them. But Queen Elizabeth perceiving, nothing could be done for her own, the King's, and Queen's Security, unless both Factions would agree; thought it reasonable, that the States of Scotland, now ready to convene, should choose certain Men, who should use their utmost Endeavours for making up the Breach.

Complaint gainst the English Counsel-

Hereupon the Bishop of Ross and his Collegues openly complain'd, that some of the English Council had abus'd the Queen of England's Prudence, and the Queen of Scots Patience; impos'd flily upon the forein Princes, and fed up the Scots with vain Hopes. And the Queen of Scots herfelf, full of Refentments and Complaints, and weary of fuch Delays, recall'd the of Galloway, and Levingstone. But the Bishop of Ross, whom Queen Elizabeth had commanded to depart from London, the order'd to stay at London, by the Privilege of an Ambassador; which thing several look'd upon with an ill Eye. Her own Party in Scotland the order'd to rife up in Arms, and rely no longer on those prejudicial Truces and Conferences. For whilft these Transactions pass'd in England,

The Qof

Scots Par- the Queen of Scots Party were feverely used, maty opprest. ny of them were executed, feveral flain, Dunbritton feated upon the Marsh of Glotta, or Cluid, one of the strongest Castles in Scotland taken, and Archbp.of J. Hamilton Archbishop of St. Andrews, the Duke Sandrows of Chastle-Herault's Brother, hang'd on a Gibber, as guitty of the King's Murder; tho he was not try'd according to the Laws of the Land, but only accust of it by a Prieft, who declar'd he had heard it formerly of the Regicides in Con-

Norfolk.

hang'd.

The Q. of When the Captive Queen was now out of an Scott Wri- Hopes, but full of Sorrow; all her Retinue, be-When the Captive Queen was now out of all fides ten Servants and a Mass Priest being cut off and when she saw herself debarr'd of all the Means of procuring her Safety and Liberty, which even Nature allow'd to be reasonable, she could not then but disclose that which she had kept so long within her own Breast. She therefore fecretly fends a long Draught of her Defigns, which she had before drawn up, and several Love-Letters to the Duke of Norfolk, written in Cyphers known only to them two; and other Letters to be convey'd by Ridolpho to the Pope and the Spanish King; which Ridolpho she com-mended as a Man very loyal and true to her Interefts, and very necessary for her turn. Higford, the Duke's Secretary, who transcrib'd those Papers in an usual Character, being order'd to burn them, hid them under a Mat in the Duke's Bed-Chamber, and, as it feems, on purpose too. This Ridolph, once himself in the Duke's Prefence, and often by Barker, argu'd thus.

Ridolph's That he had taken notice of a great many, Discourse as well of the Nobility as Commonalty in England, who wish'd for a Revolution in the State; and that these were of three forts, Some who in Queen Mary's Days had been in

Authority and Fayour, and now made little or no Figures: Others, who were addicted to the Popili Religion, and took it ill that they could not have the free Exercise of it : And Others, Ana 14. who, cherithing new Hopes, were very uneasie under their present Condition. That these Men wanted nothing to put them upon any Design, but a Leader of noble Extract, Money, and a foreign Aid. That none could be pitch'd upon for a Leader of more noble Blood, nor a fitter Person, than the Duke, a Man so very much esteem'd by all sorts of People. That it was but just to revenge the Injuries he had received, who had been to long a Prisoner contrary to the Laws of his Nation, and now, to his Difgrace, was not call'd to the Parliament-House, wherein he had a Place and Vote, as being the Chief among the Peers, and Earl-Marshal of England. To prevail upon him the more effectually, he produced a Caralogue of the Gentlemen, who had devoted themselves and Effares to the Duke's Service, if he would undertake the Businesis. As for a foreign Aid, he declard, 'That the Pope (provided the Catholick Religion might be encourag'd) would His Pro-bear the Charge of the whole War; who the mifes. last Year, when the Bull was publish'd, had laid down an Hundred thousand Crowns, whereof Twelve thousand Ridolpho himself had diffributed among the English Fugitives. That the Spaniard, incens'd with the Wrongs offer'd him by the English, would supply him with Auxilia-ries, of 4000 Horse, and 6000 Foot, which might be transported to Harwick, a Sea-Port-Town in Effex, (near which Place the Duke had many powerful Adherents) and that most Commodioutly and without the least Sufpicion, in the beginning of the Summer, when the D. of Medina Cali was just coming into the Netherlands with a strong Fleet. Lastly he concluded, That such Caurion might be used, that the Duke might be clear of all Suspicion of aiming at the Crown, and the Queen of England's Safety might be fecur'd, provided she either embrac'd or tolerated the Romish Religion, and confented to the Q. of Scots Marriage with the Duke.

These things the Duke listned to, as having fome shew of Probability, but refus'd to subscribe to the Letters of Credit (as they call them) which Ridolpho, upon his departure, presented to him. Nor would he hearken to the Plot which Ross with great Industry, had contrived, and imparted to him by Parker, viz. That the Duke, with a Rossipplot felect Company of Gentiemen, should suddenly feize upon the Queen, and give a Disturbance to the Parliament; which (be intimated) might be easily done at this Juncture, when so many Gentlemen devoted to the Duke, who at another time could not easily meet together without suspicion, would now very readily put these things in Execution. That he had just Reasons for it; because the Duke had been a long time Prisoner, contrary to the Laws of his Country, and not admitted to fit in Parliament; and because severe Laws were devised against the Catholicks. Nor did he want Exagainst the Catholicks. Nor one management amples: For Caffratio in Italy, and others elsewhere, had come off with fucces in very damagement a fudden Blow. That five Gentlemen in Scotland had very lately disturb'd the Parliament wherein Murray was to be Profcrib'd, and feiz'd the Queen: And that by the same means, and with as much ease (if they clos'd with the Opportunity) Queen Eli-" zabeth might be feiz'd, the Marriage with the ' Queen of Scors be concluded, and the Popish Ree ligion in England secur'd without much itir or a foreign Aid.

1571.

This

The Atempts of others.

An Earthquake in Hereford bire.

This Defign the Duke (who was naturally a-1571. verife to any base Action) detected from his 4mm.14. Heart, as villainous and full of danger. But at the fame time Henry Piercy offer'd his Service to Ross towards the setting the Queen of Scots at Liberty, provided Grange and Carr of Fernihurst would receive her at the Frontiers of Scotland, and his Brother the Earl of Northumberland should be deliver'd out of Scotland. But because he was fomewhat fuspected by reason of his intimate Acquaintance with Burghley, and because he put off the thing from time to time, this Plot came to nothing; as likewise did that of Powel of Sand-ford, one of the Band of Gentlemen Pentioners, and of Owen, a Retainer of Arundels; who were both ready to have undertaken the same, had not Ross forbad them, as Men unfit for so great an Enterprize, being Persons of little or no Note. What was else transacted more closely in this Bufiness, we shall omit at present, till time shall give a farther Discovery.

Whilst things were carry'd on thus fecretly at while things were carry on thus lecretly at London, there happen'd a terrible Earthquake at Kinnasten, a fmall Village in the East of Herefordshire. For on the 17th of February, as fix in the Evening, the Earth sunk, and a Hill with a Rock of Stones at the Foot of it raised itels up (as if it hed icin from a long stone) with the rest. it had rifen from a long fleep) with fo great a roaring and noise at first as was heard at a great diffance; then it mounted higher, leaving a great Pit behind it, and carrying along with it whole Trees as they grew, Sheep-cotes, and Flocks of Sheep. Some of the Trees were Flocks of Sheep. thrown down and cover'd with Earth; others fluck fo firm in the Hill as it rofe, as if they had taken root there at first. In the place whence it departed, it lest a Pit forty five Foot wide, and an hundred Yards long. The Ground in all was about twenty Acres, which in going threw down a Chappel that flood in the way. It re-mov'd a Yew-Tree which flood in the Churchyard, from the West to the East. With the same violence it forc'd forward the High-ways, with Sheep-cotes, Hedges and Trees. Of Arable Ground it made Pasture, and of Pasture Arable Ground. The rising Ground which lay in its way roll'd before it, and being crushed together with great violence, became a higher Hill, like a Mount cast up. Thus when it had walked from Saturday Evening till Monday Noon; weary as it were of the Journey, and tired with its own Weight, it flood still.

A little before this, in France a Marriage was Char. IX. folemniz'd with great and royal Pomp, at Mafiers on the River Maes, between Charles IX. King the Emperory of France and Elizabeth of Aufria, the Emperor Daughter.
Maximilian's Daughter. Queen Elizabeth, for the Affection she bore the Emperor, whom she honour'd as a Father, for her Love to the French King, her Neighbour and Ally, and for her own Honour, fent over Thomas Sackvill, Baron of Buckburft, into France, to congratulate their Marriage, who was there honourably received, Buckburft baffy into according to his Prince's Merit and his own. In his company was Guido Cavalcanti, a Gentleman of Florence, a Man of great Experience, with whom the Queen-Mother of France, herfelf a Florentine, defigning her own and her Children's Welfare, transacted publickly about a Marriage between Queen Elizabeth and her Son Henry Duke proposed of Anjon. Some of the Articles the tent by him temmediately to Queen Elizabeth: And afterwards the King of France folicited his Brother's Cause very vigorously by Mavester his Embassador, and by La-Mott Fenellon, and Foix, who jointly and separately urged Q. Elizabeth upon it for almosta whole Year.

There were fome hopes this Marriage would ? fucceed, because the Duke (being Young, and brought up under Carvalette, no Enemy to the Ann. 14. Protestant Religion) was not as yet a shift Catholick, and might by degrees be brought over to Protestantism. Which, if brought about, would thereof. Protegantym. When, it of ought access, to the be of great Advantage (as they gueffed) to the Protestant Religion: Since he, being one of a Wirlike Disposition, might with the joint Forces. of the Germans and English subdue the Papists, establish a lasting Peace between England and France, frustrate the Deligns of the Scottiff Queen, the Pope, and the Irifb Rebels; and add to the Crown of England the rich Dukedoms of zinjus, Bourbon and Auvergne, and in probability much greater Matters. In a word, were this Match neglected, never would a more Honourable one be proposed.

After various Debates, the French proposed Articles three Articles, concerning the Duke's Coronation, propounded by the joint Administration of the Kingdom, and the To-the French leration of his Religion. To which, at length, this levation of his Religion. To which, at length, this Answer was made: That the Queen could not grown, Q. E'rze without the assent of the Parliament, that he should answer. he crown'd after the Marriage; but in regard of the Marriage, she would willingly agree, that he should wear the Martimonial Crown, (as she phrased it) provided it were not to the Prejudice of her Mayesty, her Heir, or Successor, if the Parliament (o pless'd; and she would pay him all the Respect that was due to a Husband. As for the joint Government, she thought it not unreasonable that he, whom she homour'd with the Title of Kine and Husband, should be likewith the Title of King and Husband, should be like-wife admitted her Consort and Partner in the Government. But for tolerating his Religion, she could not as yet, for several weighty Reasons, assert with the Which Reasons (as I had them from Queen Elizabeth's Letters) were these: That although the external Exercise of the Christian Religion with different Rites and Ceremonies might be tolerated among the Subjests of one and the same Kingdom; yet a different, yea a quite contrary Exercise of the Queen, who is the Head of her People, from her Husband, would seem not only dangerous, but very abfurd.

She defires the French King and the QueenMother to confider as well her Danger, as the Duke of Anjou's Honour. By tolerating his Religion she should break the established Laws, give offence to her best Sub-jects, and encouragement to her worst; which things were certainly more considerable than the Duke of Anjou's Honour. But the French reply'd, 'That it French was no ways becoming the Duke to live without the exercise of his Religion; for this would feem altogether irreligious: Neither would it be for Queen Elizabeth's Honour, to have him branded for an Atheist. On the other hand,

Queen Elizabeth urg'd, That if the Duke would plen- Queen's tifully water the Seeds of the reformed Religion already aniwer. Sown, and suffer more to be sown, he would soon see this would redound to his greatest Honour

At last the matter came to this iffue; 'That The Issue if the Duke would be prefent with the Queen 'at Divine Service, and would not refute to hear and learn the Principles of the Protestant Religion, she would agree that neither the Duke nor his Family should be compell'd to use the Ceremonies of the Church of England, nor be disturb'd in the use of other Divine Rites that were not manifestly repugnant to God's Word; provided it were done in a certain and private Place, fo as the English might have no oppor-tunity thereby to violate the established Laws. Foix stuck at that Phrase, the Word of God: For whose satisfaction Queen Elizabeth order'd, inflead of God's Word, to infert God's Church. Which when he liked worfe, and would have had inftead of it, the Casholick Church, Q. Elizabeth de-Vol. II. K k k clar'd

the Em-

his Em-

France.

marries

Marriage

clar'd against it : And hereupon the Business by 1571. degrees grew cold.

Withwhat

Some thought the French King and his Mother were never ferious in the business, but that their intent the defign was, by a mention of a Marriage with a Marriage Protestant Princess, to affure the Protestants of was pro-the fineere Love they had for them; and so put pounded a stop to a secret Treaty of Marriage which they sufficient was carrying on between Queen Elizabeth and the King of Navarre, whom the French King would have to marry his Sister. Neither was it believed in England, that Queen Elizabeth gave any serious heed to it; but only with a design that the King, his Mother, and his Brethren might be more favourable to the French Protestants; the Queen of Scots Hopes might be frustrated, the Designs of the Spaniard and the Irish against England, excited thereto by the Cardinal of Lorain, might be disappointed; and the Pope's Fulminations, procur'd by the French King, be blown over. For at that time Leicester (who knew more of the Queen's fecret Intentions than any Man) wrote to Walfingham, then Emballador in France, That the Queen had fome in-climation to marry, but a very cold one; and that she had persuaded berself to agree to it rather as it was conviniont she should marry, than that she had any desire of herself to it. Eesides, That if the Duke should not insist on that Point in the Treaty concerning Toleration of Religion, yet the Queen would bind him by Such a Caution, that he should never afterwards care for the Marriage.

Q.ofScots haftned.

The French were not more forward in making up this Marriage, than some in England were in haftening another Marriage betwixt the Queen of Scots and the Duke of Norfolk, whom by their wicked Counsels they had so far prevail'd upon, that, contrary to his Promise, he began again to think of marrying her; which was at first thus difcover'd.

By what

Ridolpho the Florentine, who was fent (as we faid) to folicite the Queen of Scots Affairs Bediscover'd vond-Sea, had communicated to Charles Bayliff a Netherlander, the Queen of Scots Servant, all his Transactions with the Duke d'Alva; and had given him Letters written in Cyphers, for her, the Spanish Embassador, the D. of Norfolk, Ross, and the Baron of Lumley, made up in one Packet; which Bayliff brought over himself, the' Ross had order'd him to leave them with the Governor of I Calais to be convey'd over.

But as foon as Bayliff was arriv'd at Dover, he was apprehended and imprison'd, and the Packet fent to the L. Cobham, Governor of the Cinque-Ports. Rofs was the first that had notice of it who manag'd his Business so industriously and cunningly with the Lord Cobbam, that the Packet was deliver'd to him, and another Packet made up of other obfolete Letters deliver'd to the Council; and this Bayliff was acquainted with. But however, being put to the Rack, he contess of some things, and amongst the rest, that a Packet of Letters was come to Ros's Hands. Nor was Ross ignorant of this, who presently sent away Cuthbert his Secretary, and left his Cyphers and what elfe might do him any Prejudice, among his Friends: So that when Suffex, Bur-leigh, Mildmay and Sadler made a careful Search in his House, they found nothing, nor could they get any thing out of him by Questions, who ffilly maintained, that an Embaffador was not to be accountable to any but his Prince. However, the third Day after he was committed to a zeom the Cuffody of the Biflop of Ely, and a while arted to after convey'd to the Ille of Ely. Sir Tho. Stanley

Cutudy. likewife, and Sir Tho. Gerard Knights, and Rolfton (all three mentioned formerly) were cast into and ones the Tower of London. And Henry Howard, who had afpir'd to the Archbishoprick of York, was upon Suspicion committed to the Custody of the 1571. Archbishop of Canterbury Ann. 14

About this time the Queen of Scots had fent a Mony fent certain Sum of Money to the French Embaffador, to the to be by him convey d to her Party in Scotland. Quenis He delivered it to Barker and Higford, who giv-Party in ing the Duke an Item of it, delivered it to Brown Scotland. a Citizen of Shrewsbury, one of the Duke's Retainers, in order to be convey'd by Banister and Lowder into Scotland, to the Lord Heris. Brown, being one of a suspicious Nature, and perceiving hy the Weight that Gold Coin was delivered him Betray'd. for Silver, put the same with the Letters into the Hands of the Privy-Council. By this the wifer fort observed that the Duke hereby first became guilty of High-Treason, in that he would have relieved Heris and the Scots who were proclaimed Enemies, and had ravaged the Frontiers of England. Upon this Higford was cast into Prison, who presently of his own accord confessed the whole matter about the Money, and withal discovered where he had hid the Letters, and Cyphers, and the Q. of Scots Draught before-mentioned, viz. under the Mat and Tiles.

In this Draught she discoursed at large of the Abreviary following Particulars. 'That the French appro- of the Q ved of the Conference begun with the Scots, of Scots and yet proposed a Marriage between the Duke writing. of Anjou and Queen Elizabeth, upon no other defign, but that they might more speciously deny the Aid they had promifed for her Refto-ration. That they privately opposed her Mar-riage with Don John of Austria, and were mighcily for that with Norfolk, only in hatred to the Spaniards. That the Duke d'Alva was so averse to the Design of fending back the Queen of Scots into Scotland, that he thought it would tend to the utter Ruin of the Queen, and the Catholick Religion in Britain: Because when the Queen was once returned into Scotland, she ' must of necessity either undergo the danger of a Siege, or hazard a Battel with the Rebels, who with the English Supplies would foon get her into their power, before any foreign Forces could come to her Affiftance. Since then ' she could not be safe in Scotland, nor expect any thing from France now embroil'd with intestine Wars: He thought it her best way to have recourse to the Spaniards Assistance, who had profer'd her Marriage with Don John of Austria; (which yet she was ready to refuse, upon an affurance that the Duke of Norfolk would reftore the Popish Religion in Britain) and withal, that her Son should forthwith be convey'd out of Scotland, and fent into Spain; where he might be fafely kept, brought up from his 'Childhood in the Romish Religion, and deprive the Scots of all their Pretences, who cloak'd their Rebellion under his Name. For the management of this Business, and the procuring foreign Aid; Ridolpho was to be fent away prefently, with this Advice, that by all means he should keep these things from the ' knowledge of the French.

When the Council had receiv'd this Draught, the Letters above-mention'd, and others fent by the Pope; and when Barker, being apprehended, had confes'd every Particular, Sir Ralph Sadler was ordered to keep a frong Guard upon the Duke's House at London (formerly a Seat of the Carthusian Friars). The third Day after, the Duke himfelf was examin'd, and (not knowing what his Servants had confelled, but supposing the Draught with the Letters were burnt) he ftifly denied all which they had confessed. Hereupon, within a Day or two, namely the 7th of committed again others.

September, he was, to the great Grief of the Peo- | have his Agent; and whether that Agent may be repu-1571. ple, carried back to the Tower of London (from Ann.14. whence the Year before he was releated) by Sir Ralph Sadler, Sir Thomas Smith, Sir Henry Nevill, and Doctor Wilson. Afterwards Banister, the Duke's Counfellor at Law; the Earls of zirundel and Southampton, the Lord Lumley, the Lord Cob-Torrer.

And forme others.

The first Theory Percy, Lowand forme others.

The first Theory Percy, Lowand forme others, and others, were clapt in Prifon, who every one of them, in hopes of Pardon, confess'd what they knew.

He cone matter.

pardon.

ting his

As foon as the Council produc'd these Mens feffeth the Confessions, the Queen of Scots and Ross's Letters, with the Draught, to the Duke's Face, he was strangely daunted: But upon fight of the Draught and the Letters, which he had fondly Suppos'd to have been burnt, he was amaz'd, and at last brake forth into these Words; I am betray'd and undone by my Confidents, not knowing bow to di-frust them, the Diffidence is the very Essence of Wis-dom. However, he humbly pray'd the Council to intercede for him to the Queen, promiting to conceal nothing which he knew, and folemnly protesting, that he had never confented to any thing which might prejudice the Queen or injure Realm; but had declar'd heartily against the Plots they laid for surprizing the Queen, for Extenuafeizing upon the Tower of London, and fetting the Queen of Scots at Liberty: And that he never thought of calling over foreign Forces into Britain, but only to suppress the Queen of Scots rebellious Subjects. The fame Day he was examin'd upon Fifty Articles or thereabouts, and conceal'd nothing. Afterwards the whole Proceeding was reported in the Star-Chamber, in a full Affembly of the Nobility, the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen of the City of London being present; and after that to all the Citizens at the Guild-Hall, by William Fleetwood their Recorder.

Confultation concerning of Ros.

But fince by the Confession of all, even of the Duke himfelf, the Bishop of Ross was charg'd as principal Contriver of the Business, they entred the Bishop into a serious Consultation what should be done with him, being an Embaffador. For whilft he (after the manner of other Embassadors) thought he might lawfully promote the Interest of his Prince by any Methods, and that by the facred and inviolable Privilege of Embaffadors, he was not to be accountable to another's Jurisdiction; he had already committed many Irregularities, by raising Rebellion, and holding Nocturnal Cabals with the Earl of Southampton and others; and now lately with the English Fugitives in the Netherlands, the Duke d'Alva, the Spaniard, and the Pope, for Invading of England. It was therefore proposed to Daniel Lewis, Valentine Dale, William Drury, William Aubrey, and Henry Jones, learned Civilians.

Quefficns dor.

First, Whether an Embassador that raises Rebellion and An against the Prince to whom he is sent, should enjoy the fivers con-Privileges of an Embassador, and not rather he liable to cerning Punishment as an Energy?

the Print;
They answer'd, 'That such an Embassador, leges of an Embassa.' by the Law of Nations, and the Civil Law of Embassa.' ' the Romans, has forfeited the Privileges of an Emballador, and is liable to Punishment. Secondly, Whether the Minifer or Agent of a Prince depoled from bir publick Authority, and in whole stand another is substituted, may enjoy the Privileges of an Embaffador?

They answer'd, 'If such a Prince be lawfully deposed, his Agent cannot challenge the Privieleges of an Embaffador, fince none but Abfoflute Princes, and fuch as enjoy a Royal Prerogative, can constitute Embassadors.

Thirdly, Whether a Prince, which comes into another Prince's Kingdom, and is there kept Prisoner, can ted an Embaffador? They answer'd, 'If such a Prince have not Ann. 14.

forfeited his Principality, he may have an A-' gent: But whether that Agent may be reputed an Embaffador, depended upon the Authority of his Committeen.

Fourthly, Whether if a Prince declare to fuch on Agent, and his Prince in Cuffody, that he shall be no challenge the Privileges of an Embalfiador, that Agent may by Law challenge the Privileges of an Embalfiador.

They answer'd, 'That the Prince may forbid

the Embassador entranceinto his Kingdom, and 'may command him to leave the Kingdom, it he keep not himfelf within the Bounds pre-' ferib'd to an Embassador: Yet in the mean ' time he may enjoy the Privileges of an Embat-' sador according to the Authority deputed to ' him.

According to these Answers of the Civilians, Roft dis-Roft being call'd up from the Itle of Ely, and receiving a sharp Reprimand, it was declar'd by baffador, the Council, that he should be no longer reputed an Embaffador, but be severely punished according to his Demerits. He answer'd, That he was Hisanswer

ing, or 116 Demonstrate. The antiwort of Date he was to be Embalfador of an abjolute Queen that was unified deposed, and bad, according to his Daty, carefully evidence and bad, according to his Daty, carefully evidence and the Softy of both Kingdoms: That be came into England with the full Authority of an Embalfador under publick Warrandife, which he had produc'd; and that the facred Privileges of Embaffadors are by no means to be in-fring'd. Burghley mott gravely inform'd him, Burghley's 'That neither the Privileges of an Embassage, reply. ' nor Letters of publick Warrandife, could pro-' tect Embassadors that offend against the publick ' Majesty of a Prince, but that they are liable to be punished for the same, else wicked Embassa-dors might plot against the Life of Princes 'without any Punishment. On the other hand, he stiffy maintained, That the Privileges of Embiffadors had never been violated (to use his own Words) via Juris, but via Facti: And he pleafantly wish d them not to show him fouler play then the English Embassadors, Throckmorton in France, and Randolph and Tamworth in Scotland had found; who had raifed Rebellions, and openly femented them; and yet suffered no greater Punishment, than the being commanded to depart within such a time. When they He waveth began to urge him with Testimonies of English- the Testimen, he genrly defired them not to do it, fince by mony of a common received Cuftom, which (as he faid) men. lishman against a Scotchman, or of a Scotchman against an Englishman, was not to be allowed of After some Debates whether this would hold good, unless betwixt the Borderers of both Kingdoms, and that in cases relating to the Frontiers; and whether the English Embassadors had raised Rebellions; Rofs was committed to the Tower of London; where being kept close Prisoner, within a while he answerd to all Questions, with this Provifo, That his Answers should not be prejudicial to any. ' He excused the Queen of Scots, He anfor that she being a Prisoner in the Flower of swers to ' her Age, could not but use her utmost Endea. Articles.

vours to regain her Freedom, fince Q. Elizabeth 'deny'd her accels to her Presence, debar'd her from all hope of her Liberty, and openly reliev'd her Enemies. The Duke he excus'd, in that he had done nothing as to the Murriage with the Queen of Scors, but with the Confent of many of the Queen's Council; nor could he forfake her, tho' he had promis'd to do fo under 'his Hand and Seal, fince there was before a mutual Engagement of Marriage betwixt 'em. Laftly, he excus'd himfelf, 'For that fince he 'was an Embaffador and a Servant, he could Vol. II. K k k 2 'not not without a Sin depart from his Duty, and 1571. abandon his Princess in her Distress. But that Ann 14. he propos'd the Design of seizing on the Queen, with no other intent, than to try whether the Duke had Courage to undertake fuch an Attempt. The Crimes of the other Confpirators he cunningly extenuated, but could by no means be brought to tell the Names of the Gentlemen who had devoted their Service to the Duke in feizing the Queen. But he confess'd, that, by the Queen of Seets Orders, he had, by Servants employ'd betwixt them, treated with the Duke, Arundel, Lumley and Throckmorton, and with the Lord Viscount Montacute by Lumley, about putting the Caffles in Scotland, the Hoffages, and the King of Scots, into Englishmens Hands, about renouncing the Title, and giving up the English Rebels. Thus far of these Transactions for this Year, extracted wholly out of the Duke's Confession, and Ress's own Account under his own Hand to the Queen of Scots.

Lenox Regent of Soutland flain,

At this very time Matthew Earl of Lenex, Regent of Scotland, and the King's Grandfather, funmon'd in the King's Name a Convention of the States at Sterling, where (whilft he liv'd in Security) he was fuddenly furpriz'd by the Nobility of the adverse Faction, who held a Parliament in the Queen's Name at Edinborough. And after he had furrender'd himfelf to David Spense of Wormstone, (who did all he could to protect him) he was slain, together with Spense, by Bell and Caulder, after he had for about 14 Months carefully govern'd the Kingdom for the King his Grandson: Whilst on the one side, the French King supported the Queen's Party; and on the other fide, Queen Elizabeth the King's ; not fo much that their Friends might overcome, as that themselves might not be overcome. Queen Elizabeth, in hopes that the young King might be deliver'd into her Hands; the French King, that Dunbriton and Edinborough might be furrender'd to him, who grievously oppress'd the Scotch Merchants, prohibiting them Commerce with France, and drew many daily to the Queen of Scots Par-The E of In Lenov's room, by the unanimous Confent of Regen of the King's Party, John Areshine, Earl of Marre, Seatimd, was elected Regent; who being a Man of a very mild Nature, and very affectionate to his Country, when he had ftrugled no less under the tur-againit turbulent and feditious Perfores

The Iniquity of these Times, and the Love which the Parliament of England (now met at Westminster) bare to their Prince and Country, was the occasion of a Law for preventing the Practices of feditious Persons, whereby, according to the Tenour of somer Laws, it was provided; That if any Man Josuld attempt the Death or perfond Hurt of the Queen, or raife War, or excite others to War, againft her: If any one floud give out, that she is not the Lruful Queen of this Realm, but that any other can claim a juster Title thereto: Or should pronounce ber to be an Heretick, Schifnatick or Infidel; Or floudd ufurp the Right and Title of the Kingdom during her Life; or floudd affirm, that any other has a Right to the Crown; or that the Laws and Statutes cannot limit and determine the Right of the Crown and cannot timu and accomine the regot of the vowin and the Succellor thereof; every fuch Perfon floud be guity of High-Treasen. That if any one, during the Queen's Life, should by any Book, written or printed, expessly maintain, that any Person is or ought to be the Queen's Heir and Successor except the Natural Islue of her Body; or should publish, print or disperse any Books or should publish, print or disperse any Books or Succession to the Advisor of t ay 3 or young purishy, prim or superje any books. Writings to that effect 3 be and his Abettors should for the fojf Officine be imprisoned for a whole Year, and forfeit the one half of his Goods: If any should offend a bulent Counfels of his own Party, than the Infolencies of his Adversaries, died for very

Grief, after he had Govern'd 13 Months.

second time, he should incur the Penalty of a Premunire, that is, loss of all his Goods, and perpetual Imprison-

Some look'd upon this as too fevere, who thought it would tend to the establishing the Quiet of the Nation, if an Heir-apparent were declar'd. But it is incredible what Jefts those that lewdly catch at Words made upon that Clause, except the Natural Issue of her Body; fince the Lawyers term those Children Natural which are gotten out of Wedlock, whom Nature alone, without the intervention of honest Matrimony, hath begotten; and those they call lawful, ac-cording to the Tenour of the Common Law of England, who are in lawful Matrimony begotten of fuch a one's Body. So that I myfelf, being then a young Man, have often heard People fay, that this Word was inferted into the Act by Leicester, with a defign, that one time or other he might for the Queen's natural Issue.

It was also Enacted, "That whosoever by Again? "Bulls or other Rescripts of the Pope, should Papitte.
"reconcile any Man to the Church of Rome, and those who should be fo reconcil'd, should be guilty of High-Treason. That whosever fhould relieve fuch as did fo reconcile Men, or should bring into England any Agnus Deis, Grains, Crucifixes, or other Things confecrated by the Pope, should incur the Penalty of a Premunire. That who foever should not discover fuch Reconcilers, should be guilty of concealing Treason, (commonly call'd Misprission of Treason).

impose some Bastard Son of his upon the English

Besides, the Conviction and Proscription of the Rebels. Rebels in the North was confirm'd, and their Goods and Pofferfions, within the Bishoprick of Durham, adjudg'd to the Queen and her Succesfors. (Against James Pilkington the Bishop, who laid Claim to the Royalties between the Rivers of Tese and Tine) This was done, in regard of the vast Charge the Queen was at, in freeing the Bishop and his Diocese, from the Rebels; yet with Proviso, that this should not prejudice the Right of the Church of Durham, for the su-Against the Insolence likewise of such, Fugitives. as being devoted to the Pope, and contemning the Authority of the Laws, and their Allegiance to their Prince, had daily withdrawn themselves in great Numbers, without the Queen's leave, to forein Countries, to contrive Innovations in the State; It was provided, that under forfeiture of their Estates, they should, within such a time, return and submit themselves, and that the frau-dulent Conveyances, which they had made,

On the other fide also was restrain'd, by wholfome Laws, as well the Covetoufness of certain Church-Men, who (as if born for themselves a- Covetous lone) did, to the notorious defrauding of their Churche Successors, waste the Church-Revenues, and let out Leafes for many Years: As also the Insolence of others, who, defirous of Innovation, Puritana. oppos'd the Articles concluded upon in a Synod at London, in the Year 1562, for abolifting of Schifms. It was likewise proposed, that, if the And the Queen of Scots should again offend against the Qossons Laws of England, she should be proceeded against by Law, as if she were the Wife of an English Peer. But the Queen by interpoling her Authority, prevented the Enacting thereof.

As foon as the Parliament broke up, in the 70 ln Story fhould be void. So much against the Papists.

beginning of June, a Consultation was held, a-condemnd bout John Story, Doctor of Law; one of the D. d'Alva's Searchers (of whom Mention was made before, in the Year 1569.) Wherein it was de-bated, Whether he, being an Englishman born, who in Brabant had consulted with a forein

1571. Ann. 14.

Prince, about invading his own Country; and 1571. had inform'd him how it might be invaded; were

Ann. 14. not guilty of High-Treason. The ablest Law-yers said he was. Whereupon being arraign'd, and charg'd with High-Treason, for having confulted with one Profial, a great Magician, a-gainst his Prince's Life, for having conspir'd the Death of her and the King of Scots, curs'd her daily in his Grace at Meats, and inform'd the Duke d Alva's Secretary, how to invade England, raife a Rebellion in Ireland, and at the fame time fend the Scots into England. He refus'd to submit himself to Trial, and to the Laws of England; affirming that the Judges had no Power over him, fince he was not a fworn Subject to the Queen of England, but to the King of Spain. However he was condemn'd according to the ordinary Form of Nihil dicit, (because no Man can relinquish his Country where he was born, nor abjure his native Soil, or his Prince, at his Pleasure) and suffer'd the Death of a Traitor.

Difference between the English and Partuguesecom-

Death of

Now there had been Differences for fome Years depending, between the Portugal and the English Merchants; whilst the English had from the Year 1552, exercis'd a gainful Trade for Gold with the Negroes, on that part of Africa which they call Guinea; and the Portuguele, as the first Discoverers of those Coasts, did all they could, by Force of Arms, to prevent them: So that fometimes they had fome Skirmishes by Sea, and feiz'd one anothers Ships. But Sebaftian, King of Portugal, now out of his Minority, that he might procure a Peace, fent Francis Gerard into England; who made a League with the Queen, upon fome fuch Conditions as these: 'That upon Iome Iuch Conditions as thele: 'That there should be a perfect Amity and free Commerce on both sides: That neither of them should attempt any thing to the Prejudice of the other, nor affilt the Enemies, Rebels or Traitors of the other: That all Merchandize, • Money, and Ships that were arrefted fhould be reftord: And that, to gratify the King of Portugal, Queen Elizabeth should prohibit the English from making any Voyages upon the Seas and Lands of the Portugal-Conquett; which Prohibition if they did not observe, let it be at their Peril, if they should be deprived of their Lives and Goods by the Portugues. The Coast of Barbary; where they were allow'd to have free trading.

This Year William Parr Marquels of Northam-Marques pron, (weetly ended his Life: A Man very well of Norversd in the foster Studies of Musick, Amours, champton, and other courtly Diversions. He was advanced by King Henry VIII. first to the Dignity of Baron Parr of Kendall, then to the Marriage of Anne Bourchier, fole Heiress to the Earl of Essex; and withal to the Title of the Earl of Fflex, upon the King's marrying his Sifter. By King Edward VI. he was promoted to the Style and Honour of Marquess of Northampton. Under Q. Mary, he was condemn'd for High-Treason, having taken up Arms for the pretended Queen Jane Grey: yet was he foon after pardon'd by her, and reftor'd to his Estate; and afterwards by Queen Elizabeth re-inftated in his Honours. He had no Children, but left for his Heir Henry Herbert Earl of Pembroke, his Nephew by one of his Sifters.

'Kingdoms of Portugal and Algarbe were excepted; and the Illes of Azores, Madera, and the

And of About this time also died John Jewell, scarce Bp.Jewel. Fifty Years of Age: A Man of an excellent Genius, deep Knowlege in Divinity, and fingular Piety. He was born of honest Parentage in Devonshire, provid a most excellent Student in Corpus-Christi-College in Oxford; in Queen Mary's Days liv'd an Exile in Germany, and by Queen

Elizabeth was promoted to the Bishoprick of Salisbury. In the Year 1562, he publish'd An A-1571. pology for the Church of England; and in two English Volumes he very learnedly maintain'd the Protestant Doctrine against Thomas Harding, an Apostate from the same: Which Volumes are now extant in a Latin Version.

Ireland was at this time pretty quiet; for Sir Linh fobm Perott, Governour of Maufter, fo harafe'd Affairs, fames Firz-Marris, who had rift Kibmalack, that Sir John he was oblig'd to hide himfelf in Lurking-holes Perident near Ardagh; and at last (as we shall shew in of Munits proper Place) brought him to that pafs, that there, he humbly begg d Pardon. Sidney the Lord-De Sidney but preturn'd into England, and Sir William Fix. hum Ld. Williams, who had marry'd his Sifter, was fubth: Deput, tuted in his Room.

The Fifteenth Year of her Reign.

1572.

The Beginning of the New-year presented the Londoners with a new and forrowful Spectacle in Westminster-Hall. For a wooden Scaffold was erected in the midst of the Hall, reaching from the Gate to the upper End; where there was a Tribunal built, with Seats on both fides; fuch a Sight as they had not feen in full Eighteen Years. On the 16th day of January, was Thomas Dake of Haward, Duke of Norfolk, brought before this Norfolk Tribunal, between Sir Owen Hopton Lieutenant arraignob of the Tower, and Sir Peter Carew, Knights; the fatal Ax being carry'd before him, with Edge turn'd from him. Upon the Bench or Tribunal fat George Talbot Earl of Shrewsbury, confti-tuted Lord High-Steward of England, for that day. On each fide of him fat these Noblemen, who were appointed to be his Triers, whom we call Peers; namely,

His Prers.

Reginald Grey Earl of Kent. Thomas Rateliff Earl of Suffex. Henry Hastings Earl of Huntington. Francis Russel Earl of Bedford. Henry Herbert Earl of Pembroke. Edward Seymour, or of Saint Maur, Earl of Hertford.

Ambrose Dudley Earl of Warwick. Robert Dudley Earl of Leicester. Walter D' Evereux Viscount Hereford. Edward Lord Clinton, Lord-Admiral. William Lord Howard of Effingham, Lord-Chamberlain.

William Cecil Lord Burleigh, Secretary. Arthur Lord Grey of Wilton. Fames Blount Lord Mountjoy. William Lord Sands. Thomas Lord Wentworth. William Lord Burroughs. Lewis Lord Mordant. John Powlett Lord Saint John of Basing. Robert Lord Rich.

Roger Lord North. Edmund Bruges Lord Chandois. Oliver Lord Saint John of Bletnesho. Thom: s Sackville Lord Buckhurst. And William West Lord De la Ware,

After Silence was proclaim'd, the Commission Form of was read; wherein the Authority granted to the the Ar-Lord-Steward was contain'd: Then Garter-King- raignment at-Arms put a white Rod into his Hands, which the Lord-Steward prefently deliver'd to his Gen-tleman-Usher, who standing by him held it up-right all the time of the Trial. Then were the Earls and Barons call'd over, and every one anfwer'd to his Name. Sheare being "Some re-claim'd, the Lieutenant of the Tower was com-manded to return his Writ, and to bring the Duke fwer'd to his Name. Silence being again pro-

Duke to the Bar. The Duke was prefently 572. brought: On the one fide of him was the Lieu-Ann. 15. tenant of the Tower, on the other Sir Peter Carew, and next him flood the Ax-bearer, with the Edge turn'd from the Duke. After Silence was proclaim'd again, the Clerk of the Crown spake to the Duke in these Words: Thomas Duke of Norfolk, late of Kenninghale in the County of Norfolk, bold up thy Hand. When he had held up this Hand, the Clerk read, with a loud Voice, the Crimes he stood arraign'd for; namely, beth, and afterwards, he had enter'd into a treafonsible Conspiracy, about deposing her from her Throne, and taking away her Life, and invading the Kingdom, by raising War, and bringing in a sorein Power.

'That in the Eleventh Year of Queen Eliza-

Heads of his Accufation

'That tho' he knew for certain, that Mary e late Queen of Scots had usurp'd the Crown of · England, with the Title and Arms thereof; yet he had treated about a Marriage with her, (without acquainting the Queen) and had lent ther a great Sum of Money, contrary to what the had promis'd under his Hand.

That tho' he was fure, that the Earls of Northumberland and Westmorland, Markenfield and others, had raifed a Rebellion against the Queen, and were driven into Scotland, yet he had fup-'That in the thirteenth Year of the Queen's 'Reign, he had by his Letters craved Auxiliary 'Forces of Pope Pius V. the Queen's profession

Enemy, of the Spaniard, and the Duke d'Alva, to fet the Queen of Scots at Liberty, and restore the Perish Religion in England.

Lastly, That he had relieved Heris the Scot,

' and other the Queen's Enemies in Scotland. These Articles being read, the Clerk ask'd the Duke, whether he were Guilty, or not

He defires

Counfel.

which is

deny'd

him.

The Duke crav'd, that if the Law would allow it, he might have Counsel affign'd him to defend his Caufe. Lord-Chief-Justice Cateline answer'd, 'That the Law could not allow it. It is fit (faid * the Duke) I should submit myself to the Opinion of the Judges; but in this Cafe there are many " nice Points; nor had I notice till within thefe ' fourteen Hours, that I should be brought to my Tryal. I have been also unprovided of Books. I fée now I must fight for myself without Weapons. However, I have heard that in the Reign of King Henry VII. Sir Henry Stafferd had Coun-"fel allow'd him in a cafe of High-Treafon. Dier, Lord-Chief-Justice of the Common-Pleas, answer'd, 'That Stafford had Counsel assign'd aniwerd, 'That Stafford had Counier align of him about the Privilege of Sanctuary, from whence he was violently drawn: But in the cafe of High-Treason, he pleaded his own 'Cause without Council. To Day then (said the Duke) I must Plead for my Lite, my Estate, my Children, and (which is above all) my Honetty, (as for my Honour, let it go). If I die innecess, each will he first cawage my Cause. innocent, God will be fure to avenge my Caufe.
Yet let me ask this one Question; Whether that Enumeration of my Crimes be to be taken for true in every Part, and to which Part I I must answer? Cateline said, Since the Causes are true, that Enumeration is also to be taken for true. I desire (said the Duke) to be inform'd whether every Particular therein be 'High-Treafon; for I have heard fay that in a " Cafe of the Lord Scroop's, in the Reign of Hen-"y IV. -- As he was going on, the Clerk in-terrupted him, crying, "Thomas Duke of Norfolk, "art theu guilty of those Crimes, or no? He answer'd, "Nor guilty. The Clerk ask'd him a-He accepts gain, "How wilt thou be try'd? He answer'd, the Trial. To God and these Peers I commend my Cause,

The Heinousness of these Crimes daunts me, but the Royal Goodness of the Queen refreshes me, from whom I could expect no better. But Ann. 15. of you, my Lord-Steward, I earneftly defire, that I may have a fair Trial, and that my Memory, which is very weak, may not be over-charg'd with any Variety of Matter. That I have such as you for my Peers and Judges, I acknowlege my felf happy; to most of whose Integrities I would willingly and readily commit my Life. I trusted to my Innocence, and fo have not shifted for myself by Flight. Yet I must ingenuously confess, I have fail'd in my Duty towards the Queen; but not so as to a-mount to High-Treason. I befeech you, that these lighter Crimes may not promiseuously be reckon'd among Crimes of High-Treason. Then faid Barbam the Queen's Serjeant at Law; ' The Crimes of High-Treason, where- The with you ftand charg'd, are thefe. You have Charge, conspir'd to depose the Queen, and take away her Life: You defign'd to marry the Queen of Scots: You invited forein Forces into the Kingdom: You reliev'd the Rebels; and you affifted the Scots the Queen's Enemies. Barham, (faid the Duke) pray do not aggravate the Matter with Words, by objecting the Marriage, and other things which amount not to High-Treasen. Barham tutuwhich amount not to High-Treason. Barham turn-ing to the Peers, pleaded to this Effect: 'That whofoever is willing to marry that Woman, The first which lays a Claim to the Kingdom, the fame Article. Man affects the Kingdom. But this the Duke with the went about to do, when he was one of the Answer. Commissioners at York, for hearing the Queen of Scots Cause; at which time he was bound by Oath, to confider impartially the Accusa-tions and Defences on both sides. That Case (faid the Duke) has feveral Particulars in it, which amount not to High-Treason. The Lord-Steward of England commanded the Duke not to stray from the Matter in hand, by his Digressions; who, when Barham clamorously insisted upon it, acknowledg'd that the Queen of Scots had indeed laid Claim to the Kingdom of England, but had laid Claim to the Kingdom of England, but had long ago defited from that Claim. Barbum fhew'd to the contrary, that fhe had not relinquished it, because she would not yet renounce the Title which she pretended; and he sharply accused the Duke, of instructing the Queen of Scors Delegates, what they should answer; and this was prov'd out of the Bishop of Ress's Confession. The Duke confess'd that Lidington had mention'd the Marriage to him, but that he refus'd it, and gave no Instructions to the Commissioners; and withal desir'd, that Ress might be brought Face to Face against him. Then Barham press'd at large many things (al- The 2d. ready mention'd) concerning the Marriage, to & answer. prove that the Duke had affected the Crown; and was often urging and repeating this Question, 'What else could the Duke propose to himfelf, whilft he refolv'd, without the Queen's Knowlege, to marry the Queen of Scots; a Woman without a Fortune, without a Kingdom, (her Son being now establish'd on the Scottish Throne) but that he might, by means of her, enjoy the Kingdom of England, and confequently deprive the Queen of her Crown and Life. These things (faid the Duke) are far fetcht, to prove I ever intended the Deposing and Death of the Well then, (faid Barbam) to come a little concerning that you enter'd ing the nearer; tis very well known, that you enterd lighte into a Defign of feizing the Tower of London, Surpital which is certainly the greateft Strength of the of the Kingdom of England: So that it thence fol-London, lows, that you then attempted the Destruction of the Queen; fince no Kingdom can away 1572.

with

" with the Government of two Rival-Princes. 1572. The Duke did not deny, but that one Hopton Ann. 15 had mention'd to him the Defign of feizing the Tower; but that he rejected the Motion. What made you then (faid Barham) to confult with the Earl of Pembroke about it, who diffuaded

' you from it?

Barham went on, and urg'd, That when the Other In- Queen demanded to have the young King of Scotland, certain Castles, and the English Rebels in Scotland, deliver'd into her Hands; the Duke privately advis'd the Scots not to affent to it. He likewise accus'd him of attempting to set the Queen of Scots at liberty; and that after he had folemnly given it under his Hand, that he would have nothing more to do with her.

Candifk's teltimony

rejested

ftances.

Now was Candish produc'd as a Witness, That the Duke had fully refolv'd upon the Marriage, and had ask'd him, Whether, if Queen Elizabeth by the D. should die, he would draw his Unkle over to his Party. These things the Duke utterly deny'd, and rejected his Teitimony, as a Man in Poverty, and a beggarly Witnels. Besides it was proved, That the Duke had privately fent his Servant to the Earls of Northumberland and Westmoreland, to advise 'em not to break out into open Rebellion, fince it would be very dangerous. There were likewise produc'd, the Queen of Scots Letters to the Duke; wherein she was con-cern'd, that Northumberland was taken, before he had arm'd himfelf for the Rebellion. (For fo it had been reported to her; whether delignedly or no, I cannot tell) To these things the Duke answer'd, 'That it could not, from these Arguments be prov'd, he had any Design upon the Queen's Life; and that nothing as yet alledg'd was of any Force against him, but only the Bishop of Ross Teflimony: And that fince he was a Foreiner, his Teftimeny (by the Authority of Bra-Gon, a Man well versid in our Common-Laws) was nor to be admitted. That he had never ner's efti- 6 mony not e to be ad- c fuch an Esteem for the Earls of Northumberland and Westmoreland, as to repose his Life in their Hands. That his own Innocence had been fuch a Surety to him, that he never fo much as thought of flying.

3d. article

A Forei-

mitted.

'It is sufficiently evident, (faid Gerard, the Queen's Attorney) that the Duke did resolve & answer. upon a Marriage with the Queen of Scots, upon no other Defign, than to destroy the Q. That he likewise seriously consulted about invading the Kingdom, is manifest by his Letters to the Pope, the Spaniard, and the Duke d'Alva. What he transacted with Ridolpho, is now apparent from those obscure Notes in Cyphers ' hid under the Tiles in Howard's House; and ' from the Letters (which he had order'd to be burnt) found under the Mat, in the Entrance of his Bed-Chamber. All which things might be eafily prov'd, by the Examinations of those Men, who were neither terrify'd by Torture, or nor convicted of Treason. To these things the Duke answer'd, 'I was neither the Author nor the Favourer of those Consultations with the Pope and the Spaniard; but I always diflik'd them. Let them who have committed the Offence, bear the Blame; and not lay it at my Door, to excuse themselves.

Gerard farther accus'd the Duke, that he had treated with Ridolpho, about transporting 10000 Men out of Flanders, to be landed at Harwich, a Sea-port in Effex; and this he prov'd out of Barker's Examination: That Letters were likewife fent by Ridolpho to the Spaniard and the Duke d' Alva, to which tho' the Duke would not fet his Hand; yet by Ross's Advice, he fent Barker, his Secretary, to the Spanish Ambassador, to assure him, that the Letters were his.

My Memory (faid the Duke) fails me, not e can it attend to fo great a Variety of Matter-You Lawyers have your fhort Notes, but I Ann. 17. must answer extempore. Certainly, tis very unlikely, that I, who have been always avoide to Duke no the Romils Religion, flould have any thing to breed to do with the Pope. I had rather be drawn in tops y pieces with Horles than revolt from the Religion which I profess. The very Situation of Harwich is enough to clear me of this Accusation. Who is not fensible, how hard a Matter it is, to lead an Army through that Country; which is full of Hedges, and very inconvenient, by reason of the narrow Ways? Had I intended a War against my Prince, I should certainly have furnish'd myself with Arms; but these full ten Years I have bought me no more than eight Breaft-Pieces, and no Powder at all. Such Letters I should never have committed to Barker's Trust, but rather to Banister's, who was to me worth a great many Barkers.

Now were produc'd the Bishop of Ross Letters to the Queen of Scots, from the Tower; which being intercepted confirm d the things that have been alledg'd. The Duke defired to fee the Lerters, for he feem'd to suspect they were counter-You need not question the Letters, (faid the Lord High-Steward) they are Ross's own Hand-Writing. There was also produc'd another thort Writing. There was also produc'd another thort Letter, written with Oker by the Duke, to his Servant, ordering him to burn a Packet of Letters hid in fuch a Place, and to lay the Blame upon Roß; who, by the Privilege of an Ambaffador, would easily clude the Law. To this the Duke answerd, Being inform'd that it was noisd about, that I accus'd many; I answer'd it in that short Letter; and when I saw every thing was narrowly pry'd into, I order'd that Packet to be burnt, to fave fome from Danger.

Bromley the Queen's Solicitor, or Second Artorney, produc'd Ridolpho's Letters; wherein he intimated, that the Duke d'Alva approv'd of the Plot; as also the Pope's Letters to the Duke, dated the 4th. of May Then Wilbraham made an eloquent Speech, concerning the Validity of the Teltimonies of the Bishop of Ross and the Duke's Servants. The Duke reply'd, 'Tis not in my Power, to refute such a set and so polish'd an Oration. But yet that Orator (faid he) let him be never fo well skill'd, has omitted to fhew, how great the Power of Fear is, which oftentimes removes a refolute Mind from its Place and Station. And here again he urg'd and commended Bracton against the Validity of forein Witnesses. Cateline the Lord Chief-Justice answer'd, That in fuch Cases as this, the Testimonies of Foreiners Foreiners were valid; and that it was at the Peers testimony Pleasure, to credit or discredit such Testimo- in some

Now it came to be prov'd, That the Duke had 4th article reliev'd the Rebels that were fled: Which appear'd from the Countess of Northumberland's Letters, wherein she thank'd the Duke for the Mony he had supply'd her Husband and her with.

That which was last of all objected, concern- sebaricle ing relieving the Scots the Queen's Enemies, was prov'd from the Duke's Letters to Banifer, from Banister's own Confession, and from the Money deliver'd to Brown of Shrewsbury.

Here the Duke ask'd the Judges, 'Whether the Subjects of another Prince in Confederacy with the Queen, were to be reputed the Queen's Enemies? Cateline answer'd, They were: and that the Queen of England might wage War with any Duke of France, and yet at the same time be at Peace with the French King.

When

Verdia.

of death.

When it now grew late, the Lord-Steward 1572. asked the Duke, if he had any thing more to fay Ann. 15. for himself. He answer'd, I confide in the Equity of the Laws. The Lord-Steward commanded the Lieutenant of the Tower to take the Duke from the Bar: And after Silence proclaim'd, turning to the Peers, he faid: 'You have heard how Thomas Duke of Norfolk, being charged with TheLord. High-Trealon, and not confessing himself guil-seewards ty, hath submitted his Cause to God and you. Due floor It is for you therefore to consider with yourfelves, whether he be to be held guilty, and to give in your Verdict upon your Confeience and Honour. And withal he ordered them to with-Peers.

draw and advise together. After a short space they return'd to their Seats. Then the Lord-Sreward beginning with the laft, faid, My Lord Delaware, is Thomas Duke of Nor-folk guilty of that High-Treason charged against him, or no? He riling up, and laying his Hand on his Breaft, answer'd, Guilty. So answer'd the rest, being ask'd in their order.

Then was the Duke brought again to the Bar, to whom the Lord-Steward spake in this manner. Thomas Duke of Norfolk, thou haft been arraign'd upon divers Crimes of High-Treason, and hast submitted thyself to God and these Peers, who have all found thee Guilty. Hast thou any thing to say why Sentence should not be past d upon thee? The Duke answer'd, God's Will be done, who will judge between me and my false

Silence being now kept, the edge of the Ax was turn'd towards him. Upon this Barham requir'd the Lord-Steward in the Queen's Name to pass Sentence; which he with Tears in his Eyes pronounc'd according to the usual Form, in these Words. 'Forafriuch as thou Thomas Duke of ' Norfolk haft been charged with High-Treafon, hast pleaded not Guilty, and submitted thyself to the Judgment of thy Peers: This Court adiudgeth thee to be carried back from hence to the Tower, then to be laid upon an Hurdle, and drawn through the City to the Gallows, there to be hangd, and being half dead, to be cut down, thy Bowels taken out, and after thy Head is cut off, to be quartered: Thy Head and Body to be disposed of according to the Queen's pleafure; and God have mercy upon f thy Soul.

The Duke having heard this Sentence, with a prefence of Mind answer'd: 'Sentence is pass'd upon me as upon a Traytor: I have none to truit 10 but God and the Queen: I am excluded from your Society, but hope shortly to enjoy the heavenly. I will fit myfelf to die. Only this one thing I crave, That the Queen would be kind to my Children and Servants, and take Care that my Debts be paid.

Thefe things, which I heard myfelf, I have the more exactly penn'd down, fince in fuch weighty Matters it may be of fome use to Posterity to have the very least Particulars re-

Some few Days after, Barney and Mather were RIVERY RE M. ther Executed, for having conspir'd with one Herle, a wicked Accomplice of theirs, the Death of certain Privy-Counfellors, and the freeing the Duke out of the Tower. But Herle foon discoverd the Plot; and being produced as a Witness against them, Herle, (said Barney smiling) thou art one Hour before-band with me, elfe I had stood in thy place as thine Accuser, and thou in mine, as guilty, and to be bing'd.

This Plot, and feveral others that were laid to deliver the Prisoners, hastned the calling of a Parliament. Against which the Queen promoted Walter D'Evereux, Viscount Hereford, to the Honour of Earl of Essen, because by the Great

Grandmother's fide he descended from the Bourchiers, Earls of Effex: And Edward Lord Clinton, 1572.
a Man of a plentiful Estate in Lincolnshire, to the Ann. 15.
Dignity of Earl of Lincoln. Besides, she summon'd four new Barons to this Parliament, viz. John Powlet of Basing, the Marquis of Winchester's Birons Son; Henry Compton, Henry Cheney, and Henry made. Norris.

At which time it was Enacted by the Autho- An aft for rity of Parliament, 'That who foever should seize security of upon, demolish, or burn any of the Queen's Forts, Gs. fhould be guilty of Felony: That whoever should hold them by force against the Queen, burn her Ships, or block up her Ha-vens, should be guilty of High-Treaton. And likewife, 'That if any Person should go about Another to deliver any Man imprison'd upon the Queens against Writ, for Treason, or suspicion of Treason to refue before his Arraignment, the said Person should Prisoners. ' forfeit his Estate during Life, and be impri-' fon'd during the Queen's pleasure : If Arraign'd, ' he should incur the Penalty of Death; if Condemn'd, the Penalty of High-Treason.

As the Severity of these Laws was only necesfary for the Time; fo the Parliament thought fit it should be only Tomporary; namely, during the Queen's Life. But so many Designs of this nature were fet on foot, as hastned the Duke's Execution; which however was put off for about four Months. Nor till then could the Commons in Parliament, the Counsellors at Court, nor the Importunity of Preachers, by fuggefting the greatness of the Danger she was in, overcome the Queen's Clemency.

But on the 2d of June, at Eight in the Morn-Duke of ing, the Duke was brought to a Scaffold erected Norfolk upon Tower-Hill; whereon he was no fooner brought to mounted, and Alexander Name! Dean of St. Pauls, execution who was there as his ghostly Comforter, desired the Multitude that stood round to keep Silence; but he faid; "Tis no new thing for Men to suf-fer Death in this Place; the since the begin-'ning of our most gracious Queen's Reign, I am Hisspeech' the first, and God grant I may be the last. At and Contist the People cryd, Amon. Then (to give you fession at an Abstract of what I heard at large) he went on: I acknowledge my Peers have justly fentenced me worthy of Death; nor have I any ' defign to excuse myself. I freely confess, that I treated with the Q. of Scots in Things of great moment, without my Sovereign's Knowledge, which I ought not to have done; whereupon I was cast into the Tower. But I was afterwards 'fet at Liberty, having made an humble Sub-' mission, and promised upon Honour to have nothing more to do with her; yet I confess I 'acted contrary, and this in truth diffurbs my 'Confcience. But I neither promifed nor sware
'it at the Lord's Table, as is commonly reported. I once confer'd with Ridolpho, but not to the Queen's Destruction. For there are several which know I had to do with him about Money-matters, upon Bills and Bonds. I found him to be one that envied the Peace of England, ' and forward to contrive any Villany.

Two Letters from the Pope I faw, but by 'no means approv'd of them, nor of the Rebel-lion in the North. I have not been Popishly in-' clined ever fince I had any Tast of Religion; but was always averfe to the Popish Doctrine, and embraced the true Religion of Fesus Christ and put my whole Truft in the Blood of Chrift my bleffed Redeemer and Saviour. Yet I mult own that some of my Servants and Acquaintance were addicted to the Romish Religion. If in this I have offended either God, the Church, or the Protestants, I pray God and them to forgive me. Then after the reading created.

a Pfalm

eath.

a Pfalm or two, he faid with a loud Voice, Lord, 1572. into thy Hands I commend my Spirit. After this, he mn.ts embraced Sir Henry Leigh, whifper'd fomething to him, and Dean Nowel, who turning to the be man People, faid, 'The Duke defires you would all er of his of you pray to God to have mercy on him, and withal keep filence, that his Mind may not be disturbed. The Executioner ask'd him Forgiveness, and had it granted. One offering him a Handkerchief to cover his Eyes; he relusd it, faying, I am not in the leaft afraid of Death. Then filling on his Knees, he lay proftrate with his Mind fix'd upon God, and Dean Novel pray'd with him. Prefently after, he ftretched his Neck upon the Block, and his Head was immediately cut off at one blow, and fhew'd by the Executioner as a doleful fight to the forrowful and weeping Multitude.

Various It is incredible how dearly the People loved Opinions him; whose Good-will he had gain'd by a Muniobout him ficence and extraordinary Affability, luitable to fo great a Prince. The wifer fort of Men were varioully affected: Some were tetrified at the greatness of the Danger, which during his Life feem'd to threaten the State from him and his Faction. Others were mov'd with Pity rowards him, as one very nobly Defcended, of an extra-ordinary good Nature, comely Personage, and manly Presence; who might have been both a Support and Ornament to his Country, had not the crafty Wiles of the Envious, and his own falle Hopes, led on with a shew of doing the Publick Service, diverted him from his first course of Life. They call'd likewife to mind his Father's untimely End, who tho a Man of extraordinary Learning, and famous in War, was yet beheaded in the fame Place five and twenty Years before, and that upon very flight Grounds, viz. for Quartering the Arms of Edward the Confessor with his own; which yet we read that the Mony-brays, Dukes of Norfolk, from whom he Def-cended, had born by Permiffion of King Richard II. Here it will be worth our while to add briefly

Hieron Carena's the affair.

what Hieronymo Catena hath published concerning relation of this business in the Life of Pins V. Bishop of Rome; an Author for his Integrity made Free of the City of Rome, and Secretary to Cardinal Alexandrino, Pius V.'s Nephew; that so we may see whence the whole Business proceeded, and by whom this Plot was contriv'd. ' Pius V.

Deligns of Pau V. against Q. Eliz.

With the English.

(fays he) being very zealous to restore the Romish Religion in England, and at the same time to remove Queen Elizabeth out of the Throne; ' fince he could not have an Apostolical Nuncio, or any other publick Minister, to carry on his Designs, procured one Robert Ridolpho, a Gentleman of Florence, (who lived in England under pretence of being a Merchant) to thir up the People to contrive the Destruction of Q. Elizabeth. He manag'd the Rufiness carefully, not only with the Catholicks, but also with some Protestants, who entred into the Conspiracy, fome out of a private grudge to those who 'aspir'd to the Crown, and others in love with 'Innovations. Whilft rhefe Things were carry'd twist the Spaniard and Queen Elizabeth, about fome Money that was intercepted. The Pope With the 'laying hold on this Occasion', persuaded the Spaniard to affist the Conspirators in England against Q. Elizabeth, by which means he might the 'more fecurely carry on his Defigns in Flanders, and the Romish Religion might be restored in Britain. He likewise persuades the French King With the 'to do the like, as oblig'd to it upon the account French. 'of his Kinfwoman the Queen of Scots; and by 'the good Service of the Scots, who had by their

on privately, there happen'd a Difference be-· Incursions diverted the English Forces from aiding the Protestants of France; and lastly, by the 1572merit of these noble Confipirators in England, who by their Artifices had hindred the Queen of England from openly ailifting the French Pro-testants. Upon which account the French King had promised them his Aid for Delivery of the Queen of Scots, but fail'd them. In the mean time, Ridolpho brought it about, that the Con-'fpirators drew the Duke of Norfolk into the Af The Do fociation, made him their Head, and promised Norfolk 'him Matriage with the Queen of was, she also consenting thereto. The Pope, to forward the contenuing thereto. The Pope, to forward the bulinefs, published a Bull, deposed the Queen, Popes Bust assimithe absolved her Subjects from all their Oaths and Queen. Allegiance, and fent printed Copies thereof to Ridolpho to be dispersed all over England. Upon this the Earls of Northumberland and Westmorland Rebellion took up Arms against their Prince; who foon in the North, fook up Arms againg their rimes; who food after, for want of Money, withdrew into Scotland. Norfolk and others were caft into Prifon, amongst whom was Ridolpho, whom the Pope had ordered to furnish the Conspirators with an hundred and fifty thousand Crowns, which, he being in Prison, could not do.

But forafmuch as the Queen could not difco-ver the bottom of this Plot, he with the rest were discharged, and then distributed the Money among the Conspirators, who sent him to the Pope to certify him, that every thing was prepared and in a readiness at home against Queen Elizabeth, and to intreat the Spaniard, that the Supply out of Flanders might forthwith join them. The Pope commended the Design; (tho' the Duke d'Alva, to whom Ridolpho in his Journy communicated the business, lik'd it not, as being too full of Danger.) This Ridelpho he fent to the Spaniard upon another Pretence, and to the King of Portugal with Instructions, and at the same time by Letters he promis'd Aid to Norfolk. ' He urges the Spaniard to affift the Conspirators; and the more effectually to perfuade him, promifes to go himfelf to their Affiftance, and, if need were, to mortgage all the Goods of the Apoftolick See, Chalices, Croffes, and holy Vertments. That there was no Difficulty in it, if he would fend Chapini Vitelli out of Flanders with an Army into England. Which the Spaniard ordered to be done with all expedition, and the Pope himself provided Money in the No-therlands.

But the Duke d'Alva was not pleas'd with D a' line these Projects, who both envy'd Vitelli the Glo-oppo'es ry of this Action, and would have had his Son prefer'd before him; and at the fame time feared some Hostile Attempt from France. Withal he proposed to their Confideration, Whether if England were conquered it would full to the Spaniard? Whether the French King would not For what oppose it? And whether the Pope could give them, a Spaniard of the spaniar of the spaniar for the spaniar full full spaniar for full has a full for the spaniar full full spaniar for full has a full spaniar for full spaniar full spaniar for full spaniar full spaniar for full spaniar for full spaniar full spa them a Supply fufficient for fisch an Under-taking? However, the Spanind exprestly com-manded him to invade England, lending Ribbi-pho back with Money into Flunders. But by God's permission the whole Design was disco-Thedesign vered to Queen Elizabeth by a certain Foreiner, frustrated. and Norfolk was taken and put to death. The Pope and Pope was concerned at it, and the Spaniard for Spaniard rope was concerned at it, and the openion cost spanara by for it, who faid in the prefence of Cardinal for forth alicandring, the Pope's Nephew, That never any Piot was laid more advifedly, or concealed with greatet Confent and Conftancy, which in fo long a time was never discover'd by any of 'the Conspirators: And that in 24 Hour's time ' Forces might have been transported easily from the Netherlands, which might have fuddenly feiz d upon the Queen and the City of London, Vol II.

reftor'd Religion, and fettled the Q. of Scots 1572. upon the Throne; especially since Tho. Stukeley, Ann. 15. an English Deserter, had taken upon him at the fame time with 2000 Spaniards to reduce all Ire-I land under the Subjection of the Spaniard, and with one or two Spy-boats to fire the English ' Fleet.

Thus far Hieronymo Catena; fome of which things were unknown to the English till he published them in his Book printed at Rome, with the Privilege of Sixtus V. in the Year 1588. Now to the purpose, if this be beside it.

Expostu-

Scarce ten Days after the Duke's Execution, Exporture William Lord De-la-Ware, Sir Ralph Sadler, Thomas with the Wilfon Doctor of Law, and Thomas Bromley the Cof Seors Queen's Solicitor, were fent to the Q. of Seors, now overcome with Grief and Mourning, to expostulate with her by way of Accusation:
That she had usury'd the Title and Arms of the · Crown of England, and had not renounced the fame, as was agreed upon in the Treaty of Edinborough: That for the full polieting herfelf thereof, the had treated of a Marriage with the Duke of Norfolk; without acquainting the Queen therewith; for the confummation whereof, and for freeing the Duke out of the Tower by force of Arms, she had used all Methods possible by her Ministers. That she had raised a Rebellion in the North, reliev'd notorious Robels in Scotland and Flanders; petition'd for a forein Aid from the Pope, the Spaniard and others, by Ridulpho an Italian, in order to invade England, and conspired with certain of the English, who should free her out of Prison, and declare her Queen of England. That she had received Letters from the Pope, wherein he promifed to cherish her as a Hen does her Chickens, and to efteen them true sons of the Church, who should stand for her. Lastly, That she had procur'd the Pope's Bull against the Queen, and permitted her Party in forein · Parts to file her publickly Queen of Enga land.

Lirst of all she declared to them, 'That she Heraniw. Tirth of all the deciared to them, was an absolute Sovereign, and dependent on none. Then the answer'd the Things objected against her with a setled Mind and Countenance. That the herfelf had not usurp'd the Title and Arms of the Kingdom of England, but the French King, her Husband, had impos'd them upon her whilft young and under a Husband's Power, and therefore the was in no fault. That ' the had neither born them fince her Husband's Death, nor would challenge them as long as · Oueen Elizabeth or her Children liv'd.

As for the Marriage with the D. of Norfolk, ' she never intended it to the Queen's Prejudice; for the was of the opinion it would be for the Good of the Common-wealth: But the had not renounc'd it, being contracted to him. That fhe did advise the Duke to free himself out of ' Prison and Danger, as she was oblig'd to do by the love of a Wife.

'That the had rais'd no Rebellion, nor was e accessary to any, but was always most ready to discover any Deligns form'd against the Queen, if she would but youchfuse to give her Audience in her Royal Presence. That she never reliev'd the English Rebels, only by Letters recommended the Countels of Northumberland to the Duke * d'Alva. Ridolpho, whom the knew to be in the Pope's Favour, the made ufe of in Moneyconcerns; but had received no Letters from

That the had excited none to fet her at Liberty. That the had indeed lent a willing Ear to fuch as offer'd her their Service herein, and to this purpose had communicated to Relston and

" Hall a private Cypher.

'That she had indeed now and then received s Letters from the Pope, very full of Piety and Confolation, but no fuch forms of Speech as is Ann. 15. 1572. faid were in them.

That fhe was not the procurer of the Bull, only she had seen a printed Copy thereof; which when she had read, she cast into the ' Fire. If any in forein Parts write or stile her otherwise than they ought, let them bear the blame. That she had never by Letters desir'd 'Aid of the Pope, or the Spaniard, for the in-'vading of England; but had indeed implor'd their Affishance to refettle her in her Kingdom, and that with the Queen's know-

'That if any Scruple remain about those Letters, or about confumnating the Marriage by force of Arms, she prays that (since she is born of the Blood-Royal of England) flee may give in her personal Answer at the next Session of the " English Parliament.

Scotland in the mean time was most miserably Scotland with intestine Divisions; whilst on the land. one fide those of the Queen's Party, presuming on the Favour of the French; and on the other Fr. K. and fide those of the King's Party, relying on the Q Elix. Affiftance of the English; profecuted one another endeavour with mortal Harred and deadly Wars. Yet the pose 'em. English and French seem'd very desirous of compose' em. fing the Difference, fending their Embaffadors into Scotland.

The French, supposing this to be the most pro- But for per Method, propos d, That some good and equidifferent table Persons should be chosen to govern the reasons. Kingdom of Scotland for a time in neither the King's nor Queen's Name. For they would not acknowledge the K. of Scots for King, fince he had no other Right to the Crown than from his Mother, and the Mother they thought could not be deposed by her own Subjects: That she there-fore was to be acknowledged as Queen, and the ancient League between her and the French King to be observ'd.

On the contrary the English, by weighty Arguments, maintain'd, 'That such an Administration of Government would be downright Anarchy: That the Common-wealth could not be govern'd by fo many: That the Scots, who had always been under the Government of a King, would never confent to the Election of fuch Governors: That the Estates of the Kinge dom had deposed the Queen, and had duly conflituted and inaugurated the King; and that that ancient League was not contracted betwixt Persons, but the Kingdoms of France and Scotland: And that the most Christian King was by the very tenour of the League obligd to defend the King of Scots. For it was provivided in express Words, That the Kings of France, if at any time the Succession of the Crown of Scotland fould be controverted, should defend him, to whom the Estates of Scotland adjudg d the Kingdom. As for the Caufes of deposing the Queen, the Scors who had done it were to be consulted in the

However the French King openly favour'd the Reafons Queen of Scars Party, and was very importunate why the with Queen Elizabeth for her Delivery, left (as French K. his Embassadors ingenuously declard) he should froured feem to neglect her that had been Wife to the Scart. King his Brother, and was now Dowager of France; to break the ancient League between the French and Scots; to flight the Family of the Guises, now so very Powerful in France; or to approve of that pernicious Example of deposing Kings: And (which was the main Argument) left fhe, being abandon'd by the French King in her Diffress, should close with the Spaniars, and at length the most Potent Kingdoms of England, | 1572. Scotland and Ireland, by her Means should be join-Ann. 15. ed in a League with Spain to the endangering of France.

Q. Eliz. argues the case with the French.

of Scors.

To these Things Queen Elizabeth gently reply'd: 'Let the French King have a care what Esteem he puts upon the Queen of Scots; tho fhe has been Queen, and be now Dowager of France, yet she privately consulted with the Spa-'niard about breaking off the Match with the D.
of Anjou. Let him confider whether he does on the young King. Let him confider how much France is oblig d to the Family of the Guifer; by whose Counsels France itself has been in-fer; by whose Counsels France itself has been in-volved in a deadly War, Scotland alienated from the French, and the Q. of Scots herself brought under these sad Gircumstances. The example of deposing Kings is certainly very dangerous, and to be condemn'd to the Pit of Hell; but e let the Scots be responsible for that. I here unwillingly mention what I utterly dislike. Yet whether the French formerly mislik'd it, I know onot, when Pepin deposed Childerick, and Hugh Capet Charles of Lorain, from their Ancestor's Kingdoms; translaring the Crown to other Fami-And when Philip le Bon the Burgundian flies: turned Jaquetta out of Hainault and Holland; or the Danes when they banish'd Christian II. and his Daughters out of the Kingdom; or the Spa-iniards when they excluded Queen Urnea from her Kingdom and imprison'd her. That Sons fhould be admitted to the Government upon their Mother's Exclusion, is no new thing. Thus *Hemy II. King of England; Alphonfus the young Son of Uraca King of Caftile; and within our memory Charles V. King of Spain and Sicily, mounted the Throne during their Mother's 'lives. That Queens have been imprison'd, eveery Age furnishes us with Instances; and France ' may sufficiently testify it; which has seen the Wives of three Kings successively (viz. of Lewis Huttin, Philip le long, and Charles the Fair) impri-fon'd, not to fay worfe. To fpeak the truth, I detain the Queen of Scots in honourable Cu-' flody for England's and my own Security. This Policy the French taught me; who (to provide for their own Safety) clapt Childerick into a Moanastery, Charles of Lorain into a deep Dungeon, 'and Levis Sforza Duke of Milan into an Iron 'and Levis Sforza Duke of Milan into an Iron 'and Levis Sforza Duke of Milan into an Iron 'and Levis Sforza Duke of Milan into an Iron 'and Cage. Other things of this nature she repeated out of the Spanish History, as one that was very well acquainted with the Histories of all Nations. Lattly; She concluded, 'That such as the state of the Association of Injuflice in them: But she desir'd the French King to defend the young King of Scots, who was lawfully enthron'd, according as he was oblig'd by the League. For this would tend more to the French Nation's Glory, than did the unfortunate Expeditions which they made in behalf of that infamous Creature Joan of Naples.

But when it was known for certain, that the &Q.E/17. Queen of Scots at that very time carry'd on a priabate their abate their vate Confederacy with the Spaniard, by her Mi-affection to the Q nifter the Lord Seaton; who arriving in Essex, had return'd through England into Scotland in a Seaman's Habit, and had promis'd the Scots who were of the Queen's Party Supplies from the Duke d' Alva; both the was confin'd closer, and the French King's Affection by degrees grew cold towards her. And certainly the Duke d'Alva omitted nothing which might ferve towards the venting that fecret Grudge which he bare towards Q. Elizabeth; and the was no less diligent to ward off the Blow and defeat his Defigns. In the beginning therefore of this Year, when he made his Complaint by the Spanish Embassador in England, that the Rebels of the Netherlands furnish'd themselves with Warlike Provisions out of 1572. England, and were harbour'd in the English Sea-Ann. 15

Ports. The Queen immediately iffued forth a The Confirst Proclamnia and the Proclamnia and the Conftrict Proclamation, commanding the Netherlan-federate ders that were suspected of Rebellion to depart Netherlandery that were impected of Rebellion to depart Nether-the Land, and an Embargo to be laid on their landers. Ships of War. This was of very ill Confequence builted out of the Duke d'alva. For William Van-der-Mark England, Lord of Lumey, and other Netherlanders, being either terrified by this Proclamation, or private-by Toesward, withdraw thomefore early tree. ly forewarned, withdrew themselves out of England as it were forc'd by Despair, seiz'd upon the Briel at the mouth of the Maes, soon after drew upon the Flushing and other Towns to revolt, driving our Bried, the Spaniards just as they were going to build Fortresses to be the Fetters of their Freedom; and in a short time excluded the Duke d'Alva from almost all Command of the Sea. By this advantage of the Sea they disturb'd and harrass'd advantage of the Seathery until the Spaniard with fo long a War, not without a notable overfight in the Duke, (as Martial Men have thought) and unbecoming fo great a General, who for full four Years had grofly neglected the Sea Coatte of the Natharland. the Sea-Coasts of the Netherlands.

Now after a famous Mufter of the Londoners, Englishand an Exercise performed before the Queen at mean of Greenwich, the Martial Men, who rufted with the Wars Idleness at Home, began to flock into Flanders out of England: Some (according to the Party Landers out of England: Some Caccording to the Party Landers out of England: Some Caccording to the Party Landers out of England: tics they affected) to the Duke d'Alva; Others, and those the far greater Number, to the Prince of Orange, who, for Religion and Liberty's sake, oppos'd the Duke d'Alva.

First of all Thomas Morgan carry'd over Three hundred Men to Flushing: The report of whose arrival is thought to have kept off the D. d'Alva, who was preparing to attempt the recovery of Flushing. Afterwards, through the Procurement of Morgan, nine Companies of the English arriv'd there under the Command of Sir Humphry Gilbert; who, joining with the French, first made an attempt upon Schuis and Bruges, and then upon Tergoes in South-Beverlandt. But their Ladders being too short, the French and English disagreeing, and Mondragon coming to the relief of the Belieged, they retir'd to Flushing, not without loss of Men. This Place the French and English cunningly endeavour'd to be Masters of ; but being divided by Animolities, fomented by the cunning Artifices of the Prince of Orange, they could not effect their Design.

In France the Protestants had at this time a flat- Fren. K. s tering Calm; and King Charles was wholly in-Diffimutent upon the Low-Country War, being (as he pre- lations. tended) the only Remedy to prevent a Civil War at Home: And under this colour, he pretended a willingness to enter into a Consederacy with the German Princes and Queen Elizabeth as a Teftimoriy of his Good-will towards the Protestants, whom yet he had fecretly mark'd out for Destru-This Confederacy was concluded at Bloys Confederacy ction. the 11th of April, between him (who was afraid racy of of the French Protestants and the Spaniard) and Bloys. Queen Elizabeth, (who was no less afraid of intestine Broils and the Plots of the Duke d'Alva.) Commissioners for the French King were Francis Duke of Montmorency, Renat Brirague, Sebafian L'aubespine, the Bishop of Limogues, and Paul Foix: For the Queen, Sir Thomas Smith and Sir Francis Walsingbam.

The Articles briefly extracted out of the Original, were as follow.

The Articles in this Treaty shall not recede Articles of from the former Treaties made between the faid the Con-· Princes and their Predecessors, unless they are sederacy. ' inconsistent with this present League.

> Vol. II. LIIz

This

This League shall be a Confederacy, Bond and Union, betwixt the faid Princes, for a 1572. and Union, betwixt the faid Princes, mutual Defence, against all Persons, of what Ann.15. Degree foever; who shall, under any Pretence or Cause, none excepted, invade, or go about to invade, their Persons, or the Territories by them posses'd. This League shall remain in full Force, not only between the faid Princes, but also between their Successors; if such Successor shall " within a Year, by his Ambassadors and Letters, fignify to the surviving Prince, that he accepts of the fame Conditions: Otherwise the Survivor shall be understood to be free from all Observance of this League.

This League shall be of Force against all, even against these who shall be in Alliance with either King or Princes; and against all Leagues contracted, or to be contracted.

The Queen of England shall be bound, upon Request made by Letters, fign'd with the French King's Hand, requiring her Affistance; to fend into France, within two Months, 6000 arm'd Foot, or 500 Horse, at his Choice, to be enter'd into his Pay, as foon as they shall arrive in France

For a Defence by Sea, the Queen of England shall send Eight Ships of a reasonable Burden, with 1200 Soldiers, and all other Neceffaries on board them.

The Seamen and Soldiers shall be only En-glishmen; but they shall be under his Pay, and he shall find them all Necessaries, and provide them Victuals, from the time they enter into his Service: Neverthelefs they final obey the Admiral of France. The Queen of England shall victual her Ships for two Months; for which the French King shall pay her, within f two Months.

'The French King, upon Notice given him, by Letters fign'd by the Queen of England's Hand, that she is affaulted by War; shall be bound to fend over into England or Ireland, within two Months, 6000 Foot; or, if she had rather, 500 Cuiraffiers, which with others shall make up 1500 Horse; and about 3000 Foot, with serviceable Horses and Arms, after the French Fashion; to be enter'd into her Pay, as foon as they shall arrive upon her Domini-

' For Sea-Service, he shall equip Eight Ships, mann'd with 1200 Soldiers, in manner as is aforesaid.

They shall serve as long as the invaded Prince shall think fit to retain them.

The Form of the Succours and Pay shall be contain'd in a Schedule hereunto annex'd.

The one shall be bound to sell to the other (when invaded) both Arms and other Necesfaries.

They shall make no Innovations in Scotland, but defend it against Foreiners; not suffering Strangers to enter, or foment the Factions in Scotland: but it shall be lawful for the Queen of England to chaffife by Arms, those Scots who fhall countenance or harbour the English Rebels now in Scotland.

This League shall have only that Construction, which the bare Force and Propriety of the Words will allow of.

Both Princes shall ratify every particular Article, by their Letters-Patents; and fhall bona file, really and effectually deliver them interchangeably, to the Ambailadors on both fides, within three Months.

For the ratifying this League by the French King, Edward Clinton, Earl of Lincoln, Lord-Admiral of the Sea, was fent into France, with a f great Train of Noblemen; among whom were 1572. the Lord Dacres, the Lord Rich, the Lord Talbet, Ann.15. the Lord Sands, and others. In like manner the Legue French King fent into England the Duke of Montratify'd. morency and Paul Foix, in great Splendor; that the Queen might likewife ratify it, by Oath, before them, and Bertraud Salignac Mota Fenelun, his ordinary Ambaffador. This was done at Wefminfter, the 16th of May. The next day, Queen minster, the 16th of May. The next day, Queen Elizabeth, by the French King's leave, choic Mont-Montmo. morency to be a Knight of the Garter, as a grate-ful Acknowledgment of the Kindnels fhe had re-cejv'd from his Father Anna, High-Constable of Garter. France. Which Honour King Henry VIII. had conferr'd upon Annas himself, as a Pledge of the Love he bore to that Family; which has the Title of First Christian of France, and is esteem'd the most noble Family in all France.

Montmorency, during his Stay in France, made these short Proposals, in the French King's Name: He medi-

That as much Favour, as could in Safety, might ates an be shewn to the Queen of Scots: That there in Scots in Scots. might be a Ceffation of Arms in Scotland, and land, an Agreement confirm'd there by the Parliament: But if a Parliament could not be holden conveniently, that then certain Men chofor for both Parties, by the Scots, might meet at London, for composing the Differences; together with the French King's, and the Queen of England's Commissioners. But it was an-Thean's ver'd, 'That greater Favour had been shown, swer. and would, for the French King's fake, be still shewn to the Queen of Scots, than she deserv'd; tho' the Estates of the Realm now assembl'd in Parliament, were of opinion, that the Queen could never be fecure without fome Severity shew'd towards her. As for an Agreement and Cessation of Arms, the Queen has done what fhe could towards it; and for that purpose had very lately sent Drury, Marshal of Berwick, into Scotland, with Croc, the French Ambassador: But they could by no Arguments induce Grange and the Garrison in the Castle of Edinborough to hearken to Peace; being fondly in hopes of Succours from France and the Netherlands; tho' Huntley and Hamilton of Arbroth had, for the Duke his Father, given it under their Hands in Writing, to Queen Elizabeth; That they were ready to entertain a Peace; and the rest of the Queen's Party had promis'd as much.

Then Montmorency earnestly solicited again the He solicited again the solicited again.

Marriage with the Duke of Anjou; but when cites the they could not agree about the Exercise of Re-with Anligion, he return'd into France, leaving the Mat- jou. ter desperate; whilst a Marriage was preparing, with great Solemnity, between Henry of Navarre, King of and Margaret, the French King's Sifter. To this marries Marriage the Queen of Navarre, and the choi- Fr. King's cest of the Protestants, were allur'd, by flatter- Sister. ing Promifes, and a credulous Hope of a lafting Peace, and the Renewal of Friendship; but not without a notable Piece of Diffimulation. There were likewise invited out of England, under pretence of doing 'em Honour, Leicester and Burleigh; and out of Germany, the Elector Palatine's Sons that being allur'd into the Toils, both they, and with 'em the Evangelical Religion, might, at one Blow, be either butcher'd, or at least receive a mortal Wound. For no fooner was the Marriage folemniz'd, but of a fedden a black Tempett eclips'd their fo much hop'd-for Sun-fhine; even that horrid Maffacre of Paris, and the bloo- Maffacre dy Butcherings of the Protestants, which, with of Paris, an unheard of Wickedness, were committed throughout the Cities of France, upon Men of all Qualities. Yet they pretended Justice, even and Piery too; and by Edicts fought a specious

I (72.

Cloak to cover that impious Fraud; as if the 1572. Protestants had enter'd into a wicked Conspira-Ann. 15. cy against the King, the Queen-Mother, the King's Brethren, the King of Navarre, and the Princes of the Blood. For there were Medals coin'd in Memory of the Fact; in the Fore-part whereof, with the King's Picture, was this Motto, Virtus in Rebelles, Vertue against Rebels; on the other side, Pietas excitavit Justitiam, Piety bas excited Justice.

A little before this, the Queen-Mother of France (who always pretended great Kindness to the Protestants, a Woman very inquisitive into Futurity, and prone to believe the Predictions of Aftrologers; who, by the Position of the fix'd Regal Stars at their Nativities, had foretold that every one of her Sons would mount a Throne) Mariage commanded Mora-Fenellon to propole to Queen proposed Elizabeth, a Marriage with her youngest Son to Birz, Francs Duke of Alenzon; that it possible she with Dor Francs Duke of the Title of King; or at Arraon might procure him the Title of King; or at least, by this Office of Kindness, hinder Queen Elizabeth from affifting the Protestants in France. Mota-Fenellon propos'd this Marriage at Kenelworth, two days before the Maffacre at Paris. But Queen Elizabeth modestly excus'd herfelf, upon the account of their Difference of Religion, and Inequality of Age: for he was scarce Seventeen Years old, and fhe was now above Eight and thirty. However, she promis'd to consider of it; nor did Alenzon cease to press the Business home, by the Mediation of Flerie. The fame Month, Thomas Percy Earl of North-

Northum-berland umberland, who upon his Rebellion had fled into Scotland, was, for a Sum of Money agreed upon, deliver'd to the Lord Hunsdon, Governour of beheaded Bervick, by Morton; who had been extremely beholden to the Earl, whilst himself liv'd an Exile in England. (But who has ever prov'd grateful to Men in Advertity?) He was shortly after beheaded at York.

As Norfolk and Northumberland were cut off this Year, by the Stroke of the fatal Ax, in the Flower of their Age; fo a peaceable Death took away two others of the chief of the Nobility, both of the Privy-Council, in their old Age; namely, William Powlet, Lord High-Treasurer of England, Marques of Winchester, Earl of Wilthire, and Baron St. John of Basing: A Man that had pass'd through very great Honours. He died in the Ninety feventh Year of his Age; after he had feen One hundred and three Perfons that were descended from him. In his Office of High-Treasurer was constituted William Cecil Lord Bur-E. of Der- leigh. The other was Edward Earl of Derby, Lord Stanley and Strange of Knocking; with whom the Glory of Hospitality seem'd to fall asleep.

This Year likewise died Sir William Peter Knt. Peter dies one of the Privy-Council, Secretary to Henry VIII. Edward VI. Queen Mary, and Q. Elizabeth; and Chancellor of the Order of the Garter: having perform'd many Embaffies with Approbation: Who being descended of honest Parentage at Exeter, after he had, by his Wildom and Learning, gain'd a plentiful Effare, did, for the Encouragement of Learning, by Q. Mary's Grant, very bountifully enlarge the Revenues of Exeter-College in Oxford; wherein he had been educated. Q. fick of

The Queen also herself, who had hitherto fmall Pox. been very healthy, (never eating without an Appetite, nor drinking Wine without fome Allay) fell fick of the Small-Pox at Hampton-Court. But fhe recover'd before there was any News of her being fick; and falling to the Care of the Government, order'd Portsmouth to be strengthen'd with new Fortifications, her Navy to be increas'd with more Men of War, Musters to be observed in every County at fet times, and the Youth to be train'd up to War; and this, when the enjoy'd a profound Peace. The Money which the had borrow'd of her Subjects the repaid with Thanks. For this her People were no less in love with her, than they were for two feafonable Proclamations, publish'd in the Beginning of the Year. By one of which she commanded, that such of the Nobility should be proceeded against accor- Shere ding to the ancient Laws, as kept a greater Re-tinue than they ought. For their Men, being thus entertain'd, exempted themselves from the publick Offices of the State, maintain'd Factions, and offended many ways against the Laws; pre-fuming upon the Power of the Noblemen to whom they belong id. By the other she restrain'd and Consular revenues fort of Men, call'd Consecutors; scalars. by revoking their Commission, and forcing them to restore what they had taken away. For they, being appointed to discover, whether any Lands belonging to the Crown were conceal'd by private Men; had begun, by a facrilegious kind of Avarice, to feize upon Lands given by our pious Forefathers, to Parish-Churches and Hospitals; as also upon Bells and the leaden Roofs of Churches. But these Grievances, tho' they have been now and then suppress'd, yet they have as often fprung up again.

In Ireland some Commotions arose, thro' the Robelions fevere Government of Sir Edward Fitton, Gover-naught, nour of Connaught: Which Severity when the Sons of Richard Earl of Clan-Richard, whom he had by divers Wives, (being Men who always us'd to do what they pleas'd) could not away with ; they rais'd a Rebellion, and passing the Shannon, committed infolent Robberies upon the Inhabitants all over West-Meath. Their Father, descended from an ancient English Stock, nam'd de Burgo, a Man with a reverend grey Head, and of a moderate Disposition, went to the Lord-Deputy, clear'd himfelf from the Crime of Rebellion. and confulted with the Council of Ireland, by what means he might restrain his dissolute Children But the Queen, for the better Security of the publick Peace, thought fit by degrees to remove Fitton from Connaught, and made him Trea-furer of Ireland. And a while after, the Earl's Sons, being purfued by the Soldiers in Garrison, humbly fubmitted themselves to the Lord-Deputy.

In Lemster also the O-Moors, a feditious fort of And in Men, rais'd an Infurrection; who being prefent- Lemsters ly proclaim'd Rebels, return'd to their Duty, by the Perfuasion of the Earl of Kildare. At this time Sir Thomas Smith, the Queen's Secretary, a different and learned Man, taking pity of the forlorn Condition of Ireland, obtain'd of the Q. that a Colony should be transported into a Pe. A Colony thould be transported into a Pe. A Colony minsula of treland, call'd Ander, on the Eastern ted into Part of Ulster, under his base Son, the only Son Iteland. he had; that so those half-barbarous People might be taught fome Civility. His Hope was, that the Place might be easily defended by Garrifons plac'd in that strait Ifthmus, by which it is join'd to the rest of the Island. He granted to every Footman an Hundred and twenty Acres, and to every Horseman an Hundred and forty;

which are as much as Five hundred English Acres: for which they were to pay yearly a Peny for every Acre. But it fail'd of the wish'd Success: For his Son Thomas, when he had transported the Colony, was intercepted and flain, by the Treachery of Neal Brian Artho. But Malbey an Englishman, Governour of Lecale, a Place hardby, supposing no unjust Death could be inflicted upon a treacherous Villain, foon after kill'd Neal, leaving him to be devour'd by Wolves.

Death of Marquels of Winchester.

Earl of

Cecil made Ld. Treasurer. by dies. Sir Will.

Ann. 15. A new ftar.

I know not whether it be worth while to Time have recorded, viz. That in November, a new Star, or, as some style it, a Phanomenon appear'd in Cassiopea's Chair; which (as my self obferv'd) in Brightness exceeded Jupiter in the Perigee of his Excentrick and Epicycle. It continu'd in the fame place, full Sixteen Months, being carry'd about with the diurnal Motion of the Heaven. Thomas Digfey and John Dey, two fa-mous Mathematicians amongst us, have learnedly prov'd, by the Doctrine of Parallaxes, that it was in the Celeftial, not in the Elementary Region; and were of opinion, that it disappear'd by little and little, by ascending. 'Tis certain, that after Eight Months, all Men perceiv'd it to grow less and less. Theodore Beza wittily apply'd it to the Star, which appear'd at the Birth of CHRIST, and the Slaughter of the Infants under Herod; and admonish'd Charles IX. King of France, who had acknowledg'd himfelf Author of the Maffacre of Paris, to beware, in this Verfe, Bezas Prophecy. Tu vero, Herodes, sanguinolente, time, i.e. And look thou, bloody Herod, to thy felf.

Nor was he out, in his Conjecture: For in the fifth Month after the disappearing of this Star, after long and horrible Pains, he died of exceffive Bleeding.

1573.

The Sixteenth Year of her Reign. The Spanish Affairs in the Netherlands being very much difturb'd, Flushing loft, the Towns of Spanish Fleet defeated

> Traffick between the Ne-

therlan-

English renew'd,

Holland falling off, and the Spanish Fleet (with which the Duke of Medina Cali was commanded, with Vitelli Chapini, to aid the Papists in England) routed by the Zealanders; the Duke d' Alva, tho' unwillingly, began to be more favourably in-clin'd towards the English. Therefore in January, the Commerce, which had been prohibited, between the Netherlanders and the English, in the fame Month of the Year 1568, was now at last permitted for two Years; and the Articles agreed ders and upon at Bristol, upon that account, were ratify'd by the Spaniard in June. Amongst which was this Clause: 'And if this mutual Correspondence and ftrict Amity shall for a time be overshadow'd; yet it shall in no wife be understood to be broken and diffolv'd. And if the Bufiness cannot be adjusted by Commissioners, within ' a Time prescribd; the said Intercourse, at the end of the faid two Years, shall cease. And cease it did, by degrees, before the two Years were expir'd; by reason of the Troubles that increas'd all over the Netherlands; and a new In-tercourfe was begun with the Confederate

But Queen Elizabeth (to her vast Honour) fully repair d the Damages of the English Merchants, out of the Netherlanders Goods, which were ftopt return'd the Overplus to the Duke d'Alva; and wholly agreed with the Merchants of Genoa, about the Money that was intercepted; which had been the first Occasion of the Breach: Whereas the Duke d'Alva did not so much as reflore one Farthing to the Netherlanders, out of the Englishmens Goods. And (which was yet more glorious, and to her Subjects much more Pays her pleafing) the difcharg'd England of the Debts, which her Father and Brother had contracted to a Debts. with Foreiners; which had been very much increas'd by the Interest. Now she restor'd like-wise the Charters of the City of London, (which had been so often renew'd) to the great Joy of the Citizens.

(makes amends.

Pays her

Yet was both the Queen and the Ecclefiaffical State very much diffurb'd by some of their own 1573. Profession; who, pretending to be very zealous, Ann. 16. and breathing nothing but Evangelical Purity, and not only defam'd the Eccletaftical Polity, (as tor diffatin'd with Romiff Dregs) both by publick and turb the private Preaching, and by publishing Books, en-Clumber titl'd, An Admonition to the Parliament, and An A-Peace, pology for the Admonition; but also refus'd to frequent the Divine Service, as it was established; framing and usurping to themselves other Rices in Divine Worship. So that the Queen, disliking them as Men of a turbulent Spirit, greedy of Novelty, and very forward to root up what was well established; to prevent a Schissen, commanded the Rigour of the Law, concerning Uniformity of publick Prayers, to be every where put in Execution: and the Books to be deliver'd into the Hands of the Bishops, or some of her Council, upon pain of Imprisonment; though John Whiteift, afterwards Archbishop of Canter-bury, had folidly confuted them.

There was likewise published, by the English Ministry

Fugitives and Rebels, an infamous Book, enti-libell'd by tled, A Treatife of Treason; wherein they accus'd Papilts.

Bacon Lord-Keeper of the Great Seal, and Cecil Lord Burleigh Lord-Treasurer of England, of Treafon against their Country; thereby to bring those Persons under the Odium of the Prince and People 3 who, by their Prudence and Vigilance, had prevented or broken their villamous Defigns and wicked Hopes. But the Queen was fo far from crediting these Accusations, that by a publick Proclamation she declar'd them to be improbable, false, and meer Slanders, maliciously invented by the profess'd Enemies of the true Religion, and their Country; upon no other End, than by their fecret Artifices to deprive the Kingdom of its most faithful Counsellors. Wherefore she charged all Men to give no Credit to these Libels, but to slight and burn them; unless they had rather undergo the Penalty to be inflicted upon the Encouragers of Sedition. However these Books (such is the natural Curiosity of Mankind) because prohibited, were very much read, till (as it often happens) being contemn'd, they grew out of Request.

The last Year, in November, was born to Charles King of France, a Daughter, to whom the King requested Queen Elizabeth to be God-Mother; both to engage her the more firmly to him, by all Offices of Kindness; and to cut off all Hopes of Affiftance out of England, from the French Protestants. For these Ends, and to borrow Money, he fent into England an eloquent Courtier, one Albert Gondy, (commonly call'd Count de Gondy's Rhetz.) He in a fer Speech endeavour'd to per- Embally. fuade the Queen, that the Maffacro of Paris (which fome term'd a Villainy, but he a Remedy) was executed, not out of Hatred to the Protestant Religion, but to break the Neck of a Con-fpiracy, plotted by the Admiral Coligni and others: notwithstanding which, the King would most religiously observe the Edicts of Religion. He pray'd the Queen, not to hearken to fuch Men as were clamorous and timorous without Cause; but religiously to observe the League lately enter'd into, and advise them to be obedient to their King, whom they should find very merciful.

She promis'd to be mindful of the League, Queen's and that the King should find nothing wanting Answer. on her Part, which might become a most loving Confederate. But for the Money to be borrow'd, she desir'd to be excus'd. Nor did he mention the Money, but only in Policy; namely, that she should not supply the Protestants, if they desir'd it, with the Money, which she de-

Earl of

Worcester

fent into France.

French

in Engl

French

Ambatla-

dor complains of faccourt fent into France. Queen

excufes herfelf.

abule one another.

my'd the King. And truly, she took this Occa-1573: fion of denying them Money; remembring how ann.16 basely they had serv'd her, about Money-Matters, in the first Civil-War. In this Embassy, Rhetz prevail'd so far, that the Protestants, from that time, met with less Favour and Affistance from her Hands, for a while.

A little after, William Somerfet Earl of Worce-

fer, was fent into France, with a Font of pure Gold; to be present as Surety, in the Queen's Name, with the Deputies of the Empress Mary, and of the Duke of Savoy; at the Baptizing of the French King's Daughter. Which when the Protestant Pirates, both French and Netherlanders, understood, (suspecting him to be a Papist) it miss'd but little, but they had intercepted him in his Paffage over. However, they lift'd one or two Ships of his Company, killing fome of the Passengers.

Sea clear'd

At this the Queen was fo displeas'd, that she of Pirates. fent out William Holftock, Comptroller of her Navy, with fome few Men of War; who fcour'd the Seas, either taking or feattering the Pirates, and retaking fome Merchant-Ships out of their Hands. But whereas many of 'em had promis'd their Service to Montgomery, (now in England) for the Relief of Rochelle, he happen'd to fet fail out of England too late; and with fo fmall a Fleet, that he did them no good at all.

Hereupon, some French Protestant Refugees in England, being very much incens'd, out of Hatred to the contrary Religion, offer'd Injuries to fome other Frenchmen that were come over; drawing their Swords upon them, and among the rest, upon the Servants of Flerie, who was come privately into England, from Alenzon, about the Marriage: Yea the Vidam of Chartres, ignorant of Flerie's Negotiation, accus'd him, to the Queen's Council, as if he came with a Defign to take away Montgomery's Life.

On the other hand, the French Ambassador complain'd to the Q. that Montgomery had, with the Affistance of the English, contrary to the League, undettaken a Voyage to Rochelle; and that the Eng-lish Merchants had supply'd the besieg'd Rochellers with Vietuals. She answer'd, 'That she did and would ' religiously observe her Faith given in the league. 'That those Auxiliaries were Pirates, and being outlaw'd, had put to Sea without her Commisfion, and carry'd counterfeit Flags; and for her part, fhe heartily wish'd they might be punish d. nish'd. Moreover, that the English Merchants, having been basely us'd at Bourdeaux, had traded to Rochelle, without her Leave: That they are Men which always mind their own private Gain: And withal she desir'd, that some more commodious Port in France might be af-' fign'd them, to trade in, instead of Rochelle.

The French King was very well pleas'd with these Answers; That the Queen of England would stand to her Promise; and that now she was fo far drawn off from minding the French Protestants, that they could look for no Assiftance from her. Hereupon, the French King and his Mother were more and more in Love with her, when they perceiv'd her fincere in obferving the Amity betwixt them; and she re-ceiv'd leveral Love-Letters sent by Alenzon, from the Camp before Rochelle; and all this Year the French King and his Mother earnestly folicited the Marriage, by Mota-Fenellon their Ordinary Ambassador, and by Chasteau-Neuf, sent extraordinarily for that purpole. Certainly Queen Elizabeth now began feriously to think of Marrying, upon a double Fear she was in, for lack of Children: On one hand, she fear'd Contempt at home; and on the other, she fear'd Attempts from abroad: Against both she was persuaded, and would often fay as much to others, That an

Husband and Children were the fureft Bulwarks. On the contrary, it was argued by fome telfish 1573-Courtiers, 'That Religion and Equity were 2011.10 the strongest Bulwarks of a State, against all Considers Attempts: Nor had the any Reafon to fear the argue a-Contempt of her own People; whose Hopes gunds: ' Hearts were devoted to her, as they had been to a long Series of her Ancestors; and whose

' Eyes were every day refresh'd with the Lustre of her Vertues. With other fuch like Lxpreifions, familiar amongst Courtiers. And when the often faid, That most Men neglect the Settingsim: The favoring Flatterers would as often tell her, Who will neglect the wholfone Reams of the clear Sun-fine, to behold the faint and confus d Glimmering of the leffer Stars rifing together? I or to they called the Compretions they call'd the Competitors.

In the mean time, the Queen-Mother used frequent Intreaties, that her Son the Duke of Alenzon might have leave to come into England, to fee her; who, being weary'd with fo many Leave gi-Letters, at last affented to it; provided he would ven to denot think it a Prejudice or a Difference to him, come into if he return'd without Success. But as foon as England, Queen Elizabeth had Intelligence, that his Brother Henry, the Duke of Anjou, was elected King ther Hemy, the Duke of Anjon, was elected King of Peland, and that the French King was fick; the advis'd Alenzon, by Sir Edward Horfey, Governor of the Ille of Wight, not to be too hafty in rately adventing over to England: And fine gave their violance Reasons for it: 'That upon the account of the and why. Maffacre fo barbaroufly committed upon the Protestants throughout France, for their Religion, even in the midst of Nuptial Solemnities, when he himself first sued for a Marriage with ' her; the Protestants in England suspected, that this Marriage would prove as fatal. And they were the more inclined to think fo, because A-' lenzon himself, immediately after, went to the 'Siege of Rochelle, breathing nothing but Hatred against the Protestants; and had wrote, in several Letters thence, that he would visit the Q. after he should see Rochelle won.
Rage towards the Protestant Religion seem'd after he should see Rochelle won: So that his very many in England suspected, that he intended to come into England, to profecute his Courthip, with a Sword dy'd in the Blood of those, who profes'd the same Religion as the English did. Wherefore the friendly and lovingly advis'd him, to be the Means of a Pence in France; and hift to give fome notable Tefitmony of his Affection to the Protestants; that so England might receive him, as a more welcome Gueft and Suitor. A Peace being afterwards concluded in France, Peace in and the Protestants allow'd the Exercise of their Frances Religion, in certain Places; the French King and the Queen-Mother were again very folici-tous for confummating of the Marriage; For they were defirous of removing Alenzon out of France, being a Person of a crabbed Temper, and prone to raife Commotions) and withal they intreated Queen Elizabeth, that if the D of ziny a flould take his Journey by Sea into Peland, he might have her Royal Word, for his fate Parliage through the British Seas. She was not only very willing to grant this, but also offer'd her Fleet for his Convoy. In the mean time, Alenzon fell fick of the Measles, which the Queen-Mothet fignify'd to Queen Elizabeth, by Gandy Count de Gandy re-Rebers, and excused his not coming into England, turns into because of his Sickness. Good found Queen E-wiles his lizabeth at Canterbury, where the entertain him is nob? honourably. At this time Matthew Parker, Arch-enterbishop of Canterbury, folemnized the Queen's tain's Birth-day, viz. the 7th of September, in 2 large

She is fo-

licited to marry

with A-lenzon.

Q. gives a willing ear to it, out of a double Fear.

Palace of the Archbishops, which himself had re- her consent. And this for the securing the pub-1573. pair'd. To this Solemnity he invited the Queen, of Nobility, as the Emperor Charles V. and King Harry VIII. had in the fame Palace been feafted with in the Year 1519.

Sweetland.

Morton In Sectland, James Douglass Earl of Morton was, made Reby the special Instance of Queen Elizabeth, conflituted Regent of Scotland, in the room of the Earl of Marre; who, being citablished in his Authority in a Convention of the States, enacted wholfom Laws in the King's Name for the maintaining of Religion against Papists and Hereticks. But the charge of the King's Person (because the Earl of Marre, to whom by peculiar Right the charge of the Kings of Scotland in their Minority belongs, was under Age) he fettled upon Alexander Areskine upon these Conditions: That the Parifts and factious Persons should be deny'd all access to him: That an Earl should · be admitted with two Servants, a Baron with only one, all others alone, and every one of em without Weapons. In the mean time the French King, having fent

fupplant

French K. thither Monfieur Firiae, used his utmost E: dea-ender vours to supplant the Regent before his Authority was fettled, feeting up against him Athol, Huntby, and others, to whom he promised great Re-Leg, and others, to whom he promise great Re-peter Ellewheth, endeavouring all fle to Impiot could to the contrary, informed the Scots by Sir him. How, K." grow, That the bloody Maffacre of Pa-ru was executed by the joint Contrivance of the Pope, the Trench King, and the Spaniard, for the atter extingation of the Protestants. Therefore the advis'd them not to be corrupted with the French Pentions, nor diffunited by Factions, fo as to open a way for those forein Forces which Strozzi was suspected to be bringing over; but manfully and unanimously to endeavour the Detence of their Religion, which was the only Band of Concord betwixt the Scots and English; and to take timely Care of the King; or fend him into England, that he might not be convey'd into France. However, fome of the Nobility, fworn to the Captive Queen's Party, absolutely declar'd against the King's or the Regent's Authority; till Queen Elizabeth, interpoling her compose Authority, by Killegrew's means, prevais'd upon Scotland, James Hamilton the Duke of Chastel-Herault, and George Gourdon Earl of Huntley, (who were chief of them) to accept of these reasonable Conditions, viz. 'That they should allow the Religion eftablish'd in Scotland, submit themselves to the

Upon these Conditions.

And to

King, and to the Government of Morton and King, and to the Government of that they his Succeffors in the Regency. That they have here Authority of all others. That ' should abjure the Authority of all others. those who should attempt any thing against Religion, the King, or the Regent, should be declar'd Traytors by an Act of Parliament. That the Sentences pronounced against the Hamiltons and the Gourdons should be repeal'd, excepting fuch as concerned the Murder of the late Regents Marry and Lenon, which should be lest to Queen Elizabeth's Decision. (But this she refer'd to the King, and thought it fit to be defer'd till the King were of Age to take upon him the Government according to the Laws of Eng-Lind). And, 'That all Offences committed fine 'the 15th of June 1567, (except the Murder of Lenex) should be remitted to those who should fue for a Pardon. However, for the Security of the King and the Regent, left the one should he in danger of being murder'd, and the other convey d into France, it was thought fit that the convey d into Erance, it was inought in that the Q. of England, by a publick Infrument, should prif her Royal Word, That neither the Hamiltons, not any other, should be call'd in Question, or lined for the Murder of the Regents without lick Peace in fo turbulent a Time, was confirm'd 1573. in a Convention of the States. Ann. 16.

But William Kircald of Grange, (whom Min ray Grange & the Regent had made Governor of Edinborough - others re-Coffe, taking an Oath of him in the Kings jeet the Name) the Lord Humes, Lidington, the Bifhop of Conditional August 1988, who thought the Queen of tions. Scots was too feverely dealt withal; would by no means accept of these Conditions: But being obfinante, and contemning the Authority of the delendeth King and the Regent, held and fortified that Ca-rough ftle in the Queen's Name. Lidington was their Castle. Counfellor; and they trusted much to the unap-proachable strength of the Place, to the warlike Ammunition that was in it, (for there all the King's Magazine was kept) and to the Succours promised by the Duke d'Alva and the French K. which laft had fent them fome Mony, (the greatest part whereof was intercepted at Blackness) and more he would have fent, had he not been prevented by the tedious Siege of Rochelle. When neither the Regent by offering Rewards, nor Queen Elizabeth by Perfuasion or Threatning could induce these Men to accept of any Conditions of Peace, but they still maintain'd the Cafile against the Regent, every day annoying Edinborough the Seat of Justice with their Shot and Incursions, and invited over Auxiliary Forces from France: Then Queen Elizabeth, who could not endure the French should have the least Foot- Q. Eliz ing in Scotland, was at last prevailed upon by the promiseth the Regent, and promifed him Men, Ordnance aid for and Ammunition for the reducing of the Castle, upon these Conditions. 'The Regent shall not Compound with the Upon Befieged without the English Generals knowledge what Confine on the other fide without acquaining dition. the Regent and the King's Council. If the English take the Castle, it shall be delivered up

Englip take the Carne, it man be derivered up to the King within ten Days, with all the Ammunition, Utenfils, Rolls and Records of the King and Realm; but the reft shall be a Prey to the Affailants. The English shall fortily no to the Affailants. The English shall fortify no Place in Scotland, but with the consent of the Regent and the Nobility. The Regent shall be afficient and the Nobility. fupply the English with all the Affistance and Provision he can. The Besieged, after the taking the Castle, shall be retained to be proceed-'ed against according to Law, the Q. of Eng-'land being first acquainted therewith. If any of the English should be kill'd, their Wives and Children should be paid Stipends out of the Rebels Estates. If any wounded, they likewise shall receive Stipends till they be cured. If any of the English Ordnance receive Damage, and the Powder and Ball that shall be spent, shall ' be made good out of the King's Store in the 'Caftle, or out of the Rebels Estates. And ten

' Hostages shall be fent into England to secure the fending back the Forces and Ordnance, unless they are cut off by the common Misfortunes of · War.

Upon these Conditions Sir William Drury, Mar-Edinbitial of the Garison of Berwick, entred Scotland rough C4. with feveral great Pieces of Cannon and Fifteen flie befrehundred Men; among whom were feveral Gen- ged by the tlemen as Volunteers, viz. George Cary, Henry Force.

Cary, Thomas Cecil, Henry Leigh, William Knoller,

Sutton, Cotton, Kelvury, William Killigraw, and others. Having join d the Seaseh Auxiliaries, he beleaguer'd the Caftle, after he had to no pur-pofe fummon'd them twice in the King's Name to furrender. At first they play'd upon the Ca-stlle with their Mortaus for four Days together from five Batteries, and especially upon David's Tower, which after some Days was batter'd to the Ground. Afterwards giving the Affault, Spurr-Fort was taken, while those who at the ry Goodyer and Richard Louder had in Suspi-1573. Same time affaulted the Cattle on the other fide, Ann. 16. were beat back not without some loss of Men.

The next Day the Besieged hung out a Flag, The next Day the Belieged nung out a many. The Cattle and defired to parley with Drusy. Kircald himself and Robert Melvin were let down by a Rope from the Castle, and Henry Leigh with Fleck a Scot were likewise taken into the Cattle as Hostages. They demanded, That they might freely enjoy their Lives and Estates: That Humes and Lidington might upon the account of the private Animostiies of some Persons withdraw into England: That Kircald might stay in Scotland, or at least have leave to depart. When they would not grant these Things, but only allow the Soldiery to depart unarm'd with their Baggage; the third Day after, the Garifon being very thin, at variance among themselves, wounded, and spent with Watchings and Toil, without the least hopes of Succour, and pinch'd It is furfor want of Water, (for one of their Wells was ftopt up with the Ruin of a Stone-Wall, and the render'd. other lay open to the Enemies great Shot) they yielded themselves and all they had the thirty third Day of the Siege, to Queen Elizabeth and Drury. Upon the receipt of Letters from England, Drury re-deliver'd the Castle with all the Priloners to the Regent, for the King's use. Of these Prisoners, Kircald, his Brother James, Mosman and and others Coky, two Goldsmiths who had adulterated the Money in the Cattle, were hang'd; tho' for the fparing Kircald's Life, an hundred of the Family of the Kircalds offer'd to be for ever Vaffals to the Regent, to pay a yearly Pension of 3000 Marks, and 2000 Pound of Scottish Money in hand; and Experience among the Scots, and of an excellent

Wit, had it been less wavering. Upon which account George Buchanan, who envy'd him, in a

From this time Scotland took breath after

Kircald hang'd.

to give good Security that he should for the future continue a faithful Subject to the King. Humes and others who were difpers'd into feveral Castles, were spared at the intercession of Queen Elizabeth, not without commendations of her Liding. Clemency. Lidington was fent to Leith, where too steath he died of a violent Diffemper, yet not without fuspicion of being poilon'd: A Man of very great

Writing of his call'd the Chameleon, reprefents him in his Life-time as one more mutable than the Chameleon, and sharply taxes him as a partycolour'd Enemy to the King's Grandmother, his Mother, Murray, the King himfelf, and his Coun-

Peace in Scotland.

out of England.

ty. From this time Sections took breath after the Civil War; and as well the Heads of the Parties, as the Soldiers, going over to Swadeland, France and the Netherlands, gain'd great Commendations for their Martial Valour. And that England might be the better fecur'd Bp. of Refs from all domettick Attempts upon the Queen of Scots account, John Lefley Bishop of Ross (who had ferv'd his Queen with an approved Loyalty, tho' to the Ruin of some, and the Danger of more) was dismissed from the Tower, and commanded to depart England. He accordingly withdrew into France, being deadly afraid of the E. of Southampton, (whose Life he brought into danger by the Discovery he made) and of Henry Howard the D. of Norfolk's Brother, for the appealing of whose Displeasure, he wrote an Apology for himself. He was scarce gone, but H. Cokin, his private Letter-Carrier, was apprehended, and by his confession Morgan discover'd; who, being a forward Man to promote any fecret Defigns for the Oueen of Scots Interest, and very eager to put them in execution, prefently fled. Atflo, the principal Phylician among the Papifts; and Good, both of 'em Doctors of Physick; and Francis Berty, were kept in Prison for some Months, for holding a private Correspondence with her by Letters; and upon the fame account were Hencion.

In the mean time the Bishop of Ross was not Ann. 16. wanting in the Duty of a most faithful Subject Being abto the Queen of Scots, but folicited the Emperor, fen he the Pope, the French King, and the Catholick attemps Princes of Germany, who held him in hopes, but new Comperform'd just nothing. But herein he complai- motions. ned that it happen'd very unluckily, that the Duke d'Alva (on whom he had cheifly relied) was D. d'Alva just upon leaving the Low-Countries, having ob-called tained a fair difmitlion from his Government, home out under pretence of recovering his Health. But of the New really the Spaniard called him Home, as he was therlands. ciuelly pursuing an entire Conquest, having already reduced almost all Holland under his Power. He was perfuaded by Cardinal Granvell and Roderigo Gomez de Sylva, that the Duke's Power grew too great, that his Name founded higher than his Prince's, and that through the Rigor of his violent Government the Netherlanders were driven to a Revolt; nay more, to Desperation. However, some Bloody-minded Persons were of opinion, that no fitter Men could be found in all Spain to make an end of that War, and reduce the Netherlands into the form of a Province. Those hot-headed Men seem'd to pity the King, if he ever hoped by Mildness to bring under his Obedience the Prince of Orange and the Confederates, who were obstinately bent and resolved to retain their Liberty, abounded in Riches, and were so secured by the situation of the Places they maintained. Don Lewis Zuniga de Requesens, Requesens great Commendator of Castile, was appointed the farceeds Duke d'Alva's Successor, a Man of a milder Dif-him. polition; who, desiring to obtain Queen Elizabeth's Favour by all good Offices, and minding his own Concerns, would not meddle either with the Scottish or the English Affairs.

I know not whether I should here mention Burebete the frantick Opinion of Peter Burebett, who was put to perfuaded that it was lawful to kill such as op-death. posed the Truth of the Gospel. So far had the Error of this Opinion transported the Man, that he drew his Dagger upon Hawkins, that famous Sea-Captain, and wounded him, taking him for Hatton, who was then in great Favour with the Queen, and of her Privy-Council, whom he had heard to be an Enemy to the Innovators. The Q-was so extraordinarily incensed at this Fact, that fhe commanded that the Man should be presently punished by Martial or Camp-Law, till she was Martial informed, by fome prudent Persons, that Mar- Law. tial-Law was not to be used but in Camps, or in turbulent Times; but that at Home, and in Times of Peace, the Proceeding must be carry'd on in the way of a judiciary Process. Being therefore brought to his Tryal, he maintained, That what he had done was confonant to the holy Scriptures, and therefore lawful. Whereupon being just about to be condemn'd for Herefie, he promis'd to renounce his Opinion; yet he flill shifted it off, and would not. Upon this he was thrown into the Tower of London, where he flew one of the Keepers, knocking him on the Head with a Billet which he fnatcht up out of the Chimney: He was condem'd of Murder, had his right Hand cut off, and naild to the Gallows, and then he was hang'd discovering a

In the beginning of this Year died William The death Lord Howard of Effingbam, Lord-Privy-Scal, Son of Miliam of Thomas Howard, that Martial Duke of Norfolk, LordHowby his second Wife dense Tilney. He was a Man and of of most approved Fidelity and unshaken Cou-Espagham rage; who being first of all Governor of Calais, was by Queen Mary prefer'd to be a Baron, and made Lord-High-Admiral of England. He was Vol. II. Mmm afrer-filent reluctancy.

And of Treland.

-[caprs

out of Prison.

An Expr-

afterwards her Lord-Chamberlain, as he was al-1573 fo Queen Elizabeth's; till, being broken with Ann. 16. Age, he religned it a few Months before his death to Suffex, being made Lord-Privy-Seal, which (as I formerly hinted) is the fourth degree of Honour in England. His Son Charles succeeded him in the Barony, and a while after was made Lord-Chamberlain to the Qeeon, as also Lord-

High-Admiral of England. The death

Not long after died also Reginall Grey Earl of Kent, whom the Queen, a Year before, had of Regiraifed from a private Man to the Dignity of Earl nald Earl of Kent, after that this Title had lain dormant for fifty Years, from the death of Richard Grey of Kent. Earl of Kent, who had fquander'd away his Patrimony, and was elder Brother to this Man's Grandfather. His Brother Henry fucceeded him in his Honour. Neither mutt we passover in filence Juhn Caius,

Dr. Carus, a famous Phytician, born at Norwich, and bred up at the Univertities of Cambridge and Padua, who died about this time, having spent his whole Life in Phytick, translated a great deal of Galen and Cellus into Latin, and Commented upon more, and at last bestow'd all his Wealth to the advancing of Learning, joining a new College to old Gonvil Gonvil ing of Learning, Johnson and giving a perpetual godiere. Allowance for 22 Students. Whereupon they Allowance for 23 Students. College. grew into one Name of Gonvil and Caius College, where he lies intomb'd with this Infcription, FUI CAIUS.

In Ireland the O-Conors and O-Moors, two rest-less Families, having raised several Troops of Commo-Rovers, made a cruel Affault upon Athlon upon the River Shannon, and then fack'd and burn'd it. But Sir John Perett, President of Munster, hinder'd suppresent them from joining their Forces with the Rebels fupprefet them from joining their Forces with the Rebels theRebels of Munifer; for with continual Incurtions he for hards'd and profecuted James-Fitz-Morn, Fitz-Edmunds Steward of Imokelly, and the reft of the Rebels, killing many, and forcing the Caffle of Mign with a French Garifon in it, that he made them glad to ask Pardon with all Submiffion in the Church of Kilmduck that is S Multichies C-II. the Church of Kilmalock, that is S. Malachie's Cell.

The E. of And at the same time the Earl of Desmond with his Brother John, who were the Authors of that Rebellion, were by Sir Edmund Fitton brought tack out of England into Ireland, and thrown into De mond Prilon at Dublin, whence notwithstanding they thorstv after made their escape.

In Ugar, Brian Mac-Phelim, who had feiz'd a great part of the Country of Clandeboy, burnt Town of Knick-fergus, that is Fergus's Rock; and others in those Parts began to raife Tumults. Against these Walter D'Evereux (whom Queen Elizaberh had larely created Earl of Effex) craved Effex into leave to undertake an Expedicion, following therein the Counfel of those who desir'd above all things to have him farther off, and to plunge him into Dangers, under pretence of procuring him Honour. Which he knew well enough: him Honour. Which he knew well enough: But being a ftirring Man, and one not unac-quainted with Warlike Discipline from his very Youth, he held on his Refolution, and made an Agreement with the Queen, that upon certain Conditions the one half of Clandeboy, if he drove out the Rebels, should be granted to him and his Soldiers: For the Defence whereof he should maintain at his own charge 200 Horsemen and 400 Foot. And to furnish himfelf for the War, he borrow'd of the Queen Ten thousand Pounds of English Money, mortgaging his Lands in Essex for the fame.

Sir William Fitz-Williams, Lord-Deputy of Ireland, fearing left the Name of fo great an Earl should eclipse his Glory in Ireland, advised the Queen, that he might not be fent, feigning I know not what g neral Revolt of all Ulfer. But Effex for all that was fent; and, that the Lord-Deputy's Honour and Authority might fland un- 1573. eclips'd, he was commanded to receive his Pa- Ann. 16. rent from him, whereby to be made Governor of Ulster; which he was long in procuring, and that not without very importunate Solicitation.

After he had been toffed with a fad Tempest at Sea, he arriv'd rowards the end of August at Knock-fergus, with the Lord Darcy, and the Lord Rich, Henry Knolls, and four of his Brethren; Michael and John Cary, Henry, William and John Norris, and a Band of Soldiers which had been haftily collected. Before his arrival, Brian-Mac-Phelim had driven away his Cattel, which were all his Wealth, into the inner Parts of the Country, (for befides Sheep and Hogs, he had Thirty thousand Cows). After his arrival, he congratulated him, and most frankly profer'd him all Kindness; as also did Mac-Gilespie, Mac-Guilly, Hugb Baron of Danganon, and other great Lords round about. The Earl promifed to pardon Muc-Phelim's Rebellion, and endeavour'd to ob-lige him to him by his Civility. But he shortly after revolted, and withdrew himself with all his Friends to Turlough-Leinigh; upon which follow'd daily Skirmishes with the English. The L. Rich, being call'd away by his private Occafions, re-He is for-turn'd after a Month into England; Henry Knolls faken of alfo, by reafon of Sickness, and many others, his comalledging some one Cause and some another, panions, withdrew themselves daily by degrees out of that rude and barbarous Country. Esex made grievous Complaints to the Queen and his Friends by Let-That his noble Comrades began to flag and ' languish: That the Expedition was undertaken He is besomewhat too late; Victuals too long before set with they came to 'em, and those tainted : That the Difficulties' common Soldiers were inconfiderately chosen at first, and many of them had miscarry'd. That Mac-Phelim was revolted, and that by the Cunning or rather Treachery of Pierce an English Captain, who had formerly born some Sway amongst the Irish in those Parts. For his part, he was unable to bear the Charges of the War: Neither had the Lord-Deputy as yet fent him his Patent; fo as he could exercise no ' Authority over the bordering People. He therefore prayeth the Queen to carry on the Service in her own Name, and by her own Command, tho' he bare the one half of the ' Charge. Afterwards he befought Suffex, Leicefter and Burghley, to perfuade the Queen to allow Pay for 100 Horse and 600 Foot, and to grant him Mayo, a Peninsula, or almost Island. And when the Queen had now determin'd to call home Effex out of Ulfter, Tumults arising in Munfter, Leicester and others overcame her fo by their Perfusiions, that he was not fent for. And the Lord-Deputy commanded, that whilst he himself march'd againft Defmond, who was efcap'd out of Priton contrary to his Word given, Effex should march to the Borders of Ulfer. Which tho' it fomewhat troubled him, who was now wholly buffed in making Fortifications in Clandeboy, yet he obey'd; and, marching on in Mauffer with Kildare, he perfuaded Defmond to lay down Arms, who not long after fubmitted himfelf.

Now Effex, having receiv'd his Patent, un-dertook a long March against Turlough Leinigh, O-Donell joining with him. But from Con O-Donell, Turlough's Son-in-law, who would not Serve under him, he took the Caftle of Liffer, and gave it to Hugh O-Donell; Turlough in the mean while spinning out the time with Parlies, till that Effex was of necessity to re-turn: Who as he had tired out his Body with Labours and Cares all the Summer; fo now, Winter approaching, he confider'd ferioufly with himfelf.

fuadeth

His Project for ecuring Ulfter.

He is in

Mac-Phelsm.

Phelim

foner.

That if three Towns were built at the Queen's Charge, and ten Forts by the common Purfe of the Soldiers, in fuch convenient Places as he had defign'd, above Seven thousand Pounds of English Money might be gather'd yearly from those Peo-ple; and after two Years, the Queen should not need to maintain any more Garifons there.

Whilst he was wholly taken up about these Projects, and other commendable Endeavours for providing of Victuals, he escap'd narrowly from being stain by the Fish. For Brian Mac-Phelim, who had of late treacherously flain one Moore an danger by English Captain, had conspir'd with Turlough and the Hebridian Scots to cut him off. Which as foon as he understood, he thought it best not to expect their coming, but to fet upon them. And fet upon them he did fo refolutely, that, with taken Prithe flaughter of 200 Irish, he took Brian and Rory Oge his half Brother, and Brian's Wife. With these Actions was the Year well-nigh spent in Ireland, to no Man's Advantage, but to Effex's great Damage; and also to the great Loss of Chaterton, an English Gentleman, who upon cer-Coater tain Conditions with the Queen, had unfortu-terpize antely undertaken to carry over English Colo-verthrown nies into Fues and the Territory of O-Hanlan adjoining.

The Seventeenth Year of her Reign.

1574. Alenzon maketh means to eth it

He is fus-

home.

In the first Month of the Year, Francis Duke of Alenzon did by Letters full fraught with Love, and by Maveister the French Embassador, endeafee the Q vour more earnestly than before, that he might come into England upon fafe Conduct, and falute Queen Elizabeth in Person, for whom being absent he had so singular a Love and Respect. She, being overcome with his Importunities, yielded to it, (tho' fhe under-hand advised him She grantotherwife) and gave him her Royal Word, that he might come when he pleas'd before the 20th of May; liberally promiting, that he should fail of no Kindness which might be expected at the hands of a most loving Princess Certainly she now loved and respected him more heartily, aster she understood for certain that he bare a mortal Hatred to the Guises, her sworn Enemies. But before this Answer was brought to Alenzon, Valentine Dale, Doctor of Law, Embassador in France, (in the room of Walsingham, now made Secretary) gave Queen Elizabeth notice, that Alenzon and Navarre were suspected to endeavour for thed at a change of Affairs. For the Queen-Mother, being a Woman of an high Spirit, began to fuf-pect, that he practifed feeretly with Navarre, Montmorency, and others, to remove her from the Government, if any thing should befal the King other than well. And this her Suspicion the Guifes increased, suggesting to her, that her Son Alenzon had not long before held intimate Familiarity with Coligny, the Ringleader of the Proteflants in France. Alenzon being question'd about it, amongst other things voluntarily confess'd, that he had for a good while been a Suitor for Marriage with Queen Elizabeth of England; wherein, believing that Colign's Friendship would be of good use unto him, he had now and then had difcourse with him thereof, and of the Low-Country War. Notwithstanding, both he and Navarre had Keepers fet over them. But

Thomas Wilks, Dale's Secretary, came privately to them both, and comforted them in the Queen of England's name; promiting, that the would omit himself, by what means Ulfter, which had been no Opportunity to help and relieve them. Where-1573- fo long neglected, that it was grown wild and of that sub-il old Woman from got knowledge, and 16 favage, might be reduc'd to Civility. And upon and 16 prosecuted Wilks, that he was that to was the true tro. When the was the true troe mature Deliberation of the Matter, he showed, withdraw himself into England; where sho also of that fubril old Woman from got knowledge, and to profecuted Wilks, that he was thin to Ann.1 withdraw himself into England; where the alfo follow'd him with Letters of Complaint, informuch that he was fent back into France, and there humbly crav'd Pardon. Navarre, not unmindted of the Confolation he gave him, when he came to be King of France, and faw him in Normandy twenty five Years after, Knighted him wards Queen Elizabeth fent Thomas Randolph into France to the Queen-Mother, if it were possible, to restore Alenzan and Navarre to their former Grace and Lavour. But before he arriv'd in France, King Charles was dead; for whom a for The death lemn funeral Obsequy was kept with great of Charles Magnificence in St. Paul's Church in Lon-

> As foon as Henry III. of that Name, King of L North's France, was return'd out of Poland into France to Em! to take the Crown, Roger Lord North was fent over 1011.11. into France, to Congratulate the new King both about the Kingdom and his Return; to Condole the rending of France in pieces by Civil Wars to Persuade him to Peace and the observation of the late Edicts; to reftore Alexan into Favour; to pacify the Displeasure conceived against Montmorency and the Marshal of Coffe; and to procure Favour towards the Lady (b whota of Bourbon, the Duke of Manpersher's Daughter, who had withdrawn herfelf into Germany for Religion. But he effected nothing; For now France, as it were, thruft forward by Deltiny, ran desperately head-long into a cruel War. Nevertheless the King The King and his Mother fent La Guarde into England, with & Queen Letters from them both, to profecute the business Mother of Marriage for her Son Alenzon. For he now commend stomaching it very much that he was so unwor- to the O thily led about by his Mother like a Prisoner, of Engl, and holding fecret Correspondence with the Politicians in France, they purpos'd to rid him away into England in hopes of Marriage, thereby to divert the young Man's Mind from War and Faction at home.

Nevertheless in the mean time they left no They fa-

Stone unturn'd in Scotland, by feeret Contrivour the vances, to procure that the young King might be fent over into Femce, and Marton the Regent laid aftle; fending privity to this purpole certain the femce of t Scots of the French Guard into Scotland. And this the Queen of So is much defir'd, being perfuaded that if her Son was once in France out of Danger, she and the Catholicks in England should he more mildiy dealt withal. For hereby the thought it would come to pals, that the English Faction in Sectland, which was hitherto supported by the Authority of the King's Name, would prefently fall to the Ground; and the English, as he grew more and more ripe in Years, would stand in fear of him, both from Erance and from Scotland. And no less did the French wish the fame, fearing lest the Regent of Scaland, being most devoted to the English, would dislove that ancient League betwing the French and the Sects. Notwithstanding, when the Regent earnestly in-QE treated that there might be a League of mutual neglectech Defence concluded betwixt England and Scotland theRegent against Foreiners, he was not heard nor minded; perhaps because at the same time he sued that a yearly Pention might be affigued him and fome other Scots. But those were hearkned unto, who upon a light Sufpicion charg'd the Queen of She belies Scots, the Countels of Shrewsbury, and the Earl of weth Tales Shrewsbury also himself, as if they had made up bearers as a Match between Charles the King of Scots Unkle gainst the (to whom the King had lately in a Parliament Qu'S. ees confirm'd the Eurldom of Louis) and Elizabeth Candifb, the Counters of Shrowsbury's Daughter

Mmma

Vol. II

Committed to Cuttody.

of the Council of the North.

of this

Conneil

by a former Husband, without acquainting the 1574. Queen. For which Cause the Mothers of them Ann. 17. both, and fome others, were detain'd a while in Cultody; and all the Blame was laid upon the Queen of Scots.

Farl of Hunting-

Whilft now there arose fundry Suspicions, whether this Marriage should tend, Henry Earl of Huntington was made President of the Coun-Prefident cil in the North, and furnish'd with new and fecret Instructions in this matter. This Presidentship, which is now a Place of great Honor, did, from a mean Beginning, grow up in a short time to this high Estimation. For, (to relate to Posterity what I have heard, by a free and brief Digreffion) when in the Reign of Henry VIII. the Rebellion of the Northern People about the fuppreffing of Abbies was quell'd, and the Duke of Norfolk staying in those Parts, many Complaints were brought to him of feveral Wrongs, done in the Rebellion ; some of 'em he made up himfelf, and others he committed to Men of Diference, under his Seal, to be by them com-rounded and accorded. Which when the King understood, he fent him a peculiar Seal to use in these cases: And the same Seal he committed, after the Duke was recall'd, to Tunftall Bi-thop of Durham, and appointed him Affiltants, with Authority to bear and determine the Complaints of the Poor. He was then first named President, and the Authority of his Successors has ever fince increas'd very much. Exces of In these days, a wondrous Excess in Apparel had spread itself all over England; and the Habit restraints, of our restrictions. of our own Country, thro a peculiar Vice incident to our Nation, of imitating forein Fashions, grew into such Contempt, that Men, by their new-fashion'd Garments, and too gaudy Apparel, discover'd a certain Deformity and Arrogance of Mind; whilst they jetted up and down in their Silks glittering with Gold and Silver, either embroider'd or laced. The Queen observing that to maintain this Excess, a great quantity of Money was carry'd yearly out of the Land, to buy Silks, and other outlandish Wares, to the impoverishing of the Common-wealth; and that many of the Nobility, who might be of great Service to the Commonwealth, and others that they might feem of noble Extraction, did, to their own undoing, not only wafte their Estates, but also run so far in Debt, that of necessity they came within Danger of the Law thereby; and attempted to raise Troubles and Commotions, when they had wasted their own Patrimonies; although fhe might have proceeded against them, by the Laws of Henry VIII. and Queen Mary, and thereby have fined them in great Sums of Money; yet fhe chofe rather to deal with them by way of Command. She commanded therefore, by Proclamation, that every Man should, within fourteen days, conform himfelf, for Apparel, to a certain prefcribed Fathion, left they otherwise incurr'd the Severity of the Laws: and the began the Conformity herfelf in her own Court. Bur, thro' the Un-towardliness of the Times, both this Proclama-tion, and the Laws also gave way, by little and little, to this Excels of Pride, which grew daily more and more unreasonable: And with it crept in riotous Banquetting, and prodigal Bravery in Building. For now there began more Noblebeautify'd mens and private Mens Honfes to be built here Buildings, and there thro' England; and those neat, large and fumptuous Edifices; than in any other Age before: and verily to the great Ornament of the Kingdom, but to as great Decay of the glorious Hotbitality of the Nation.

Of the Englishmen who ferv'd in Holland, under Edward Cheffer, and Gainsford, some this Year

wanted Valour, and fome good Success. For, ? those that lay in Garrison at Valkenbourg quitted 1574-their Post, and after yielded themselves to the Ann.17. their Poit, and after yielded to mile yes to the Enemy; who notwithitanding were pardon d, Cowardte left Queen Elizabeth should deny Harbour to the form left Queen Euragero mount uch; i.m. o une Spanish Fleet, that was now palling through the English British Sea, to the Low-Countries. Others of em into Mark at the Sluce of Gonda, after they had endered a bristand, finart Skirmish with the Spaniards, and had beaten feated. them back, were furprized unawares, by the Enemy swimming the River, and forced from their Hold; 200 of them being flain, and three Golours raken.

I know not whether it be worth while to mention fuch fmall Matters as these; to wir, the devout Credulity of certain London-Ministers, de-Ministers luded this Year by a Maid, who counterfeited deluded. herfelf to be poffets'd by the Devil: a monttrous Whale left on the dry Shoar, upon the Couff A great of the Ifle of Thanet; whose Length was meafured to be twenty of our Ells, the Breadth from the Belly to the Back-bone thirteen Foot, and the fpace between the Eyes eleven Foot: that the Thames ebb'd and flow'd twice in an hour: An unusuthat the Clouds flam'd with Fire in the Mouth al flowing of November, streaming from the North towards Thamer. the South; and the next Night the Heaven Sky feems feem'd to burn, the Flames arising from the Ho- to burn. rizon round about, and meeting in the Vertical Point. Blame me not for mentioning thefe things in a flort Digression, considering that the gravest Historians have recorded such like Matters more at large.

The Eighteenth Year of her Reign.

1575.

Henry III. King of France, being return'd out Leigue of Poland, and inaugurated at Rheims, made it his with fast and chiefett Care to confirm by his Outh France first and chiefest Care to confirm by his Oath renewd, and Subscription, the Confederacy of Blois, enter'd into in the Year 1572, betwixt his Brother Charles and Queen Elizabeth, and to deliver the fame to Valentine Dale, her Ordinary Ambassador: which the in like manner ratify'd, at Sain-James's near Westminster. Howbeit, within a while after, he mov'd this Question by a Letter, Whether or no the mutual Defence against all Men, mention'd in the said League, did comprehend the Cause of Religion? Whereunto when she had aniwer'd plainly, that it did, and that the would be ready for a mutual Defence against all Men, even in the Cause of Religion, it it were required, according to the Condition of the League; he prepared himfelf to war against the war be-Protestants: and Alenzon being engaged to the gun in adverse Party, there follow'd thereupon a deep France. and long Silence concerning his Marriage. Nevertheless, for Alenzan's sake, Queen Elizabeth furnish'd a great Sum of Money to Casimir, for the bringing of certain German Horsemen into France, against the Disturbers of the publick Peace.

While her Mind was taken up with thefe French matters, in the mean time the Netherlandish Affairs stood thus. Don Lewis Zuniga de Requelens, who fucceeded the Duke of Alva, bent the Sea-Coalts, which the Duke of Alva had, by a notable Overlight in to great a Captain, neglected; whereby the Lon-Country-War was fo many Years prolong'd. But in regard he was unprovided of Shipping, (for the Spanijh Ships, which, by the Help of the English, were brought Requesen into Flanders a little before, for that purpose, cares into Flanders a little before, for that purpole, craves had mifearry'd, being mifetably torn and weathipping ther-beaten) he fent Boifebot into England, to le- cut of vy, with the Queen's Confent, Ships and Sea-but in men, against the Hollanders and Zealanders. But van.

Fnoland

Out:

1575. zard her Ships and Seamen in another Man's Ann. 18. Quarrel; and the publickly commanded, that no Man should set out Ships of War, without Licence first obtain'd from her; and that no English Seamen should serve under other Princes. Boi-Other Re-schor therefore defired, that she would not be of-quests de fended, if the English Exiles in the Netherlands of him. ferv'd at Sea, under the Spaniard, against the Hollanders; and that they might have free Accels to the Ports of England, and buy Victuals for their Money. She in no wife allow'd, that those English Rebels (for fo she call'd those, whom he term'd Exiles) should serve under the Spaniard; nay, the hoped Requesens would not thew them any Countenance, and pray'd him not ro do it; particularly naming Thomas Copley, (whom the Spaniards purpos'd to fet out to Sea, to make Prize both of the English and Netherlanders, having dignify'd him with the Titles of Great Master of the Maefe, Lord of Gatten and Roughty) And to give Liberty of her Ports to Rebels and Iworn Enemies, were nothing elfe but the Heighth of Madnels. Boifchor, that he might obtain fome-thing reasonable of her, required, in the King of Spain's Name, that the Netherland Rebels against the Spaniard might be expell'd out of England. She deny'd it, forasmuch as those whom he call'd Rebels were Men of no Note, poor and filly Wretches, who had attempted no Diffurbances, but had fled into England, for fear of the War, despoil'd of their Country and Inheritance, whom to deliver into the Tormenter's flands, were a piece of Inhumanity, and against the Laws of Hospitality. And she put him in mind how prejudicial it had been to the Spanish Affairs in the Netherlands, when at the Duke of Alva's Request, the commanded the Netherlanders to depart out of England, in the Year 1572. For the Count Van-der-Mark and others, being commanded to be gone out of England, thereupon took the Briel, and gave Beginning to that War. But yet, that the might not feem to forget or neglect the ancient League with the House of Burgundy, (which notwithstanding the Spaniard had refus d

to confirm with her) the commanded by publick Q. forbids Proclamation, that the Netberlanders Ships of War the Confe should not stir out of the Havens of England, gerate Ne- and that those Netherlanders who had taken up ers En- Arms against the Spaniard, should not be admittranceinto ted into the Havens of England; and by Name, her Ports, the Prince of Orange, and those of his House, the Earls of Culenburg, Berg, Vander-Mark, and fifty others, the most remarkable Men of that Faction. And this she did the more willingly, Requesens because Requesens had, at the Intercession of Wilfor the English Ambassador, remov'd the Earl of Figure 1 on the English Ambandador, remove the Earl of Receivor Westmand Provinces of the Spaniard, and had distributed and Provinces of the Spaniard, and had distributed their Section of the English Seminary at Downy. Inflead Whereof, the Guises, by the Procurement of Pope their Section of The Prince of Orange, finding himself too Downy. English weak to withstand the Force of the Spaniard, 1 rince of and hoping for no Good out of England, 'enter'd thinking into Confultation with his Friends, to whole Proto beg rection they might best betake themselves. And on of the when Queen Elizabeth understood that he cast French, is his Eyes and Mind upon the French King, she diffieded first sent Daniel Rogers to dissuade him: which by Q Ehr. when Rogers could not do, (for he had dealt before, concerning the matter, with Coligny Admiral of France, and the French King) file lent Henry Cobbam, the Lord Cobbam's Brother, to the Spaniard, to inform him, of how dangerous Consequence it would be, if Holland and Zealand should revolt from him to the French King; and to perfuade him, by the best Reasons he could, he prevail'd not: for the Queen would not half to change War for Peace: who feem'd to liften 🗸 to the Motion. And withal, the fignify'd the 1575-fame things to Requesters, by Robert Corbet. Noi- Ann. 13. ther ceas'd fhe to divert the Prince of Orange from his purpole, by J. Haftings: but by means of the Opposition of Vilers, a French Preacher, Vilers he effected norhing. This Vilers (I speak it up-persades on my own Knowlege) came formerly into En-limingland, a poor needy Fellow, in a thread-bare Cloak; and grew rich, by a common Collection made him for reading a Divinity-Lecture. He, fearing left the Prince of Orange should look towards the English, amongst other things, affirm'd, that Queen Elizabeth had never a Martial Man, to whose Valour and Fidelity she could entrust an Army, but Suffex; and he not much favour ing the Protestant Religion. He also buzz'd abroad, what he had heard of Coligny, that the English, if they once fet Footing in the Nether-lands, would refume their ancient Hatred against the French.

But the Civil-Wars among the French cut off Confeder from the Prince of Orange, and the Netherlanders, rates confult about all Hope of Aid out of France. Whereupon, they a Proteenter'd into a new Confultation, whom they eter. should fly to, for Succour and Protection. The Princes of Germany, they knew, were already averle enough, in their Hearts, from the Spaniards; but they did not unite their Counfels together, for the Common Good; they were fpring of laying out Money; they agreed not in all Points, with the Nethorlander, in Religion; and the Emperor, being ally'd in Blood to the Spaniard, would cast Rubs in their Way. French (they faw) were embroil'd with Civil-War at home, in such fort as they could not tell when it would have an End. Besides, there were inveterate Grudges and Heart-burnings betwixt the Netherlanders and the French; and those of Brabant and Flanders, and the People bordering upon the French, would oppose them all they could. The Government of the French was no less rigid than that of the Spaniards: the Ports of France not very commodious for the Netherlanders Navigation. But as for the English, they were (as being under the fame Parallel) of the fame Temper and Disposition with them; their Religion the very tame, their Language not much differing, their Country near at hand, full of Havens commodious for Navigation, and abounding with Merchandize: the Queen was very powerful both by Sea and Land, courteous, bountiful, one that would maintain their Privileges; her Government would be gentle, and not burdenfome by Exactions. Thus they argu'd.

Into England therefore are fent Philip of Marnix and the Sieur of Saint Aldegond, Janus Douza of Nordavick, the Q. of William of Nivelle, Paul Buys, Advocate for the England. States of Holland, and Dr. Melfen, a Lawyer; who, by an honourable Embaffy, and in an eloquent Oration, offer to the Queen, either the Poffession or Protection of Holland and Zealand, the being a Princefs defcended from the Princes of Holland, by Philippa Wife to Edward III. and Daughter to William III. of Bavaria, Earl of Hai-nault and Holland; by whose other Sifter the he-reditary Title of those Provinces was descended to the Spaniard.

Thefe things the Queen gave a ready and at- She confi-tentive Ear to. And first she weightd in her dets of 10. Mind ferioufly, the Caufe which they maintain d against their King and Lord; the Enmity of the Spaniard against her; the Jealousies of the French King; and the great Expences and doubtful Chances of War; and also how great Offence the Novelty of such an Example might give. Then the question'd, whether the had any just Title to Holland and Zealand, by the House of

Bavaria,

his Em-

The O.

to comlaboureth

poic the Ne-her-land Dif-

A Tumulé

between.

forences.

Bavaria, and whether she might lawfully enter into Covenant with another Prince's Subjects to elm .8. protect them; as also whether they might lawry fully do it without the Emperor's confent, who was Supreme Lord of the Fee. Next, the give no Credit to what fome would make her believe, that those Countries came to the Spaniard's Anceffors by Election of the Subjects, not by Right Shereicht of Inheritance. Finally, upon mature Delibe-eth them. ration of the Matter, after she had thanked the Prince of Orange and them for their apparent Good-will towards her, the antwer'd, That the esteem'd nothing more glorious, than to deal with Faith and Honour, and as beseemeth a Prince. That she was not yet fatisfy'd how she might with her Honour and a fafe Confessione take those Provinces upon their Profer into her Protection, much less Possession. But she would deal ferioufly with the Spaniand, to procure them an happy Peace

At the same time came John Perenott, Lord of Champigny, the Cardinal of Granvill's Brother, Campieny butly from from Requescens to Queen Elizabeth; who modestly Funders, put her in mind of observing the League betwixt England and Burgundy, and befought her, that she would not intermeddle in the Affairs of the Netherlands. She, the' the Spaniard had refus'd to confirm the faid League, yet promis'd to observe it. Nevertheless she would provide (fhe faid) for her own Honour and Safety, in case the ancient Form of the Burgundian Government were chang'd, and forcin Soldiers re-ceiv'd daily in fo great Numbers into the Neighbouring Province to her.

Death of Before fuch time as Champigny was return'd home, Requesens. Requesens was dead, and presently the Assairs of the Netherlands were in a confus'd Condition, the Soldiers harafling all places with Fire and Sword, and the Estates of Brabant, Flanders, &c. reassuming their former Authority in governing the State: Which the Spaniard also was forced to confirm unto them till the coming of Don John of Austria, whom he had appointed to be their Governor. To these Estates Queen Elizabeth fent William Davilon, to exhort them effectually to bend their Minds to Peace, being very careful that the Spaniard might receive no Damage, and to preferve unto him, as far as lay in her power, the Netherland Provinces whole and fafe. But the Spanish Soldiers mutinying and growing outragious, nothing was effected.

In England there was all this Year a quiet Calm, faving that in the Middle-March towards Borders of Scotland there happen'd a fudden Bickering in the Month of July betwixt the Borderers, upon this Occasion. Sir John Forster Kt. Warden of the & English Middle-March, and at this time Governor also of Berwick, had condescended beneath his Quality to a Parley at Red-Square-Hill with J. Carmichell, Warden of Liddesdale in Scotland. For Governors were not wont to meet but with Governors, and Wardens with Wardens, as Equals in Dignity. Both of them, befides certain Gentlemen attending them, were accompany'd with an armed both Borders, most of them bearing an inveterate and deadly Fewd one against the other. These, after their wonted manner, turning their Horses to grazing in the next Fields, encompasfed the Governor and the Warden on all fides : Whom when they heard, fall to hot Words about delivering up of Raparces, and mistrusted that themselves (who had no Livelihood but by their Weapons) were the Men that should be deliver'd up, every one of them having a guilty Confeience, they began to quarrel about a Spur that was taken up, and prefently betook themfelves to their Weapons, every Man falling upon his particular Enemy whom he hated, or elfe to the taking of Horfes as Booty. Whether the Scots 6 1575 or the English began first is uncertain. At the first Shock the English beat back the Scots, and Ann. 18. took Carmichell Pritoner: But when they fell carelefly to Pillaging, and to rifling of certain Pedlars, a Company of Scots came upon them from Fedburgh, by means whereof Carmichell escap'd, the English were put to flight, and Sir George Heron Kt. Warden of Tindale and Rhodefdale, and Heron lin others, were flain. Forfer himself the Governor, English. Francis Ruffel the Earl of Bedford's Son, and Son-men car-in-law to Firster, Cuthbert Collingwood, James Ogle, sud Pil-Harry Fenwick, and many others were taken Pri-fone a foners, and carry d into Scotland as far as Dalkeith. where the Regent lay; who entertain'd them with all Civility, but detain'd them a little while, fearing left, if they were prefently dismissed, while their Blood was hot for the loss of their Friends, they might attempt a Revenge, and raife Combustions and War betwixt the two Kingdoms. Neither did he at laft let them go, but upon Faith given under their Hands to appear in Scotland at a fet Day.

and Indignation, taking it in high from, that in gree the Scots, who (as she said) did owe their Liber try and Tranquillity to her and the English, had broken the Peace, invaded the English in England, flain fome of them, taken Prifoner the Warden of the Middle-March, who was also Governor of Berwick, with divers others, carried them away captive into Scotland, and not difmiss'd them till they had given Assurance under their Hands for their Return. All these Things she took as done wrongfully and injuriously, in Disgrace of the English Nation, and of her own Honour. And the rather, because the Regent had appointed the Hearing of this Matter to be within the Limits of Scotland; and had also propounded whether or no the Commissioners should meet armed. For this latter feemed a point of Hoffility; that other of Ambition, namely, that the Regent of Scotland flould now prefcribe a Place of Meeting to the Queen of England, whereas the not long before had appointed Murray the Regent his Place of Meeting at York. Neither could the Regent, The now terrify'd at her Threats, fatisfy her, till matter fuch time as he came unarm'd to Bundenvol, on compourathe Borders of hoth Visadeurs and they ded. the Borders of both Kingdoms; and there met the Earl of Huntingdon, the English Commissioner, and with complimental Words, promisd to clote this Wound by the best Offices he could, and (to repair the Honour of the English Nation) fent Carmichell, his intimate Friend, i. to England who was kept a while at York a Prifoner at large, but afterwards fent back with Honour and cartain Prefents. For it was found that the Fault lay in Forfer, whilft he too obtlinately took the Part of a notorious Malefactor. Thus was Amity renew'd betwixt the Queen and the Regent. And after that time he never tailed to fliew nim-felf her conflant Friend, reftraining the Raparees of the Borders, to his own great Commendations, and to the general Good of both Kingdoms.

There died this Year no Man of any great Note The death in England, but in Scotland a most noble Person, of the Oos namely James Hamilton, Duke of Chastel-Herault, Chastel and Earl of Arran; who, being Great Grandson Herault. to James II. King of Scots by his Daughter, was appointed Tutor to Mary Queen of Scots, and Governor and Heir-apparent of the Kingdom during her Minority. After, when he had deliver'd her to the French, he was made Duke of Chaffel-Herault in France; and was after that conflicted by Queen Mary (being then a Prifoner) the first of the three Lieutenants of Southard. Whose

As foon as Queen Elizabeth had intelligence Q. Eliz. hereof, now if ever the was filled with Anger taketh it

Caufe whilft he most constantly maintain'd, be-1 1575: ing an open-hearted Man, and of a mild Dispo-dnn. 18. sition, he was perpetually tossed and turmoiled by the vexatious Contrivances of surbulent Perfons.

Essex in Ireland.

In Ireland the Earl of Effex being laid in wait dittrefs in for by Turlough and the Baron of Dungannon, and wreftling with many Difficulties out of England, hearing now that there was a Confultation about his calling home, bewail'd himfelf for the Miferies into which he was wrongfully fallen, com-plain'd of the undoing of himfelf and his Friends, famented the Condition of Ireland, which he perfuaded himfelf might be brought into Order with Two thousand Men; and very earnestly intreated that he might compound Matters with Turlough, to his Honour. And when he had now refign'd up his Command in Ulfter to the Lord-Deputy, because he was not able with that small Power of Men which the Lord-Deputy had affign'd him to profecute his Enterprize, he was commanded to take it again. But scarce had he taken it and marched against Turlough, when Letters came, that he should absolutely desist from War, and make as honourable a Peace as he could. Which being foon made, he marched against the Hebridian Scots, who had seized upon Clandebey, drove them into the Lurking-places, and by the Conduct of Norra attempted the sile of Rachlin, put Four hundred of the Islanders to the Sword, forced the Castle, and put a Garison therein. And now, in the midst of his course of Victory, he was again, beyond his expecta-tion, commanded to retign his Authority; and as an ordinary Captain had the Command of 300 Men given him; and through Leicester's cunning Dealing nothing was omitted, whereby to break his mild Spirit with continual Croffes one in the neck of another.

Now was Sir Henry Sidney fent the third time third time Lord-Deputy into Ireland, whenas the Pestilence confum'd the People of the Isle far and near. He notwithstanding goeth into Ulfter, and many came in to him, falling upon their Knees, and Divers Recraving his Protection, namely Mac-Mahon, Macmit them-Guire, Turlough Leinigh, and others. In Leinister felves. in like manner did the O-Conors and O-Moors, two rebellious Families, who by Force and Arms had feizd upon their ancient Inheritances in Leife and Ophalie, out of which they had been thrown by the Law. Being come into Munfter, he affifted as a close Mourner to honour the Funeral of Sir Peter Carew, a very noble Knight, and of approv'd Valour; who being Heir to Fitz-Stephen and Raymund the Gross, the first Conquerors of Ireland, and to the Barony of Ydrone, had recover'd a part of his Inheritance which had been loft a long time. The Earl of Defmond coming to fee him at Cork, offer'd him his best Service, and Obedience with all Submission. From thence going into Connaught, he received into his Pro-tection the Earl of Clan-Richard's Son, who had rebelled, but now most fubmissively craved Pardon in the Church of Galway: And he govern'd the Country with great Commendation.

1576.

Sidney the

made Deputy of Ireland.

Death of Sir Peter

The Ninetecnth Tear of ber Reign.

In the beginning of the new Year those two propound Marriage Brokers, Mota Fenellon and Porte, bea Marringer gain again to tickle Queen Elizabeth's Ears with to QEar love-Stories about her Marriage with Alenzan.

To whom answer was made, That that Business was now out of feafon, for Alenzon could not come over, France being embroild with Civil Wars, and Alenzon deeply engag'd therein. Yet were there one or two Messengers sent into France, to rezon, and to diffuade them from meddling with the Affairs of the Netherlands, left the Spaniard should endeavour to raise new Combustions in Ann. 19. France. And the more to deter the French King and trons from it, she put him in mind how easie a matter medlingin it would be for the Spaniard, who was now tho- the Neroughly furnish'd with all Provision for War in therlands Italy, either to seize upon Saluzes, or to land his Forces in Provence, and make himself Maiter of the Coaft of the Mediterranean-Sea, France being fo exhausted of its Wealth: And other like mat ters fhe put him in mind of.

For the Prince of Orange, for his own private Ends, and in hopes to retain the Principality of Orange, which is situate in France, ceased not to invite the French into the Netherlands, and permitted the Zelanders and Hollanders (who intested Zelanders the Seas round about with their Privateers, being Men as it were born in the Sea) to rob the English. English Merchants Ships, whom they accused to carry Victuals to their Enemies the Dunkirkers, and to transport the Merchandize of the Antwerpers and others into Spain, under counterfeit Names, which they were wont themselves to export formerly to their own Advantage, but now durft not, as being confcious to themselves of their revolt. For restraining of these, Holfbeck, being sent forth again with Men of War, They are took above 200 Pirates, and put 'en in Prisons referent' all along the Sea-coast. But to demand Restitu- by the Q. tion of the Goods they had taken, there were fent into Zeland Sir William Winter Kt. and Robert Beal Clerk of the Council, to confider of the Value of the Things in controversie, and agree about Restitution, upon certain Conditions. But by reason of the Avarice of the English Merchants, and the Infolency of the Zelanders, the Quarrel broke out again, which was shortly after compounded with lofs to both Nations.

All things were now in the utmost Consusion Consusion in the Netberlands, whilst the Spaniards without in the Net any Authority, thrust certain Counsellors of the therlands, Estates into Prison, and committed such Outrages in the Country, rifling their Goods, and doing them all kinds of Injuries, that the Eftares were driven of necessity to take up Arms. And forthwith they dispatch'd their Messengers into all Countries; and by Object fignified to Queen Elizabeth how they were abus'd, and the Causes of their taking up Arms. The Queen by Dr. Wilson earnestly exhorteth both the States and the Spaniards to lay down Arms, and enquireth dili-gently for what reason the States Counsellors were committed. In the mean time the most beautiful City of Antwerp, which hardly yielded to any the molt flouriffling Mart-Towns of all Maturiffling flouriffling mart-Towns of all Maturiffling flouriffling mart-Towns of all Maturiffling flouriffling martiffling martiffling and they themselves (the free from all Blame) constrain'd to pay the Soldiers a great sum of Gold for their Ransom. Obigny, laying hold on this Opportunity, importunitely defir d to borrow a great fum of Money of Q. Elizabeth, in the Name of the States, to restrain this Infolency of the Spaniards. The Queen, having re-ceiv'd certain Intelligence that they had before defir'd Money of the French King, denied them, but promis'd to make earnest Intercession with the Spapromised to make carried interespon what has general mixed for a Peace. And to that purpose file feet into Spain Sir John Smith, Coulin-German to Device King Edward VI. a Man of Spanish Comportment, thousand the compound of the properties of the and very well known to the Spaniard; who was the Nemost graciously Entertain'd by the King, and re-therland torted with fuch Differetion the diffgraceful Inju- Troubles. ries of Gaspar Quiroga Archbishop of Toledo against the Queen in hatred of her Religion, and of the Inquifitors of Sevil, who would not allow the Attribute of Defender of the Faith in the Queen's fuades en new Brotherly-love betwixt the King and Alen-

Title, that the King gave him Thanks for it, 1576. and was displeased with the Archbishop, desiring Ann. 19. the Embassador to conceal the Matter from the Queen, and exprelly commanded the faid Title to be allowed her. For he knew the Queen's Advice was expedient for this Affair, tho' he follow'd it not, the Fate of the Netherlands (if I may fo fay) inforcing him to take another Courfe.

into the Netherlands.

od Auftria Netberlands with Supreme Power to Govern the fame, who was the base or natural Son of the Emperor Charles V. To whom the Queen likewife fent Sir Edward Horsey, Governor of the Isle of Wight, to congratulate his Entrance, and to offer him Affiftance in case the States should call in the French to the Netherlands. But Swevingham making most importunate suit in behalf O Eliz. of the States, fhe fent them over Twenty thou-States with they should never change their Religion nor

Money, to their Prince, nor receive the French into the Nekeep the therlands, nor refuse a Peace, if Don John of Aulanders in firia would condescend to reasonable Condi-Obedience tions: And that if he did come to a Peace, the to their R. Spanish Soldiers should be fatisfy'd with the faid Money, who now mutiny'd for lack of Pay. So careful was she to retain the wavering Provinces in their Fidelity and Obedience to the Spaniard, that she omitted no Opportunity of deferving well of him, and preferving Peace. In England there was at this time a pleafant Calm and Quiet, and the Trade betwixt the English and the Portugals was open'd again, which by the private Avarice of certain Persons had of late been obstructed: For the English were now permitted to Trade in Portugal, Algarbia, the Illes of Madera and the Azores, and the Portugals in England and Ireland, for the space of three Years; in which time the Differences about detaining of Merchandizes was to be debated. And this was publish'd by a Proclamation. At this time fome studious Heads, moved

Commerce reftor'd betwixt life and the Portu-94/1.

A Passage fought to the Weitern Ocean.

probability.

with a commendable Defire to discover the more remote Regions of the World, and the Secrets of the Ocean, put forward fome wellmony'd Men, no less desirous to reap Profit by it, to discover whether there were any Strait in the North-part of America, through which Men might fail to the rich Country of Cathay, and fo the Wealth of the Eaft and West might be con-withwhat join'd by a mutual Commerce. These learned Men argu'd, that probably there was fome Strait open'd a Way in that Part; taking it for granted, that the nearer the Shore a Man cometh, the shallower the Waters are. But they who fail from the Western-Coast of Island find by experience the Sea to be deeper: So as it may probably feem to join with that Sea which the Mariners call Mare del Sur, on the other fide of America. Then they argu'd, That whereas the Ocean is carried with the daily motion of the Primum Mobile, or the uppermost Heaven, being beaten back by the Opposition of America, it runneth Northward to Cabo Fredo, that is, the Cold Cape or Promontory, about which place it should be emptied thro some Strait into the Sea del Sur; otherwise it would be beaten back with the like violence upon Lapland and Finnark, as it is in the South Part of the World beaten back from the Strait of Magellan (a Strait full of Isles, and by reason of the narrowness of the Strait, being fo full of Isles, uncapable of so great a quantity of Waters) along the Eastern-Coast of America to Cabo Fredo. For Testimony they bring Ant. Jenkinson an Englishman, than whom no Man had more perfeet knowledge of the North Part of the World; who hath demonstrated, that an huge quantity of Waters must needs be poured forth out of the Cronian or Frozen Sea into the Sea del Sur: Also Sernard le Torr, a Spaniard, who affirmeth, That 1576. returning from the Itles of the Molacca's into dnn.19. America, he was driven back again to the Mo-Ship from the North, when he was above the Equator Northwards: And other things they al-ledg'd for proof hereof. Herewith these mony'd Men being perfuaded, they fent Martin Frobifher Frelif ers with three Pinnaces to difcover this Strait; who Voyage to fetting out from Harwich the 18th of June, en- the Strait, ter'd, on the 9th of Angulf, into a Bay or Strait, under the Latitude of 6; Degrees; where he found Men with black Hair, broad Faces, flar Nofes, fwarthy Colour'd, Apparell'd in Seacalves Skins; the Women painted about the Eyes and Balls of the Cheeks with a blue Colour like the project Painting. lour, like the ancient Britains. But all being fo frozen up with Ice in the Month of August that he could not hold on his Voyage, he return'd, and arriv'd in England the 24th of September, having loft five Seamen, whom the Barbar has had intercepted. Nevertheless the two Years next following he failed to the same Coasts 1.0 perfect his Enterprize; but being encounter'd every where with heaps of Ice like Mountains, he was kept from entring any farther into the Bay. Being therefore toffed up and down, with foul Weather, Snows, and unconftant Winds, he gather'd a great quantity of Stones, which he thought to be Minerals, and so return'd Home-wards. Which Stones, when neither Gold nor Silver, nor any other Metal could, be extracted from them, we have feen cast forth to mend the High-Ways. But these matters are publish'd at large, and every where to be fold.

About this time died Maximilian the Emperor, Death of a Prince both prudent, just, preshable and ad-Maximilian the land and substitute that the vantageous to the Empire, and one that had well han the deferved of Queen Elizabeth and the English. As Emperor foon as Queen Elizabeth heard the Certainty of his Death, fhe was very much troubled at it, and fent Sir Philip Sidney, as her Ambassador to Rodulph King of the Romans, officiously to fignify both her Grief for his Father's Death, and her Joy for his Succeffion: and also in his way, to condole with the Elector Palatine's Sons, the And the Death of their Father Frederick III. as likewife, Platine. to put Count Casimir in mind, by the by, of the Money she had disburs'd in the French War. For by that War was Peace restor'd to France, Alenzon had settl'd upon him, in Azennage, as they term it, the Dukedoms of Anjou, Tours, and Berry; Casimir was promised Eleven Millions of Franks, for Pay for his German Horsemen, and some of the French Queen's Jewels were pawn d for three hundred thousand Crowns. But nothing at all was paid back again to Queen Elizabeth, who notwithstanding held herfelf fully satisfy'd, that it was well beftow'd in a good Caufe. Cafimir answer'd ingenuously, and in his German Since-tity, that the French King had not kept his Word, and that 'twas not long of him, that the Money was not repaid.

As in Germany, the Loss of the Emperor Mani-milian, and the Elector Palatine, Princes of Chriftian Vertue, was very great, in regard of their fingular Moderation: 10 in England and Ireland, was that as great of Walter D'Evereux Earl of Ef- Death of fex; tho' he were in degree far inferior to them. E.ol Effex A very excellent Man certainly he was, in whom Honesty of Carriage vy'd with Nobility of Birth: both which notwithflanding could not prevail against Envy. For after he was con-strain'd to give over his laudable Enterprize in Ireland, he return'd into England, having much walted his Estate; where openly threatning Lei-cester, whom he suspected to have done him Injuries, he was by his cunning Court-tricks, who about it.

Sir Anth.

1576. Itood in fear of him, and by a peculiar Court-Ann.19. Mystery of wounding and overthrowing Men by Honours, sent back again into Ireland, with the infignificant Title of Earl-Marshal of Ireland. Where pining away with Grief and Sorrow, he pioully rendred his Soul to Chrift, dying of a Bloody-flux, in the midth of gr. vous Torments; after he had defir'd the Standers-by, to admonish his Son, who was then scarce ten Years old, to have always before his Eyes the fix and thirtieth Year of his Age, as the utmost Term of his Life, which neither he nor his Father had pass'd: and which this Son never attain'd to, as we will suspected shew in its proper place. The Death of this of Poison, Nobleman carry'd with it a Suspicion of Poison among the vulgar fort, (who always fulpect them to be poison'd, whom they esteem and love) altho' Sidney Lord-Deputy of Ireland, after diligent Inquisition made, wrote to the Council in England, that the Earl, upon his first taking his Bed, faid many times, that this was a thing usual and ordinary with him, that whensoever he was troubled and perplex'd in mind, he fell into the Bloody-flux; and that he suspected nothing at all of Poison; and that his Body retain'd the same Colour in his Sickness, which it had in his perfect Health, no Spot, no Infection, no Shedding of the Hair or Nails, and being embowell'd no Sign at all of Poison appear'd; that the' the Phylicians differ'd in their Judgments, yet they apply'd nothing against the force of Poilon; and that his Cup-bearer was fally accus'd of infusing something in Water, and mi-xing it with his Wine. Yet have we seen the fame Man openly pointed at for a Poisoner. Leicester Suspected The Suspicion was increas'd by Leicester's prefently putting away Douglasse Sheffield with Money and fair Promises, (whether his Mistris, or his Wife, I cannot fay) on whom he had begotten a Son, and now more openly making Love to Lettice, Effex's Widow, to whom afterwards he join'd himfelf in a double Matrimony. For the it were reported, that he had already privately marry'd her ; yet Sir Francis Knolles, Father to Lettice, who was acquainted with Leicefer's Rambling and Inconftancy in his Love, would not believe it, (fearing left he should put a Trick upon his Daughter) unless he might see the Marriage performd in his own Presence, with some Witnesses by, and a publick Notary. But these things were done a Year or two as-

At this time ended his Life in England Sir An-Cook des. thony Cook Knight, a Man of seventy Years of Age, of severe Gravity, and great Learning; having been School-Matter to king Edward VI. in his Childhood; a Man happy in his Daughters, whom having brought up in Learning, both Greek and Lawn, above their Sex, he marry'd to Men of good Account; namely, to Sir William Cecil, who was Treasurer of England, Sir Nicolas Bacon, Lord-Keeper, and Sir Thomas Hobey, who died Ambassador in France, Sir Ralph Roulet, and

Sir Henry Killegrew. A Tumult

Before Effex's Death, (to return a little back) in Ireland, the Earl of Clan-Richard's Sons, who scarce two Months before had obtain'd of the Lord-Deputy a Pardon for their Rebellion, gather'd together again a Rabble of lewd Fellows, and ourragi-oully practised their Robberies and Depredations all over Connaght. The Town of Athemy, which the Inhabitants were now repairing, they burnt, and put the Workmen to the Sword, out of a barbarous hatred against the Inhabitants, because they begun to conform themselves to the Laws, and live civilly. But upon the Lord-Deputy's coming, their thieving Troops were dispers'd, and fled, after their wonted manner, into their Lurking-holes; and their Father the Earl of Clan-Richard himself was cast into Prison at Dublin, as Ann. 19. acceffary to their Crimes. The Lord-Deputy being return'd back, they crept out of their Holes again, and in vain befieged Rilla-Reagh-Caftle, with Lofs of Men, being their Tather's chief Seat, wherein a Garrison had been put, under the Command of Thomas Strange. The Lands of Mac-William Englier, that is, the young er, they wasted; joining to them the Island-Sector But at the coming of the Lord-Deputy, they vanish'd again, hiding themselves in their Holes, as before.

Sir W. Drury, who was lately Matthal of Ber-5n w... wick, being now newly made Prelident of Manfler, Drury has be Wildow and Valour beauthy the subset. by his Wildom and Valour, brought the whole or Mon-Country into Subjection, and Obedience to the fler Laws; except the Peninfula and County-Palatine of Kerry; whether, as into a Sink, many Mule-factors, Thieves, Men in Debt, and fulpected of capital Crimes, had reforted, and grew infolent, as prefuming upon a kind of Impunity; by reafon of the Privilege of the Place. For, King Edward III. had granted to the Earl of Defmond all the Royalties which the Kings of England had in that County, except Firing, Raper, Forefalling and Treasure-trove. The Prelident notwithstanding, judging that those Royalties were granted for the Pieservation of Jultice, and not for Impu-nity to Offenders, enter'd into it, valiantly put Rogues, whom Defmond had plac'd in Ambush, Kerry of hunted out the Malefactors all over Kerry, and Rogues. feverely punish'd many of them; while Definend fretted, and made a most heavy Complaint to the Lord-Deputy against Dray, both of this, and about the Payment which they call Ceof, A Ceof, This Payment is an Explain of Violence and the payment which they call <math>Ceof, Ceof, CeThis Payment is an Exaction of Victuals, at a what it is certain Rate or Price, (fuch as Canon Gleba was among the Ancients; that is, a Cultom of paying Corn yearly) for the Maintenance of the Lord-Deputy's Houshold, and the Garrison-Soldiers. Hereof, not only he, but also in Leimster, tribeon-the more civilized part of Ireland, the Lord Visconship of Lord Visconship of Ireland, the Ireland Irela count Baltinglaß, the Barons Delvin, Hoth, and Trimleston, and all the better fort of the Nobility and Gentry, complain'd; refusing to pay it, as not to be demanded but by Authority of Parliament. Those which were fent, in this behalf, by them, into England, were first heard by the Council, and then committed to Prison; as in like manner were those in Ireland, which sens them, till they submitted themselves: for a smuch as it appear'd, by the Records of the Kingdom, that it had been an ancient Institution, and that it was a Privilege of the Crown, (otherwife call'd a Royal Prerogative) which is not subject to the Laws, and yet is not repugnant to the Laws, as the learned in the Laws have judg'd. But the Queen commanded the Lord-Deputy to use Q modea Moderation in fuch Exactions, faying, accor- rates 'em. ding to the old Proverb, that fhe would have her ding to the out erovers, that he would have not subjects, whilf they were pulld, but to be flay'd. And 'tis reported, that she should tay, "Ah! "how do I fear, lest it be objected to us, concerning the biss, which was objected in old "time to Tiberim, by Cata, concerning the Dai-" matian Commotions; You, you it is that are in Fault, who have committed your Flocks,

The Twentieth Year of her Reign.

" not to Shepherds, but to Wolves."

Don John of Austria, when he found himself too weak for the States of the Netherlands, who were very strong in themselves, and back'd also with the Amity of their neighbouring Princes;

fent Gastelle to Queen Elizabeth, to thank her for 1577. the Affiftance offer'd him against the French, and Ann. 20. to profess to her his ready Inclination to Peace. She, by Sir Edward Horsey, who was now sent Don Jobs thither the fecond time, commends his Inclinainclines to tion to Peace; and withal, treats with him about refloring the Englishmens Goods, which

Q. Eliz. were feiz'd at Antwerp. A flow Answer was return'd hereto, in regard he was much hinder'd (as he pretended) by ohe was much hinderd (as he pretended) by other Cares, being wholly taken up about a perpetual Edit of Pexes, (as he call'd it) which notwithfranding fearce lafted a Year. De Elizabeth being feriouly defirous of a Peace, fem Sir Tho. Leighton to the Prince of Orange, to perfuade him to attempt nothing in an hoftile Way, till Sir Thomas Smith's Return, who was fent to the Spaniard, to procure a Peace. The Prince of Orange, condensing from his Heart that therbund range, condemning from his Heart that perpetual Edict, had opportunely learn'd, that Don John was projecting to marry with the Queen of Prince of Orange diverts Scots: which he gladly laid hold on, and by Faher. Don John projects to mier prefently acquainted Queen Elizabeth therewith, to divert her Mind from the Peace. Yet Ouen of fhe, as if the understood nothing of it, congra-tulated Don John, by Daniel Rogers, about the perpenual Editi of Peace, tho she were now afcertain'd, that Don John, thro' the Persuasion of the Earl of Westmoreland, and the English Fugitives, and being much forwarded and favour'd therein, by the Bishop of Rome and the Guises, had already fwallow'd the faid Marriage in hope, and withal the Kingdoms of England and Scother to get land; and had now determin'd to feize upon the King- the Isle of Man in the Irish Sea, as commodious for invading England, from Ireland, and the We-England. ftern Coast of Scotland, where the Queen of Scots had very many devoted to her; as also in the opposite part of England; namely, North-Wales, and the Counties of Cumberland, Lancashire and Cheshire; where the generality of the People were very much addicted to the Popish Religion.

And certainly Don John, (as we have learn'd from Percz, who was Secretary to the Spaniard) having been formerly transported with Ambition, when he found himfelf disappointed of his Hope of the Kingdom of Tunis, had privately dealt with the Pope, about deposing Queen Elizabeth, marrying the Queen of Scots, and conquering of England; and had fo far prevail'd, without once acquainting King Philip; that the Pope, as it were out of a Defire of the publick Good, excited King Philip to War against England and Don John himfelf, being ready to depart from the Netherlands, profecuted the fame limielf in Spain; and afterwards made Suit by Escovedo, whom he sent out of the Netberlands, that fome Port-Town might be granted him in Biscay, from whence he might invade England with a Fleet. But King Philip, diffiking these Projects, began to negled the Man as too ambitious. And these things Queen Elizabeth never perfectly understood, till (as I said) the Prince of Orange informal her thereof.

There arose also a new Suspicion from Tho. Copley (one of the prime Men among the English regist (one of the prime ment among the Engills Fugitives) his being recommended to the French King by Vaux, Don John's Secretary, and receiving from him the Dignity of Knighthood, and Title of Baron. Yet Copley labour'd to clear thin bill of all Sufficient proposition him Obs. the Er K. himfelf of all Sufpicion, protetting his Obedi-cnce rowards his Princels, and that he had ac-cepted that Title, with no other intent, but that the greater Honour might come to his Wife, the Companion of his Exile, and the larger Pen-tion to himfelf, from the Spaniard; forasimuch as Noblemen, that are dignifyd with Titles, are in better Efteem among the Spaniards: and the Title of Baron he thought did belong to him of ~ Right, whose Grand-mother was eldest Daugh- 1577ter to the Lord Hes, and his Great-grand-mother Ann. 20. eldest of the Heirs of the Lord Wells.

Don John, in the mean time, feeretly profe-Don cuted the faid Marriage; and withal, to blind John the Queen's Eyes, fent the Vifcount of Gaunt on fimulation an Embaffage to Queen Elizabeth, to acquaint her with the Conditions of the Peace, and to request a longer time for the Payment of the Money which the States had borrow'd. To this latter the willingly agreed, and dealt with him again by Willon, about Recompence for the Da-mages done to the English Merchants, at the Sacking of Answerp. But he only deluded her, and while he feem'd to be intent upon the Per-Herenews petual Edit of Peace, brake forth into War, fur-the War, prized Towns and Castles by Crast, and wrote to the Spaniard, that the bell Course was to fall upon the Illands of Zealand, before he fet upon the inner Provinces: and feeding his own Hopes, he endeavour'd to perfuade him by Escovedo, his Secretary, that England might eathlier be won, than Zealand.

Hereupon, when all things in the Netherlands The States now tended to War, the States fent the Marquis delire to of Hauree and Adolph Metkerk, Ambaffadours to Queen Elizabeth, to borrow of her one hundred thousand Pound Sterling, for eight Months. To which the actions of the Queen Elizabeth to borrow of her one hundred thousand Pound Sterling, for eight Months. which she answerd, 'That if they could borrow 'it any where esse, she and the City of London would very willingly give Security for it, up-on Condition, that certain Towns in the Netherlands, which she should name, would become bound to repay the Money within a Year. A League also was contracted with the States, of mutual Aid by Sea and Land, upon these Conditions.

' The Queen shall affish the States with 1000 Queen's Horse, and 5000 Foot, whose Pay and Char-league ges the States shall defray at London, the third wish the Month after they take Shipping: and after the States. War ended, they shall send them back at their Charges into England. The General or Commander of this Army, being by Nation an Englilman, shall be admitted into the Council of the States. Nothing shall be determin'd concerning War or Peace, without acquainting the Queen or him therewith. They shall enter into no League with any whofoever, without her Approbation: and in the same, if she will, fhe shall be comprehended. If any Prince do attempt Hoftility against the Queen or Kingdom, under any Pretence whatfoever, the States shall to their Power oppose him, and shall fend the Queen the same number of Succours; and upon the fame Conditions. If any Difcord arife among the States, it shall be referr'd to the Queen's Arbitration. If any Fleet be to be rigg'd and prepar'd, by the Q. against her Enemies, the States shall furnish out 40 Ships of reasonable Burden, with Seamen and all Necessaries, which shall be under the Command of the Admiral of England, and shall serve under the Queen's Pay. The States shall serve under the Queen's Pay. fhall by no means receive into the Netberlands fuch Englishmen as the Queen shall proclaim Re-bels. If they make Peace with the Spaniard, they shall procure the Confirmation of these Articles, either jointly, or apart by them-felves, at the Queen's Choice. Prefently after this League was made, the Q. left fine should be slander'd, as a Supporter of the Rebellion in the Netherlands, sent Thomas Wilks to the Spaniard, to inform him as follows: 'That Reasons forafmuch as there were not lacking fome ill- thereof. disposed Persons, who sought, by cunning Artifices, to break off Amities between Princes,

and

His Dealing with about it.

Cofley

Baron by

A: d by dom of

änn. 20.

f and by their unjust Backbitings, to stain her Fire of the Netherlandish Combustions: First, she prays the King, and the Governors of the Netherlands. to call to mind, how often and how earneftly flie had long fince friendly forewarn'd them of the Mitchiefs hanging over the Netherlands: And then when they first design'd to revolt, how carefully the endeavour'd, by frequent Messages to the Prince of Orange and the States, to keep them within their Duty and Obedience to the King; yea, when those rich and wealthy Provinces were offer'd her for Poffeffion, how fincerely fhe would not fo much as take them into her Protection: And laftly, when all things were in a most desperate and deplorable State, how largely she supply d Money, that the States might not be, for want thereof, necessitated to subject themselves under another Prince, and break the Delign for " Peace lately fet on foot. And when the heard that the Prince of Orange refus'd to embrace the Peace that was made, she not only advis'd him to embrace it, but also (as she religiously protests) did by Threats, in a manner command him. Whether thefe be things unbefeeming a Christian Princess, that is affected to Peace, and most defirous to deserve well of her Confederate the Spaniard, let the Spaniard himfelf, and all Christian Princes, judg. And now, that the Wars may cease, and he may have the Netherlanders at his Devotion, she advifes him to receive his afflicted People into former Grace and Favour, to restore their Privileges, to observe the Conditions of the last Peace, and to appoint them another Gover-nor, of his own Family. Which things could not (as the tignify'd) be effected, unless Don John were remov'd; whom the States diffrusted, and hated with a deadly and implacable Hatred; and whom she herself knew for cer-tain, by his secret Practices with the Queen of Scets, to be her most mortal Enemy; insomuch as fine could expect nothing from the Netherlands, but affur'd Danger, as long as he was Governor there. But now, when the faw what great Forces Don John had rais'd, and how many Auxiliary Companies of French were in a Readiness, the professes, that to preferve the Netberlands to the Spaniard, and to divert the Danger from England, the had pro-' mis'd Affittance to the States; who had reciprocally promis'd, that they would continue in the King's Obedience, and alter nothing in Religion. But if the perceiv'd that the King would not accept of these Proposals, but refolv'd to break afunder the Bars of their Privileges and Rights, and to bring these miserable Provinces into Slavery, as taken by Right of War; the could not neglect, both to defend her Neighbours, and to provide for her own Security. But if the States should shake off their Allegiance towards their King, and attempt any thing contrary to what they have promis'd, she would forthwith turn her Forces against them.

These things he was not very willing to hear. But yet, because he knew that Queen Elizabeth was able to do much, either to compose or difturb the Affairs of the Netherlands, and underflood also for certain, that there was a Plot laid by Don John against her, he dissembled the matter, and withal pray'd her to continue her Endeavours for making a Peace, and not rafuly to credit every falle Rumour spread abroad, or believe that he attempted any thing unbecoming a Prince in Amity with her, hears em

Spania d

patiently.

Whilft Wilker manag'd thefe Affairs in Spain, Don John of ziustria tends Gastelle to Cucen E. 1577-lizabeth, (whom he both fear'd, and whose Con-Amazo fulion he wish'd) heavily acculing the Stites, Den John laying foul Crimes and Accusations to their complimes Charge; and withal, declaring the Causes at of the large, why he arm'd his Men again. Thus sat States to the as an heroical Princess and Umpire betwint the Q. the Spaniards, the French, and the Stares; lo as the might well have us'd that Saying of her ba ther, Cui adhereo, praeft, that is, The Farty to which I adhere, gets the upper hand. And true it was, which one has written, Thit I times and English Spain are, as it were, the Scales, in the Belance of helicine Europe, and England the Tingue, or Helder of the Europe Bulance.

About this time, while the Judges of Affizes A fink fat at Oxford, and one Randland Jenkes, a fawcy an anier foul-mouthd Bookfeller, was indicted for face cause dalous Words against his Princes; the greatest takes. part of those who were there present, whether through a poifonous and pettilent Vapour, or the Stink of the Prisoners, or Damp of the Ground, were taken in such a manner, that they died almost every one of them, within forty days or thereabouts, except the Women and Children; and none else were touch'd with the Contagion. Amongst those that died, were Robert Bell, Lord-Chief-Baron of the Exchequer, a fage and grave Man, and famous for his Knowlege in the Law, Sir Robert D'Oiley and Sir William Babington Knights, D'Oiley Sheriff ot Oxfordshire, Harcourt, Weneman, Fettiplace, Men of great Note in those parts, Barham an excellent Lawyer, almost all the Jury, (as they call 'em) and others to the Number of 300, or there-

Hitherto fair and calm Weather shone upon the Papifts in England, who by a merciful Connivance enjoy'd their own Service of God, in their private Houses, in a manner, without any Punishment; although it were prohibited by the Law, by which a pecuniary Mul& was to be infifcted on them; neither did the Queen think fit that Violence flould be offer'd to their Confeiences. But after that Thunderbolt of Eucommunication was fhot from Rome against the Q. this fair Weather turn'd by little and little into Clouds and Tempests, and caus'd a Law in the Year 1571, against those who should bring into the Realm any fuch Bulls, Agnus Deis, or confe-crated Grains, as private Tokens of Papal Obedience, or should reconcile any Man to the Church of Rome. Yet was there no Man, in fix Years time, proceeded against upon that Law tho' fome were apprehended, who had oftended against it. The first that was convicted by this Law, was one Cuthbert Maine a Priest, who be- Maine ing an obstinate Maintainer of the Pope's Power a Priest ex against his Prince, was put to death at St. Ste- secured phen's Fane (commonly call'd Lamston) in Cornwal; and Tragien, a Gentleman that had harbour'd him, had his Littate confifcated, and was himself condemn'd to perpetual Imprisonment. But these and such like Ecclesiastical Matters, I will touch but lightly; because others are in hand with the Ecclesiastical History of these Times, and, I hope, with fincere Faithfulness; a thing yet scarce to be hop'd for, whilst Mens Minds are so full of Rancour and Prejudice, upon the account of Difference in Religion. This Year the Title of Lord Latimer, after it The death had flourish'd with great Honour and Wealth, of Lord in the Family of the Nevilt, from the days of Latimer, King Henry VI. was extinct in John Nevil; who, having no Heir-male, left a large Inheritance to four Daughters; whereof the first was marryd to Henry Earl of Northimberland; the second to Vol. II. Nnn2 Thense

Thomas Cecil, who was afterward Earl of Exeter; 1577. the third to Sir William Commalls; and the fourth Ann. 20. to Sir John Davers: from which Daughters has iffu'd a numerous Progeny.

Secretary Smith

Sir Thomas Smith also, one of the Queen's Secretaries, died this Year (being his Climacterical Year) of a Confumption: A Man worthy to be remember'd for his great Learning, and his Wifdom shew'd in many Embassies. He was born of honest Parentage at Suffron-Wilden in Effex, brought up in Queen Margaret's College in Cambridge, and at riper Years made choice of to be fent into Italy, at the Queen's Charges. (For even till our days, certain young Mea of promiting Hopes, our of both Univerlities, have been maintain'd in forein Councries, at the king's Charge, for the more complete pointing of their Parts and Studies.) From thence he return'd with the Title of Doctor of the Civil-Law, and found fuch Favour with the D. of Semerfet, Protector to King Edward VI. that he was made one of the King's Secretaries, (Ce-cil being the other) Steward of the Stannaries, Dean of Carlifle, and Provost of Eton-College, whereof he had very well merited. Queen Mary deprived him of these Dignities, assigning him 100 l. a Year Pension during Life, howbeit on Condition that he should not depart the Realm. As foon as Queen Elizabeth came to the Crown, he was call'd again to the Service of the Commonwealth, and was present with the Divines, at the correcting of the English Liturgy; and afterwards, with great Commendations, perform'd those Embassies which I have mention'd in their proper places. In the Year 1571, being made one of the Queen's Secretaries, he tent his base Son, which was all the Sons he had, to carry over a Colony into Ardes, a Peninfula in Ireland, who died there unfortunately, as I have before faid. He was very beneficial to the Commonwealth of Learning in England, by procuring the Law concerning Corn for the Colleges of Students: and indeed more beneficial than by his Writings, although he left behind him a Work untinfied, concerning the Commonwealth of England, a fleetial Book of the Orthography of the English Tongue, another of the Pronunciation of the Greek, and an exact Commentary concerning Money, (or, *De re Numma*ria) very well worth the publishing. In the Place of Secretary to the Queen, he was suc-ceeded by Thomas Wilson Doctor of Law, Master of St. Katharine's near London, who departed this Life within four Years. In Ireland the O-Moors and O-Conors, and others in heland whose Ancestors Suffers, Lord-Deputy, had, in the Reign of Queen Mary, deprived of their Patrimonies in Leife and Ophalie, for their Misdemeanors, and had affign'd 'em no other place to Fory Oge. live in; brake forth into Rebellion, Rory Oge, that is, Roderick the younger, being their Ringleader: the Town of Naas they fir'd; Lachlin they affaulted, but being repuls'd by the Valour of George Carero the Governor, they treacherously intercepted Henry Harrington and Alexander Cosbey at a Parley; whom when Harpoole, a Captain of a Company, undertook to refcue, and to that end affaulted the Cottage in the Night, where-in Rory was, and those Gentlemen bound to a Post; Rory, awakening with the Uproar, wounded Harrington and Cosbey, with feveral Blows, in the dark; and made a desperate Escape, by the favour of the Night, through the midit of the Soldiers, which had befet him. But a few days after, laying a Trap for the Baron of the upper Offiry, he was intercepted himfelf, and cut in pieces; freeing thereby the Neighbouring People from farther Fears.

The One and twentieth Year of her Reign.

15-8. Jun.21.

Although the Spaniards were not very well Cuerts pleas'd, to hear those things which Wills Care to propounded, and diffembled the matter, (as I have a faid a little before) yet Queen Elecabeth feri-trianders. oufly pitying the Netherlanders, whose Provinces, by the great Commodiousnels of their Situation and mutual Friendship, had adhered to England for many Ages, as if they had been conjoin'd with it in a Matrimonial Knot; and therefore not enduring that the French, by undertaking their Protection, should get them into his Pol-fession; sent the same Wilks, at his Return out of Spain, to Don John of Aufria, to give him fecret Notice, that the Duke of Aufria (for so he was now call'd, who before was Duke of Alenzon) was invited by the States, with an Army of French; and therefore it was his fafest course to yield to a Truce; left he expos'd the Pro-vinces to prefent Hazard. But he, being a Man of a fiery and martial Spirit, and putt'd up with Pride, at his Success in a Battle fought against the Estates at Gemblours, answer'd in one Word, the Estates at Gemblours, answer'd in one Word, That he neither intended a Truce, nor fear'd the French. Nevertheles Queen Elizabeth, respecting her own Good, and the Good of the Netherlands, sent Sir Edward Stafford into France, to learn whether there were any Preparations on the Frontiers of France, toward the Netberlands, and what Levies of Men they were making.

Out of England had now transported them- Several felves John North, the L. North's eldelt Son ; John English Norris, the L. Norris's fecond Son; Henry Cavendill go over and The. Morgan, Colonels; with many Volun- Netherteers, to learn the Rudiments of Military Difei- lands. teers, to learn the Rudaments of Military Difference Poline. Caffmire allo, the Elector-Palatine's Son, brought down an Army of Geman Horse and Foot into the Netherlands, to the great Charge of Queen Elizabeth. Don John, having a great defire to assault the States Camp at Rimman, or to provoke them to Battel, before all their Succours were come together out of France and Germany, posted thither fooner than was expected; and the Horsemen that stood Centinel presently retreating, he purfu'd 'em with an hot and furious Charge, as if he were fure of the Victory. But they taking fresh Courage, foon repulsed Don Don 70hm John's Men. Who wheeling off, endeavour'd to repuls'd. break through certain Hedges and Covers where the English and Scottish Volunteers were disposed, but could not, meeting a warm Reception from English the English and the Scots; who, throwing off their fight Cloaths by reason of the hot Weather, sought in manfully. their Shirts tied up between their Thighs. Norris, the General of the English, fighting floutly, had three Horses slain under him, and get great Commendations in this Battel for his Martial Valour; as did alfo Stuart a Scottishman, Bingham

Lieutenant to Cavendish, and William Mark-To comfort and relieve these Netherland Pro- A fruitles vinces embroil'd with Civil War, there came Embairs from the Emperor the Count of sountzenberg to the Ne from the Ference King Montieur Peop pos de Bullieure, therland and from Queen Elizabeth the Lord Cobban and

Sir Francis Walfingham, to find out some way for making a Peace. But they all return'd without effecting any thing, fince Don John would by no means admit of the reform'd Religion, and the Prince of Orange flatly refus'd to return into Holland.

About this time Egremend Rateliffe, Son to Hen-Rateliffe 77 Larl of Suffex by his fecond wife, a Man of a and in turbulent Spirit, and one of the Chief in the Companor the Robellion, who fervd under Don John non execute by was accused by the English Fugitives, as if he had Don Jim.

Death of

seen fent over underhand to murder Don John, delph was font by Queen Elizabeth into Scotland 🔿 15-8. and was taken in the Camp at N. mur with one Ann.21. Grey an Englishman, as accellary to the Plot, and they were both of 'em executed The Spaniards give out, that Ratcliffe at his Death confess d volunturily, that he was fet at Liberty out of the Tower of London purposely, and encourag'd by Walfingham with great Promifes to commit the Fact. The English that were there prefent deny that he made any fuch Confession, tho' it's true the Fugitives did what they could to extort fuch a Confession from him. But Persons whose Minds differ in Religion do too-too much, obscure the Light of Honesty and Truth on both sides: And who knoweth not that Fugitives do devife many things out of meer Hatred, and a defire to flander and backbite others?

At that very instant Don John, in the flower of Aughria of his Age, laid aide his fond Ambition, toge-ther with his Life, by the Peftilence; or, as former the results of the Peftilence of the formal binefalls. fay, out of very Grief, because he found himself neglected by the King his Brother, after he had gaped first after the Kingdom of Tunis, whereby Guleta or Golotta in Africa was loft, and then after the Kingdom of England; and had fecretly enter'd into a Confederacy with the Guifes, without the privity of the French King and the Spaniard, for the defence of both Crowns.

The Duke of Anjou in the mean time, tho' his Anisoppo. Mind were fet upon the Netherland War, yet, to fecutes his fhew that he could attend both Military and Love Marriage matters at once, profecuted his Marriage with Queen Elizabeth, which he had begun to fue for Q. Eliz. whilst he was Duke of Alenzon. And first Bacherville, being fent for this purpose, came to the Queen (in her Progress) at Melford, Cordall's House, in Suffolk. Shortly after came Rambolette from the French King. And lastly, after a Month more, came Simier from Anjou, a Man of Wit and Parts, and one throughly versed in Lovefancies, pleafant Conceits and other Gallantries, accompany'd with many of the Nobility of France: Whom the Queen entertain'd at Richmond frets at the fo kindly, that Leicester raged, being now quite kind Re-ception of frustrate of his long hoped-for Marriage. the French indeed, a little before, when Aftley, one of the Embiffa- Queen's Bed-chamber, covertly commended Leidors. ceffer unto her for an Husband, she answer'd in a Pattion: Doft thou think me so unlike myself, and so unmindful of my Royal Majelfy, that I would prefer my Servant, whom I myself have raifed, before the greatest Princes of Christendom, in my choosing of an Husband?

The death

Much about this time Margaret Douglass, Counof the Countes tels of Lenox, Niece to King Henry VIII. by his of Lenox, eldest Sister, Widow of Matthew Earl of Lenox, of Lenox. eldeft Sifter, and Grandmother to James King of Great Britain, having furvived eight Children which she had been Mother of, passed to her heavenly Country in her Climacterical Year, and was bury'd at Westminster with a stately Funeral at the Queen's Charges. She was a Matron of fingular Piety, Patience and Modesty; who was thrice cast into the Tower, (as I have heard her fay herfelf) not for any crime of Treason, but for Love-matters. First, when Thomas Howard, Son of Thomas Howard the first Duke of Norfolk of that Name, falling in love with her, died in the Tower of London: Then for the love of Henry Lord Darly, her Son, to Mary Queen of Scots: And laftly, for the love of Charles her younger Son, to Elizabeth Candish, Mother to the Lady Arbella, with whom the Queen of Scots was accufed to have made up the March, as I have faid

> Now to give a touch of Scottish Matters. bout the beginning of this Year, Thomas Ran-to learn in what Condition the Affairs of Scotland 1) 78. stood; to congratulate the King concerning his dim 21. Proficiency in Learning, (which, by reason of Reason) his fingular Towardness and most excellent Mo- (ent mo) mory, was certainly very great, even above his senting Age) and to knic his Mind firmly unto the Eng-lifb, by recounting the Queen's Kindnesses to-try his transfer to the Age of the Age wards him, and the motherly Affection she bare trustions him; to deal with Argyle, that the Hebridian or Wild Scots might not affect the Robels in Ireland; as also to perfuade Morton the Regent to lay ande with all fpeed his Enmity to Aggle, Abd, and others, left he got himfell the Hatred of the Nobility, and quite alienated the Queen's Mind from him. He was now privately accused to have thain'd the Reputation of his former Wildom and Prowefs by his Covetouiness and Avarice; and Morton in short time grew into such a general Hatred, the begent that by joint confent of the States, the Govern-semoved ment was translated from him to the King, tho' from his in respect of his Age not so capable thereof, the King (for he was then scarce twelve Years old) and takes the twelve of the chief of the Nobility named to be Governaffiftant to the King with their Counfel, every ment, to lead him down, not to throw him down from his former Dignity.

The King having taken upon him the Go- The King vernment, forthwith by Dunfermelin made a grate- Emballa-ful acknowledgment of the Civilities of Queen dor into Elizabeth towards him, as proceeding not for England much from nearners of Blood, as from their common Profesion of the true Religion. The Confederacy of Edinberough made between both Kingdoms in the Year 1559, he defir'd might be rati- Embalig. fied, the better to restrain the Robberies of the Borderers, and prevent the Defigns of the Adversaries of the true Religion; that Justice might be administer'd indifferently between the People of both Kingdoms; that full Restitution might be made of all Goods taken by Piracy; and that his ancient Patrimony in England (that is, the Lands and Poffessions granted to Matthew and Margaret his Grandfather and Grandmother) might be put into his Hands as next Heir, for now (the Revenues of the Kingdom of Scotland being much diminish'd) he wanted Money to provide for his Houshold, and to maintain a Guard answerable to his Royal Dignity.

The first Request the Queen readily granted: Queen's But for that concerning his Patrimony, she was answer not so easily intreated. And yet she would not give ear to those who affirm'd, that the Lady Arbella, Daughter to Charles the King's Unkle, and born in England, was next Heir to the Lands in England : Neither yet would she hear the Embaffador, who shew'd out of former Histories, that the Kings of Scotland, born in Scotland, had in ancient Times succeeded, without any Controverly, by Hereditary Right, to Lands in England in the County of Huntingdon; and earneftly befought her, that the would not deny a Prince, her nearest Kinsman, the Privilege of Citizens, which she had often granted to Foreiners and Strangers. But she commanded the Rents of those Lands to be sequester'd by the Lord Burgo Mafter of the Wards; and fignify'd to the Embaffador, that the King should satisfie his Grandmother's Creditors out of the Earl of Lenox his Lands in Scotland. For the took it not well that the King, after the death of Charles his Unkle, had revok'd the Infersment of the Earldom of Lenox made to his Unkle and his Heirs, and that to the Prejudice (as was fuggested) of the Lady Arbella; tho', by the Privilege of the Scots, it three Months three of them by turns : Amongit which was Morton himfelf, that they might feem was flill lawful for them to revoke all fuch 1578. Grants and Donations as were Prejudicial to Ann. 21. the Realm, and made in their Minority.

Sentrish

English Council.

The Council of England were of opinion, that Demands the Confederacy of Edinborough needed no Confirmation, as that which was already firm and in full force. They requir'd the Embalfidor to propound fomewhat which might at least in part recompense the Queen's Courtelles towards the King, (who had not spared her Englishmens Blood in his Defence) and might confirm the Amity betwixt 'em. Hereupon, according to his Inftructions, he propounded that a League might be made, not of Offence, but of Defence, and mutual Affiftance against the Bishop of Rome and his Confederates, upon certain Conditions, and against the Invaders of both Kingdoms, and the Rebels thereof upon account of Religion. Over and above this, the English thought it reason, that seeing the Queen neither had omitted nor would omit any thing for the King's Prefervation, and for that reason had incur'd the great Displeasure of many, the Estates of the Realm of Scotland should give her Security, that the King should not, during his Minority, make or renew any Confederacy with any other whomsoever, contract Marriage, or be fent any where out of Scotland, without the knowledge of the Queen. But these things, as being Matters of great Importance, were by the Scots put off to another Time, to be exactly and deliberately confider'd of. In the mean while Morton, prefuming upon

refumeth

The Nobility rife

againft

his own Wit, (which certainly was very quick and fharp) and upon his long Experience, and vernment the Number of his Adherents, while he thought nothing to be well done which he did not himfelf, and could not endure not to be the Man he was, refumed unto himfelf the Government, neglecting his Collegues, and flighting the preferib'd Form of Government. The King he kept in his own power within the Castle of Sterlin, and at his own pleafure either excluded or admitted whom he lifted. Whereupon the Nobility being incens'd, chofe the Earl of Athol for their Head, and made Proclamation in the King's Name, That all that were above Fourteen Years of Age, and under Threefcore, should meet together with Weapons, and Victuals for fifteen Days, to fet the King at Liberty. And meet they did in great Numbers, and marched with Banners difplay'd to Fawkirk, where Morton with his Forces appear'd against them. But Sir Robert Eurres, the English Embassador, by his Mediation, and proposing of reasonable Conditions, stay'd them from Fighting. And Morton foon after, if he were weary of publick Employments, withdrew himfelf to his own Houte: Not long after The death which died the Earl of Athol, not without suspiof the E. cion of Poifon. Which fome Men incens d aof dital. gainft Marray laid hold on amount other things gainst Morton laid hold on; amongst other things. as a Means to bring him into Hatred, and ceafed not to profecute him (as we shall shew) till they

A defign Pope and Spaniard to invade

In Ireland there happen'd this Year no memorable Matter. But for invading of Ireland and England both at once, and deposing of Queen Elizabeth, who was the strongest Bulwark of the reform'd Religion, both the Spaniard, and Gregory England, the thirteenth Bishop of Rome, had their fecret Confultations and Defigns, carrying on their own private Ends under the pretence of restoring Religion. The Pope, that he might get the Kingdom of Ireland for his Son James Boncompagni, whom he had made Marquis of Vineola: The Spaniard, that he might privately and underhand relieve the Irish Rebels, as Queen Elizabeth had fuccour'd the Netherlanders; whilst Amity in had quite overthrown him.

Words was in the mean while maintain'd on both? lides: As alfo, that he might (if it were possible) by the Pope's Authority possess himself of the Ann. 21. Kingdom of England, and thereby the eafier reduce the Netberland Confederates into Order; whereof he had no hopes, unless he were Master of the Sea; and this he saw could not be, unless he was first Master of England. And there is no doubt but as he oweth the Kingdoms of Nuples, Sicily and Navarre, to the Bounty of the Popes; fo would be also very gladly have holden England of him as an Homager.

These two, who knew that the greatest Strength of England confiited in the Navy-Royal and the Merchants Ships, which were both built and furnish'd for Sea-fervice, thought it good that the Italian and Low-Country Merchants should upon some Pretence or other, hire the greatest part of these Merchants Ships for long Voyages, and while they were abroad, the Navy-Royal should be surpriz'd and overpower'd by a greater Fleet; and that at the same time, Thomas Stukely, T. Stukely an English Fugitive, of whom I have spoken be-under fore in the Year 1570, should with a Body of takes War Men join with the Rebels in Ireland. He, like against a fubtil old Fox, had by his vapouring Brags of County, himself, and by promiting the Kingdom of Ireland to the Pope's base Son, wrought himself into fuch Favour with that ambitious old Man, that he honour'd him with the Titles of Marquis of Lemfter, Earl of Wexford and Caterlangh, Viscount Morough, and Baron of Rofs, (which are places of good Note in Ireland) and gave him the command of 800 Italians, levied at the Spaniard's Charge and Pay for the Irifb War. With these putting to Sea from Civita Vecebia, he arriv'd at length in Portugal, at the Mouth of the River Tagus or Teyo; where, by the operation of the Divine Providence, these Designs against England and Ireland were disappointed.

Enguma and retains were disappointed.

For Selptiam King of Portingsl, who was to the Exhaust the principal Command and Managing of Selptions this Expedition into England, (fince being puffed K of Portup with youthful Heat and Ambition, he had negation not long before promised his utmost Help and Aftisms and Millanus when Without of Portugation that the Aftisms of the Portugation of the Portugation of the Portugation of Po Affistance to the Bishop of Rome against the Mabonetans and the Protestants) was with great Promises drawn to the War of Africa by Mahomet the Son of Abdalla King of Fez, and dealt with Stukely to accompany him first with those Italians into Mauritania. Stukely was easily perfuaded, (and the Spaniard diffaining that the Pope's Son was defignd King of Ireland, was not unwilling He, with to it) and went with Don Schaftian into Mauritation and in that memorable Battel, wherein Student three Kings, Sebaftian aforefaid, Mahamet and Ab- flan in dal Melech, were flain, he finish'd the Interlude Battel. of a loofe Life with an honeft Catastrophe or Conclusion.

Had not this fatal End of Don Schaffian diver- The Spated the Spaniards Mind from the Invalion of En-mards degland, to the hopes of the Kingdom of Portugal, fign divera great Storm of War (if any Credit may be gi- ted upon Puringal. ven to the English Fugitives) had fallen upon England. For they write, That those valt Forces which the Spaniard had begun to levy in Italy, and were to be poured into England, were employ'd for the Conquest of Portugal. Neither could he be perfuaded (being wholly bent upon the Conquest of that Kingdom) so much as once to think of England, tho' the English Fugitives with great importunity urged him thereunto, and the Bishop of Rome promis'd him a confe crated Banner or Crofs for this, as for an Holy War. But when certain Intelligence came, that Stukely and his Italians were flain in Muritania, and that the Spaniard fet his Mind upon nothing but Portugal, the English Fleet which waited for Stukel.

1578.

Orury, outy of treland. ir H nry Sidney

treland.

1579.

Stukely upon the Coast of Ireland was called home: | 1578. And Sir William Drury President of Munster, when Ann.21. he had now at feveral times been Lord-Deputy about eleven Years; and when he was ready to take Ship, he bade Ireland farewel, with that Verse out of the Psilms, When strated out of Egypt, and the Husse of Jacob from amongst a barbarom People. A singular Man he was, and one of the most commendable Deputies of Ireland, to whose Wisdom and Valour Ireland cannot but acknowledge itself very much indebted, the' for the most part it uses to complain of its Deputies.

The Two and Twentieth Year of ber Reign.

Cafimire

John Casimire, Son to Frederick the third Elecomesinto ctor-Palatine, who had the last Year (tho' fome-England. what too late) brought a strong Army of Germans into the Netherlands, at a vast Charge to the States and Queen Elizabeth, and had done no Service with them, being now drawn by the mutinous Inhabitants of Gaunt to take their part, came into England in the Month of January, in a tharp and fnowy Winter, to excuse himself about the Miscarriage of his Expedition, laying the whole blame upon the French. He was most honourably received, and conducted with great Pomp into London, with Torches lighted, by the Lord-Mayor, the Aldermen and Citizens, and to the Court by the chief of the Nobility; where he was entertain'd with Tilting, Barriers, and coftly Banquets, and honour'd with the Order of St. George, the Queen herfelf buckling on the Garter about his Leg: And after the fettling of a yearly Pention on him, and many rich Pre-fents made him, he return d in the middle of Fe-bruary into the Netberlands, being transported in one of the Queen's Ships; where he found that

His Army mercenary Army disbanded. For when Alexandisbanded der Farnese, Prince of Parma, who was by the Spaniard made Governor of the Netherlands, was ready to fall upon the Germans, and they wanted their Pay, after a small Skirmish, and loss of fome Men, they demanded Money of him to depart out of the Netherlands. He on the contrary demanding (imperiously, but pleasantly) Money of them, that they might depart fafely with their Lives, they were content with his Paffport, and made hafte Home, not without Diffionour to themselves, and greater Damage Q Eliz, to the States. Queen Elizabeth norwithstanding relieves failed not the States, but furnish'd 'em with a great Sum of Money: For which William Davithe States with Mo-Jon (who was fent a little before to quiet the Dithempers of those of Gaunt, which were violent against Churches and Churchmen) brought into England the ancient Jewels and rich Plate of the House of Burgundy, mortgaged by Matthias of Aufria and the States.

In the mean while, Simier ceased not amoroutly to woo Queen Elizabeth in Anjou's behalf. And altho' fhe stiffy excus'd herself a long time, yet he brought her to that pass, that Leicester, (who from his Heart was against the Marriage) oppolesit and others, spred Rumours abroad, that by Love-Potions and unlawful Arts he had infinuated into the Queen's Affection, and induc'd her to the Simier en- love of Anjou. Simier, on the other fide, left no Means uneffay'd to remove Leicester out of his Place and Favour with the Queen; revealing to her his Marriage with Fffex's Widow: Whereat the Queen grew into fuch a Paffion, that the commanded Leicester not to flir out of the Castle of Greenwich, and intended to have committed him to the Tower of London, which his Enemies much defir'd. But Suffex, tho' his greatest and deadlieft Adverfary, and one that earneftly en-

deavour'd to promote the Marriage with Arjan, diffunded her, whilft out of a folid Judgment, and the innate Generofity of his noble Mind, he Anazz. was of opinion that no Man was to be troubled for lawful Marriage, which amongst all Men hath ever been had in Honour and Esteem. Yes glad he was that by this Marriage he was now put befide all hope of marrying with the Queen. Nevertheless Leicester was to incented here it, that he bent himfelf to revenge the Wrong he had receiv'd. And there wanted not fome who accus'd him, as if he had fuborned one Touder of the Queen's Guard, a Bravo, to take away Si-mier's Life. Certainly the Queen commanded by publick Proclamation, that no Man thould offer any Affront to Simier, his Attendants or Servants, either by Word or Deed. About this time it happen'd, that while the Queen for her A Gar-Pleasure was rowed in her Barge upon the Thames near Greenviels, attended by Sinier, the Eart of Queen's Lincoln, and Hatton her Vice-Chamberlain, a Barge young Man discharged a Piece out of a Boat, and thot one of the Barge-men in the Queen's Barge through both his Arms; who was prefently apprehended, and led to the Gallows for a terror to him: But he folemnly protesting that he did it unwittingly, and thought no harm, was foon difcharg'd. Neither would the Queen believe what fome buzzed in her Ears, that he was pupofely fet on, to mischief either her or Simier. So far was the from giving way to any Suspicion against her People, that she was many times wont to say, That she could believe nothing of her People which Parents would not believe of their Children.

Some few Days after, the Duke of Anjou him- Anjou felf arriv'd privately in England with one or two comes inonly in his company; and came to the Queen to Engl. unexpectedly at her Court at Greenwich; where they had some private Discourse together, all Byftanders being remov'd, which I lift not to fearch into, (for the Secrets of Princes are an inextricable Labyrinth): Which done, he return'd, having been feen but by very few. But after a Month A Confulor two, she commanded that Burgbley Lord tationa-Treasurer, Sussex, Leicester, Hatton and Walsing-bout the ham, after ferious Confideration of the Dangers and Advantages which might arise from her Marriage with him, fhould confult with Simier about the Writings and Contract of the Mar-The Dangers feem'd to be: Lest he riage. should attempt any thing against the receiv'd The dan Religion: Left he should either endeavour to get gers if the Possession of the Kingdom for himself by accepted. the Pope's Donation, or betray it into the Hands of the Queen of Scots, and marry her after the Queen's death; or else after his Brother's death return into France, and appoint a Viceroy over England, which the English would by no means endure. Moreover; left he should engage the English in forein Quarrels: Lest the Scots, prefuming upon their ancient League with the French, should take greater heart and courage against the English: Lest the Spaniard should engage himfelf against fo great and united a Power. And laftly, Left the People, being burden'd with Payments for the Maintenance of his Greatness and State, should break out into Rebellion. The The ad-Advantages feem'd to be thefe: That a firm A-vanta greement would be establish'd with the French : That the Rebellions of the Papists (if any should be) would be the easier suppressed: That all hopes would be cut off from the Queen of Scots, and from those who fought to her for Marriage, or who any way favourd her: That the Spaniards would be brought to compound Matters in the Netherlands, and confirm the League of Burgundy: And that England might at length enjoy

Simier promotes the D. of Anjou's Marriage. Lescefter

ncy.

deavours Lescester out o. Fa-Volue.

a found and joyful Security, by means of the 1579. Queen's Children, a thing fo often wish'd for.

Aubigny

Ann.22. But if this Marriage should be neglected, they fear'd lest the French would be incens'd, and the nences, if Scots alienated: that Anjou would contract a Marneglected, riage with the Spaniard's Daughter, with whom he might receive the Netherland Provinces in Dowry: that the French King and the Spaniard would aid the Queen of Seets, draw the King of Seets to their Party, provide him a Wife for their own turn, and utterly abolish the Retheir own turn, and utterly abolish the Re-form'd Religion: and that the English, when they faw no Hopes of Children by the Queen, would adore the Rifing-Sun. Which things could not but be a great Torment and Anguish to her Mind.

In these days, as some English fear'd an Altenation of Religion by means of the Dake of Anjou; fo also did the Scots by means of ano-d'Aubigny ther Frenchman, viz. Amate or Esme Stuart D'Aucomesinto bigny, who came about this time into Scotland, to Scotland. vint the King his Coulin. (For he was Son to John Stuart, Brother to Matthew Earl of Lenox, the King's Grandfather; and was surnam'd D'Auwhence to bigny of dubigny in Berry, which Charles VII. King of France gave in times puff, to John Stuart of the House of Lonox; who, being Constable or General of an Army of Scots in France, defeated the English at Beauge, and was afterward flain by them in the Battle of Harrans; and ever fince this Title has belong'd to the younger Brothers He is rai- of that House.) This D' Aubigny the King emfed to Ho brac'd with fingular Kindnels, gave him very fair Lands and Poffessions, admitted him to his inwardett Counfels, made him Chamberlain of Scotland, Captain of the Castle of Dunbriton, and (having first in an Assembly of the Estates formally revoked the Letters-Patents, whereby he had in his Minority created Robert, Bishop of Cathneß, his Grandfather's third Brother, Earl of Lenox, and recompens'd the faid Robert with the Earldon of March) created him first Earl, then Suspected Duke, of Lenox. This extraordinary Favour of the tro- his with the King, procur'd him Envy from marghant ny, who fecretly mutter'd, that he, being a Man moft devoted to the Guifes and the Romift Religion, was fent into Scotland, to fubvert the true Religion This increas'd the Suspicion, because he apply'd himself to Morton's Adversaries, and made Intercettion for calling home Thomas Carre of Fernihurst, a Man of all others most in the Interest of the Queen of Scots, while Morton in teftants.

vain oppos'd the fame, whose Power now mani-festly declined, (tho' he seem'd to have highly merited, as having defeated the Hamiltons, and taken the Castle of Hamilton, and Dustrane.) Some Hamiltons there were who at this time wrought the Hamilking ufe of their Name as a Scare-Crow to him, pleafure. and moleiling them in fuch fort, that for their own necessary Defence, they held those Castles against the King: but they were forced to fur-render them, and being convict, by Parliament, of the Murder of the Regents, as well Murray

Proferib'd as Lenex, they were proferibed Of these Ha-miltons, some fled into England, for whom Queen Interceded Elizabath curricftly interceded by Erington, as fr by Q well in point of Honour as of Juffice, for a finuch as the in the Year 1573, for establishing Peace, had engaged, that they should not be call'd in question for those Matters, but with her Con-

Original of the

About this time also, through her Interceftion, in another part of the World, the Grand Company, Signior Amurath Cham, upon Treaty betwist William Harbourn an Englishman, and Mustapha Beg a Turkijh Baffa, granted that the English Merchants might fixely triffick throughout her whole Empire, in like manner as the French, the Venetians, the Polonians, the King of the Germans, and other neighbouring Nations did. Whereupon, they, by the Ann. 22. Queen's Authority and Privilege, grew into a Society or Company; which, being call'd the Turky-Company, have ever tince found a very gainful Trade to Constantinople, Angori, Scio, Pegainti Itade to Conjuntinopie, Angori, Seroj te-traczo, Alexandria, Egypt, Cyprus, and elfewhere in Afia, for Spices, Cottons, raw Silk, Tapettries, Indian Dye, Grapes of Corinth, or Currants; Soap, &c.

The execrable Impiety of Mathew Hamont, Hamont's which about this time he openly, at Norwick, Impiety, pour'd out, against God and his Christ, and is (I hope) extinct with his burning alive, is rather to be bury'd in Oblivion, than to be remember'd. And for my part, I am not of their mind, who think it expedient for the publick Good, that all manner of Villanies, Poisonings, and Impieties, should be made known and publish'd: for he that relates such things, does as good as teach them.

This was the last Year of Sir Nicolas Bacon, Sir N Ex-Lord-Keeper of the Great Seal of England, un- con dies. der which Title he exercis'd and enjoy'd, by an Ordinance of Parliament, the Honour and Authority of Chancellor of England. A Man exceeding grofs-body'd, sharp-witted, of singular Wisdom, rare Eloquence, excellent Memory, and the Life, as it were, of the Privy-Council. In whose Room succeeded Thomas Bromley, with Bromley the Title of Lord-Chancellor of England.

After Bacon, follow'd Sir Thomas Gresham, Knt. Death of Citizen of London, the Queen's Merchant, Son Greshan of Sir Richard Greßham, Knight; who, for an who built Ornament to his Country, and the Use of Merchanes, built a very fair Walking place in London, Greßkamphich Ornament was a state of the Sir Royal Till and the Walking place in London, Greßkamphich Ornam Wirscham 2017, The Market Walking Sir Royal Till and Sir All Sir Royal Till and Sir Ro which Queen Elizabeth nam'd The Royal-Exchange; College in and gave a large and fpatious House he had in London, the City, to the Promotion of Learning; founding therein Lectures of Divinity, Civil-Law, Phylick, Astronomy, Geometry, Rhetorick, and Musick, with competent Stipends.

In Munster, a Province of Ireland, James Fitz- 34 Fitz-Morris rais'd a new Rebellion; the same James, Morris who a while before, falling upon his Knees before Perott, President of Munster, had with great in Ireland Lamentations and humble Intreaties, begg'd his Pardon, and most religiously vow'd his Fidelity and Obedience to the Queen. This Man, I fay, (who was never well but in Troubles) had withdrawn himself into France, promising the King that if he would affift him, he would unite all beland to the Scepter of France, and restore the Romish Religion in that Isle. But being weakemigh Kenigion in that his bat being hear yellow in the least of the went from France into Spain, and made the fame Promifes to the Catholick King. The King Raind by fent him over to the Pope; from whom ha- the Pope ving (at the earnest Solicitation of Sonders an and the English Priest, and Allen an Irish one, both of cm Doctors in Divinity) gotten a little Money, the Authority of a Lorent Authority of a Legate granted to Sanders, a confecrated Banner, and Letters of Recommendation to the Spaniard, he return'd into Spain, and from thence arriv'd, about the first day of July, He lands a with those two Divines, three Ships, and a small Party in Body of Men, at St. Mary Wick (which the Irifh Kerry. contractedly call Smerwick) in Kerry, a Peninfula of Ireland; where, in a place folenmly confe-crated by the Priests, he erected a Fort, and drew up his Ships close under it: which Ships Thomas Courtney an English Gentleman, who lay by chance at Anchor with a Man of War, in a Road hard-by, foon after fet upon, took and car- Rebels ry'd away, and depriv'd the Spaniards of the Besships nefit of the Sea. John and James, Brothers to the Earl of Definend, gathering together a few approves the Murder.

Lin in his bed

Sanders

Irgh, join themselves forthwith with their Cou-in Firz-Morris: But the Earl himself, who wish'd Ama, 22. well to their Defign, gather d his Friends toge-ther, as if he meant to oppose them, having favours cunningly shifted off the Earl of Classerry, who the Rebels, was coming to him with a felect Body of Men, to affift him against the Enemies and Rebels.

As foon as the Lord-Deputy had certain Intelligence, that the Enemies were landed, he commanded the Earl of Defmond and his Brothers jointly, by Henry Davill, an English Gentleman, and a flout Soldier, and very familiar with the Defmonds, that they should forthwith affault the Fort: Which when they fished off, and refus'd to do, as a thing full of Danger, Davill deputred, and folin Definend follow'd after him. At Trally, a finall Town, he overtook him at his Inn, and in the dead of the Night, having corrupted his Hoft, broke into his Chamber with certain Cut-throats having their Swords drawn, where Davill slept securely with Arthur Carter, Lieutenant to the Marshal of Munster, a stout old Soldier: but being awaken'd with the Noife when he saw John Desmond in the Chamber with his Sword drawn, he rais'd himfelf up, faying, What is the matter, my Son? (for so he was wont familiarly to call him) I will be no longer thy Son, (faid he) nor finit thou he my Father: Thou Shalt die. And with that they flew both him and Carter that lay with him, stabbing them in many places, after that Davill's Lacquey, by interpoling his naked Body, had done the beft he could, for a while, to defend his Mafter, and had receiv'd fome Wounds. Then he flew all Davill's Servants, one after another, who were lodg'd here and there in feveral Chambers; and fo returning all begoar'd with Blood, he boaffed among the Spaniards, of the Murder: And let this (faid he) be a Pledge to you, of my Faithfulness towards you and the Cause you are engaged in. Fact Sanders commended, as a fiveet Sacrifice in the Sight of God. James Fitz-Morris misliked the Manner of the Murder; and wish'd rather it had been done upon the Way, than in his Bed. The Earl, when he heard it, condemn'd the l'act, derefting it with all his heart. Spaniards

The Spaniards, when they faw to fmall a Numin despair. ber of Joh join with them, and those unarm'd and pitiful Fellows, contrary to what Fitz-Morris had promis'd them; began to despair of themfelves, and to cry out they were undone, and to bewail their Condition; for they faw no Way to escape either by Sea or Land. Fitz-Morris exhorts them to wait patiently, affuring them that there were great Forces coming to their Aid, and feignedly takes a Journey to St. Croß in Tipperary, under pretence of performing a Vow he had made in Spain; but indeed to gather to-gether feditious Fellows out of Commught and

Skirmith

Whilft he, with a few Horfemen and twelve betwist Footmen, took his Journey through the Rebels of William a Burgh his Kinfman, (who in the fora Burghs, mer Rebellion was engaged with him) his Horfes tiring, he took fome out of the Plough near the High-way: the Plough-men, making an Out-cry, call together the Neighbourhood recover their Hories; amongst whom the Sons of William a Burgh, being couragious young Men, took Horse, and pursu d him so hard, that they overtook him. Fitz-Morris feeing Theobald a Burgh and his Brethren, who not long fince had been Rebels with him, spake to them friendly in this manner, Coufins, (fays he) let us not fall out for a Fade or two. I doubt not but, when ye understand the Cause of my Returning into Ireland, ye will join your Party with me. Theobald answerd, Of our former Rebellion, both myfelf, my Father and my Friends do greatly repens us: Our Fidelity and Obedience we have o Just to our most gracious Princess, who has pardon'd 1579.

18 our Lives; and to her we will keep our Alligiance. Ann. 22. in our Larges; and to her me milt keep our Alligiance, Min. 22. Therefore reflow in our Hofes, or I will make you reflore them. And withal, charging him with his FirstLance, he ran at him. They fought a while, Moranda and Theobald and one of his Brother, with forme watering of his Party, were flain: and withal, First-Merris of his himself fell down dead, being run chrough with mention. a Lance, and shot in the Head with a leaden Bullet; and most of his Men were thin. His Head was cut from his Body, his Body quar-ter'd, his Quarters fet upon Poles at the Gares of Kilmalock, where he had formerly (as I faid before) with folemn Protestations, Iworn Allegiance to his Prince, in the Church, Lefore Pegrance to instrince, in the Charlett, Cook virt. The Queen, by her Letters mixt with Grief and Love, comforted William a Bargh for William the Lofs of his Sons, honour'd him with the Ti- a Bargh tle of Baron of Caftle-Conell, and gave him a made a yearly Pention: whereat the old Alan being filled Barondies and overcome with fidden load died (horstly after for Joy. and overcome with fudden Joy, died thortly after. Now was Drury Lord-Deputy come near to Deimond's Kilmalock, and fent for the Earl of Delmond, who feigh'd appear'd before him, promis'd his Fidelity and tubmiffi-Obedience to his Princets, and bound himfelf by Oath, that both himfelf in person and his would ferve her against the Rebels. Whereupon he was dilmiss'd, to gather his Mon together, and return to the Lord-Deputy. John Dofmond, John Dog-the Earl's Brother, who was put in Fitz-Morris's mond de-Room among the Rebels, by an Ambush sur-feats the prized and slew Herbert and Prife, two English Captains, with their Companies; and was hurt himfelf in the Face. But the Companies were made up again, with fix hundred Men out of Deven-fiire: and Perott was fent out of England with fix

Men of War, to defend the Coalt.

At which time the Lord-Deputy, being daily Malber more and more afflicted with Sickness, was fain President to retire to Waterford, for Recovery of his Health, of Munand committed both the Managing of the War, and the Presidentship of Munster, to Nicolas Mai bey Governor of Connaught, an experienced old Soldier. As he was departing, Defmonds Wife fell upon her Knees, and offer'd him her only Son and Heir in Hoftage for his Father. For after he was departed from Kelmalack, he appeared no more: tho' Afalbey now and then by Letters put him in mind of his Duty and Promife. Malbey, fuppoling it not good to delay any time, nur-ches into Conilo, a wild and woody Country, against the Rebels; where John Defmond encounter'd him in a pitch'd Field, with the Pope's hallow'd Banner display'd: and they fought smartly on both fides. At length, Fortune favouring the He defeats Valour of the English, John first berook himself to the Rebels Flight, and left his Men to the Slaughter; amongst whom was found that Allen the Divine, who had encouraged them to the Engagement, promiting them affured Victory. That Night the Earl of Defmond, who had ftood a Spectator from an Hill hard-by, diffem-blingly by Letters congratulated the Prefident concerning his Victory, and under pretence of Friendship, advised him to remove his Camp from thence. Malbey fent back the Messenger, and by his Letter commanded the Earl to come and join his Forces with his: whom when he had in vain expected the space of Four days, he march'd forward to Rekel, a fmull Town of Def-mend. Now Defmond, who had in Shew and Defmend Words, fo long and fo egregioully play'd the openly re-Diffembler, ceafes longer to act that Part, and belta openly difcovers his rebellious Spirit. The fame Night the Rebels charged Malbey's Camp, in the dark; which notwithstanding they found fo strongly fortify d, that they retired without effefling thing any thing. The Prefident, in regard the 1579. Place feem'd commodious to divide the Rebels Ann 22. Forces, put a Garrison into it, and march'd from thence towards Asketten, a Castle of the Earl's, upon a Rock, compass'd about with the River Asketten, and kept by a Party of Soldiers. Yet before he would affault the fame, he wrote again to Defmond, and exhorted him not to incur the Stain of Rebellion, but to return to his Duty; laying before him, the Queen's Clemency, the ancient Dignity of the House of Defmend, the Glory of his Ancestors, and his own Infamy with Posterity. He on the contrary both continu'd obstinate in his Resolution, and strengthen'd his Camp all the Ways he could, both with the late-ly-arriv'd Spaniards, and with bifb. At this time, of in the beginning of Odiober, Drury the Lord-De-Loeputy puty died at Waterford; a Man certainly of ap-prov'd Vettue, and bred up in the Wars, from his very Youth, in France, Scotland, and Ireland.

The Lord-Deputy being dead, Malbey's Authority in Munster died also; therefore, putting his Soldiers into Garrison-towns, he retired into Rebulsen-Conneggibt, his own Government. By the Lord-Deputy's death the Rebels take Courage, and confult how to free themselves from their Subjection to the Fuglish. The best Course (they thought) was, to block up the Garrifons round on all fides, and fo to famish them. James Defined therefore beneged Ader, where William Stanley and George Career had their Quarters: but the Garrison fear-ing Hunger, the worst of all Evils, weary'd the Beliegers with fuch frequent Sallies, that they broke up the Siege, and left the Befieged at liberty to fetch in Booty out of the Country ad-joining; which they valoroufly and floutly perform'd, wounding James himfelf.

In the mean time, the Council of Ireland chofe made lu-Sir William Pelham for Jufficer of Ireland, with the storer of Ireland.

couraged

Fle puts in mind of his duty.

Youghall

Ormand parfiles secon.

Authority of Lord-Deputy, till a Lord-Deputy flould be created; and the Earl of Ormand they made Prefident of Munster, who fent the Earl of Desmond's Son, whom he had in Hostage, to Dublin, to be there kept. Pelbam Lord-Jufficer went into Munfter, and fent for the Earl of Delmond: but he, by Letters fent by his Wife excus'd him-felf. Ormend therefore was fent to command him to deliver up Sanders the Divine, the forein Soldiers, and the Castles of Carigo-Foyle and Asketten, into the Lord-Justicer's hands, to submit himself absolutely, and use his Forces against his Brothers and the rest of the Rebels: which if he did, he might obtain Pardon of his Rebellion; otherwife he should be proclaim'd a Traitor and Enemy to his Country. When he fill fhifted and Proclaims avoided to do it, he was, in the beginning of him Trais November, proclaim'd Traitor and guilty of High-Treafon, for having dealt with forein Princes, for the Conquett and Destruction of his Native Country, reliev'd Sanders and James Fitz-Morres Rebels, harbour'd the Spiniards who escaped out of the Fort at Smerwick, hang'd up divers faithful Subjects, display'd the Pope's Banner against the Q. and brought Foreiners into the Realm. This being proclaim'd, the Lord-Jufficer com-mitted the Profecution of the Wat to Ormond. Delmond turn'd himfelf against another part of Munfter, futpriz'd and fack d Youghall, a Port-town tneRebels. ftrongly fortify'd, where he found no Refiftance. Ormend lays all waste far and near, quite through Conilo, the Rebels only Refuge, drives away their Catrie, and gives them for Booty to his Men. The Mayor of Youghall he commanded to be hang'd before his own Door, for refufing to receive in an English Garrison; and puts a Garrison into the Town. Then he prepares to beliege the Spaniards in Strangicallia: but they had before withdrawn themselves out of Danger; yet the English pursuing them, put them every Man to the Sword, and miferably harafs'd the Rebels all 1579over Munfter. But Defmond and his Erethren, tho Ann. 22. lutking and hiding their Heads, fignify'd to the Lord-Justicer, in a long Letter, that they had un-dertaken the Protection of the Catholick Faith dence. in Ireland, and that by Authority from the Pope, and Direction of the Catholick King: and therefore they kindly advise him to join with them in fo pious and meritorious a Caufe, for the Salvation of his own Soul.

The Three and twentieth Year of her Reign.

1,80.

The Lord-Justicer smiling and jesting hereat, L Justicer return'd into Munster, assembled the Gentlemen, & Ormand and wifely kept them with him, not fuffering profecute them to depart, but upon Hostages given, and Promise made to do their best Service with him and Ormand against the Rebels: who soon after, dividing their Forces, hunt after the Rebels. The Baron of Linnaw they force to yield himself; then besiege the Castle of Carigo-Foyle, which Several Julio an Italian with a few Spaniards defended: places and having made a Breach in the Walls, by means quitted. of their great Ordnance, they enter'd it by force, and put the Garrison either to the Sword or the Gallows, and with them Julia himself Then was the Castle of Ballilangh fird and abandon'd by the Garrison, as foon as they faw the English come on; as was also Asketten, the Keeping whereof was committed to Sir Peter Carew and George his Brother, with a new Garrison of Englishmen. The Territory of Mac-Auley was harass'd: and from thence the Lord-Justicer enter'd into Kerry, over the boggy Hill of Slewlougher, drove away a great Number of Cattle, and flew very many of the Rebels. James Defmond, the Earl's Brother, having spoil'd the little Country of Muskeroy, belonging to Cormac Muc-Teg, (whom the Lord-Jufticer had difinife'd, upon condition he should do his Country good Service against the Rebels) happen'd upon Donell, Cormac's Brother, who put many of his Men to the Sword, recover'd the Boory, took fames, who was mor-fames tally wounded, and deliver d him to Warham St. Defining Leiger, Marshal of Mussfer, and to Walter Raleigh taken and (who then first had any Command of Forces.) executed. They brought him to his Trial, and, having found him guilty of High-Treason, put him to the usual part of Trajurors service up his Head. the usual Death of Traitors, setting up his Head for a Spectacle upon Cork-Gate. Defmond himfelf Defmond being diffress'd with all kind of Miseries, and no diffress, where safe, shifted from place to place, fent his Wife to the L. Justicer to beg his Pardon, and by his Friends earnestly dealt with Winter, (who then waited for the Spaniards, upon that Coast, with a well-order'd Fleet) that he might be convey'd over into England, to beg the Queen's Mercy,

The Lord-Justicer being now advertis'd, that Arthur L. Arthur Lord Grey, appointed to be Lord-Deputy Grey Deof Ireland, was arrived in Ireland, committed the puty of Care of the Army in Munster to George Bourchier, Son to John the second Earl of Bath, and returned himself, by ease Journeys, to Dublin, to deliver up his Charge to his Successor. No sooner was the Lord Grey arriv'd, but, before he had receiv'd the Sword and Enfigns of his Command, hearing that certain Rebels, under the Leading of Fuz-Eufrace, and Pheog Mac-Hugh, the Head of the powerful Family of the O-brines, did commit Thefts and Robberies, and had their Refuge in Glandilough, 25 Miles from Dublin Southward, that he might both gain to himself a Reputation. and by a fevere Beginning strike a Terror into them, he order'd the Captains and Commanders, Marchese which came from all places to falute him, to ga- gainst the ther their Forces together, and to march with him against the Rebels; who presently retired to Glandilough. This Glandilough is a grassy Val-Ann.23 ley, fit for farning of Cattle, and a great part of it fomewhat wet, befet round about with craggy Rocks and a fleep Downfal, and with Trees and Thickets of Wood, the Paths and Crofs-ways whereof are fearce known to the Dwellers thereabouts. When they were come to the place, Cosbey, Captain of the Fish light Footmen, (whom they call Kerns) who knew the places perfectly well, acquainted the reft, how dangerous it was to enter into that Valley, being fo commodious for Ambufhes: yet he perfuaded them to venture couragiously, and himself, be-ing above threescore Years of Age, led the way before 'em, and the rest follow'd after. As soon as they were descended into the Valley, they were charg'd from the Hedges with small Shor, as it were with a Storm of Hail, by the Rebels and flain. from all parts round about, whom yet they could not fee. The greatest part of 'em by far were slain; the rest with much ado climbing up the Rocks, through cumberfom and difficult Way escaped to the Lord-Deputy, who upon a Hill attended the Success with the Earl of Kildare, and James Wingfield Master of the Ordnance; who, not ignorant of the Danger, flay'd George Carew (one of his Nephews) with him against his Will, being referv'd for greater Honour. There were flain Peter Carew the younger, George Moore, Audley, and Cosby himfelf, Men of great Parameter Martiel A Filter.

Within a fhort time after, arrived at Smerwick

Repute for Martial Affairs.

Some Itain Kerry, about 700 Italians and Spaniards, under leans and Spaniards arrive in Ireland.

the Command of San-Josepho au Italian, sent from the Pope and the Spaniard, under presence of re-floring the Remish Religion, but indeed to diftract Queen Elizabeth's Forces, and to divert her Mind from the Affairs of the Low-Countries. They landed without Resistance: for Winter, who had waited for 'em a good while, upon that Coast, with several Men of War, was return'd into England, the Autumnal Equinox being now past. They raise The Enemy strengthen'd the Place with Fortista Fort. cations, and nam'd it the Fort del Or. But as soon as News was brought 'em, that Ormond, President of Munifer, approached, they abandon'd the Fort by the Perfuation of the brift, and withdrew themfelves into the Valley of Glaimgelly, envi-ron'd with fleep Hills and Woods. Some of 'em the President took, who being examin'd of their Number and Intent, confess'd, That they came but 700 strong, but brought Arms sufficient for 5000, and that they expected more Men daily out of Spain. That the Pepe and the Spaniard had resolved to drive the English out of Ireland, and had fent a great Sum of Money to that purpole, which they had deliver'd into the Hands of Sanders the Pope's Nunio, the Earl of Defmond, and John his Brother. The same Night the Italians and Spaniards, not knowing which way to turn themselves, (for they were not used to lurking in Holes) return'd in the dark to the Fort; and hard-by em encamped the Earl of Ormand. But being unprovided of Ordnance and other Necessaries for an Assault, he stay'd for the Lord-Deputy's Coming; who came thortly after, accompanyd by Zouch, Ra-leigh, Deny, Mackworth, Achin, and other Com-manders. At the fame time also was Wimer re-turn'd out of England, with the Men of War; not without a Check for his departing.

The Lord-Deputy fent a Trumpet to the Fort, to demand who they were, what they had to do in Ireland, who fent them, and why they had built a Fort in Queen Elizabeth's Kingdom, and withal, to command 'em to depart with all speed. They answer'd, they were sent, some from the most Holy Father the Pope, and some from the Catholick King of Spiin, to whom the Pope !: d given Ireland, fince Queen Elizabeth Lad juitly 150 forfeited her Title to it, for Herche They Johns 23 would therefore hold what they had gotten, and get more also, if they could. When the Lord-Deputy and Winter had confulted together, about the managing of the Siege, the Seamen, in the dead of the Night, brought certain Culverins out of the Ships, and having rais'd a Battery near the Shoar, drew them up the next way, and planted them. The Soldiers in like manner on the other fide levell'd their great Pieces for Battery, and both of 'em at once play'd for four days together against the Fort. The Spaniards made A Saler one or two Sallies, but to their own Lofs. Of the English not one Man was slain, but John Cheek, a comely and couragious young Gentleman, Son to Sir John Cheek, a very learned Knight.

San-Joepho, who had the Command of the Fort, being a faint-hearted Man, and terrify I with the continual control of the c Of us no with the continual playing of the Ordnance, be-gan prefently to think of yielding the Place: and when Hercules Pifanus and other Commanders earnestly diffuaded him from it, as a thing dishonorable to a Soldier, and urged him to prepare for a vigorous Defence, left they should by cheir Cowardice discourage the Lish, who were now ready to relieve them; he by his Agents, such was his cowardly Spirit, ramper'd with the com- Cowardife mon Soldiers, and wrought them to confent to a of the Go-Surrender, feditiously offering Violence to their vernor. Leaders. Hereupon, when they saw no Relief come, either out of Spain, or from Dessond, they hung out a white Flag the Fifth Day, and bear They a Parley. Which was deny'd 'em, because they parley had join'd themselves with the Rebels, with whom it was not lawful to have any Parley. Then they crav'd that they might depart with Bag and Baggage: but neither was this granted. Afterwards it was defired that this might be granted to their General and certain principal Men amongst them: neither would this be allow'd 'em, tho' they fued very earnestly for it. And the Lord-Deputy (inveighing very bitterly against the Pope) commanded them to yield themselves upon Discretion. When they could obtain no other Terms, they fer up their white Flag again, and cry'd Mifericordia, mifericordia, and absolutely submitted themselves to the Lord- Yields Deputy's Mercy: who presently advis'd with his Officers, what should be done with them. But in regard those who yielded, equall'd the English in Number, and fome Danger threatned from the Rebels, who were above 1700 ftrong, hardby; and the English were fo deflictute of Victuals and Apparel, that they were like to mutiny, unlefs they were relieved out of the Fort, by the Spoil of the Enemy, and Shipping was wanting to carry the Enemies away; it was concluded, (against the Mind of the Lord-Deputy, who shed Tears at the Determination) that the Commanders should be saved, and the rest promiseu-ously put to the Sword for a Terror; and that are cruelously such that the saved for a saved to the the Irish should be hang'd up: which was pre-ly treated-fently put in Execution. Yet the Queen with'd it had not been done, detesting from her Heart fuch Cruelty, the feemingly then necessary, a-gainst these Persons who had yielded themselves; and hardly did fhe allow of the Reasons for the Slaughter committed. Thus much of Matters in Ireland, which I have mention'd all together, that the Series of the Story might not be inter-rupted, tho' other things fell out in the mean while, which in respect of their time should have been mention'd first.

In England, in the beginning of this Year, Excel of the Neck attire, which we call Ruffs, being un- Apparei reasonably large, and with huge wide Plaits, restained.

English defeated

Are befieged.

L. Deputy fummons

and Cloaks reaching down almost to the Ancles, 1580. no less uncomely than expensive, were restrained Ann. 23. by Proclamation. Swords also were reduc'd to the length of three Foot, Daggers to twelve Inches belides the Handle, and the Pikes in the Boffes of Bucklers to two Inches. In like manner, in regard that great multitudes of People reforted from all Parts to London, whereby the City and Suburbs were now much enlarg'd with Buildings Buildings, (while the rest of the Cities and Towns in the Suburbsof of England ran to Decay) that unless it were timely prevented, neither the ordinary Magiftrates would sussice to govern the Multitude, nor the Countries round about to feed them, and the Contagion of Peftilence, if any fhould happen, would fpread itfelf farther and more dangeroufly by means of the Houses standing so thick together, and being pefter'd with numbers of Inhabitants; the Q. by Proclamation prohibited any new Dwelling-houses to be built within three Miles of the Gates of the City, upon pain of Imprisonment, and loss of the Materials provided for the Building: And order'd that no more than one Family should dwell in one House. In the Netherlands, Sir John Norris, General of the English Forces, and Oliver Temple, with some Meel lin Companies of Netherlanders, scaled the Walls of Mechlin, a rich City of Brabant, early one Morning, and, with great flaughter of the Townsmen and religious People, took it; with fome Commendation indeed for their Valour, had not they stain'd it with the odious Blur of their Rapine

Sacrilege and Sacrilege: For they not only plunder'd the of the En- Citizens Goods with all Infolency imaginable, but exercis'd their Rage also against the very Churches, facred Things and Monuments, offering Violence to the Dead. For we faw (which I am asham'd to speak) several Tomb-stones sent over from thence into England, and openly fet to fale, that there might not want Proofs of their Imgliffe.

Earth-

Let it not feem befide the purpose to mention quakes in the Earthquakes which happen'd in thefe Days, England. feeing they are Things that happen very rarely in England; and those that do, are rather to be call'd Tremblings of the Earth, than violent The 6th Day of April, at fix of the Clock in the Evening, the Air being clear and calm, England on this fide York, and the Netherlands almost as high as Cologn, in a moment as it were, fell a trembling in such a manner, that in fome places Stones fell down from Buildings, the Bells in Steeples struck against the Clappers, and the very Sea, which then was very calm, was Night following the Ground in Kent trembled two or three times; and the like again on the rst of May, in the dead-time of the Night. Whether this happen'd by means of Winds gotten into the hollow places of the Earth, or of Waters flowing under the Earth, or from any other Cause, let the Natural Philosophers determine : But immediately upon it there enfu'd fome Trou-

The beginning of ble to the Papifts in England; yet none but the Papills what was caus'd by themselves, upon the follow-

Troubles. ing Oceasions.

The English Priests which had fled into the No-The original of the therlands allembl'd themselves at Dowar in the English Year 1568, by the procurement of William Allen Seminaries an Oxford-man, the most Learned amongst them, at Donay, and fram'd themselves a common Discipline after the manner of a College; to whom the Bifhop of Rome affign d a yearly Pention. When afterwards the Troubles in the Netherlands encreas'd. and the English Fugitives were banish'd thence by command of Don Lewis de Requesess, another Se-

by Gregory XIII. which as Time confum'd the Popish Priests in England, might still supply new, to fow the Seeds of the Romish Religion in Eng-Ann. 23. and those that were there bred up in them were commonly call'd Seminary-Priefis.

In these Colleges, or Seminaries, (whilst a-mong other things Disputations were held concerning the Ecclefiallical and Temporal Power) Zeal to the Pope their Founder, Hatred against the Queen, and Hope of restoring the Romijh Religion by the Queen of Stats, carried fome of them so far, that they really persuaded them-felves, and so maintain'd, that the Bishop of ble Fe-Rome hath by divine Right full power over the nens of whole World, as well in Ecclefiaftical as Tem-Semmary potal Causes; and that he, according to that Prielts. abfolute Power, may excommunicate Kings, and having fo done, dethrone 'em, and abfolice their Subjects from their Oath of Allegiance.

Hereupon was that Bull declaratory of Pin V. publish'd in the Year 1569; and upon that Bull brake forth the Rebellion in the North Parts of England, and this also in Ireland whereof I spake a little before; and many withdrew themselves from the establish d Worship of God, which before they had frequented without any scruple. Hanse, Nelson and Maine, Priests, and Sherwood, Popish peremptorily taught the Queen was a Schisma-Priests ex-tick and an Heretick, and therefore to be de-cuted, posed; for which they were put to death.

Out of these Seminaries were four forth into divers Parts of England and Ireland at first a few young Men, and asterwards more, according as riefls they grew up, who were entred over-haftily in- were tent to Holy Orders, and instructed in the above-into Engl. mention'd Principles. They pretended only to administer the Sacraments of the Romish Religion, and to preach to Papifts: But the Queen and her Council foon found that they were fent underhand to feduce the Subjects from their Allegiance and Obedience due to their Prince, to ob-lige them by Reconciliation to perform the Pope's Commands, to flir up inteffine Rebellions under the Seal of Confession, and indeed to execute the Sentence of Pius V. against the Queen, to the end that way might be made for the Pope and the Spaniard, who had of late defign'd the Conquest of England. To these Seminaries were sent daily out of Jesuite England by the Papifts, in contempt and despite creep into of the Laws, great numbers of Boys and young England.

Men of all forts, and admitted into the fame, making a Vow to return into England: Others alfo crept fecretly from thence into the Land, and more were daily expected with the Jefcits, who at this time first came into England. Hereupon there came forth a Proclamation in the A Proclamation in the A Month of June, "That who foever had any matton a "Children, Wards, Kinfinen, or other Relas Seminary-"tions in the Parts beyond the Seas, should Peretty and

" after ten Days give in their Names to the Or-Jefais." dinary, and within four Months call them "home again; and when they were return'd, "fhould torthwith give notice of the fame to the faid Ordinary. That they should not directly or indirectly fupply fach as refused to return with any Money. That no Man should en-tertain in his House, or harbour any Priests fent forth out of the aforefaid Seminaries, or

"whofoever did to the contrary, should be ac-counted a savourer of Rebels and seditious Perfons, and be proceeded against according to the Laws of the Land. Before fuch time as this was proclaim'd the Pa-

" Jefuits, or cherish and relieve them. And that pifts pretended that they were femilie too late and Reme. Queen of Souts Kinsmen, and another at Reme of the Inconveniences by the said Bull, and that

Ann. 13: they cunningly (as the Event flew d) supercised;

and prohibited the Question concerning the Power of the Bishop of Rome in excommunicating and deposing of Princes to be publickly disputed; which notwithstanding (fuch is the Nature of Man, to be ffill prone and forward to whatever is forbidden) brake forth every Day hoster and Parfons & hotter amongst them. Robert Parfons also, and Ed-Campian mund Campian, Englishmen, and of the Society of the Jefuits & C. Jesus, being now ready to come over to advance come into felis, being now leady to come of the menit being now leady to come of the Romis Affairs in England, obtaind Power from Gregory the thirteenth Bishop of Rome, for moderating the faid Bull, and that in thefe An Inda-Words: Let there be bumbly prayed of our most body gence granted to Lord an Explination of the Bull declaratory let forth Papits. by Pius V. against Elizabeth and ber sidberents. Which Bull the Catholicks do defire may be understood in this manner: That it may always bind her and the Hereticks, but in no way the Catholicks, a matters now fland; but only hereafter, when publick execution of the faid Bull may be had. These Graces aforesaid the chief Bishop hath granted to Father Robert Par-fons and Edmund Campian, who are now to take their fourney into England the 14th Day of April 1580, in the presence of Father Oliver Manarco, 1580. Defence of the fame, written by Nicolus Sanders,

Parsons &

Fugitives

Foreiners excite

againft

Affifant.
This Parsons was of Somersetshire, a violent herce-Campian natur'd Man, and of a rough Behaviour. Campian was a Londoner, of a fweet Disposition, and a well-bred Man. Both of 'em were by Educaa well-bred Man. tion Oxford-men, whom I myself knew, being of their standing in the University. Campian, being of St. John's College, bare the Office of Pro-tor of the University in the Year 1568; and being made Deacon, made a shew of the Protestant Religion, till he withdrew himself out of England. Parsons was of Balliol College, wherein he openly profess'd the Protestant Religion, until he was for his loofe Carriage expell'd Difgrace, and went over to the Papifts. Thefe two coming privately into England, travell'd up and down through the Country, and to Popith Gentlemens Houses, covertly and in the difguifed Habits fometimes of Soldiers, fometimes of Gentlemen, fometimes of Ministers of the Word, and fometimes of Apparitors, diligently performing what they had in charge, both by Word and Writing. Parsons, who was constituted Superior, being a Man of a seditious and turbulent Spirit and armed with a confident Boldness, tamper'd fo far with the Papifts about deposing the Queen, that some of 'em (I speak upon their own Credit) thought to have deliver'd him into the Magistrate's Hands. Campian, tho' more modest, yet by a written Paper challeng'd the Ministers of the English Church to a Disputation, and publish'd a neat well-penn'd Book in Latin, call'd, Ten Reasons in Defence of the Doctrine of the Church of Rome: And Parsons put out another oriulent Book in English against Chark, who had foberly written against Campian's Challenge. But to Campian's Reasons, Whitaker gave a foliad Answer. Campian himself was taken a Year after, and put to the Rack; and afterwards being brought forth to difpute, he fearcely answer'd the expectation raised of him.

Neither wanted there others also of the Popish Faction (for Religion was grown into Faction) who labour'd Tooth and Nail at Rome, and elfewhere in Princes Courts, to raife War against Country. their own Country: Yea, they publish d allo in print, That the Bishop of Rome and the Spaniard had confpir'd together to conquer England, and expose it for a Spoil and Prey: And this they did of purpose to give Courage to their own Party, they were ill pleafed that ever it came forth. A and to terrific others from their Allegiance to comtheir Prince and Country. The Oneen being 1500 now openly thus affait d, both by the Arms and Amn. 23 cunning Practices of the Billiop of Rome and the Spaniard, for forth a Manifolto, wherein (after acknowledgment of the Goodnets of God to-wards her) fine declar'd, That the had attempted An White nathing against eny Prince, but for presentation of his count own Kingdom; not had she invasted the Provinces of tests a any other, the she had simily times been thereinto both provoked by Injuries, and invited by Opportunent of any Prince go about to attempt ought against ber, soot daubteth not but to be able (by the blessing of God) to defent her People; and to that purpose, she had nu-fer'd her Forces both by Sea and Land, and had con now in readiness against any hostile invasion. Her faithful Subjects she exhorteth to continue immovable in their Allegiance and Duty towards God, and tasir Prince the Minister of Gud. The rest, who had shaken off their Love to their Country, and their Obedience to their Prince, the commandeth to carry themfelous modeftly and peaceably, and not provoke the severity of fusice against themselves; for the would no longer be so imprudent, as by sparing the bad to prove cruel to herself and ber good Subjects. And not only these persistions Subjects, but cettings also Foreiners out of Holland, (a Country fruit- flook has

> England, who under a flew of lingular Integrity and Sanctity, infinuated themfelves into the Af fections of the ignorant common People, and then inftill'd into their Minds feveral damnable Herefies manifestly repugnant to the Christian Faith, using uncouth and itrange kind of Expreffions, contrary to the Christian Profession, which Men might rather admire than understand. These named themselves of the Emily of Love, or Howse of Charly. They persuaded their Followers, "That those only were elected, and Family so should be saved, who were admitted into that Love. "Family, and all the relt Reprobates, and to be "damid: And that it was lawful for them to the days whom their Outh before a Magistrate which Men might rather admire than understand. edeny upon their Oath before a Magistrate " whatfoever they pleafed, or before any other " who was not of their Family. Of this fana- Their fa-"Who was not of their Family. Of this fanta-Thi-Tatical Vanicy they disperfed Books amongst their rot al > Followers, translated out of the Dutch Tongae Widangs > into English, which they entitled, The Gospel of the > Kingdom; Documental Sentences; The Prophety of the > Spirit of Love; The publishing of Peace upon Faith.
> The Author H. N. they could by no means > be perfunded to reveal; yet was it found afterward to be Henry Niebolus of Leidas, who > with a blasphemous Mouth gave out, that be did > articles of God, and God of the Homaits. For the partake of God, and God of his Humanity. For the timely suppressing of these by Law, the Queen, considering that Religion ought to be the chief-ful of Hereticks) began at this time to trouble therein the Peace of the Church and Commonwealth of

About this time return'd into England, Francis Francis Drake, abounding with great Wealth, and great Drage ter Renown, having protperoutly failed found about the World; being, if not the first of all which could challenge this Glory, yet question-less the first but Migellan, whom Death cut off in the midft of his Voyage. This Drake (to res Hapalate no more than what I have heard from him- reading. felf) was born of mean Parentage in Devenshire, and had Francis Ruffel (afterwards Lari of Bedford) for his Godfather, who, according to the ftom, gave him his Christian Name. Whilft he was yet a Child, his Father, embracing the Protestant Doctrine, was call'd in question by the Law of the Six Articles, made by Henry VIII. against oft care of Princes, commanded by Proclamation gainst'an that the Civil Magistrate should be assistent to the Eccleraffical, and that the Books flould be publickly burnt.

cation.

His first Voyage

into

the Protestants, fied his Country, and withdrew himself into Kent. After the death of K. Henry,

Ann. 23. he got a Place among the Seamen in the King's Navy, to read Prayers to 'em; and foon after he was ordain'd Deacon, and made Vicar of the Church of Upnore upon the River Medway, (the Road where the Fleet usually anchoreth). But by reason of his Poverty, he put his Son to the His Edu- Mafter of a Bark, his Neighbour, who held him hard to his Butinets in the Bark, with which he used to coast along the Shore, and sometimes to carry Merchandize into Zeland and France. The Youth being painful and diligent, fo pleafed the old Man by his Industry, that being a Batchellor, at his death he bequeath'd the Bark unto him by Will and Testament. Wherewith when he had got together a little Money, and heard that Sir John Hawkins was rigging certain Ships at Plimouth, and purpos'd a Voyage to America, which they call'd the new World, he fold his Bark, and going thither out of Kent with some other flout Seamen, in the Year 156", he employ'd both his Pains and Fortunes unfuccessfully in that Voyage under Hawkins. For the English (as I have formerly faid) being vanquish'd in the Hiven of Saint John de Ullua by the Spaniards, he hardly escap'd with the loss of what he had. Five Years after, to wit, in the Year 1572, when he had gotten pretty store of Money by playing the Seaman and the Pirate, he, to lick himself whole of the Damage he had receiv'd of the Spaniards, (which a Divine belonging to the Fleet had easily perfuaded him to be lawful) fet fail again with a Man of War which was call'd

America and two Pinnaces, for America, acquainting his Companions only with his Purpofe.

Exploit. Nombre de Dies, a Town in the Ifthmus of Davien, he took, and foon after loft it again. Afterwards being advertis'd by certain fugitive Negroes, (Cimarons they call 'em) that there was a great quantity of Gold and Silver to be brought on Mules from Panama, he robb'd 'em by the way, brought the Gold to his Ships, but the Silver, because he could not well carry it over the Mountains he left behind, and some he hid under Ground. Then he fired a rich Store-house of Merchandize upon the River Chirage, called the Crofs. And roving for a time up and down in the Parts adjoining, he defery'd from the Mountains the South Sea. Hereupon the Man being inflamed with ambition of Glory and hopes of Wealth, was fo vehemently transported with defire to navigate that Sea, that falling down there upon his Knees, he implored the Divine Affistance, that he might at some time or other

en culam

Yow. From that time forward his Mind was pricked on continually Night and Day to perform his Vose. He being now grown very Rich, and brood-Saleth into ing in his Mind privately upon this Defign, John America Oxenham, who had ferv'd under him in his former Voyages, as a Soldier, a Sailor and a Cook, having gotten amongst the Seamen the Name of a Captain for his Valour, and privately ferap'd rogether good flore of Money, to anticipate Drake both in his robbing the Maletteres, and in navigating the South Sea, made a Voyage to the fame Parts in the Year 1375, with one Ship and so Seamen: And confulting with the Negrees, when he understood that the Muletters were now bringing their Treasure from Panima with a Convoy of Soldiers, he drew up his Ship to Land in a private woody corner, and coverd it with green Boughs which he had cut down; his great Ordnance and Provision of Victuals he buried under Ground; and with all his Men, and fix fail thirber, and make a perfect Discovery of the tame: And hereunto he bound himfelf with a

Negroes for Guides, went forward to a River which runneth into the South Sea. There he cut 1580. down Trees, and building a Galliot, croffed over to an Illand in the South Sea, aled, Illa de law. Perlas, fituate not far from the Land. In which Margaria Isle having tarried ten Days expecting the com- offers, or ing of Ships from Peru, he took one with many the life of Pound weight of Gold, and another with an Prath. hundred Pound weight of Silver, and returned to the River with the Ships he had taken. The temperature matter being now noised abroad by the Spaniar fail of the ards whom he had let go, John Ostega a Spaniard with 100 Men pursu'd after him. And whereas the River had three Mouths or Out-lets, he made a stop, doubting which of 'em to follow, till the Feathers of the Fowls which the Englishmen had eaten came swimming down the Stream, and shew'd 'em the way. The Spaniards taking this way, found the Gold amongst the Thickets, and the Englishmen at variance among themselves a-bout dividing their Prey: Who notwithstanding join'd together for their common Safety, and made Head against the Spaniards, tho' far more in Number than they. But many of them were tlain, and the rest taken, amongst whom Oxerbam himself: Who being carried to Lima, and Taken and demanded whether he had the Queen's Autho-as a P.r. ate rity for entring into the King of Spain's Dominions; when he could flew no fuch Authority, he was put to death as a Pirate and common Enemy of Mankind, together with the Master of the Ship, and fome others; and fo mifcarried in this great and memorable Adventure.

Drake, not knowing what Oxenham had done, brake's fet fail from Plimouth the 13th Day of December, Voy 260in the Year 1577, to navigate the South Sea, which still ran in his Mind, and to try his Fortune, with five Ships and 163 Seamen, of whom scarce any knew what he intended to do; which fecret carriage in all Expeditions is the fafeft course. The 25th Day he came against Cantin a Cape of Barbary: And proceeding from thence, he refresh'd himself in the Isle of Mayo, being a pleafant file, and abounding with the fweeteff Grapes. At St. Jago he took a Portugal Ship laden with Wine; and letting the Seamen go, carried the Veffel away, with Nomita de Silva the Pilot, who might be of use to him for the Harbours and Watering-places on the Coast of Brafil, which he knew exactly well. From thence he failed by the Isle of Fuogo, which casteth forth fulphurous Flames; and Brava, near which the Mariners report the Sea to be very deep. And now drawing near the Equator, Drake, being very careful of his Mens Health, let every one of em Blood with his own Hands; and there meeting with a great Calm, with much Thunder and Lightning, in almost three Weeks time he got little or nothing forward, and for 55 Days faw no Land, till Brofil prefented itself to his

On the 26th of April, entring into the Mouth of the River of Plate, he faw an infinite Number of Sea-Calves. From thence failing into the Haven of St. Julian, he found a Gibbet, fet up (as is thought) by Magellan, for the Punishment of certain Mutiners. In this very place, John He puts Doughty, an industrious and stout Man, and the Doughty next unto Drake, was called to his Tryal for raifing a Mutiny in the Fleet, found Guilty by twelve Men, after the English manner, and con-demn'd to death, which he fuffer'd undauntedly, being beheaded, having first receiv'd the Holy Communion with Drake. And indeed the most impartial Persons in the Fleet were of opinion, that he had acted feditiously; and that Drake cut him off as an Emulator of his Glory, and one that regarded not so much who he himself ex-cell'd in Commendations for Sea-matters, as who 1m. 23. there not some who, pretending to under-fland things better than others, gave out that Drake had in charge from Leicester to take off Doughty upon any pretence whatfoever, because he had reported abroad, that the Earl of Essex was made away by the cunning Practices of Leicefter.

He paffes the Strait

of the Moon,

and the Sou bern

Stars, and Ma-

gellan's Clouds.

the first that ever returned thro' the Strait.

On the 20th Day of August, he came with three Ships (for his two lesser he had before turn'd of Mazel- adrift, shipping the Men and Municion into the rest) to the Strait of Magellan, (as they call it) being a Sea thick fet with Islands, and inclosed with high Cliffs or Mountains, the Air being extreme Cold, with Snow and Frost. On the 6th of September, having pass'd the Strait, he enter'd into the open South Sea, (which they call the Pacifick or Calm-Sea) but found it rough and turbulent above measure; and a terrible Tempest carried the Fleet about 100 Leagues Westward, and separated them. Here he observ'd an Eclipse Obferves an Eclipse of the Moon on the 15th of September, at Six of the Clock in the Afternoon, (which I Note for the Mathematicians fakes). He observed also, contrary to what some had written, that that part of the Heaven next to the Southern Pole, was bedeck'd with but few Stars, and those of a finaller Magnitude; and that there were but only three of any remarkable Bigness to be seen in that Hemisphere which England hath not beheld. But two small Clouds he observ'd, of the same colour with Via latter, not far diffant from the Pole, which our Men called Magellan's Clouds. 7. Winter

Of those Ships that were carried away with the Tempest, one (whereof John Winterwas Captain) came back through the Strait, and return'd fafe into England, and was the first that ever return'd through the said Strait. Drake himself, being now cast with one only Ship to the 55th Degree of Southern Latitude, having with much ado gotten up to the Latitude of the Strait, coafted along the Shore, and found those Coasts bending much more Eastward than they were before described in the Maps.

On the last of September he came to Mouch, an Island near the Shore; where one or two of his Seamen, whom he had fent out for fresh Water, were intercepted by the People of the Country. Setting fail from hence, he lighted upon a Barbarian Fishing in a small Boat, who, supposing our Men to be Spaniards, gave em notice, that a great Spanish Ship laden rode at Anchor at Villa Parizo, and directed 'em thither. The Spanish Mariners feeing the Englishmen coming, and supposing 'em to be their own Countrymen, rung a Bell, drew Wine of Chili, and drank full Cups to 'em. But they clapping the Ship aboard, thruft the Spiniards presently under Hatches, and sacked the Town of St. Jago hard by, together with the Chapel; the Prey whereof fell to Fler-Drake cher, a Sea-Chaplain. The Spaniards being fet on mershit Land, who were not above eight in Number with two Negroes) he carried away with him the Master, being by Nation a Greeian, and the Ship, wherein was 400 Pound weight of Baldivian Gold. fo called of the Place, which was exceeding fine

Purchace by Sea and dental.y hights on and pure.

Then went he on Land at Taurapafa, where he He accifound a Spaniard fleeping fecurely upon the Shore, and by him thirty Bars or Wedges of Silver, to tichPrizes. to the value of 400000 Ducats; which he commanded to be carried away, not fo much as once waking the Man. Afterwards entring into the Haven of Arica, he found there three Ships without Mariners, and in them, besides other Mer-chandizes, 57 Wedges of Silver, every one of c which weighed 20 Pounds. From hence he failed to Lima, where he found twelve Ships riding Ann. 23 at Ancher, their Manition being all drawn on Land, and in them good flore of Silks, and a Cheft full of Money ready coind; but not fo much as a Boy aboard. So great Security was there on that Coast, that they should in no fear at all of Pirates, by reason of the great Remoteness of those Places, and the Unknownness of that Sea. And certainly never any Man after Magellan, before Drake, had navigated that Sea, except the Spaniards, who built there all the Ships which they had on that Coast. Having sent away these Ships to Sea, with all the fail he could make he gave chace to Cacofoga, a very rich Ship, which he understood had fet fail from thence towards Panama. By the way he met a finall Brigantine unarm'd, out of which he took fourfcore Pounds weight of Gold, a golden Crucifix, fome Emeralds of a Finger's length, and fome Munition-On the first of Murch he overtook the Caesfeg. Takes the and having shot down her Fore-mast with the Campean Shot of a Piece of Ordnance, he fet upon her, and foon took her; and in her, beides Petris and Precious Stones, fourfcore Pounds weight of Gold, thirteen Chefts full of Silver coind, and fo great a quantity of other Silver, as would fuffice to ballast a Ship. All which when he had taken into his own Ship, he let the Cacofoga go: The Matter whereof is reported to have bidden him thus merrily farewel, faying, We refign the Name of our Ship to yours: Tours now may be call'd the Cacofoga, that is, Shite-plate. After this he met with no rich Booty. His China Diffes, with an Eagle of Gold, and a fair Negroefs, given him for a Present by a Spaniard whose Ship he had spared, and the facking a finall Town call'd Aquatulco, I purpofely omit.

And now thinking himself abundantly en-provides rich'd, and sufficiently satisfied for the private to return Injury done him by the Spaniards at the Haven of home. St John de Ullua, he began to think of returning. To return by the Strait of Magellan feem'd very dangerous, both by reason of the frequent Tempests, and the uncertain Shelves and Shallows; as also for fear the Spaniards should there lay wait for him against his coming back. And indeed Don Francisco de Toledo, Viceroy of Peru, had sent thither Peter Sarmiento with two Ships to intercept him as he return'd, and to fortifie fuch narrow Places of the Strait as he found. He held on this Course therefore Northward to the Latitude of 42 Degrees, to discover if there were any Strait on that fide, by which he might re-turn the next way home. But when he faw no-thing but thick Clouds, there Cold, and naked Shores, cover'd only with Snow, he descended to 38 Degrees, and meeting with a Commodious Diff. overe Harbour, staid there a while. The People in-Newhabiting there, were Naked, Pleafantly-disposed, Albion. Dancing daily in a Ring, offering Sacrifices, and, as it feemed by the Signs they made, willing to chuse Drake, by a long Oration to be their King: Neither could be conjecture that the Spaniards had ever gone so far. This Country, Spaniards had ever gone to far. This Country, being a fruitful Soil, and very full of Deer and Conies, it pleafed him to name New Albion, fetting up an Infcription upon a Poit, which notified the Year of our Lord, the Name of Queen Elizabeth, and their arrival there; and putting under it some of Queen Elizabeth's Coin.

From this Coast he fet fail and came in the Comesto Month of November to the Itles of the Moluccaes, the Mobeing kindly entertain'd by the King of the Isle Income. of Ternate. From thence failing forward in that

Drake

Returns

land

 Sea thick befpread with Isles and Rocks, on the 1580 9th of January his Ship struck upon a Rock Ann.23, which was hid under Water, and there stuck for the space of 27 Hours, and was given for lost Is in dan- by all the Company, who now fell devoutly to their Prayers, as if they fhould affuredly be cast away with all the Wealth which they had gotten with fo great Labour and Hazard. But when they had laid their Hands to work, and thrown eight great Guns and some Merchandize over into the Sea, there came a beating Gale of Wind on the one fide, as if it were fent from Heaven, and clear'd the Ship of the Rock. Afterwards he arriv'd at Java Major, which was then grie-voully adlicted with the French Difeafe, which they cure by fitting in the open Air against the warm Sun to dry up that malignant Humour: where having receiv'd great Civility at the Hands of that petty King, he held on his Course to the Cape of Good Hone; which the English Mariners, Pareth the Cape of who had never feen it before, commended for Good Hofe the faired Promontory they ever faw. On the West-fide thereof he landed for fresh Water, but could find no Spring. And now he had been diffressed for lack of fresh Water, had he not providentially kept Rain-water before-hand in Veffels. But this Want he supplied at length at Riogrande. From whence he return'd with a profperous Gale into England the 3d of November, in into Engthe Year 1580, arriving at the Haven of Plimouth, from whence he first set forth, having sailed round about the World in the space of three Years, or thereabouts, to the great Admiration of all Men, and without any Crime laid to his charge by his Advertaries, but only that he had put Doughty to death, that he had left a Portugueze, whom he had taken upon the Coaft of Africa, to the Cruelty of the Spaniards at Aquatuleo, and had inhumanely fet that Negro-Maid before-mention'd on shore in an Island, after she was gotten with Child in his Ship.

The Queen receiv'd him gratiously, and laid up the Treasure he brought by way of Sequestrareceiveth tion, that it might be forth-coming if the Spahim gra-tioutly. miard should demand it. His Ship she caused to His Ship be drawn up in a little Creek near Deptford upon referv'd as the Thomes, as a Monument of his fo lucky failing round the World, (where the Carkafs thereof a Monuis to be teen). And having as it were confecrated it for a Memorial with great Ceremony, she He is was Banquetted in it, and conford on Drake the Knighted. Honour of Knighthood. At this time a Bridge of Planks by which they came aboard the Ship, funk under the crowd of People, and fell down with an hundred Men upon it, who notwithftanding had none of them any Harm. So as that Ship may feem to have been built under a lucky

In praise of Drake these Verses, amongst others, were fet up the same Day upon the Mainwritten by the Scholars of Winchester-School, Verles in Plus ultrà, Herculeis inscribas, Drace, Columnis, his praife, Et, Migno, dicas, Hercule major ero.

> On Here'les Pillars, Drake, thou may'ft Plus ulmà write full well, And fay, I will, in Greatness, that Great Hercules excel.

Drace, pererrati novit quem terminus Orbis, Quemque semel Mundi vidit uterque Polus, Si tuce ant homines, facient te Sidera notum : Sol nelcit Comitis non memor elle sui.

Great Drake, whom well the World's End knows, 1580. Which thou didft compass round, And whom both Poles of Heaven once saw, Ann. 23. Which North and South do bound; The Stars above will make thee known,

If Men here filent were: The Sun himfelf cannot forget His Tellow-traveller.

Digna Ratis quæ stet radiantibus inclyta Stelli; Supremo Cali Vertice digna Ratus.

Amongst the radient Stars to stand Thy Ship well worthy were; Well worthy on the highest top Of Heav'n a place to bear,

But these Things may seem too light, and to proceed from an idle Brain, and not befeeming the Gravity of an History.

Drake being now return'd, nothing troubled him more than that fome of the chief Men at Court refus'd to accept the Gold which he offer'd them, as gotten by Piracy. Nevertheless the common fort of People admired and highly commended him, as judging it no lefs Honourable to have enlarg'd the Bounds of the English Name and Giory, than of their Empire. Don Bernardine de Mendeza, the Spanish Embass-The Spa-sador in England, florming hereat, very earnest-mand te-ly demanded the Goods again of the Queen, litturion complaining of the English for failing in the of the Indian Ocean. To whom this Answer was given : Goods. Datan Ocean. 10 Whom this Affive was given; wow. That the Spaniards by their hard Dealing with the The miw. English, whom they had prohibited Commerce, contrary to the Law of Nations, had drawn thefe Mifchiefs upon themfelves. That Drake fluad be forth-coming, to answer according to Law, if he were convicted by good Evidence and Testinony to have committed any thing availant Law and Right. That these Goods were good technicae and refinanty to those committee any thing againft Law and Right. That those Goods were laid by purposely that Satisfaction might be made to the Spaniard, tho the Lucen had spent a greater sum of Money than Drake hadbrought in, against those Robels whose the Spaniard had well and the committee of the second whom the Spaniard had rais'd and encourag'd against her both in Ireland and England. Moreover, the WhatPro-understood not why her or any other Prince's Subjects pricty the should be debard from the Indies, which she could not spanial persuade herself the Spaniard had any just Title to by perjudate verjet toe Spanista and any just the to by the Billiop of Rome's Donation, (in whom she acknow-ledged in Prerogative, much left Authority, in such ca-fer, so at to lay any Trempon Princes which own distinct Obcidence or Observance, or as it were to infessife the Spanistrd in that new World, and invest him with the America. opfiellion thereof) nor yet by any other Claim, than as they had touched here and there upon the Coafts, built Cottages, and given Names to a River or a Cape; which things cannot entitle them to a Propriety. So that this Donation of that which is another Manis, which is of no validity in Law; and this imaginary Propriety, connet hinder other Princes from trading into those Countries, and, without breach of the Law of Nations, from transporting Colonies into these Parts thereof where the Spaniards inhabit not, for smuch as Prescription without Possession is little worth neither from freely navigating that waft Ocean, seeing the use of the Sea and Air is common to all. Neither can a Title to the Ocean belong to any People or primate Perfors; frasmuch as neither Nature nor publish Use and Custom permitteth any possession thereof.

Notwithstanding all this, a great sum of Mosome Money was afterwards paid to Pedro Science a Spaniard, say repaid who pretended himself an Agent for retrieving the Spaniar the Gold and Silver, tho' he had no Letrers of mark Credence or Committion to to do) which he never repaid to the right Owners, but employ'd it against the Queen, and converted it to the Pay of the Spaniards that ferv'd in the Netherlands, as was at length, when 'twas too late, underitood.

Whilft

ber'd.

Indies.

Whilst Drake was thus prosperously failing 1580. round about the World, Jackmin and Pett, two dmn.23. samous Pilots, being set out by the Londoners with two Ships, fought as unprofperoufly to discover Attempt a nearer way to the Eaff-Indies by the Cronian or aborther Prozen Sea. For having paffed a few Leagues paffage to beyond the Illes call'd Waigarz, they met with the Eaff uch uncertain Tides, fo many Shelves, and fach mades. Heaps of Ice piled together, that they could get no farther forward, and very much ado they had to return home.

The death Arundel,

About the beginning of this Year, Henry Fitzof the E of Allen Earl of Arundel render'd his Soul to God, in whom was extinct the Surname of this most noble who that Family, which had flourish'd with great Honour the use of for 300 Years and more, from the time of Richard Fuz-Allen, who being descended from the Albe-Coathes Fitz-Zien, who being descented from the Zierinto Engl ners, ancient Earls of Arandel and Suljex, in the Reign of Edward I. received the Title of Earl without any Creation, in regard of his being poffefs'd of the Caftle and Lordflip of Arandel. This Henry, enjoying many Honours, was of the Privy-Council to all the Kings under whom he liv'd, and went through the highest Offices. Under Henry VIII. he was Governor of Calais, Marshal of the Army at the Siege of Boulogne, and Lord-Chamberlain. To K. Edward VI he was Lord-High-Marshal of England at his Coronation. Q. Mary likewife at her Coronation he was Lord-High-Constable, and afterward Steward of the Queen's Houshold, and President of the Queen's Council. And to Q. Elizabeth he was likewise Steward of her Houshold, with whom he fought to marry in his declining Years He was in less favour after he had intermeddled in the Duke of Norfolk's Bufiness, and when he afterwards openly oppos'd her Marriage with the Duke of Anjon For, being a plain dealing Man, he professed flatly, that he liked not the French, faying many times, That he had been taught by his Father, who was born in Sullex, a County neighbouring upon France, not to trust the French. By his Wife Katharine, Daughter to Thomas Grey Marquis of Dorset, he had three Children, and out-liv'd 'em all: Henry, a young Gentleman of great hopes, who died at Brussels; Joan, Wife to the L. Lumly; and Mary, married to Thomas Duke of Norfolk, to whom the bare Philip Earl of Arundel, of whom in his proper place. Arthur L. Grey, Lord-Deputy of Ireland, marching against the O-Conors, who attempted to raife in Ireland new Troubles in Ophalie, put O-Moloy, a seditiousminded Man, to death by Law, quieted that Country, as also the Country of the Magobigans and O-Carol, and crushed a dangerous Conspiracy a Conspiin the very bud. For divers of noble Families in Leimster, most of 'em descended of English Blood, partly out of Affection to the Romille Religion, and partly out of Hatred against the new-come English, (who many times, contrary to the intent of the Law, excluded 'em as mere Irish from Offices of Government and Magistracy) had con-spir'd together to seize on the Lord-Deputy with his Houshold, to take the Castle of Dublin by furprize, (where all the Provision for War lay) and to put the English in Ireland every Man to the Sword: And to close they were in carrying on theis Conspiracy, that they never confer'd or discours'd about it more than two and two together. But amongst so many who were privy to it, it came at last to light, and was by the Execu-tion of a few timely extinguish'd: The most remarkable of whom was J. Nogent, Baron of the Exchequer, a Man of a lingular good Life and Reputation, who was meerly circumvented (as Innocency, who was incert cheamwork (as Indeed the King to refign the Kingdom to his a fure ries. He, relying upon the confeience of his Mother, as if she had been unjustly, and by a Comfort, own Innocency, when the Lord-Deputy saith-fully promis'd him his Life if he would confels himself guilty, chose rather, being guiltlets, to 1580. undergo an infumous Death, than by betraying dnn.23. his own Innocency to lead an infamous Life. Howfoever the truth were in this matter, certainly the Lord Grey incur'd great Displeasure with the Queen for putting the le Men to death; which Displeasure was rais'd against him by Suffex his Adverfary, (for rare it is to fee great Captains love one another) who fuggefted as it by his Cruelty of late towards the Spaniards which had yielded themselves, and now towards her own Subjects, he had both eclips'd his Prince's Glory, and encreas'd the number of her Enemies. Nevertheless the Lord-Deputy by the terror hereof Rebels drew Turlogh-Leinigh to terms of Peace, who had supported now begun to raise Disturbances in Ulster. By this means also the O-Brines, the O-Moors and Ca venaghs, Rebels in Leimster, in all Humility and Submillion craved Peace, offering Hoftages. These brish matters, the in time somewhat diflantly acted, I have thought good to mention together, that they might the better be remem-

L. Grey suppreiles

Crusheth

Negent

In Scotland, fome Ministers of God's Word and The Scott certain Noblemen, observing that the Duke of envy the Lenox, formerly mention'd, was in great Favour Duke or with the King, they first rais'd an Emulation in James Stuart of the House of Ochiltrey against him, who was Captain of the Guard and Earl of Arren, (for this Title he had ufurp'd upon I know not what Refignation of James Hamilton E. of Arran, to whom being Lunatick he was appointed Guardian). But the Queen soon made 'em Friends When this fucceeded not, they both wrought him what Hatred they could at home, and heavily Accus'd him to the Q. of England, as They acfent under-hand by the Guises to subvert Religion, cuse him to procure the captive Queen's Liberty, and to in Engl. dissolve the Amity betwixt the Kingdoms of England and Scotland. These Men were easily credited, and a ferious Confultation was held in England about the matter; tho' the Duke clear'd himself by his Letters to the Queen, and openly profes'd himself of the Protestant Religion.

For the Council of England fearing left he confultashould oppress those Scots that maintain'd close tion aFriendship with the English, fuvour Excursions sainthing upon the Borders, and entice the King of Scots to a Marriage in France or elsewhere, unknown to the English. Upon the confidence of which Marriage the young King might put England to Trouble, and when he came to riper Years, affume to himself the Title of the Kingdom of England, as his Mother had already done. Which if it should come to pass, greater Danger threatned from him than from his Mother; toratimuch as being born to an affured hope of both Kingdoms. he would procure himfelf many Favourers; and the Scots, being bred up in the Wars both at home and in the Netherlands, were now train'd up to the use of their Arms and Military Knowledge. Hereupon it was refolv'd, by all means to lessen Lenox's Favour and Authority with the King, or to drive him out of Scotland, and that without all delay: Forasmuch as Rumours were spread a- Rumours broad, that he, to suppress Morton, had fent for featter'd Balfour out of France, (who had gotten I know to his not what Writing under Morton's Hand, whereby prejudice. it was hop'd that Morton might be found guilty of the Murder of the King's Father) and also had obtain'd the Government of the Caftle of Dunbriton, to no other intent but to let in forein Forces into Britain, or else to convey the King of Scots into France. It was reported also, that he per-

Ppp

Vol. II.

her Subjects, upon promife by her given, that he 1580. should immediately receive it back again from Ann. 23. her by a lawful Refignation; by which means \sim he should both strongly confirm the Kingdom to himfelf, and should be acknowledg'd of all Men for lawful King, and all Factions be utterly extinguish'd.

Sir Robert to accuse

Hereupon Sir Robert Bowes, Treasurer of the Boars fent Garifon of Berwick, was fent into Scotland to charge Lenox with these Matters before the King and Council, and to warn the King of the Mitchiefs hanging over his Head. As foon as he came to Audience, he defir'd that Lenox might for the time withdraw from the place. This the Council flatly denied, for that it was a strange and unheard-of thing, that a Counfellor of the King should be removed from the Council without cause They question'd also whether he had any fuch express charge from the Queen, and willed him to shew his Instructions for the more Hereturns credit. He refused to shew them to any but the King, and one or two others. Whereupon he without was Ioon after call'd home again without being heard, and took his leave of the king when he who had fo well deferv'd of him. Scott ex-cufethem. Scotland to excufe the business, and to learn what those Mischiefs were which hung over the King's Their Em. Head. But he was not admitted to the Queen's basiador Presence, but remitted to Burghly Lord-Treasurer, admitted, who in a grave and short Speech, suitable to his little expected it, complaining of the rejecting the wholfom Admonitions and Advices of a Queen

Age, told him, That it was not the Queen's pleasure to admit bim to her Presence; not that she slighted bim, whom she had found to be very well affected to the true Ann. 23. Religion, his Prince and Country, and to the Peace of both Religion, his Prince and Country, and to the Peace of both Brighty, Kingdoms; but out of a just Reference, that that her Magins the just yours to neglected, and the Credit of her Ambelfulador reason, contermed and despised, who had kept himself within 88 admosthe preservib 4 Einstein of his Embossingee, and yet (which without was a thing without example) was commended to further without the Instructions of his Embossingee. He laid all the blame upon the new and ill-advised Counsellors, excused the King by reason of his Age, which had not yet taught him Experience, and wished that he would hearken to the found and wholfom Advice of the Queen, who have a true motherly Affection towards him, and not neglet her for his French Cousin, a Subject of the French King's, and engag'd in Marriage with a French Wo-Rings, and ongog a in that ringe with a tellifit in man, a Man zealeully addited to the Poptill Religion, and who haply afpir'd (the Hamiltons being now ba-nilfold) to be declar'd Heir-apparent uset after the Ring Let the King remember (faith he) that there is no Pafsion more violent than Ambition; and let the Scots remember what Troubles the French had caused in

Thus was Humes fent back into Scotland; and all this was done on purpose to strike a Terror into the King, and to make him believe that Lenox was engag'd in a dangerous Design against the King and Realm. Nevertheless, not long after, Morton, a Man most addicted to the English, Morton was accus'd by Arran of Treafon, and cast into imprison'd Scotland, had not the Queen by her Wisdom and Power prevented 'em.

Prifon.

The End of the Second BOOK.

ELIZABETH,

Anno 1581.

Queen of ENGLAND.

OOKIII.

The Twenty fourth Year of her Reign.

1581.

Ann. 24

Randolph tent to in-

Morton,

Mr. Thomas Randolph, chief Poft-Matter, was fent in the beginning of January, into Scotland, with Instructions, that, for Preservation of Religion, and tercede for & against Amity with the English, he should leave no means untry'd to procure that no violent Course might be taken against Morton, that Lenox might be removed out of Scotland, and that the Noblemen of the English Party might be encouraged. Randolph shew'd himself a good Intercessor for Morten, alledging the Man's Deferts with the King, Queen Elizabeth's Honour, (left she, to whom the King and Realm was so much beholden, should suffer a Repulse in so just a matter) and the Malice of his Accusers. The King answer'd, That be could not but according to but Kingly Office leave the Man to his Trial, as being charged with High-Treason. The Queen's approved Kindness he acknow-ledged, and would do nothing (he laid) which might any way give ber juft Offence.

Randolph having afterwards Audience in an Affembly of the States, reckon'd up Queen Elizabeth's Good Offices towards Scotland, and to-complains wards the King himfelt. Namely, 'That the tothescots had deliver'd their Kingdom from the French, with the Expence of the Blood of Englishmen: That she had defended their Religion and their King: That she never had so much as a Thought of conveying him out of the Land, ' (as was falfly reported) or of feizing upon fo * much as an Acre of Land in Scotland; whereas notwithstanding she had not wanted Opportunitics to have conquer'd all Scotland, while the King lay crying in his Cradle, his Mother was a Prisoner in England, and the Nobility at Variance amongst themselves. But on the contrary, she had used all Care to preferve the King and his Kingdom in Safety, he being nearly al-ly d to her in the strictest Bands of Blood, Neighbourhood, and Religion; of whose Love, as also of the Love of all the Regents, she was most affured, till such time as that Aubigny Duke of Lenox came into Scotland. For from that * time he had carry'd a kind of commanding hand over the King, averted his Mind from Amity with the English to the French, (who yet had not to this day acknowledg'd him for King) removed the King's faithfullest Subjects, prefer'd others less faithful, dealt with Foreiners by his Letters (which Randolph produced) for the In-the Ministers of God's Word, as turbulent and railing Fellows, and taken no care for due administring of Justice betwixt the Borderers. Which Ann. 24. things Queen Elizabeth could not but take very \ 'ill, when she saw a Prince of so great Vertue, and fo ftrictly link'd to her in Friendship, ali-enated and eftranged from her by cunning Pra-Yet was there nothing then done, either for Morton, or against Lenex, most Men su-Invain. specting that the Crimes alledg'd against him were falfe, and the Letters counterfeit.

Randolph therefore betook himfelf to other Ar- Endea-Rayanaph therefore betook infinite to other Art nucer-tifices. Amongh Lenox's Adverfaries and Morton's Yours to Friends, he bewails the unhappy Condition of Scotland; lays before 'em the Dangers that threa-ty the eart ten the King, the Commonwealth, and them; complains that the Queen of England's Intercefton was ungratefully flighted; and privily addition to attempt by Arms, what they could not effect by other means, promising both Men and Money out of England. And by this means he had drawn to his Party Argyle, Mourrofs, Angus, Morton's Brother's Son, Marre, Glencarne, Ruthuen, Lindfey, and divers others. But they fhortly after difagreeing among themfelves, when they In vain faw that the King wholly inclin'd to favour Le- allo. now, and was not terrify'd with the English Forces upon the Borders, but had drawn up his own against them; most of them, reverencing the Royal Majesty, even in so young a Frince, at-tempted nothing against Lenex, and thought their Pity was all that Morton could claim. and Marre continued their fecret Deligns with Randolph for Merton, and against Lenox. Whereof when the King was advertised by Wuttingham, Angus was commanded to withdraw himfelf beyond the River Spey, and Marre forthwith to farrender Sterlin-Caffle into the King's Hands. Randolph, Retires ferring the worth, retired feeredly to Bervick, out of advis'd Angus and Morre, Matters being now Sectional, grown deliperate, to fhift for themselves, either by procuring the King's Favour, or flying to the Protection of the Queen of England. And now were the English Forces call'd home from the Rorders and in boson for the Company of from the Borders: and not long after was Morten found accessary to the Murder of the King's Morton Futher, and beheaded. For he confess, (as beneaded. they report) that Bothwell and Archiball Douglas, acquainted him with the Plot for making away the King; and that he in fo dangerous a time durit not reveal it. Neither could he deny, butthar, after the Murder was committed, he efteem'd Douglaß, who murder'd the King, amongst his intimate Friends; and that he had given his Faith Vol. II. Ppp 2

Title.

ar ench

Queen's

worded.

under his hand, to defend Beibwell, if any Mari 1581. flould accufe him of the Murder of the King.
4m24. Angua and the reft who favour'd Morton, fled prethu friends fencly into England.

See pri-Hu friends

Hu friends In the Low-Country-Provinces the Confederate England. States fent Colonel Norris with the English and other Forces, against the Count of Reneberg, who victoriously carry'd all before him for the Spani ard, and closely block'd up Steenwick, a Town of Friefland. When Norris gallantly and fuccessfully beats the brought Provisions into the Town twice, put Spannards Reneberg's Men to Flight, and rais'd the Siege. in Frief-But afterwards joining Battle with Verdugo a Spa-niard at Northorn, when the Victory was now as good as in his Hands, the Enemy's Troops beland.

ing defeated by Sir Roger Williams, the Chance of Himfelf is War fuddenly rurn'd, he himfelf was wounded, worited. and many of his Men flain; and amongst them (not to name others) Cotton, Fitz-Williams, and Bishop, stout Captains. How Captain Thomas, a Captain of the Epirots, at this time challenged General Norris to a fingle Combat, and Sir Roger Williams, his Lieutenant, accepted the Challenge, because he, being General, might not accept it, by the Law of Arms) I know not whether it be worth the mentioning, confidering that after they had try'd their Skill a little while, in the View of Wound, they drank a hearty Cup together, and fo parted Friends. Yet this is not to be omitted, A ridien lous Duel. that the Fnglish, who of all the Northern Nations, had been till now the moderatest Drinkers, Drunkennefs bro't from the and most commended for their Sobriety, learn'd 1.000in these Netherland-Wars, first to drown them-selves with immoderate Drinking, and by drinkinto England. ing others Healths to impair their own. And ever fince, the Vice of Drunkenness has so diffus'd itself over the whole Nation, that in our days first, it was fain to be restrain'd by severe Laws. While the States and the Spaniard cont inded in Spaniard the Netherlands for petty Towns, the Spaniard feez + Por-feiz'd into his Hands the rich Kingdom of Portugal. tugal. For Henry King of Portugal dying the last Year an old Man, many Competitors laid Claim to the Crown, and amongst them Philip King of Spain, King Hemy's eldest Sister's Son, who was, if not in Right, yet in Might the strongest. And By what yet he wanted not fome Shew of Right : for of all the Competitors, he was nearest of kin to the deceased King, and of the Male Sex, and therefore (as he and his Friends thought) to be preferr'd in the Succession to the Crown, before the Temales, who were both younger, and in Kin-The Com. died more remote. The Saveyard was excluded, because he was born of the younger Sister; and Rainutic Farneze, the Prince of Parma's Son, who was born of the eldest Daughter of Edward King Henry's Brother, and Catharina Duchefs of Braganza, the other Daughter of the faid Edward, because they grounded their Title only upon a Representation, as they call it; which being nothing but a Fiction, the Spaniards maintain'd, that it could not overthrow the true Right. As for Don Antonio, Prior of Cr. 110, the Son of Lewis another Brother of King Hony, he was utterly rejected as illegitimate. However, the Spaniard offer'd these things several times to be discuss'd, both by Divines and Lawyers. And when they all with one Confent affirm'd his Title ro be good, he fent the Duke of Alva, invaded the Kingdom, put Don Antonio to Hight, who was elected by the People; and in feventy days fubdued all Portugal. But the Title which Katharine de Medicus Queen of France laid to Portugal, which was derived from Alphonfus III. by the Earls of Fonom, above 320 Years before, was in a manner exploded both by the Spaniards and Portuguese, as an arriquated Title, not only now worn out, and looking with a jealous Eye upon the grow-ing Power of the Spaniard, which was far and vately exwide extended hereby, and enrich'd with the cites & Addition of Portugal, Eaft-India, and many Illes, Eigaberh and mif-doubting the Condition of herfelf and against the her Posterity, she advised both other Princes and Spannard. Queen Elizabeth, to curb his Ambition betimes, and reftrain his too extensive Power within some reafonable Limits. And indeed Queen Elizabeth being carefully provident for herfelf and her Sub-jects, willingly hearkned to her, forefeeing how dangerous the over-swelling Power of her neighbouring Princes might be. But for Don Antonio, she sends who was driven out of Portugal into France, and Antonio from thence fent over with Recommendations in- into En-to England, she bountifully reliev'd him: which gland, fhe thought she might do without Offence, in regard she acknowledg'd him her Kinsman, as descended of the Blood-Royal of England, and of the House of Lancaster; neither was there ever fuch a Proviso put into any League betwixt the Spaniards and the English, that the Portuguese fhould not be receiv'd into England And withal, the faid Queen of France, and the King her Son, for a Foundation of a stricter A. Sende mity with Queen Elzabeth, urged more earneftly Committed than ever before, the Marriage with her Son the treat a Duke of Anjon. For the effecting whereof, there bout the were fent into England, on a very honourable Marriage Fundally. Experience Resolvent Property of Resolvent Property Embassy, Francis of Bourbon Prince of Dauphiny, with the Arthur Coffe Earl of Segondin, Marshal of France, Anjou, Lewis of Lusignan of St. Gelasie, Scigneur of Lanfac, Tanerge Venator of Corconge, Bertrand Salignac a Mota-Fenellon, Michael a Chasteau-neuf Seigneur Mauvaisser, Bernard Brisonius a Granels President of the Parliament of Paris, (a Man of most excellent Learning) Claudius Pinarte first Baron of Valois, Pierre Claufe Seigneur of Curats and Marchomont, and Jaques Vray Secretary of the Duke of Anjou's Treatury. These Honourable Persons were as honourably entertain'd, being nobly banquetted in a large Edifice built at Westminster, in all Hafte, for this very purpofe, richly and royally furnish'd; and after entertain'd with Tiltings, perform'd at a valt Expence by Philip Earl of Arundel, Frederick Lord Windsor, Sir Philip Sidney, and Sir Fulk Grevil, who challenged all Comers: besides many other Courtly Sports and Pastimes, which are not so proper for an Historian to relate. The Commissioners appointed to confer with commisthem about the Marriage, were William Cecil Lord fioners for Burleigh, Lord High-Treasurer of England, Ed- Q. Elizward Clinton Earl of Lincoln, Lord Admiral of England, Thomas Ratcliffe Earl of Suffex, Francis Ruffel Earl of Bedford, Robert Dudley Earl of Leicefter, Sir Christopher Hatton, and Sir Francis Walsingham Secretary. Betwixt these Commissioners Articles of Marriage were agreed upon to the following purpofe. The Duke of Anjou and the Queen of En- Articles of gland shall, within Six Weeks after the ratifying Marriage. of these Articles, contract Marriage de præsensi in England. The Duke and his Retinue, provided they be not Native Subjects of England, may freely exercise their Religion, in some certain place to be appointed within his Court, without Lett or Hindrance. He shall alter nothing in the Religion now receiv'd in England. After the Marriage confummated, he shall enjoy the Title and Honour of King, but shall leave the Management of Affairs wholly and folely to the Queen. Whereas he has demanded, that prefently after the Marriage he may be crown'd King, and enjoy that Honour, as well while the Marriage lasts, as when it shall be diffolv'd, during his Government of the Kingdom in the Minority of their Children; the Queen promifes to communicate his Demand to the Estates of the Realm in the first Parliament, which she will call within fifteen days after the Ratification, and to promote it as far as shall lie in her Power. Letters Patents, &c. shall run in both their Names, as in the time of Philip and Mary. The Queen shall align the Duke a yearly Pension, by Authority of Parliament; but how large it shall be, shall be left to her Pleafure; and the shall procure the Parliament to affign him a confiderable Sum of Money yearly, if he furvive the Queen. He shall make the Queen a Dowry to the yearly Value of 40000 Crowns de Soleil, out of his Dukedom of Berry, and shall presently put her in Possession thereof. What shall be concluded concerning their Children, in the Parliament of England, shall be ratified and confirm'd in the Parliaments of France, to this effect. The Males or Females shall succeed their Mother in the Inheritance of England. If there be two Males, the eldeft shall succeed in the Kingdom of France, and the fecond in his Mother's Right to England. If there be but one Male, and he come to enjoy both Crowns, he shall reside in England eight Months in every two Years. And if the Duke never come to the Title of King of France, their Children shall succeed in his Appennage. If he out-live the Con, he his Appennage. If he out-live the shall have the Guardianship of the nildren ; provided the Males be not above ancen Years of Age, and the Females fifter. If the Duke die before, their Guardianshi Than be left to the Authority and Pleafure of the Parliament. The Duke shall prefer no Foreiner to any Office in England. He shall alter nothing in the Law, but shall maintain all the Customs of the Land. He shall not convey the Queen nor her Children out of the Realm of England, but by her own Confent, and the Confent of the Peers of the Realm. If the Queen die without Children, the Duke shall claim no Propriety in the Kingdom of England. He shall not transport the Crown-Jewels out of the Realm. He shall leave all the Places in the Kingdom in the Hands of Native Englishmen; neither shall he remove from thence any Warlike Stores. He shall not engage England in any forein War. He shall maintain the Peace betwirt England and other Kingdoms. The Queen alone shall bear the Superiority, and no Title shall accrue to the Duke as Tenant by the Custom of England. The Duke intends not by this Marriage to prejudice his Title in the Succession to the Crown of France. This present Contract shall be read, proclaim'd, and recorded in all the Courts of France and England, fix Months after the Day of Marriage; and the Authority of the most Christian King shall be had for the Ratification of these Articles. There shall be a particular Treaty concerning a Confederacy and League betwixt England and France. All these things shall be ratified within two Months on the French King's part, upon his Faith and Oath, for him and his Heirs, &c. and as foon as may be he shall deliver Writings of Ratification, by which Assurance shall be given, that the things here concluded shall be observed bond side. A Refervation also was added apart by itself, tion added fign'd with the Hands of all the Committioners, in these Words; 'But Queen Elizabeth is not bound to consummate the Marriage, till she ' and the Duke shall throughly satisfy one another in certain Points, and shall thereof certify the French K. in Writing, within fix Weeks.

1,81.

1781. Ann.24. 6

A Referva

Before fuch time as those fix Weeks were ex- f pired, John Somers, Clerk of the Council, was The King Ann 24. fent into France, about this matter. refufes to hear him, and preffes that the Marriage already contracted may be folenmiz'd out of exemptive hand, for that now there remained nothing else prefer the to be done. Somers shews to the contrary, by the Writings, that there was first a League de-fensive and offensive to be enter'd into. The French King denies it. Walfingham is dispatch'd to make up these Differences, who jointly with Henry Lord Cobbam, Ambassador in France, and Somers, was to inform him of these things following, and fome others of like nature.

That altho' the vulgar foir did rafnly centure Q Elixthe delaying of the Marriage, yet did Queen deris it Elizabeth at first incline to Marriage, upon no Reason. other Account, than to fatisfy the Defires of her People, who importunately perfuaded her to marry, that there might be an eflublished and certain Succeffion by her Children. And the Duke of Anjen, who fought to her for Marriage, fhe deservedly preserred before all others in her Love, both for his own Vertue, and his Noble and Royal Descent; which Love she still professes to be very great towards him. Never-theless, she as yet forbears to give her Affent to the contracting of the Marriage, till she may perceive whether it be a thing pleasing to her People, left she might feem after to repent too late. That at present many Impediments and Obstructions were in the way: namely, the Civil-War in France, and the Duke of Anjou's forlorn Condition, who had undefervedly lost the King's Favour. In England the Minds of the best Men were averse from the Marriage, which had been a means of delaying it folong; yet notwithstanding the Queen's Affection was still constant towards him. That the French King press'd the Consummation of the Marriage unfeafonably at the prefent, whilit the Duke of Anjon was engaged in a War againtt the Spaniard, which he could not give over, without a Slur to his Honour, and great Difadvantage to both the Kingdoms of England and France, and the utter Undoing of the Netherlands, whilft the Spaniard's Power daily increas'd more than was convenient. Moreover, whereas the People of England defired nothing more than that by this Marriage the Realm might be preferv'd in Peace and Tranquillity, it would be by this means precipitated from a most serene and happy Peace, into a most dangerous War, confidering that the Queen must of neceffity be engaged in her Husband's Quarrel. Wherefore the would have no more treating of the Marriage, till the Duke of Anjou were difengaged from the War he had undertaken, the League of mutual Defence and Offence were concluded betwixt England and France. Which in reality Queen Elizabeth defired above all things. The French King promis'd with all his Heart to enter into a League of Defence ;

folemnized. Not long after the Duke of Anjou came him- Duke of felf into England, (who was now chofen Gover- Anjou nor of the Netherlands by the States) after he had comes aby the Help of Queen Elizabeth's Money happily England rais'd the Siege of Cambray. For the had privately fupply'd him with a great Sum of Money by Henry Seymour, Palavicini, and Bexie a Frenchman. He had a strong Hope, that if he did not com-plete the Marriage while he stay'd here, yet at leaft he should gain thus much, that, being supported with Queen Elizabeth's Favour, he should be the more welcome to the Netherlanders, who honour'd but as for a League offensive, he flatly refused to hear any more thereof before the Marriage were Monour'd her as their tutelar Saint. He was re-1581. ceiv'd with as great Refpect as he could hope for, tained.

Queen

diverfly affected

Queen Wavers

Sheweighs the inconveniences of negle-Ame the Marriage.

Why file fingle before a married Life.

Ann. 14. and no Demonstration could there be given of Honour and Affection which she did not shew Heis high him to the full. Infomuch that in the Month of November, as foon as fhe had with great Pomp celebrated her Coronation-Day, the force of modest Love in the midst of amorous Discouse carried her fo far, that the drew off a Ring from g ver him her Finger, and put it upon the Duke of Anjon's, a Ring. upon certain Conditions betwirt them two. The Standers-by took it, that the Marriage was now contracted by Promife: Amongst whom Aldegond Governor of the City of Antwerp, dispatched Letters presently away into the Netherlands to signifie as much; and Antwerp teffified her publick Joy thereat by Bonfires and Peals of Ordnance. At home the Courtiers Minds were diverfly affected; nershing, fome leap'd for Joy, some were seiz'd with Admiration, and others were dejected with Sorrow. Leicester, who had lately plotted and contrived to cross the Marriage; Hatton Vice-Chamberlain, and Walfingham, florm'd at it, as if the Queen, the Realm and Religion were now quite un-The Queen's Gentlewomen, with whom fhe used to be familiar, lamented and bewailed, and did to terrifie and vex her Mind, that she fpent the Night in Doubts and Cares without Sleep amongit her weeping and lamenting Servants. The next Day she sent for the Duke of Anjou, and they two, all By-standers being removed, had a long Discourse together. He at length withdrew himfelf to his Chamber; and throwing the Ring from him, a while after took it again, taxing the Lightness of Women, and the Inconstancy of Islanders, with two or three biting and fmart Scoffs.

The Queen pondering in her troubled Mind what Burghly and Suffex had told her: 'That unless the married the Duke of Anjou, no League offentive could be hoped for from the French King: That she of herself alone was too weak to withstand the Greatness and Power of the Spaniard, who if he should profer his Daughter in Marriage to the King of Scots, would eafily draw to the Scottish King's Party all the Papists in England, all the Fugitives, all the Rebels, all that were weary of the prefent Government, and all of desperate Fortunes, of whom there were every where great Numbers. the hopes of all good Men, who expected Iffue from the Queen by this Marriage, would be frustrate; fo that now, neglecting her, they would cast their Eyes upon some of the Competitors. Besides, she herfelf could not but incur very great Displeasure with the French King and the Duke of Anjon, who after having spent fo long time in fo many Confultations, fent fuch honourable Embaffies, and disburfed fo much Money, would take it very hardly to be thus deluded, however they might diffemblingly conceal their Difpleasure a while for their own Advantage, thereby to procure either Money at present for the D. of Anjou towards the Low-Country Wars, or a yearly Pension for the time to come. Neither did less Scrufor the time to come. ple flick in her Mind, if the Duke of Anjou, being thus neglected, should take a Wife out of Spain; (which some whisper'd into her Ears) for then the forefaw that Danger would threaten her both from France and Spain too.

In the midth of these perplexing Cogitations concerning Marriage, into which the confideracut her, some were of opinion, that she was fully resolved in her Mind, that she should better provide both for the Commonwealth and her own Glory by an unmarried Life than by Marriage; as forefeeing that if the married a Subject of the should disparage herfelf by the inequality of the Match, and give occasion to domestick Ann. 24.

Heart-burnings, private Grudges and Commotions; if a Stranger, the then should subject both herself and her People to a forein Yoke, and endanger Religion: Having not forgotten how unhappy the Marriage of her Sifter Queen Mary with King Philip a Foreiner had been; allo how unfortunate that Marriage of her Great Grandiather Edward IV. had prov'd, who was the first of all the Kings of England since the Norman Conquest, that ever took one of his Subjects to Wife. Her Glory alfo, which whilft fhe continu'd unmarried she retain'd entire to herfelf and uneclips'd, fhe feared would by Marriage be transfer'd to her Husband. And besides, the Perils by Conception and Child-bearing, objected by the Physicians and her Gentlewomen for some private Reasons, did many times run in her Mind, and very much deter her from thoughts of marrying.

1581.

She was also much incenfed at a Book which A Book was written and publish'd against the Matriage in a singer (atyrical Stile, (out of a fear left Religion this Marins). should be changed) entirl'd, The Gulph wherein riage. England will be fivallow'd by the French Marriage. In which Book those of the Council who favour'd the Marriage are taxed as ungrateful to their Prince and Country; the Queen herfelf (in the midst of several flattering Expressions) is glanced at as unlike herfelf; the Duke of Anjou flander'd with unworthy Reproaches; the French Nation odiously defamed; and the Marriage itself, in regard of the difference of Religion, (as of the Daughter of God with a Son of Antichrist) with virulent Words condemn'd, as profane, dangerous to the Church, and destructive to the Com-monwealth; and this proved out of the holy Scriptures, miserably wrested. Neither would Queen's the Queen be persuaded that the Author of the opinion Book had any other intent but to procure the otit. Harred of her Subjects against her, (who had al-ways no lefs regard of the Love of her People than she had of her own Authority, and (as Princes use to do) made it her chief Care to preferve her Reputation) and privately to open a Gap for fome prodigious Innovation; confidering that the Writer had not fo much as mention'd the Security of the Queen and Realm, or prevention of Dangers to either, and that the States of the Realm had before with all Earnettness befought her to marry, as the most assured Remedy against the threatning Mischiels. These things she declard by publick Proclamation; A Proclamation, having condemn'd the Author of the mation a Book as a publisher of Sedition, she highly com-gainst it. mended the Duke of Anjou's good Affection towards her and the Protestant Religion, and exprefed her Refentment that so great an Injury should be offer'd to so Noble a Prince, and one that had fo well deferv'd, who had defir'd nothing to be alter'd either in the Commonwealth or Religion: And withal, the commended Simier, the Duke of Anjou's Agent, for his Wildom and Diferetion, whom fome had loaden with Calumnies and Slanders. She also advertis'd the People, that the faid Book was nothing elfe but a Fiction of fome Traytors, to raife Envy abroad, and Sedition at home; and commanded it to be burnt before the Magiffrate's Face.

From this time forward the began to be a little more incenfed against the Puritans, or Ianovators, from whom she easily believ'd these kind of things proceeded. And indeed, within a few Days after, John Stubbs of Lincolns-lons, a furious hor-headed Profeffor of Religion, (whole Sifter Thomas Cartwrighs, a Ringleader amongst the

and Prin Book ta-

Their

right Hands

ter par-don'd,

1581. William Page who dispersed the Copies, and Sin-Ann. 24 gleton the Printer, were apprehended. Against whom Sentence was given, that their right Hands flould be cut off, according to an Act of Polify and Mary, against the Authors and Publishers of selfations Writings. Tho' some Lawyers mutter'd that the Sentence was erroneous and void by reafon of the falfe noting of the Time wherein the Law was made; and that that Act was only temporary, and died with Queen Mary. Of this number was Dalton, who often bawl'd it out openly, and was committed to the Tower; and Monfon, a Judge in the Court of Common-Pleas, was fo tharply reprehended, that he refign'd his Place: Forafmuch as Wray, Lord-Chief-Juffice of Eng-Lind, made it appear, that there was no Mistake in noting the Time; and proved by the Words of the AA, that the Act was made against those who should abuse the King by sedicious Writings, and that the King of England never dieth; yea, that that Act was renewed anno primo Elizabethæ, to be in force during the life of her and the Heirs of her Body. Hereupon Stubbs and Page had their right Hands cut off with a The Prin-Clever, driven through the Wrift by the force of a Mallet, upon a Scaffold in the Market-place at Westminster. The Printer was pardon'd. I remember (being there present) that Stubbs, after his right Hand was cut off, put off his Hat with his left, and faid with a loud Voice, God fave the Queen; the Multitude standing about was deeply filent; either out of an horror of this new and unwonted kind of Punishment; or else out of commiseration towards the Man, as being of an honest and unblamable Repute; or elfe out of hatred of the Marriage, which most Men presag'd would be the overthrow of Religion.

Thefe things were done prefently after the Duke of Anjou's coming into England. During his flay here, the Queen, to take away the fear which had poffets'd many Mens Minds, that Re-ligion would be alter'd, and Popery tolerated, being overcome by importunate Entreaties, permitted that Edm. Campian aforefaid, of the Society of Fesus, Ralph Sherwin, Luke Kirby and Alex Briant. Priefts, should be arraign'd. Who being indicted upon the Act for Treason made in the 25th of Edward III. and charg'd to have compaffed and imagined the destruction of the Queen and Realm, to have adher'd to the Bishop of Rome, the Queen's Enemy; to have come into England to disturb the Peace and Quiet of the Realm, and to have raifed Forces to that end, were condemn'd to die, and, perfifting obflinately to defend the Pope's Authority against the Queen, were executed. For Campian, after he was condem'd, being ask'd, first, Whether Queen Elizaexecuted. beth were a right and lawful Queen? refused to answer: Then, Whether he would take part with the Queen or the Pope, if he fhould fend Forces against the Queen? he openly protessed and testified under his Hand, that he would stand for the Pope. Afterwards some others also were executed for the same reasons; whereas in full ten Years time after the Rebellion, there had been no more than five Papifts put to death. But thefe things I leave to the Writer of the Ecclefiaftical History: Yet let me, by his leave, give a brief touch here of some few things which are linked with matters that concern the Commonwealth. Such now were the Times, that the Queen (who never was of opinion that Mens Confciences were to be forced) complain'd manytimes, that the was driven of necessity to take these Courfes, unless she would suffer the ruin of her-felf and her Subjects upon some Mens pretence of Conscience and the Catholick Religion. Yet for the greater part of thefe filly Priefts, she did

? Puritans, had married) the Author of this Book, [not at all believe them guilty of plotting the Destruction of their Country; but the Superiours 1581. were they she held to be the fustruments of this Ann. 24. Villany; for these inferiour Emissaries committed the full and free disposure of themselves to their Superiours. For when those that were now and afterwards taken were asked, 'Whether by sufpicion Authority of the Bull of Pins V. Bishop of Rome, encreased the Subjects were to abfoly'd from their Oath against of Allegiance rowards the Onen, that they them of Allegiance towards the Queen, that they might take up Arms against their Prince: Whether they thought her to be a lawful Queens Whether they would fubfcribe to Sander's and Milective they would hadrene to samer's and Briffany's Opinion, concerning the Authority of that Bull: Whether if the Bilhop of Rome fhould wage War against the Queen, they would join with her or him? They answer'd fome of 'em so ambiguoully, some so resolutely, and some by prevarication and filence shifting by their first the same that they have the same of the off the Questions in such a manner, that divers Tergiveringenuous Catholick began to suspect they were sation. engag'd in traiterous Designs; and J. Bishop, a Man otherwise devoted to the Bishop of Rome, wrote against 'em, and solidly prov'd, That that Constitution obtruded under the Name of the Lateran Council, upon which the whole Autho-Laterin Collicit, apoir which the whole Authority of abfolving Subjects from their Allegiance, and depoing Princes, is founded, is no other than a Decree of Pope Innocent III. and was never admitted in England; yes, that the faid Council was no Council and a subject was any things. cil was no Council at all, nor was any thing at all there decree'd by the Fathers.

Suspicions also were daily encreased by the and by great numbers of Priests creeping more and more their sown into England, who privately try'd the Minds of ing dan-Men, fpread abroad, that Princes excommuni-pinions. cate were to be deposed, and whisper'd in corners, that fuch Princes as profess d not the Romiss Religion, had forfeited their regal Title and Authority: That those who had taken holy Orders were, by a certain Ecclefiastical Privilege, exempted from all Jurisdiction of Princes, and not bound by their Laws, nor ought they to reverence or regard their Majefty: That the Bishop of Rome hath supreme Authority and absolute Power over the whole World, yea even in Temporal Matters: That the Magistrates of England were no lawful Magistrates, and therefore not to be accounted such; yea, That whatsoever was done by the Q's Authority since the time that the Bull declaratory of Pins V. was publified against her, was by the Liws of God and Man altogether void, and to be esteem'd of no validiry. And some of 'em were not asham'd to own, that they were return'd into England with no other intent, than by reconciling Men at Confession, to absolve every one particularly from all his Oaths of Allegiance and Obedience to the Queen, just as the said Bull did absolve them all at once and in general. And this feem'd the eafier to be effected, because they promis'd withal absolution from all mortal Sin; and the safer, because it was perform'd more closely, and under the Stal of Confession.

The Five and Twentieth Year of her Reign.

Thefe things and the like extorted from the New Law3

States of the Realm, which were affembled in against the the Month of January at Wellminster, new and Papilta more severe Laws against the Papilta, wherein they are declar'd guilty of High-Treafon, ' whoever shall distuade the Subjects from their Obedience to their Prince, and from the Religion establish'd in England, or shall reconcile them to the Church of Rome; as also, those who fhall be fo diffuaded or reconciled. alfo who shall say Mass are fin'd in 200 Marks, and Imprisonment for a Year, or longer, till

Cambian the Jefuit and fome Priefts

Puniththe Catholicks neceffary.

they have paid the Money: they who shall | St. George; and sent Peregrine Bertie, (whom she, wittingly and willingly be present at Mass are Ann. 25. ' fined in 100 Marks, and Imprisonment likewise for a Year: and they who refuse to frequent Divine Service in their Parish-Churches, are fined in 20 Pounds a Month. This the Papifts exclaim'd was unjustly interpreted of Lunar Months, who had hitherto redeem'd their Abfence upon Sundays and Holidays for a Shilling to the Ufe of the Poor. But these things let the

Aniou re-

Ecclefiaftical Historians handle more at large. The Duke of Anjou, having flay'd in England tines into full three Montis, began his Journey toward the the Low-Netherland: in the Month of February. The Queen Netherland: in the Month of February. The Queen herfelt, to do him Honour, accompany'd him as far as Canterbury, and commanded the Earl of Leicester, Charles Howard, Hunsdon, Willoughby, Windfor, and Sheffield, Barons, Sir Philip Sidney, Sir Jury and outfleta, Datons, on Funity States, Str. Francis Ruffel, Sir George Bourchier, and fome other entirent knights, to wait upon him as far as tendent to the states of the banks. Contains the states of the banks. Contains the states of the banks. Confederate Netherlands had before declared the Spaniard to have forfeited his Sovereignty, by violating their Laws; broken his Seals in pieces, thrown down his Arms in all places, and abfolv'd the People from their Oath of Allegiance; fo that they were at liberty to choose themselves another Prince. The Duke granted the Exercise of the Romillo Religion to all that would fwear

Allegiance to him, and abjute the Spaniard. Then he earnefly apply'd himfelf to the War, loft Ou-Some En. denard, and took Aloft. Six hundred English, ung'ssereder the Leading of Thomas Norrus, Barney, Cornish, bimfelf

Norris

and Gibsen, revolted from him to the Spaniards, laying the Cause thereof upon the imperious Severity of Norris. These Men being exposed to all dangerous Brunts, and flightly and contemptu-oufly used, suffer'd condign Punishment for their Treachery, and too late repented of it, after they had undergone infinite Miferies. However Norris, with 300 Horse and the Remainder of his Companies, gain'd fingular Commendations amongst all Men, for his Valour and Military gallantly. Skill. For he couragiously receiv'd the Prince of Parma, who furiously charged him with great and made a difcreet and orderly Retreat Forces, to the Walls of Ghent, while Anjou and the Prince of Orange from the Walls admired his martial Valour. But why do I dwell upon these things? The Duke of Anjon, having now spent in the Neleaves the therlands a great Mals of Money, that he receiv'd

Nether-lands with out of England, and that without Success, and tands with diffeonour, found that they bestow'd upon him nothing but bare and empty Titles, whilst the Government and Management of Affairs remain'd wholly in rable. Let it fuffice just to mention, in a Word only, A Comet, a Comet or Blazing-star, feen in the Month of May, in the 12th. degree of Gemini, near the Star call'd the little Goat, with a radiant Tail streaming above and beyond the right Shoulder & violent of Ericksbonius: as also an hideous Tempest in Tempeit. Norfolk, with much Lightning, Thunder, violent Force of Winds, and a great Storm of Hail, the Stones whereof were three Inches in Thickness, the States Hands, attempted rashly and unadvi-sedly to force Antwerp and other Cities, but all in vain, and not without great Lofs of his own Men; and shortly after left the Netherlands with Dishonour, as having achiev'd nothing memo-and fashion'd like the Rowels of Spurs Queen Elizabeth, to threngthen herfelf abroad against the Spaniard, whom she knew to be exa-sperated by that Supply of Money sent to the Hing of Denmark Duke of Anjou, choic Frederick II. King of Denmade Kut. of the Garrer, as being very sparing in conferring of Honours, 1582. with much ado had admitted to the Title of Ba- Ann. 25. ron Willoughby of Eresby, before such time as he had given Proof of his Vertue, albeit his Mother were the only Daughter of the Duchefs of Suffolk, and Heir to the Lord Willoughby) to invest him with the Ensigns of that Order. The King of Denmark gladly fuffer'd the Chain or Collar of Rofes to be put about his Neck, and the Garter to be ty'd about his Leg: the rest of the Enfigns he receiv'd to lay up and keep, but refused to put them on, because they were outlandish; and to take the Oath he absolutely deny'd, because he had done the same before, when he was admitted by the French King into the Order of St. Michael. Whilst Willoughby remained in Denmark, he represented to the King the Grie-The Comvances of the English Merchants; who complain a plaint of heavily, that the Cuftons were too much raisd, Mechany whereas in times patt they paid in palling the reneferment of the state of the same o Rofe-Noble, that is, the fourth part of an Ounce of Gold, and as much for their Lading or Merchandize, with fome fmall Allowance towards Fires by Night to direct their Courfe fafely, and Barrels or Buoys to thew the Shelves and Rocks. He treated with him also in behalf of the Merchants, to release the Payment of Last gelt, whereby was exacted the thirtieth part of all their Merchandize, by Way of Loan, during the Heat of the War betwixt the Kings of Denmark and Swedeland, with Promife of Repayment when the War ended. But these things, as being mat-Henege ters of great Weight, were put off to another lets'ein. time. For scarce do Princes ever abate of the Customs which they have once imposed, judging that fuch Royalties (as they call 'em) belong as Rights and Privileges to every Kingdom, and are

Queen Elizabeth also, for her better Security Treaty at home, purpos'd to compound matters with the with the Queen of Scots, by Sir Walter Mildmay. But find-Qof Scots ing that the Duke of Guise plotted secretly with deferred. certain English Fugitives, for her Delivery, and levy'd Forces, under pretence that they should ferve under the Duke of Anjou in the Low-Countries, but indeed to be transported over into England, from Auc or Ewe, an obscure Port-Town in Normandy, belonging to the Duke of Guife; (whereof the French King gave her the first Notice, and out of his Love to Queen Elizabeth prevented it) the matter was put off to another time, and the was neglected.

not subject to any forein Abatement.

But yet to prevent the Duke of Guife's Attempts in Scotland, who was thought to use Lenox's Assistance to avert the King of Scots's Assection from the English, William Ruthuen, whom the King had overy lately created Earl of Goury, rais'd Iome Troubles. Tris William, (not to degenerate from this Father, who bore a deadly Hatred against the Scaland. King's Mother) with other Conspirators, employ'd all their Wits to remove Lenox and Arran from the King, pretending to provide for the Security of Religion, the King's Safety, and the Amity with England. And thus they went to work. Lenox, who was now made Chamberlain of Scotland, was perfuaded to exercife with Ri-gour the old worn out Jurisdiction of Chamberlain; and this to no other intent, but that he might thereby (unawares and never dreaming of any fuch thing) incur the Hatred of the People; which Hatred the Clergy should more instance by declaiming against him publickly out of the Pulpit, as a Papitt, a Guissan, and a rigorous Execu-tor of his Authority, and should openly prophe-sie his Destruction. When Lenox therefore was mark, whom file had a long time respected as her loving Friend, into the Society of the Order of gone from Perth (where the King then lay) to

King-

Remove A ennx out of Scotiand.

King to con itcdoings. Buckanin difapthem

Franch K. fends Agents to procure the King's Liberty.

Edinbercugh, to exercise the aforesaid Juris liction, 1502. and Arran was out of the Way, Gorry, Marre, Any 28 Linding, and others, taking the Opportunity, in-They turn vited the King to Rusburs Caftle, and there de-prize the rain'd him against his Will, and retrifyed him so that he durft not ftir abroad. All his faithfullest Servants they remov'd from him, Arran they car-13'd to Prifun, conftrain'd the King to call home the Larl of singus from Banishment, (at the Intercession of the Queen of England, who was acquainted with their Plot) and to fend Lenox back again into France: who, being a Man of a very mild Spirit, did for the pulick Quiet fake furrender up Dunbriton, which he might eatily have delanded, and refused not to return into France; and this he did at the King's feeming Perfuation, which they had forced him to use with him. And not content with all this, they compell'd the Force the King, against his Will, to approve of this their teizing of him, in his Letters to the Queen of nancotheir England, and to declare an Affembly of the States fummond by them to be just and legal. Yet could they not draw Fucharan to approve of this Tact of theirs, either by their Declaration, or by Messengers sent to perfuade him; who now wit Sorrow repented that he had formerly maintain'd the Caufe of factious People against their Princes, and foon after died. A Man born, as he himself has written in a Poem, nec celo, nec solo, nec facule crudite, that is, neither in a Climate, nor Countrey, nor Age of Learning; yet happily arriving himfelf at the Top and Perfection of Poetical Skill, fo as he may defervedly be rec-kon'd Prince of the Poets of this Age. When the French King had certain Intelligence hereof, he dispatch'd away Mota-Fenellon through England, and Maninguille by Sea, into Scotland, with one and the fame Instituctions, to wit, That they should take some course or other for procuring the King's Liberty: That they should confirm and encourage the French Faction, draw the King's Mind to embrace Amity with the French, and emgratulate vim upon this account, that the Queen his Mother, out of her motherly Piety, granted him the Royal Title, and very willingly admitted him into the Participation of the Kingdom, to wit, that he should be own d for true and lawful King, by the Princes of Christendom, and all the lawin king, by the Frinces of Christendom, and all the People in Scott and, and that all Feditions should be for the future taken away. The Queen of Scots in the mean time having her Mind full of Cares and Doubts, being overcome with Miseries, and languishing with the Calamity of a long Imprisonment without all Hope of Liberty, deplored her hard Destiny, with the fad Condition of her Son, in a long Letter written in French, to Queen Elizabeth, which her motherly Love and the Anguish of her Mind wrung from her, to this purpose, as I have abbreviated the same out of the very

Original. Q.of Scots

Letter to c

Q. Eliz.

'Whereas I have been certainly advertised that my Son is furprized by Rebels, (as I myself al-fo was some Years since) out of a just Pear lest he fhould undergo the fame common Condition of Infelicity with myfelf, I cannot but make my woful Complaints, and imprint the fame (if it may be) in your Confeience, that so my Innocence may appear to Posterity, and their Ignominy by whose unjust Dealings I am most undefervedly brought into these Miseries. But feeing their cunning Practices and Devices (the never fo wicked) have hitherto been of more Credit with you than my most just Com-Plaints, and your Might may feem to overcome Right, and force to oppress and bear down Truth among Men; I will appeal to the everliving God, in whom only Iacknowlege a Power and Dominion over us that are Princes of equal Jurildiction, Degree and Authority. And upon him will I call, (with whom there will be no place for Crait for Freud.) that in the laft day 1582, he will reward us according to our Defersione. Aima, rowards another, howtherer my Admentical Aima, know in the ment time have to clock that treacherous Dealings before Men, (call hipsi) after the Aima have the state of the second of the before you.) In his Name theratore, and as it were before his Tribunal-Sout, I call to your Were before its Friedman-Stat, I can to your Remembrance, by what cunning Artifees fome who were employd in your Name draw the Sects, my Subjects, into Robellian against me, whilst I livid in Section I, and give Pilo to all the Confession when the proposal charge in the confession when the section of the those Mischiefs which have happen'd there ever fince. Which (to omit other Proofs) is certainly known by evident Tellimonies to be produced, and by Confellion out of Mirton's own Mouth, who was on that account advanced to * Honour. Against whom if I had proceeded according to Law and Juffice, and you Regent the dead according to Eav and Juntee, and you have the had not aided my Robels, they could not have flood out long agrinft me and my Friends.

Whilft I was kept in Prifon at Longb-Levin, considerable for the prifon at Longb-Levin conside

Sir Nicolas Throckmorton was a means to perfuade date me in your Name to fet my Hand to a Writing, and refign the Kingdom; which Writing he affirm'd would be invalid, and fo the whole World has taken it to be, till you affifted the Authors of the faid Instrument readily with your Favour and Countenance, as also with an arm'd Power. And tell me bond fide, would you acknowlege fuch an Authority and Power of your Subjects over you? Yet thereby was my Regal Authority taken from me, and that by your Advice and Allistance; and my Kingdom translated to my Son, who was then in respect of his Age uncapable thereof. And when I myself was not long since determined to con-firm the Kingdom to him lawfully, he was forcibly feiz'd on by certain Traitors, who without question purposed to deprive him (as they had done me) of the Kingdom, if not of his Life alfo.

' After I had made an Escape out of Longh-Lewin, and was now ready to give the Rebels Battle, I craved your Aid, fending back that Diamond which I had formerly received from you in pledge of your Love, with large Pro-miles of Affiltance against my Rebels, time after time renew'd; giving me also then your faithful Word, that if I would betake myfelf to you, you would come to the Borders, and affirt me in your own Person. I, relying upon this your Promite to often repeated, (tho' thofe you employ'd had many times deceiv'd me with fair Words) refolv'd to fly to you in my Adver-fity, as to a facred Anchor. And certainly fo And certainly fo I had, had I found as easie Access to you, my Rebels against me have always had. But before I could come to you, I was seiz'd upon, clapt into Custody, shut up in strong Holds, and have ever fince endured Afflictions more bitter than Death itself.

' I know you will hit me in the Teeth with what pass'd betwitt me and the Duke of Norfolk; yet I deny that that was any way pieju-dicial to you or your Kingdom. For it was dicial to you or your Kingdom. Fer it was approved of by the chief Counfellors of the Realm of England, and confirm'd by their Subforiptions, which may be preduced, who also gave an affured Promise of your Consent. And how (I pray you) could Men of that Quality promise your Consent to that which would demand the promise your Consent to that which would demand the promise your Consent to that which would demand the promise your Consent to the work. prive you of Life, Honour, and your Diadem? yet would you have these things believ'd by all

But when some of my faid Rebels repented when it was too late, and perceiv'd more pal-pably, by the Conference between our Com-Vol XI. Q q q millioners wards me.

1582. Ann.25. * Lidin Grange.

millioners at York, how injuriously I was dealt withal, they were prefently belieged by your Forces in the Castle of Edinborough, and * two of the chief of 'em were miserably bereav'd of of the their Lives; one by Poifon, the other by the Gallows. And this, after I had, at your Request, caused them more than once to lay down their Arms, in hopes of Peace, which God their Arms, in hopes of Peace, which God knows whether my Adverfaries ever intended.

From that time forward I determined with myfeif to try whether I could by my Patience mitigate others Rigor, by bearing quietly all things which should be inflicted on a Captive-Queen: yet have I now for this whole Year been quite debarr'd from all Intercourse with 'my Son, either by Letters or Meisengers; that fo, if it were pollible, the Son might be rent and divided from his Mother, by a fad and wo-ful Alienation of Affections. Conditions of Peace and Concord to be made betwixt us I have often propounded. At Chatesporth, eleven Years since, with your Com-millioners, and with yourfelf by the Ambassadors of the most Christian King and my own, and the last Winter with Beale, have I dealt therein fincerely. But those Conditions have been always rejected, Delays fought and inter-poled, my Actions and Endeavours misconftrued, and the fincere Affections of my Mind ftill condemn'd. And of my long Patience I have reap d no other Fruit, than that by a certain Prescription it grew to a Custom, that I was every day more roughly handled than other. These things verily I am no longer able to endure: and howsoever it sall out, if I die, I will make known the Authors of my Death; and if I live, I shall, I hope, cause all wicked Contrivances and Calumnies against me to conformances and Canonines against me to cease, that I may pass the rest of my Life in greater Quiet and Tranquillity.

Wherefore, to take away all Missunderstandings betwirk us, let the Testimonies of the Spatian that were betalty when Pass and the Spinlards that were lately taken Prifoners in Ireland, be produced against me; let the Examination of the Jefuites be brought forth; let every Man have liberty to accuse me publickly; ' fo as I in like manner may have liberty allow'd me to defend myfelf, and not be condemn'd un-heard. The baself Malesactors and Prisoners are allowed their Defence, and their Accusers brought before them Face to Face. And why am not I so dealt withal, who am an anointed Q. in Blood most nearly ally'd to you, and next to you the lawful Heir to the Crown? And this last is what above all vexes and troubles my ' Adverfaries, who labour to fet us two at Variance. Alas! there is no Reason this should trouble them. I call God and my own Honour · to witness, that I have for this long time thought of no other Kingdom but that of Heaven. are you bound in Conscience, and obliged both in regard of your Duty and Justice, not to prejudice my Son's undoubted Title after my death, nor to further the fecret Contrivances of those who, both in England and Scotland, labour tooth and nail the Destruction of me and my Son; as is more than too apparent, by the Carriage of your Metlengers in Scotland, who have behaved themselves seditiously enough, (unknown

' ftirr'd himfelf therein.) 1s this Reaton, that I, who am a Mother, · flould be prohibited, not only to advise my opprefeat Son, but so much as to understand in what Condition he is? Had those Messengers been few for my Son's Good, haply, if they

10 you, no doubt, tho' Huntington has bufily be-

fake; certainly you had obliged me the more closely to you. Neither was there any Reafon 1582, why you should so carefully conceal their Send-Inn 25. ing, or quite take from me at that time all Use of my Liberty. But, to fpeak freely, I bufeech you to employ no more fuch Ministers in Scot-tish matters. For tho' + Cary (I think) would † Lord undertake nothing unbeleening himfelf and his Harfdon. Honour; yet can I promise myself no Good of Hantington, by reafon of his bad Behaviour to-

' Therefore I do earnestly intreat you, by the near Kindred that is betwixt us, to have a feri-ous Care in my son's Safety, to intermeddle no more in Searth matters, without acquainting me or the French King; and to effect these for no better than Trattors, who detain my Son in Cu-flody, and confirm him, againft his Will, to do what they lift. In brief, I befeech you by the Groß and Paffion of Christ our Redeemer, that I may now, after fo many Years Reffraint, be restor'd to my Liberty upon reasonable Conditions, and may, for the finall Remainder of my Life, refresh my decayd Body, somewhere out of England, after so long Grief and Languishing in Priton. So shall you oblige me and mine, and especially my Son, to you for ever. And this I will never cease to beg of you with all Earnestness, till you grant it me: and that which moves me so earnestly to crave it, is the afficient State of my Body and Health. Take O der therefore, that I may hereafter be more courteously used; otherwise, in plain terms, I shall not be able to endure it: and put me not off to any other Doom or Sentence than your own. Whatfoever hereafter shall befal me, Good or Ill, I shall take it to come from your-feif atone. Vouchfase me this Favour, that I feif alone. may understand your Mind from yourself, either by a fhort Letter, or by the French Ambaffador. I cannot rest fatisfy d with those things ' which the Earl of Shrewsbury tells me, confider-'ing that they are alter'd every day. When I wrote of late to your Council, you wish'd me to acquaint yourfelf only with my Business. (But there was no reason for you to grant them fo large an Authority over me, to trouble and afflict me.) Yet I cannot but fear that fome of them who are my Adversaries have procured this, left the reft, when they should have heard my just Complaints, should oppose them, in regard as well of your Honour, as of their own · Duty towards you. Now it remains that I make this special Request to you, that my Mind being taken up with the Thoughts of another Life, I may have some Reverend Catholick Priest allow'd me, who may direct me in my Religion, for my Soul's Health. This last Of-' fice is not to be deny'd to the poorest Wretches of the meanest Condition. To forein Princes Ambassadors you allow the Exercise of their Religion, and I freely granted it to my Subjects of a different Religion. If this be deny'd me, '(I hope) I shall be excused before God, but 'my Adversaries (I fear) will not escape unpu-'nish'd. Certainly it will be a Precedent for o-' ther Princes of Christendom to use the like Severity towards their Subjects of a different Re-'ligion, if this Rigor be fhew'd to me, who am ' an absolute Princess, and your nearest Kinswo-'man. For fo I am, and fo I shall be as long as 'I live, whether my Adversaries will or no, and tho' they be never so ill pleas'd and fatisfy'd ar it. To have my Houshold increas'd I defire not, but I am necessitated to defire you that I may have two Waiting-Women allow'd me, whom I fhall have need of in this my weak Condition: had taken my Advice along with them, they fall have need of in this my weak Condition:
much that here more welcome to him for my fand let not my Enemies fatisfy their Malice and Cruelty, in hindring me of fo fmall a Courtesie. Whereas I am privately accused, by the Earl of Shrewsbury, that, contrary to what I promis'd to Beale, I have dealt with my Son, about conveying my Title in Scotland to him, without your Privity; I befeech you believe not Beale's Suggestions: I promis'd nothing but on certain Conditions, to which I am not at all ty'd, unless those on your part be perform'd by you. Since that time I have receiv'd no Answer, and a deep Silence has enfued touching those matters; but the Practices and Contrivances in Scotland, to the Destruction of me and my Son, have been continued. This fo long a Silence I could not conftrue any thing elfe but a flat Denial, which I fignify'd to you and your Council by Letters. What the French King and his Mother imparted to me, I have trul and ingenuously acquainted you withal, and ask'd your Counfel in it; but I have not heard fo much as a Word from you. To submit myfelf to your Advice touching my Affairs and my Country, before I knew what manner of Advice it would be, I never intended: for this might feem a piece of extreme Folly. How my Adversaries in Scotland triumph over me and my Captive-Son, is not unknown to you. For my part, I have attempted nothing there which may prejudice you: what I have done has been for procuring a folid Peace in that Kingdom; whereof, fure, I should have as great a Care as your Council; for I am far more interests'd therein than they. I defired with all my heart to gratify my Son, by confirming to him the Title of King, and to bury all Discords in Oblivion. Is this to fnatch away the Diadem from my Son? But my Adverfaries and the Adverfaries of my Family would not have it confirm d This they envy him, whilft they carry a Witness against themselves in their own Breaft, and by reason of their guilty Conscience mistrust their own Condition.

1582. Ann. 25.6

Let not these and others my Adversaries so far blind your Eyes, as that, while you live and see it, they bring your nearest Kindred to their Graves, and undermine both Crowns: for to that purpose certainly do they carry on their wicked Practices against me, against my Son, and perhaps against yourself too. Can it be any Advantage or Credit to you, that by their means I and my Son, and you and I ourselves, are fo long deprived of one another? Recal yourfelf to your innate Mildness and Lenity, resume your natural Disposition, and, as you are a Princess, foften your Spirit, and dispose it to lay afide all Displeasure towards me a Princess so nearly related to you in Blood, and so loving to you; that these matters being compounded betwixt us, I may the more quietly depart this Life, and the Groans and Sighs of my afflicted Soul may not ascend up to God. To whose Majesty I offer up my daily Prayers, befeeching him that these my just Complaints and wosul Lamentations may now at length find Regard with you. At Sheffield, Nov. 8. · 1582.

Subscribed,

Vôtre tres-desolée plus proche parente, o affectionée saur, MARIE R.

That is,

' Your most disconsolate nearest Kinswoman, and affectionate Sifter, MARY Queen. The Six and twentieth Year of her Reign.

With this Letter Queen Elizabeth was variously affected, and (having first permitted Mota-Fenellon the French Ambassador, to go with Davison her own Ambassador into Scotland, watching the time on purpose that he might at unawares meet Lemos, as he return'd out of Souland; and having temperature herfelf after graciously receiv'd the said Least formats and gently blamed him for the Errors he had Francisco committed in Scottish matters) fent Rebert Beele, Clerk of the Council, a morose, ill-temper Man, to the Queen of Scots, to expostulate with her roundly about these Letters of Complaint, and together with the Earl of Shrewshury, to treat with her about her Liberty, in regard she had very lately by other Letters earnestly requested, that, upon Security given to Queen Elizabeth, fhe might at length enjoy the fame, and he affociated with her Son, in the Government of Sinland.

Concerning these things a serious Consultati- Consultaon was holden in the Council Chamber of En-tionabour gland; and most of the Council were fatisfy'd fering he that she might be fet at liberty upon these Con at liberty, ditions; 'If she and her Son would promife to Upon attempt nothing which might be prejudicial to what Con-Queen Elizabeth, or the Realm of England. If dirions. ' fhe would acknowlege that whatever was done by her Husband Francis II. King of France, against Queen Elizabeth, was done against her Will, and would utterly disclaim the same as unjust; confirm the Treaty of Edinborough, and condemn all unfair Attempts ever fince, by in-genuously renouncing them. If she would be bound to contrive or act nothing directly or indirectly against the Government of the King-dom of England, in either Ecclesiastical or Civil Matters, but oppose all fuch as should any ways attempt the fame, as publick Enemies. If the would forbear to claim any Right to the Kingdom of England, during Queen Elizabeth's Life; and afterwards be content to refer the Title of Succession to the Judgment of the Parliament of England. If (to the end there might be no place left for Prevarication, and that the might not hereafter alledge, that she condescended to these Conditions, being a Prisoner and conftrain'd thereto) she would not only swear to these Conditions herself, but would also procure the Estates of Scotland to confirm them by publick Authority, and the King to ratify them by Oath and Writing, and Hostages to be given for the Performance of them. As for her being join'd with her Son in the Government, it was not thought meet that the Queen of England flould be concern'd with it: but this they refer'd to the King of Scots himself, and the Estates of Scotland. And if they were so associated together, they should be dealt withal jointly about the League; if not, severally.

These things were deliberated and consulted of, but without Success; for the Scots of the En-Scots of glish Faction utterly rejected the Conditions, cry-the Engl. gips a action acterly rejected the Conditions, cry- the Engling out that fome Seess, which were mortal Enc-Faction mies to the English Nation, were, by the Advice of the Queen of Seess, call'd home out of France; and that Holt, an Englishman, of the Society of Jesus, was sent privately into Scotland, to contrive a way for invading England.

There was now much striving in Scotland be- English twixt Mota-Fenellon and Maninguille the French Am. & French baffadors, and Benus and Davilon Ambaffadors of court the England, which of them flould by deeper Infi. Kolsens nuation allure the King's Mind to the love of their Nation, and who should draw most Men to their Party. Whist they diligently countermined Vol. II. Qqq2

death

one the other in their Plots and Defigns, the 1583. King carried himfelf evenly and indifferently be-Ann. 26. twixt them both, and intermeddled not in those factious Stirs which he labour'd rather to compofe, well knowing how to temper and mix what was profitable with what was just and honest, and in the mean time not to be wanting to Religion or the Commonwealth. But the Cler-Zeal of gy in Scotland were fo inflamed with a kind of the Scotland were fo inflamed with a kind of the Scotland were for inflamed by the Preachest Mata-Feedlow was featled by the Citizens of Edingant the borough, they appointed a Fast, and all the Day long railed upon the French King, the Duke of Guile, and the Ambassadors, out of their Pulpits; and had almost proceeded to excommunicate all the Guests that dined there. As these Ministers did thus openly, fo also some Noblemen of the English English Faction ceased not more closely to profe-Engine Faction cented not more conserve to profe-cute and diffurth the French Ambaffadors, till first Meta-Fenellon, and afterwards Maninguille, left the Court and departed, having notwithstanding first cunningly sown the Seeds of Diffention betwirt those who had got the King in their prevail.

As foon as they were gone, the King profer'd all Kindnets and Respect to the Queen of Eng-The King applies all Kindnels and Respect to the Guerral himself to land by Colonel William Stuart and John Colvillam Stuart and Stuart a Q. Elize and ask'd her Counfel and Advice for composing the prefent Commotions, and his contracting of Marriage. And now they which had polfefs'd themfelves of the King took heart and courage when the French Ambaffadors were remov'd out of Scotland, and more a while after, when they heard of Lenon's death. For he, having found but cold Comfort from the French King, who was embroild in Civil Wars, and now fecretly applying himfelf to work into the Favour of Queen Elizabeth, died at Paris, and at the point of death openly profess'd (as he had done before) the Protestant Religion, confuting thereby the Malice of those who had fally defamed him to be a Papift. While the Surprizers of the King were triumphing for the Duke's death, as thinking themfelf out of felves now fure and certain to keep the King in Cuttody their power, the King, when they little thought of it, tho' he were fcarce eighteen Years of Age, disdaining (seeing he was an absolute King) to be under the Tutelage of three Earls, as he had before wifely yielded to the Time, fo now, having got a fit Opportunity, he wrought his own Liberty, and withdrew himfelf with a few trusty Friends into the Castle of St. Andrews; taking occasion from a Rumour spred abroad that the Noblemen, bearing a deadly Feud and Hatred one against the other, were drawing together Bands of armed Mento attend them at the Convention which they had fummon'd; and therefore he had cause to sear lest his Person thould be expos'd to Danger amongst their tumultuous Scuffles. And to this purpose he wrote Letters to Queen Elizabeth, wherein also he promis'd that he would conftantly maintain Amity with her, and follow her Counfel in fettling of of his Affairs. But this Accident (he faid) happen'd fo unexpectedly, that he could by no means ask her Counfel in it. Afterwards with good Words and a gracious Countenance he advifed some of those Men by whom he was feiz'd upon to depart the Court for prevention of Diflurbances, and promis'd 'em Pardon if they would ask it. But of them all Goury only ask'd it, and fubmitted himfelf, uting this diffinction, that that he had offended, not in matter, but in form. Reads his Then called he home drawn to the Court, whom Friends to he used in his most secret Counsels; and in the Court. next place he feriously fer himself to procure a clear his Realm and Court from Civil Dif-

Whilft he busied himself about these Matters, Ann. 26. Sir Francis Walfingham arrivd, fent from the Queen of England out of her great Care left he bamcomes should by corrupt Counfels now in his flexible into Scott. Years be alienated from the amity of the English, to the damage of both Kingdoms. Walfingham found the King attended with the flower of his Nobility, and another manner of face and appearance of things in Scotland than he expected. At his Audience, he advised him at large the fame things which the Queen had before by her Letters put him in mind of out of Isocrates, (namely, That it was the part of a Ruler to be so true and His advice just in his Dealings, that more credit might be given to to the K. his Word than to others Oaths). And that he would have a great case of bad Comfellors, and be confiant to himself. The King aniword wifely and freely: That if he had written otherwise than he thought, he had done it unwillingly, against King's his Mind, and by conftraint of those that com-pell'd him to it. That he, being a free Prince, was not to be reduc'd to fuch Streights that others must impose Counsellors upon him whom he liked not. That he had done nowish for his Security.

vowed the First-fruits of his Friendship to his dearest Sister the Queen of England, and now he offer'd them gladly and defervedly; and more full demonstrations of his Friendship he should be able to give, when all his Nobility should be obedient to him, than when he himfelf was forced to obey one or two of them, and rul'd as it were but at their Will and Pleafure. Afterwards Walfingham wished him not to in-pute to Queen Elizabeth those things which had lately fallen out in Scotland; then he shew'd him how advantageous to him and to both Kingdoms amity with England had been heretofore, and might be hereafter, if it were not neglected; and which he faid would be firmly established it the Differences betwixt the Nobility of Scotland were by Authority of Parliament buried in Oblivion, if those Noblemen that were remov'd from Court might be receiv'd again into Favour, Religion maintain d inviolate, and a firm League betwixt both Kingdoms established. The King modefily answerd, That he would maintain amily with England: That he would be wanting in no good Offices towards the Queen, and constantly defend the receiv'd Religion. And altho' he suspected Walfingham to be ill affected both towards him and his Mother, yet he graciously dismissed him; and The King being prudently mindful and careful of his Af- offers par fairs beyond what his Age could promife, with don to great commendation for his Clemency, he of- those who fer'd a general Pardon to all that had furpriz'd and feiz'd upon him, if they would ask it within a time preferib'd. But so far were they from asking it, that they fecretly plotted to intercept and furprize him anew. Whereupon they were commanded to depart the Realm within a time ded to deprefix'd; of whom Marre, Glames, the Commendators of Driborough, Paflet, and some others, betook themselves to Ireland; Boyd, Zester-Wemes, Lochelvine, to the Low-Countries; and Dunfermelin into France. The Earl of singus was confined within certain Bounds in Angus. Only Goury, hatching new Mischief, stay'd beyond the prefixed time, to his own Ruin, as we shall shew

Thus they who expell'd Lenex against his will. were themfelves, before the Year came about, expell'd against their wills out of Scotland. The King, as he loved Lenox whilst he lived, so being with those that seiz'd good Agreement betwixt his Nobility, and to

1582

Reftores ll.enox's Reputati-

dead he had him in grateful Remembrance, and 1583. reftor'd his good Name and Repute, which had Ann. 26. by his Enemies been blemish'd and stain'd, suppressing certain infamous Libels against him. His Children he fent for out of France; his Son Lewis he made Succeffor in his Father's Honour, and his Daughters he matched fome time and calls home the Earls of Huntley and Marre. And to flew him South himfelf a King, and give early Proof how he could exercise his Kingly Authority, whereas the faid Conspirators had in a Convention call'd by their own Authority, decreed their feizing of the King's Person to have been just, and had entred the same in the publick Records; he, on the contrary, in a full Affembly of the States, declar'd the fame to have been traiterous: Tho' the Clergy, as if they were fupreme Judges in the Kingdom, in an Assembly convocated by oppose the King. their own Authority, pronounced it to be most just, and thought them to deferve Excommunication who approv'd not of it.

It is not here to be forgot, how in these Days

War growing hot betwixt the Muscovite and the Swede in the Northern Climate, John King of Sweden, unable to relift the Power of fo great an

Emperor, fent Eric of Wisimbrug, his Kinfman,

Q. Eliz. obtains a Peace of the Mifcovice for Sweden.

Clergy

defires a Wife out and an abfolute League. Barnes fent

Andreas Riche one of his Council, and Rafeby his Secretary, on a noble Embaffy to Queen Elizabeth, and by his Letters entreated her to mediate a Peace by her Ambaffador: Which fhe did without delay, and perfuaded the Mufcovite to a Moscovite Peace upon reasonable Conditions. For he dealt now afresh with the Queen about the League before-mention'd, and about his Refuge in England if any Difaster should befal him; and made fuit also for a Wife out of England. Touching these matters, Sir Hierom Bowes Kt. was fent Ambaffador thither, but could hardly fatisfy him, for that the Molcovite with much importunity re Ambaffador to him quir'd an absolute League written in his own Words; and would by no means hear that it was not the part of a Christian, nor allowable by the Law of Nations, to exercise Hostility without first denouncing War, or to come to Blows before fuch time as he that offer'd the Wrong were requir'd to give Satisfaction, and to abitain from doing farther Injury. The Queen delign'd him for a Wife the Lady Anne, Sifter to the Earl of Huntingdon. But when the certainly underflood that he might, by the Laws of his Country, put away his Wives at his pleafure; fhe excus'd it again by the Lady's Indisposition of Health, and the tender Affection of her Mother, who could not endure the abience of her Daughter in a Country fo far diftant, and that she had no power to give the Daughters of her Subjects in Marriage without the confent of their Parents. Nevertheless the Ambassador prevail'd with him to confirm the Merchants Privileges; but his The death death enfuing the Year following, the Trade of the the Emellih in Ruffia withhal decayd by little and Mojeoute [Iris] and the Amel of 1. little, and the Ambaffador was fent back, who returning not without danger of his Life, was receiv'd by the Queen with Favour and Commendations. He was the first (if an Historian may have leave to mention fo trivial a matter) who brought into England the beaft call'd a Machles, never before feen here: It is like an Elk, in Latin Ales, having no Joints in the Legs, and yet wonderful fwift. He brought also certain Fallow-Deer of admirable Swiftness, which being yoked together, would draw a Manfitting in a Sled with incredible speed.

Theodore Founniles, the Son of John Bafilides, (to continue our relation of the Affairs of Muscovy) fueceeded in that valt Empire; a Prince of a duller Spirit, but yet one that would hearken to them that gave him good Counfel. This

Theodore granted to all Merchants of what Nation foever free access into Russia. And being oftentimes folicited by the Queen to confirm the Ann. 26. Privileges granted by his Father to the Mofeovial Theodore Company of English Merchants, to wit, that the Mofonly Englishmen of that Company should come in-country that the Mofonly Englishmen of that Company should come in-country that the Mofonly Englishmen of that Company should come in-country that the Mofonly Englishmen of the Company should be supported by th to or trade in the North Parts of Ruffia, and that milikes Custom-free, in regard they were the first that the Eng. discovered the Passage thither by Sea. He there-upon desir'd her to give liberty to all the Er-aglish to trade into Russia; for to permit some, and deny others, was Injustice. Princes, he faid, must carry an indifferent hand betwixt their Subjects, and not convert Trade (which by the Law of Nations ought to be common to all) into a Monopoly to the private Gain of a few. As for his Customs, he promis'd to exact less by the one half of that Company than of the rest, because they first discover d the Paisage thither by Sea. In other matters he confirm'd their former He con-Privileges, and added some few more out of his firmstome respect to the Queen, and not for any desert, as Privileges, he faid, of the Company, many of whom he and grants found had dealt failfly with his People. And eth new, other answer than this could Giles Fletcher, Doctor of Law, who was afterwards fent Ambail't-dor on the same account, get none. This Flet-Fletcher's cher fet forth a Book of the Ruffian Polity or Ty-Holtory of ranny, wherein are many things worthy of ob-Ruffia. fervation. Which Book notwithstanding was quickly fupprefs'd, left it might give offence to a Prince in amity with England.

Out of Polonia, a Country bordering upon A Alasco Ruffia, came this Summer into England to fee the corres in-Queen, Albert Alasco, Palatine of Siradia, a lear- to Engl. ned Man, well shap'd, with a long Beard, and very comely and decent Apparel: Who being graciously welcomed by her, and entertain'd by the Nobility with great Respect and Feasting, as also by the University at Oxford with learned Divertisements and several Comedies, after 4 Months flay here, withdrew himfelf privately, being run far in Debt.

In the County of Dorfet there happen'd this An Earth-Year no less strange a sight than did in Hereford- quake shire in the Year 1571. For a piece of Ground of three Acres in Blackmore remov'd out of its place, with Trees and Hedges, and paffed over other Land, leaving a great Pit, and ftopping up an High-way which led to Came. Whether this happen'd thro' fome fuch boifterous Wind under Ground, wherewith Seneca writeth that the Heads of the Gods were turned backward in Jupitor's great Couch; or by reason of much Moisture, the Springs there bubbling up in great abundance, considering that the Ground lay upon a shelving Hill; let others exa-

This was the last Year of Thomas Rateliffe, the The death third Earl of Suffex of that Family; a Man of of the E. Ingular Fidelity to his Country, and of a very of Suffex. noble Extraction, his Mother being the Duke of Norfolk's Daughter, and his Grandmother Daughter to Henry Duke of Buckingham, Constable of England. Who having passed thro' the highest Honours, (having been fent Ambassador into Germany by Queen Mary to the Emperor Char. V. about the Marriage to be contracted with Prince Philip; and afterwards into Spain to the faid Prince Philip about ratifying the Covenants thereof, and to the Emperor Maximilian about Queen Elizabeth's Marriage with Charles of Austria; have ing been Lord-Lieurenant of Ireland, Lord-Prefident of the North-parts of England beyond the River of Trent, renown'd for his Victories against the Hebridians, and the Scots who infested the Borders) at length, worn out with a tedious Sicknels, died at London without Iffine, (the he had had two Wives, Elizabeth Wriothesley and Frances 1583. Sidney) and lest his Brother Henry his Heir and

1782

Machlis 2 Beait.

Ann. 26. Successor. The death

This Year also died Henry Wriethesley Earl of Southampton, a Man as much devoted to the Romish Religion and the Queen of Scots as any, for rd South which he incur'd his Prince's Displeasure, and endur'd Imprisonment in the Tower. He was Son ampson. to Thomas Wriathesley, (whom for his singular Vertue King Henry VIII. advanc'd to the Dignity of Baron Wriathesley of Tiehsteld, to the Order of the Garter, and to the high Honour of Chancellor of Ingland, and made him one of the Over-feers of his laft Will and Testament; afterwards by Edward VI. raifed to the Honour of Earl of Southampton). This Hony left by his Wife, the Daughter of Anthony Viscount Montacute, Hony his only Son and Successor, and a Daughter married to Thomas Lord Arundel of Wardour.

Near the same time was fwallow'd by the Ocean

Sir Hum. Gilbert. drown'd.

Sir Humphrey Gilbert Kt. a quick and lively-spirited Man, famous for his knowledge in matters relating both to War and Peace, in his return from the North-part of America, which we call New-foundland, whether he had fet fail a little before with five Ships, having fold his Patrimony in His defin hopes to plant a Colony there. But after he had at Nem-by an Herald or Crier proclaim'd that Country funtiand to belong to the English Jurisdiction, (for Sebastian frustrate. Cabot was the first that discover'd it, in the Year 1497, being employ'd therein by Henry VII.) and had affign'd Lands to every particular Man of his Company; he fuffer'd to much by Shipwrecks and want of necessary Provision, that he was constrain'd to give over his Enterprize, learning too late himself, and teaching others, that it is a difficulter thing to carry over Colonies into remote Countries upon private Mens Purfes, than he and others in an erroneous Credulity had perfuaded themselves, to their own Cost and De-

Colonies are hardly planted in far Countries by private Men.

Death of Archbithop of Canterbury.

triment. About that time died also Edmund Grindall Archbishop of Canterbury, Primate and Metropolitan of all England, being Blind and above fixty Years of Age; a religious and grave Man, who returning from his Banishment under Queen Mary, was made first Bishop of London, afterwards Archbishop of York, and lastly Archbifloop of Canterbury, and flourished in great Grace with the Queen, till by the cunning Artifices of his Adversaries, he quite lost her Favour, under pretence that he had countenanced the Conventicles of some turbulent and hot-spirited Ministers, and their Prophecies, (as they call'd them) but in truth, because he had condemn'd the unlawful Marriage of Julia an Italian Physician with another Man's Wife, while Leicester in vain opposed his Proceedings therein. That little Wealth which he had gather'd he bestow'd upon the founding of a School at St. Bee's in Cumber-land, where he was born, and towards the ad-vancement of Learning in both the Universities. And to his care (if I may mention fo small a matter) are the Englishmen beholden for Tamarisk, Tamarik matter) are the Englishmen beholden for Tamarik, first brott which, having found it by experience to be ex-

flop of Canter.

into Eigl. ceeding good to eale the hard Diffemper of the Spleen, he first of all brought into England.

White of In his room succeeded John Whitestift, being translated to Canterbury from the See of Worcester; an excellent and very learned Man, who gain'd fingular Commendation both by his Justice in the Vice-presidentship of Wales, and by maintaining the Doctrine and Discipline of the Church England: Which Commendation he farther merited by his Fortitude, Prudence and Patience. Him the Queen (who, as in Civil marters, fo also in Laws Ecclesiastical, was of opinion that no loofe Remissiness was to be used) gave in Charge, that he should take special care to restore the Discipline of the Church of Eng- 1583land, and the Uniformity in the Service of God Ann. 26. chand, and the Omiorinity in the Service of God effablished by Authority of Parliament, which Queen's thro the Connivance of the Prelates, the Obsticate of the nacy of the Puritans, and the Power of some No-Church blemen, was neglected; while fome of the Cler-Discipline gy closely impugned the Queen's Authority in Uniforgy clotely impugned the Queen's Authority in "ity in Eccletiaffical matters, feparated the Administra— wo ship tion of the Sacraments from the preaching of the Word, nsed new Rites and Ceremonies at schifm of their pleasure in private Houses, utterly con-the Pun-demn'd the Liturgy and the Administration of Fant. the Sacraments effablish'd, as contrary in some things to the holy Scriptures, as allo the Order of Bishops, and therefore refused to come to Church, and made a downright Schism; while Chirch, and made a downing it commits while the Papifs flood lungbing at it, and drew many daily over to their Party, as if there were no Unity in the Church of England. To take away Whitight these Inconveniences, and reflore Unity, he bloomfor the Inconveniences, and reflore Unity, he bloomfor the Church of the Ministers.

First, That the Queen had the chief and Supreme Articlesto Power over all Persons born within her Dominions of betubertwhat Condition sower they were; and that no forein Giergy.

Prince or Prelate had, or ought to have, any Power,

Civil or Ecclessissical, within her Realms or Dominions.

Secondly, That the Book of Common-Prayer, and another Book of Ordaining Bishops and Priests, contained nothing in them contrary to God's Word, but might lawfully be used; and that they should use that, and no other Form, either of Prayer, or Administration of the Sacraments.

Thirdly, That they approved the Articles of the Synod at London, published by the Queen's Authority in the Year 1562, and believed the same to be consonant to God's Word.

On this occasion incredible it is what Controverfies and Disputations arose, what Hured, and reproachful Speeches he endur'd at the Hands of factious Ministers, and what Troubles, yea and Injuries also, from some Noblemen, who by promoting unfit and undeferving Men, caused di-ftraction in the Church, or else gaped after the Revenues and Livings of the Church. Nevertheless thro' Constancy, Fortitude and Patience, he overcame all Difficulties at last, and restor'd Peace to the Church: So that not without good reason he may seem to have have chosen that Motto, Vincit qui patitur; that is, He overcometh who suffereth with patience.

And not only did these Men trouble the Church Brownists at home, but also some others, who sprung from Schilingthese, did the like abroad; namely, Robert Brown ticks. a Cambridge-man, a young Student in Divinity, of whom the new Secturies were call'd Brownifts; and Richard Harrison, a petty Schoolmaster. For these two, prefuming by their own private Spirit to judge of matters of Religion, did by Books Their fet forth at this time in Zeland, and dispersed all Writings over England, condemn the Church of England as no Church, and entangled many in the Snares of their new Schism; notwithstanding that their Books were suppress'd by the Queen's command. and folidly confuted by learned Men, and that two or three of the Sectaries were executed at St. Edmundsbury.

On the other fide, the Writings of certain Papifts against the Queen and other excommunicared Princes, drew fome Men, who had the Pope's Power in great efteem, from their Obedience; and amongst others, they so diffracted

one Somervill, a Gentleman, that in all hatte he against the Q

Strangles himfelf. Ardern bang'd.

English

betray Aloft to the Spa-

Unhappy

Traytors.

1583. took a Journey privately to the Queen's Court, Ann. 26. and breathing nothing but Blood against the Protestants, furiously fet upon one or two by the Somervil's way with his drawn Sword. Being apprehended, he confess d that he would have kill'd the Queen with his own Hands. Whereupon he, and upon his Impeachment Edward Ardern, his Wife's Father, a Man of a very ancient Family in the ther, a Man of a very ancient saming to County of Warwick, Arden's Wife, their Daugh-ter Somervill, and Hall a Prieft, as Acceffaries, were arraign'd and condemn'd. Three Days after, Somervill was found strangled in Prison. Ardern was condemn'd, and the next Day after hang'd and quarter'd. The Women and the hang'd and quarter'd. Priest were spared. This woful End of this Gentleman, who was drawn in by the canning of the Priest, and cast by his Evidence, was generally imputed to Leicester's Malice. Certain it is that he had incur'd Leicester's heavy Displeasure; and not without cause, for he had rashly oppo-fed him in all he could, reproaching him as an Adulterer, and defaming him as a new Up-Thus went Affairs at home: But abroad, the English which lay in Garison at Alost, a Town in Flanders, being neglected, and having neither Pay nor Victuals, were the last Month of this Year driven to those Extremities, that Pigott who had the Command of them, and the rest of the Captains, breaking their Oath of Fidelity, be-tray'd the Town for a fum of Money to the Spaniards; and fearing the Difgrace thereof among their own Countrymen, join'd themselves with the Prince of Parma: From whom notwithstanding, when they found he kept not his Word with them, they flunk away by degrees. But the Authors of this Treachery came every one of them to unfortunate Ends. Pigott went into Spain in hope of Reward; but being slighted and laugh'd at, he return'd again into the Low-Countries, where he was taken by his own Country-men, and fent into England, and there died milerably in Prifon. Dalton, of a Traytor becoming a Pirate was hang'd in England, and Vincent in Bra-bant. Tailour was stabb'd by the Earl of Westmoreland; and Walfh, after he had been toffed with a thousand Miseries, was slain in France. Thus God's Vengeance followeth Taytors at the heels; as Ireland this Year faw by more apparent Examples.

The E of For that infamous Rebel and Traytor to his Defining Country, Girald Fitz-Girald, or Geraldides, the eleventh Earl of Desmond of his Family, when his Men were fpent with Famine and Sword, (and had barbaroufly vowed to forfwear God before they would for fake him) and when he had fcap'd the Hands of the victorious English for almost two Years, by lurking here and there in Corners, was now by a common Soldier found out in a little Cottage, tho' unknown to him, till having his Arm almost cut off he discover'd himself, and was flain by being run through the Body in many places. His Head was fent over into England, and fet upon a Pole upon London-

Such was the End of this powerful Man in His Del-cent, vait Ireland, who deriv'd/his Pedigree from Maurice Etra-eand Fitz-Gerald of Windfor, an Englishman, and of great Relations. Renown amongst the first Conquerors of Ireland in the Year 1170. He had very fair Lands and Possessing and Dependents, and of his own Kindred and Dependents, and of his own Kindred and Surname he had about 500 Gentlemen at his Devotion. Of all which, as well as of his Life also, he was bereft within three Years, very few of his Family being left, after he had once forfeited his Allegiance to his Prince, through the Perfuation of certain Prietts. The principal of whom was Nicolas Sunders, an Englishman, who dan 26. very near the fame time was miferably famified Sande to death, when for laken of all, and troubled in familial mind for the bad fuccess of the Rebellion, he to death wander'd up and down amongst Woods, Forests and Mountains, and found no Comfort or Re-In his Pouch were found feveral Speeches and Letters made and written to confirm the Rebels, stuff'd with large Promises from the Pope and the Spaniard. Thus the Divine Justice (if a Man may judge) ftopt that Mouth with Hunger which had been always open to encourage Rebellions, and to belch forth mulicious Lycs and Slanders. For (toomit other things) he was the first Man that brouched that abominable Lye concerning the Birth of Queen Elizabeth's Mother, which no Man in those Days (tho' the Hatred and Malice of the Papifts was then fresh against her, and might remember it) ever knew, England in full forty Years after never heard of, the computation of Time doth egregiously convince of Falshood and Vanity; and he, forgetting himfelf, (which a Lyar fhould not do) doth himfelf plainly confute. Yet are there fome illdisposed People who blush not at this Day to beflur their Writings with this fo impudent a Lye.

James Fitz-Euftace; that is, the Son of Euftace, Balvin Viscount Baltinglas, a Man of great Interest a glass flee mongst the Lords of Ireland, being terrified with out of the unhappy Face of these Men, sled into Spain, where he miserably pined away with Sorrow. He had a little before, out of Zeal to the Romish Religion, taken up Arms with the Rebels against his Prince, and writing a short obscure Letter to the Earl of Ormand his Neighbour, (who deriveth his Descent from St. Thomas of Canterbury's Silter) amongst other things he with this piece of Wit amongst other things he with this piece of Wit-exhorted him to do the like for the Romijh Reli-gion, Had not blessed Thomas of Canterbury died for the Church of Rome, then hads never been Earl of Ormand. For, to expiate the Murder of the said Thomas, King Henry II. had in former time gi-ven to his Ancestors large Possession in Or-

Sir John Perott Kt. who had born the Office of Perott President of Munster with Commendation, being Lord De this Year made Viceroy or Lord-Deputy of Ire- puty of land, as foon as he had receiv'd the Sword, funnmon'd the States of the Realm to a Parliament, wherein feveral Laws were enacted, and Defmond, who was lately flain, was condemn'd of High-Treason, and all his Lands and those of the other Rebels in Munster conficated. Which Hubands when the Queen was refolv'd to leafe out at a men fent very eafe rate, thereby to invite Husbandmen into Mun-thither, that so those fruitful Fields might not lie ser. untill'd, (for the Rebellion had brought a mise-rable Devastation) some of those who were employ'd to enquire after the Estates of the Rebels, and others who took their Lands, began to turn the faithful and loyal Subjects out of their Poffeffions with violence and force, fo that the Queen was fain to reftrain them by Proclamation, left the injurious Avarice of fome private Perfors should kindle a new Fire of Rebellion. Perset's Wherein the Lord-Deputy did good Service, tho good he were now and then blamed by the English, as service. too favourable to the Fifth, and too rigid to the English. But he, by administring Justice indifferently, and shewing equal Favour to the Irish and the English, restor'd the Country by little and little to a happy Peace and Tranquillity, and by fair and peaceable means reduc'd the fiercest and rudeft of the Inhabitants under the power of the Laws. The Hebridian Scots, who had made an

Irruption

1514

1892

The Seven and twentieth Year of her Reign.

In the beginning of the Spring, certain Scots came privately home out of I eland, according as they had before laid their Delign with Geny, who was now upon new Projects with fome otheis, for feizing up in the King's Perfon again. These Men gave out openly, that they aim d at no other thing than the Glory of God, the Purity of Religion, the Security of the King and Kingdom, and the maintaining of Amity with the English, against those who by their cunning Artifices and Devices drew the King, whilst he was yet in his tender Years, to the Ruin of all. The King hearing hereof, forthwith commanded Colonel Stuart, with all possible speed, to seize Goury, the Contriver of the Conspiracy, who had already withdrawn himfelf to the Haven of Dunda, precending as if he would depart the Realm. Goury, being guilty in his own Confeience, conremn'd the King's Authority, made an obstinate Refistance, and fought desperately to desend the House he was in; but within an Hour or two, he was raken and carry'd to Prison.

The Confpirators in the mean time took Sterlin, taking the Town by Surprize, and the Castie after, by Composition; but prefently quitted them again, as well because the King had drawn forth his Army into the Field, and was ready in Person to advance against them, as because the Forces which were met, were far less than Goury had promised, and they had in vain expected Affiffance out of England. And whilst every Man for Fear now shifted for himself, Marre, Glames, and Angus, (who had join'd with them) with fome others, fled, and coafted the Country into England, befeeching the Queen to relieve them in their forlorn Condition, and to make Intercoffion for them to the King, in regard they had toft their Estates and the King's Favour for no other Reason, than because they flood for his Good and the Good of England. The King on the contrary accused them to the Queen of high Misslemeanours, and required to have them deliver'd into his Hands, according to the League. But there were in the Court those that persuaded the Queen, that they were Men dutiful and obedient to their King, and highly careful of his Safety, in regard they attempted nothing againft him, while they had him in their Hinds. And as for that Article for delivering up of Robels, usually expreh'd in Leagues, it was long times grown out of use among Princes. There Men alfo went about to perfuade the King of Souts to deal lavourably with them, being so many in Mumber, and so considerable for Quality; left mey should by Despair be driven to world Undertaking alledging that Terror and Violence are but weak and induceefful Supports of Power, producing feveral fad Examples out of the Seatish 1584. History; and commending his Mother, and her 1584. Husband King France, they wink'd at the Mifearriages and Offences of the great ones.

and Offences of the great ones.

When Walfingham, who extremely favoured the Walfingham, who extremely favoured that, for hindstars their Security, they should be received into Linguage dafarme, or the Holy Hill, Hunfflow, who was on all Hunfflow Men the greatest Friend to the King of Scots, opposes opposed its, judging, that that sile, being a place him, for strongly formingly, was not to be put in the Positission of troofs Scots, who might possibly prove Enemies, nor the Secretary to be faitisfy discrementally in the secretary to the statisfy discrementally in the secretary to the statisfy discrementally commanded it by her own Letters; for that the Jurisdiction of the place did of right belong to him, as Warden of the East-March.

Hereupon grow a Dispute, whether the Secretary anight not by his own Authority, without authory the Prince's special Warrang, and Without acquainting the Governors of Places, direct and execute the Prince's Rusiness upon all occasions. What was determind herein I find not: but certain it is, they were not admitted into the lile. Yet was it thought good to thew them Favour, that they might be made use of against the contrary Fadion in Scaland: for now the Clergy spread abroad Rumours in all places, that the king was ready to fall off from the Reform'd Religion; and this upon no other probable Argument, (the' they pretended many!) but because his fished Love and Observance inclin'd him wholly towards his Mother, and because he receiv'd those into his closer Friendship, whom he knew to be most devoted to her.

In the mean time, Gomy was try'd by his Peers Gomy at Sterlin. The principal Articles he was charg'd arraiged, withal, were thefe. That whereas the King had rais'd him to his high Honours, Wealth, and Offices, and had reputed him as his Kinf-man, he had notwithttanding enter'd into a new Confpiracy against his Person, whom he had before kept Philoner in his House. he had held Conspiracies by Night with Angus's Servants, for the possessing himself of Perth and Sterlin; had by Force and Arms resisted the King's Authority at Dundse; had conceal'd a Conspiracy on foot, for the Destruction of the King and his Mother; and lastly, had conful-ted with one Muchan a Witch. He, protesting his Innocence, and his fincere Affection towards H's the King, acknowledg'd his Favours, fharply Defence, tax'd the Earl of Arem as his Advertary, and a bloody-minded Man, complain'd that he was apprehended, through his fubtil Contrivance, just as he was ready to depart the Land, and fraudu-lently perfuaded, by the Hopes of Life and Pardon offer'd him, to confess the things objected aand one of mm, to comes the strangs objected against him, which therefore in Eguity ought nor now to be laid to his Charge, leeing they had been deceifully extorted from him. The Reafon why he made Reinstance (he fitid) was, because he thought the Wartane for his Apprehenfion written with sorran's Hand, to be of less force than the Letters of Protection which he had ander the King's broad Seat. And whereas he dis-for a fhort time conceal the Conference against the King and his Mother, he was not fo much to be blamed for that, as to be commended for revealing the fame afterwards. Laftly, protefling that he hated and detelled, from his Heart, all Magicians and Witches; he fail openly, that it there were any fuch, he thought them to be for the most part in Princes Courts. But his Peers, after they had duly fworn that they had been no Initigators of the King's Advocate to accuse him, pronounc'd him guilty of High-Treafon; and the

Enseil

Configuration & Sensor

That we caped

them.

League. But in vain.

ians

fame Evening he was beheaded. His Head was 1584 prefently few'd to his Body by his Friends, which

Ann. 27. was afterwards bury'd.

He 15

While the Scots with fuch ill Success enterpri-Heis beheaded, zed these things against their King, for Queen Elizabeth's fake, (as they pretended) at the same time some Englishmen attempted no less matters, and with no better Success, against their own Q. for the Queen of Scots fake. Of whom the prin-Throck-moreon's Treason. cipal Man was Francis Throckmorton, eldest Son of John Throckmorton, a Justice of Peace in Che-fiire (who not long before had, by Leicesfer's Policy, been turn'd out of the Commission, and sined, for having (if I be not mistaken in the Lawyers terms) fupply'd or fill'd up fome Words in a Fine or Judicial Inftrument, transcribed out of an old worm-eaten original Copy, and had not produced it with all the Defects that were in it at first.) This Francis came into Suspicion, by means of a Letter to the Queen of Scots, which was intercepted. No fooner was he committed to Cuflody, and had confess'd fome things, but Thomas Lord Paget, and Charles Arundel a Courtier, privately fled the Land, and withdrew themseves L. Paget flies into into France; where, with others devoted to the Romifi Religion, they heavily bewail'd and com-complire plain'd amongst themselves, That the Queen was, of the Ca-without any Eduli or Defer of theirs, allenated from tholicks them, by the fabril Artifices of Leicester and Walstingham: That they were unworthily difgraced, and ignominiously used: That strange kind of Tricks and Cheats were invented, and scoret Snares so closely laid, that they must whether they would or no, and before they were aware, be involved in the Guilt of High-Treason; and that there was at home no hope at all of any Safety And indeed there were at this time fome fubtil ways taken, to try how Men flood affected. Counterfeit Letters were privately fent Counter in the Name of the Queen of Scots and the Fufeit Letters, Spies gitives, and left in Papifts Houses: Spies were fent abroad up and down the Country to take notice of People's Discourse, and lay hold of their Words: Reporters of vain and idle Stories Many were countenanced and credited. Hereupon suspected many were brought into Suspicion, and amongst Hereupon the reft Henry Earl of Northumberland: his Son, Philip Earl of Anundel, was confined to his own House; his Wife committed to Sir Thomas Sherly's Custody. William Howard, the Earl's Brother, and Henry Howard, their Uncle, the Duke of Norfolk's Brother, were several times examin'd about Letters from the Queen of Scots, and from Charles Paget; and about one Mupe, then un-known; and their Prudence and Innocence could hardly protect them. Neither yet are dit to be esteem'd altogether vain, where there is a Fear for the Prince's Sasety, Certain it is, Papills ill at this time an horrid piece of Popilh Malice a-Practices gainfi the Queen discover'd itself : for they fet againtt forth Books, wherein they exhorted the Queen's the Q. Gentlewomen to act the like against the Queen, as Julith had done, with Applaufe and Commendations, against Holofernes. The Author was never discover'd, but the Suspicion lighted upon Gregory Martin an Oxford-Man, one very learned in the Greek and Latin Tongues. Carter a Bookfeller was executed, who procured them to be printed.

fuch ways for Discovery and so easie giving Cre-

And whereas the Papifts usually traduced the Queen as rigid and cruel, she (who was always very careful to leave a good Name and Memorial behind her) was highly offended with the Inquifitors that were to examine and difcover Papifts, as inhumanely cruel towards them, and injurious to her Honour. Infomuch as they thought ir necessary to excuse themselves by a publick Writing; wherein they protested, That the Priefts were more favourably dealt withal than they defero'd: That they were never once question d for their Religion, 1584-but only for dangerous Contrivances against their Irance Ann. 27 and Country; and that upon webement Suspicion, and probable Arguments and Evidence: That Campian was never rack'd so, but that he was presently able to walk, and subscribe his Confession: but Briant obstinately reand justice us configure on busine equations of fulfing to speak or write who it was that penul these objective Papers found about him, was indeed deny'd Feed, till such time as he ask'd it in Writing. But these things did not fatisfy the Queen, who commanded the Inquintors to forbear Tortures, and the Judges to refrain from putting to death. And not long after, the commanded 70 Priefts, fome of which Priefts were condemn'd, and others in danger of the order'd; Law, to be transported out of England: amongst be transwhom those of chiefest Note were, Ga/par Howood, Son to that famous Epigrammatift, who was the first of all the Jesuices that came into England; Tames Hofgrave, of the Society of Telm's also; Tobo Heavy, the most learned of them all; and Edward Riftnon, that impious ungrateful Man to his Prince, to whom tho' he ow'd his Life, yet he foon after fet forth a Book, wherein he vomited out the Poison of his Malice against

The Lord Paget and Arundel being come into France, Sir Edward Stafford, the Queen's Ambassador there, diligently observ'd them; yet could by no means discover what they were contriving. He dealt nevertheless with the French King, that French It. they, Morgan, and other Englishmen, who were required to remove the second to the second t plotting against their Prince and Country, might be remov'd out of France. But he received no o-Fugitives. be remov'd out of France. But he received no o-Fugitires, ther Answer than this: That if they attempted He denies any thing in France, the King would punish it them according to Law; but if they had attempted any thing in England, the King could not take Cognizance thereof, nor proceed against them by Law. That all Kingdoms were free for Fugitives; and that it concern'd every King to maintain the Privileges of his own Kingdom: yea, that Queen Elizabeth herfelf had not long fince receiv'd and harbour'd in her Kingdom, Montgomery, the Prince of Conde, and others of the French Nation; and that Seguire, the King of Navarre's Ambassador, lay in England at this very time, hatching new Troubles against the French King.

In the mean time, Don Bernardine de Mendoza, Spanisto the Spaniards Ambassador in England, secretly Ambassacos'd the Sea into France, in a great Rage and dor comfurty, as if he had been thrust out of England, cut of contrary to the Privilege of an Ambassador: England. whereas indeed, being a Man of a violent and turbulent Spirit, and abusing the facred Privilege of his Embassage, by sostering and encouraging of Treason, he was commanded to depart the of Treaton, he was commanded to depart the Land only, altho' by the ancient Rigour and Severity in fuch cafes, he was to be profecuted (as many thought) with Fire and Sword. For he had his Hand in these wicked Deligns with Throckworten and others, for bringing in of Foreigns into England and departs to Constitute of the Constitute of reiners into England, and depoling the Queen. And being gently reprimanded for the fame, he was fo far from clearing himself of the things objected against him, by any modest Answer, that he charged the Queen and Council, by way of Recrimination, with detaining the Genoefer of Rectimination, with detaining the Geneger Money, with affifting the States of the Low-Countries, the Duke of Anjou, and Don Antonio, and with the Depredations of Drake. But yet, Waddient left the Sparind finould think that Mendexa's Mill-into Spars demeanors were not hereby punish'd, but the burnot admitted Privileges of his Ambasilador violated, Wishimm to Auc's Wand Clerk of the Council. was fent into Spain, ence. Waad, Clerk of the Council, was fent into Spain, ence.

to inform the Spaniard, plainly how ill he had perform d the Duty of an Ambassador; and withfuborn'd.

Rrr

Her Mer-2-fulness to them.

al to let him know, (left the Queen by thus commanding him away might feem to renounce Ann.27. the ancient Amity that had been betwixt both Kingdoms) that all Offices of Kindness should by her be still shew'd, if he would fend any other Person who should seem desirous to preserve Friendship, provided the like Kindness might be shew'd to her Ambassador in Spain. But the Spa-niard not youchsasing to give Waad Audience, but referring him to his Council; he, taking it in Disdain, boldly declared, That it was a thing usual and customary, even in the Heat of War, for Ambaffadors to be admitted into the Prefence even of a Prince an Enemy; and that the Emperor Charles V. the Spaniard's Father, admitted an Herald to his Prefence, who declared War a-gainst him from the French King: and therefore he flatly refused to impart the Contents of his Embassy to his Council. And when Idiacio, the Spaniard's Secretary, could not, by all the Wit he had, learn from him what his Errand was, at length he underflood the whole matter from Mendeza, who lay lurking in France. Then, laying afide his publick Quality, he in familiar Difcourse told Waad, 'That he was forry there were fome that cunningly went about to break off the Amity that was betwixt both Princes, and to beget Misunderstandings. That Injury had been done to the Catholick King himself, rather than to his Ambassadors, to Dispely heretofore, and now to Mendoza: neither was there any Reafon why he should accuse Mendoza farther to the King, who had already fufficiently fmarted for his Fault, (if he were in any) by his difgraceful Expulsion from England; or that he should complain he was not admitted to Audience. For the Catholick King had but requited like for like, confidering that Mendoza was difmiss'd by the Queen, without a Hearing; and as the had remitted Mendoza to her Council, fo did the King in like manner refer him to Cardinal Granvel. And though Waad answerd, that there was a great Difference be-twixt him, who had never done any thing a-gainft the Catholick King, and Mendoza, who notorioully offended the Queen, infolently refuting for a long time to come at her, and having done things unbeseeming an Ambassador; yet could he not be admitted, but return'd home un-heard. The greatest part of the Crimes which he would have charged upon Mendoza, were taken out of Throckmorton's Confession. For when Throckmorton was to be apprehended, he had fecretly fent away a Cabinet of private Papers to Mendeza. The rest of his Cosfers be-ing searched, there were found two Catalogues, in one whereof were written the Names of the Ports in England, that were convenient to land Forces at ; in the other, the Names of those Gentlemen all over England, that embraced the Romish Religion. As soon as he saw these two Catalogues produced, he cry'd out that they were counterfeit, never feen by him before, and foilted in purposely for his Kuin: and this he faid while he was upon the Rack. But being brought again to the Rack, he refuted not to answer to his Knowlege what Questions were demanded of him. And being then ask'd touching those Catalogues, and to what intent they were written, tatiogues, and to what ment they were written, he devifed this Story.

That going some few thereby the story, he had consulted motions with Jeney and Sir Francis Inglefield, how Encueltion.

The story of Consumers and the story of Consu and the Form of Government alter'd: and to that end he had taken those Notes of the Havens, and the Gentlemens Names. That Morgan had given him to understand, by Letters out of France, that the Catholick Princes were now refolv'd, that England should be invaded, and the Q. of Scots fet at liberty, under the Conduct of the Duke of Guife, who now wanted no Ann. 27 thing but Money, and an auxiliary Army to be ready in England. That to procure these things (barles Paget was fent privily into Suffex, under the counterfeit Name of Mpe, where the Duke of Guife purposed to land. That he had imparted the Matter to Mendoza, and shew'd him the Names of the Havens, and of the Gentlemen, who had already been made acquainted with them by the Conspirators. He deny'd not but he had promis'd his Affiftance; and withal had told Mendoza what Gentlemen he might fafely treat withal about thefe things, as being a publick Person, which he, being a private Man, could not do without Danger : and that he concluded with him of a way, how certain principal Men of the Catholicks might, as foon as the forein Forces should arrive, raise Men, in the Queen's Name, to join with the Forein-These things he voluntarily then confefs'd.

Nevertheless, being charged with these mat- He goes ters, at the Bar in Guildbal, London, he stiffly de-back from ny'd every particular, and affirm'd that they were it. vain Fictions of his own, purposely utter'd that he might not be put again to the Rack; and openly accused the Queen of Cruelty, and his Examiners of false dealing : imagining he should escape, by reason of the distance of time, between the Crime committed and his bringing to Trial. For in the Thirteenth Year of Queen E-High-Treason, for which yet no Man was to be call'd in question, unless the Delinquent were charg'd therewith, within fix Months after the Fact committed, and the thing were prov'd by the Witness and Oath of two Men, or by the Party's voluntary Confession, without Constraint or Violence. But this time was long fince expired, and therefore (he said) he was not to be call'd in question. But the Judges shew'd, that the matters objected against him were not of that fort there mention'd, but that he was indicted upon an ancient Statute of High-Treason, made in the Reign of Edw. III. which admitted of no Circumfcription of Time or Proof. And according to this Law was Sentence of Death pronounced against him. Being afterwards persuaded, he Beingconcast himself upon the Queen's Mercy, and in denother Writing confels'd again at large all those things makes a full Conin a manner which he had done before: which fession. yet (fuch was his Inconstancy) he again began And de-

Yet (1001) was in Incomment (17).

to deny at the Gallows, but in vain.

William Waad, being return'd out of Spain, was goin at his fent about this time to the Queen of Sects, about Ocath.

A new a Treaty to be holden betwixt her and Sir Walter Treat Mildmay, which was propounded two Years be- with the fore, and interrupted, as I have fitted formerly. Qot Scott. To whom the protested, with many Affeverati- Her Proons, how fincerely she had dealt concerning this miles. Treaty, and withal vow'd hertelf and her whole Ability to the Queen, and promis'd to depend wholly upon her, if she would vouchfase to shew her fo much Love and Honour. Moreover the religiously promis'd, if this Treaty did proceed, to mediate, yea to engage, that her Son should receive Angus and the relt of the Scottish Noblemen into Favour; as also that the Bishops of Ross and Glascow, her Agents in France, should attempt nothing to the Prejudice of the Queen or the Realm of England; and that they should from thenceforth have nothing to do with the English Rebels and Fugitives. These things Queen Elizabeth was glad to hear: and whereas at very near the same time Angus, Marre, J. Hamilton, and Glames were fled into 1584.

to ber.

1584. fent Beale to the Queen of Seats, in concert with Ann.27 the Earl of Shrewsbury, to let her know, that if the continued in the fame Mind which she had ons made express'd to Waad, Mildmay should come shortly to her, and treat with her about her fetting at liberty: and farther, to perfuade her in the mean time, to mediate with her Son, for the Reftoring of the Scottifh Fugitives, and inform her that they had defign'd nothing against the King, but only against certain violent Counsellors, who had feduced him by their evil Advice: and, laftly, that he might learn from her, as near as might be, the Attempts and Deligns of the Duke of Guife. She very prudently answerd, 'That fhe much defired the Treaty might proceed, and this fhe earnestly crav'd of Queen Elizabeth, as of her elder Siffer, to whom she tender'd all Respect and Honour. That she had propounded nothing to Waad but what was limited with

Her An-

· Conditions; and that he could fay no other, whom she took to be an upright, honest Man. That to the Reftoring of the Fugitive Scots, her helping Hand would be very necessary, and thereof they should not fail, if she could certrainly find that any Advantage would come thereby to her and her Son; provided they would humbly submit themselves to the King, and become obedient to him: otherwise she would not appear for them, but affift her Son to bring them to their Duty. Further, the deny'd not but 'that, when the found herfell grow 'fickly, the committed herfelf and her Son to the Protection of the Duke of Guise, her deareft Kinfman: That she understood nothing of his Attempts; neither, if she did, would she discover it, unless she had good Assurance given her of her Deliverance: for it were no point of Wifdom, to forfake certain Friends upon uncertain Hopes. She pray'd that she might be no more hardly dealt withal, (being a free Princefs) than Queen Mary dealt in times past with Queen Elizabeth, being then her Subject and Prisoner; or than the French King dealt of late with the King of Navarre, his Subject also, and up in Arms against him. She pray'd also, that the Treaty might be completed before any Commissioner were appointed in Scaland, tou-she defire 'ching that matter. And whereas the most to share 'Christian King had acknowledg'd her Ordina-'ry Ambassador, and Seton, who was fent from the aims of the Amballador, and Seton, who was found ther son. The son to publish this Association of her and her Son in Scotland, and befought her that she would no ways prejudice the same. These things Feat and had a Hearing, but were foon laid ande, and the lealouties whole Business defeated, by means of certain the treaty. Feats cast in the way by those who knew how to increase Suspicions between Women that were already difpleas'd with one another; but principally by the Discovery of certain Papers which Chreitton a Scottissiman, of the Society of Fess. paffing into Scotland, and being taken by some Netherland Pirates, had torn in pieces: the torn

the King-

gland. Hereupon, as also upon occasion of Rumours from all parts, that great Dangers were at hand and threatned, to prevent the wicked Designs and treacherous Practices of Seditious People, gether by Waad, with much Pains and fingular Dexterity, difcover'd new Defigns of the Pope,

the Spaniard, and the Guises, for invading En-

Pieces whereof being thrown over-board, were, by the Wind, blown back again, and fell by Chance into the Ship, not without a Miracle, (as Chreiston himfelf faid.) These being put to-

England, she, laying hold on the Opportunity, and to provide for the Queen's Safety, upon of which the Welfare both of the Realm and Redigion depended, many Men of all Degrees and dm. xon account of their own publick Care and cattenens, and out of their own publick Care and cattenens. Love, whillt they frood nor in Fear of her, but terd man were full of Fear for her, bound themselves in m Ranan Affociation, by mutual Vows, Subscriptions, g dand, and Seals, to profecure to the death, as far as lay in their power, all those that should attempt any thing against the Queen. The Queen of Scots, who eafily perceiv'd that Hereupon I ne Queen of Seets, who eathly perceived that Herneyon her Deftruction was aim'd at by this Affociation, Providing being weary of her long Mifery, and feating made by harder Meafure, propounded these things follow- the Quefing to the Queen and Council by Nawe her Se-South cretary. That if her Liberty might be granted her, and she might be assured of Queen Elizabeth's sincere Affection and Love towards her, she would enter into a color Amity with the Mener, affectionately lower and closer Amity with the Queen, affectionately love and observe her above all other Princes in Christendom, forobjerve her above all other Frinces in Christendom, for-get all by-post Displassives, acknowlege her to be the true and rightful Queen of England, sorbear to pre-tend or lay Claim to the Crown of England during her Life, attempt nothing against her directly or indi-rectly, shally renounce the Title and directly or indi-rectly, shall yenounce the Title and directly of which she had usured by the Command of King Fran-Cis her Huband, as likewise the Pope's Bull for her Depositor, we and were also into the stracted delicit Deposing; yea and enter also into the astrofaid Association for the Queen's Security, and into a League defensive, (so far as might shand with the ancient League betwixt France and Scotland) provided that nothing should be done during the Queen's Life, or after bor prouns or wore arring the Queens Life, or after her Death, which night prejudice her, her Son, and their Heirs, in the Succession, before such time as they were heard by the Parliament of England. That for Confirmation hereof, she herself would stay a while in England, as an Hossage: and if she were permitted to depart out of England, she would deliver other Hossage. ges. Moreover, that she would alter nothing in Scot-land, provided she and her Family might be allow'd the Exercise of their Religion. That she would also bu-in Oblinian M. V. ry in Oblivion all Injuries done to her in Scotland, (bowheit upon the Condition, that what over had been enacled to he Disgrace and Disparagement, might he repeald.) That the would recommend fuch Counfellers to the King, as were well-affected to Peace with England; and reconcile unto him, as far as lay in her gland, and recondition on min, is just a step in ser Power, fuel of his Nobility as were fled, if they would Submissively acknowledg their Fault, and that Queen Elizabeth would pass her Word and Promise to aid the King against them, if at any time they should sty off from their Duty and Obedience. That she would do nothing about her Son's Marriage, without acquainting the Queen: and as she would do nothing without the Advice of her Son, so she desired that her Son might be included in this Treaty, that so it might be the more frongly and solidly confirm'd. She doubts not but the King of France would be her Susety in the Business, and paß his Word, together with the Princes of the House of Lorain, for Performance of Covenams. She pray'd that a speedy Answer might be return'd hereto, lest any Inconveniences should fall out in the mean time. And laftly, fhe befought that fhe might be kept in freer Custody, that thereby the Queen's Love towards her might be more plainly difcern'd.

These things, as savouring of much Respect Q. Eliz and Honour, Queen Elizabeth seem'd to take inclined to great Pleasure and Contentment in; and it was set her at liberat believ'd she was then really purpos'd to set her liberty, at Liberty, tho' there wanted not some in England, who, by laying new Fears before her, deterr'd her from it. But the Butiness, which was Scots of as good as concluded, was quite hinder'd and the Engl. as good as concluded, was quite minded a find by the Scots of the contrary Faction, who Faction cry'd out, 'That there was no Hope of Queen oppose it. 'Elizabeth's Safety, if she were fet at Liberty;

Vol. II. Rrr 2

lency of the Scot-

11/2 Minitters, against

in Scott.

on 'was ruin'd, if the Exercise of the Romish Religion were allow'd her, tho' it were but with-' in the Court-Walls. And not content with this, fome Ministers in

The Info-Scotland bitterly inveigh'd against the Queen, and loaded her with unworthy Calumnies, both from the Pulpit, and in their ordinary Meetings; and withal notoriously bespatterd the King and his Council; for which being commanded to appear before them, they refuted with a difdainful Contempt, as if the Pulpits were exempted from the Authority of Kings, and Churchmen were not subject to the command of the Prince, but to the Presbytery; flatly contrary to the Laws made this Year in an Allembly of the States, whereby the King's Authority over all his Subjects, as well Ecclefiaffical as Civil, was the Laws. thicalLaws established for ever. By which Laws the King and his Council were made competent Judges in all Caufes; and those who declined their Judgment, were to be reputed guilty of High-Treaion: The Affemblies of the Presbyteries, (as also the Conventions of Laymen) as well general as particular, were prohibited, which had affumed and arrogated to themselves a boundless Authority, both to affemble at their pleafure without the King's Confent, and to prescribe Laws to the King himfelf and the whole Realm: The popular Equality alfo of Ministers was taken away, and Bishops restor'd to their Dignity and Jurisdiction, whose Order the Presbyters had con-demn'd as Antichristian: Also scandalous and defamatory Writings against the King, the King's Mother, and his Council, and particularly George Buchanen's Hiltory, and a Dialogue of the Right and Privilege of the Scottish Kingdom, were prohibited and suppressed, as containing in them many scandalous Passages not sit nan's Writings difallow'd. to be read. Scattle

Bucha.

Minitters fly into England.

A Conference on the Bor-

Thefe things fome of the Ministers took fo heinously, that they voluntarily departed the Land, and filled all England with their Clamors and Complaints, as if the true Religion of Christ were now quite driven out of Scotland. Oucen Elizabeth hearken'd not to them, but neglected them as Innovators and Men given to change, neither fuffer'd she them to Preach in England; yet now and then she used their help, left Religion in Scotland should receive any Prein tension in Serious and Arran, who was in high Trust and Favour with the King, officiously offerd his Service with all Respect to maintain Amity with the English, she thought it a fit time to make use thereof, that neither the Scottish Fugitives might be profcrib'd in the Parliament of Scotland now at hand, nor the King's Mind alienated from the Friendship of the English. Whereupon a Conference was appointed between Arran, and Hunfdon Governor of Berwick, upon the Borders of both Kingdoms. But before this Conference came to be held, the Fugitives and all those that were present at the Attempt upon Strolin (the meeting of the Parliament being ha-ften'd) were proferrib'd: And at the Conference, which follow'd prefently upon it, Arran charg'd them with great and weighty Crimes; and a-mought other things, That they had very lately plotted the Deftruction of the King. But he But he promis'd most religiously, that he would be wanting in nothing whereby he might give the Queen Satisfaction; and that he would not do any thing which might prejudice her, as long as he was in Grace and Credit with the King. Notwith-flanding within a Month the Scottiff Borderers,

That both Kingdoms were undone, if the were labourd all he could to divert Queen Elizabeth of from the Low-Cosintry War) invaded Rhedefilale, 1584. Ann. 27. Kingdom; that the true Religion in Britain using all manner of Hottlity; and not long at Ann. 27. ter the English Borderers thurply revenged the ter the English Borderers tharply revenged the incutions Wrong they had received by Fire and Sword all between over Liddefdale.

Now came Ambaffador from Scotland, Patrick English.

1584.

Grey, Heir of that Family, a quaint young Gen- P. Grey's tlemen, and one that thought himself able for Embally the weightieft Bufinets, if not more. The chief 10Q Eliz. Heads of this Embaffy were, about reftraining to the leass of Incursions on both sides; about restoring of Goods taken by Piracy; and about either sending back the Scottish Fugitives, according to the League, or removing them farther from the Borders of Scotland, they with others in Scotland daily plotting new Treasons against the K. For the more easie obtaining of these things, and to win the Queen's Affection more fully to the King, he made her believe he would reveal some secret Conspira-cies against her. To the first and second Points he receiv'd the Answers he desir'd. As for fending back the Scots, the Queen answer'd, That she Her answ. was verily persuaded that those Gentlemen had not so was verily perfueded that those Gentlemen had mat for much as imagined the least Afflebit in their Hearts. That those things which fell out of late in Scotland, proceeded not from any ill-will of their stowards the King, but from mutual Differences arring amongs the Nobility always in the Minority of their Kings, vulieb it concerned their King to make up with all speed, and to bind his Subjects to him in one common Band of Obedience, and suppress all Factions amongst them. Novertheless, in some part to satisfie the King's just Request, and that she might come to know what were those secret Practices which he spake of, fhe commanded that the Scottish Fugitives should remove farther from the Borders. What Difcovery foever he made, the Queen made shew as if the understood it all before; and many Men accus'd Grey, as if, corrupted with Money, he had blabbed forth fomewhat to the prejudice of the King and his Mother, and had hinder'd the Gray's accepting of those so reasonable Conditions double-which were propounded by Nawe from the King's dealing.

Mother.

Whereupon she, whose Patience had now for Qosscots a long time been abused, began to fall into great Patience Sorrow and Indignation, and, out of a defire of abus'd. her Liberty, to open both her Heart and her Ears as well to the treacherous Counfels of her Adverfaries, as to the dangerous Advices of her Friends. And the rather, because, as she had persuaded herself that the late Association was made for her Ruin and Undoing, so now she had heard that she was (through the crasty Contrivance of fome) to be remov'd from the Cuftody of the Earl of Shrewsbnry, (who was a downright honeft Man, and favour'd not their Attempts) and committed to new Keepers. Which that it might be done the more handfomly, and the Fidelity of the Earl of Shrowbury, which had been throughly tried and approved, might not feem to be fulpected, (for it was not thought good openly to blemith fo great a Man's Reput tation, which notwithstanding they had stained fecretly by Calumnies grounded upon the false Accufations of his ill-condition'd Wife) Sufpi- Sufpicions cions were laid hold on, as if there were a Plot laid hold already laid to fet her at Liberty; and those on against raifed upon occasion of certain Emblems sent unto her. The Emblems were these: Argus with many Eyes lull'd afleep by Mercury fweetly piping, with this short Sentence, Eloquium tot lumina clausit; that is, So many Eyes bath Eloquence fast clos'd: Mercury cutting off Argus's Head, who was Io's Keeper: A Scien grafted into a Stock, itanding within a Month the Sentiff Borderers, and bound about with Bands, yet budding forth through the fecret Wiles of the Spaniard, (who fresh, and thus written about, Per Vincula cresco; that is to fay, By Bands I grow: A Palm-Tree 1584 preffed down, but rifing up again, with this Am.27. Sentence, Ponderibus innata Virtus resssiti, that is,

Gainst Weights doth inbred Virtue strive. This Anagram also, Veritus armata; that is, Truth armed, according to her Name Maria Stuarta, the Letters being transposed, was taken in an ill fense There were also Letters produced, as it they had been intercepted; wherein the Friends of the captive Queen complain'd, that all hope of delivering her was quite cut off, if she were once committed to the Puritans Keeping. Under pretence hereof the was remov'd from the Earl of She is Shrewsbury, who had many times earnestly decommitted to new fit'd the same, and committed to the Custody of Sir Amiar Powlet and Sir Drue Drury, and that purposely, (as some thought) that, being thereby driven to Despair, she might be apt to take rash Counsels and Resolutions, and be the more subject to be enfnared. For the Earl of Shrewsbury had kept her for fifteen Years with fuch Wariness and Circumfpection, that he had prevented all possible ways of attempting any thing either for or against her. But now not only she with importunity folicited the Bifhop of Rome and the Spaniard by Sir Francis Inglefield to haften what they had in hand with all Ipeed, whatever should She more eagerly Wait Jaid tain cut-throat Murderers (as some report) to Wait laid for her life take away her Life. But Drury, being a fincere honest Man, and detesting from his Heart fo foul a Deed, denied them access to her. Nevertheless there were some employ'd underhand to to her own her, and several Letters secretly sent her, as well counterfeit as true ones, whereby her weak Sex might be thrust forward to her own Destruction, as we shall shew afterwards. To alienate Queen Elizabeth wholly from her, become of her; but also Leicester (who, as People thought, contrived and studied how to prevent her lawful Succession) privately sent cer-

it was whifper'd in her Ears, that Allen for the Romish Churchmen of England, Inglesseld for the Laiety, and the Bishop of Ross for the Queen of had with unanimous confent refolv'd, with Carbo.icks the affent also of the Bishop of Rome and the Spaniard, 'That Queen Elizabeth should be depriv'd of her Crown, the King of Scots difinherited of the Kingdom of England, as being both of 'em 'notorious Hereticks; and the Queen of Scots married to some English Catholick Nobleman: That this Nobleman should be elected King of ' England by the English Catholicks, and the Ele'ction confirm'd by the Bishop of Rome: That ' his Children by the Queen of Scots should be proclaim'd lawful Successors to the Crown. And all this was taken upon the credit of Hart a Priest. But who this Englishman should be, Wal-singham enquir'd with all imaginable diligence, but could never find out. But the Sufpicion lighted upon Henry Howard, the Duke of Norfolk's Brother, who was a Man of noble Blood, a Bat-chellor, a furious Catholick, and therefore in very great Credit and Repute amongst the Papifts.

Within the compass of this Year Charles Nevil, that traiterous Rebel against his Prince and Country, the last Earl of Westmorland of this House, ended his Life obscurely in a miserable Exile. From this Family, fruitful in Nobility, there fprung (befides fix Earls of Weftmorland) (two Earls of Salisbury and Wirmick, an Earl of Kent, a Marquis Montacute, a Duke of Bedford, a Baron Ferrers of Onley, Barons Latimers, Barons Charles (1998). Abergavenney, one Queen, five Dutcheffes; to omit Countesses and Baronesses, an Archbishop of Tork, and a great number of inferior Gentle-

In England died this Year Edmund Plowden, than whom no Man is more worthy to be remember'd; who as he was fingularly well learn- Ann. 27 ed in the common Laws of England, whereof he Death of deferved well by his Writings; fo for Integrity Plunden. of Life he was fecond to no Man of his Profeffion.

And in France died Francis Duke of Anjou, of Death of Sickness which he contracted through Grief and the D. of Trouble of Mind. And in Holland, William Prince Prince of Orange, being treacheroully flot with three Orange Bullets out of a Gun by Balthazar a Burgan- Ilaica

For the fad lofs of thefe two, Queen Elizabeth was very much troubled, and fent B. into France, to let the King understand how heavily she took the Duke of Anjou's Death, whom she had alway found to be a most faithful and dear Friend to her; and withal to put him in mind what a fad Condition the Netherlanders now were in, the Prince of Orange being flain, and how formidable the growing Power of the Spaniard was; for Strength all the Princes in Italy were at his beck, the Bi-Spannard. shop of Rome was wholly addicted and engaged to him, the Cardinals were as it were his Vallals, all the ablest Persons for matters both of War and Peace were his Penfioners; in Germany the House of Austria, an House extending and bran-ching far and wide, and other Houses allied to the fame by Marriages, did as it were attend upon him and his Service; his Wealth also and Strength were fo much encreased, both by Sea and Land, fince the late addition of Portugal and East-India, that he was far more Powerful and Formidable than ever his Father Charles V. was; and if he should once reduce the Netherlanders under his Power, there was nothing to hinder but that the reft of the Princes of Christendom must of necessity stoop to his Greatness, unless it were timely prevented.

The Eight and Twentieth Year of her Reign.

Queen Elizabeth, that fhe might bind the French French King to her in the firmer Tie of Amity, chofen unhaving the laft Year chofen him into the Order to the Order to the Control of the of the Garter, now fent Henry Earl of Derby with Garter, the Robes and Enfigns of that Order into France, folemnly to invest him therewith. The King receiv'd them with great Respect and Esteem, being invested at Even-song, (the English resufing to be present at Mass) and religiously promis'd to observe the Laws of the faid Order, which were not repugnant to the Laws of the Holy Ghost and St. Michael, to which he was before formally fworn.

At this time a Parliament was holden, and A Parliam William Parry, by Nation a Welshman, born of ob- ment. foure Parentage, and of mean Efface, by Title a franceth Doctor of the Law, (though but indifferently for the learned) a Man neat, spruce, and very proud; Jesuits, when a Bill was preser'd in the Lower-House against the Jesuits, was the only Man that stood up to speak for them, pleading that the said Law was cruel, bloody, desperate, and of pernicious Consequence to the English Nation. Being desir'd to fhew his Reafons, he obstinately refused, unless it were before the Queen's Council; whereupon he was committed to Cuftody: But his Reafons being after heard, and fubmiffion made, he was admitted again into the House. Shortly after, He is acthe same Parry was accused by Edmund Nevil custod (who claim'd the Inheritance of the Nevil Earls Treason of Westmorland, and the Title of Lord Latimer as next Heir-Male) to have been engaged in a fecret Design for taking away the Queen's

This

feeks her

Liberty.

Confultation faid mong the Scots,

Ruia.

Death of the E rl of Westmoriande His Cone feilion,

This Parry, (to fearch the matter a little high-2 1585. et) returning out of Italy above two Years fince, Ann. 28. had, to win Favour and Credit with the Queen, had, to win Favour and creat with the Queen's privately reveal'd what Morgan and other Fugitives had wickedly plotted and agreed on, for the taking away of her Life; pretending that he had gone along with them for no other intent, but only for the Queen's Safety. Hereupon the did not lightly give Credit to Newl's Information. tion; yet commanded she Walfingham to ask Parry, Whether he had dealt about this matter with any malecontented and suspected Person, to feel his Inclination in the Business. He startly deny'd that He fees he had; and being otherwise a Man quick-sight-Evalien when of the Queen's Lemity had laid before him. For if he had but given the least inkling that he had dealt with Nevil to feel him, whom he had already told the Queen to be a suspected and malecontented Man, he had without doubt avoided the Danger. But a wicked Deed once refolv'd upon does many times infatuate the fharpest Wits. Then whereas Nevil had no Witness to make good his Accufation, Parry was brought to confront him; when after fome tart biting Words against one another, Parry began to relent a little, and, being fent to the Tower of London, voluntarily confess'd these things, which I shall briefly re-

' In the Year (fays he) 1570. I was fworn

one of the Queen's Servants, and continued entirely devoted to her Majesty, till the Year 1580, at what time I came into Danger of lo-'fing my Life with great Difgrace. (For he had broken into Hugb Hare's Chamber, in whose Debt he was, and had wounded him; for which he was by the Law condemn'd, but had his Life faved by the Queen's gracious Pardon.) 'From that time I continued troubled in my Mind, and, having procured a Licence, withdrew myself into France; not with any intention to return hither again, for I had devoted myfelf to the Catholick Religion. At Paris I was re-conciled to the Church of Rome. At Venice I had Conference with Benedict Palmio a Jefuite He confule 6 ted with a c concerning the diffres'd Catholicks in England; Jefuite a- c bout killand I gave him fome Hint that I had found out ing the Q a way to relieve them, if the Pope or any learned Divines would justify it to be lawful. mio extoll'd this as a pious Design, and me he and with recommended to the Pope's Nuncio at Venice, the Pope's c whose Name was Campeius, and Campeius re-Nuncio; commended me to the Pope. I befought by Letters that I might come to Rome with a fafe Conduct. Letters of fafe Conduct were fent me from the Cardinal of Como, but not large enough: afterwards others were fent me niore large and full: but then I was return'd to Paris. There I lighted upon Morgan, who told me, and with that it was expected by divers, that I should Morgan; c Enterprise, in case the Pope should approve it 1585. by his Letters, and grant me a plenary Pardon, Ann. 28. by his Letters, and gram me a prenary Laston, which I begg d of him by Letters I fent to him by Rag reant his Nuncio in France, who highly the Proc commended my Defign, and fent my Letters himself. to Rome. Being return d into England, I procured Access to the Queen, to whom, in pri- He opens vate, I discover'd the whole Conspiracy, how the matter beit cloak'd with the best Art I could. She to the Q. cheard me without being daunted: I departed not without being terrify'd; and cannot now forget what the then faid, That no Carbolicks should be called in question meetly for Religion or the Pope's Supremacy, so that they show'd themselves good Suljass. In the mean time, whilit I was a daic ly Suitor in the Court for the Mastership of Saint Katharine's, I receiv'd Letters from the Cardinal of Como, wherein my Enterprize was commended, and myfelf abfolv'd in the Pope's Name. These Letters I imparted to the Queen. What Effect they wrought with her I know not; to me certainly they added Courage, and took away all Scruple. Yet was I not minded Waversia to offer her any Violence, if the could by any mind. means be perfuaded to deal more favourably with the Catholicks. And therefore, left I And therefore, left I should commit the Murder, I laid away my Dagger ftill as often as I had Access to her.

When I feriously consider'd her and her truly royal Vertues, I was distracted with doubtful Thoughts; for my Vows were recorded in Heaven, my Letters and Promifes amongst Men. These things I often ponder'd with an unquiet Mind: I was never much beholden to her for any thing: my Life indeed she once pardon'd me; but to have taken it away upon that Occa-· fion had been cruel and tyrannical. Hereupon c I departed from the Court much unfatisfy'd with my Condition. I lighted upon Dr. Allen's Allen's Book against the Justice of Britain, where he Book en-taught that Princes excommunicate for Heresis to the courages were to be deprived of Kingdom and Life, which Book did strongly encourage me to profecute my Attempt. This Book I read to Nevil (whom I fometimes invited to my Table) fix whole Months before he accus'd me. Afterwards he came to me and faid, Let us venture up- Nevil ofon somewhat, since we can get nothing from the fers his Queen: and he propounded several things about the Delivery of the Queen of Scots But I have (faid I) greater Business in my Mind, and of more Advantage for the Catholick Church. The next day, he came and fwore upon the Bible, that he would conceal and confiantly purfue any thing that should be for the Good of the Catholick Religion: and I fwore the like. We then refolv'd with ten Horsemen to fet upon the Queen, as she rode abroad to take ' the Air, and to kill her. All which Nevil conceal'd till now. But having heard that the Earl of Westmoreland was dead, whose Estate he had already fwallow'd in Hopes, he prefently broke And dichis Oath, and accus'd me of thefe things. All covers all. this he confess'd before the Lord Hundon, Sir Christopher Hatton, and Sir Francis Walsingham, all three of the Privy-Council. He acknowledg'd also his Fault, and begg'd Pardon for the same by his Letters to the Queen, to Burleigh Lord-Treasurer, and to Leicester Some few days after he was arraign'd at the Parry King's-Bench-Bar in Westminster-Hall: where the arraign'd. Articles of his Indicament being read, he confefs'd himfelf guilty. And when his Confession was recorded, and Judgment demanded against him, Hatton thought it necessary, for the Peoples

' thought it an heinous Sin to give over my

and with Prietts:

whom I had Conference about it, concealing Persons Names) assirm'd statly, it was not law-ful. (And Chreiclen asso, the Seattish Jesuite avouch'd the same; teaching, That Evil mas not to be done that Good might come of it: That God was better pleas'd with Adverbs than with Nouns; and more approv'd what was done well and lawfully, than what was otherwise Good: and, That many Souls were not to be redeem'd with the Destruction of any one, without the express Command of God.) 'Notwithitanding I, having engaged myself both by Letters and Promises, while I was in Italy, do fome notable Service for God and the Ca-tholick Church. I answer'd, that I was ready this (faid I) might easily be done, if it might appear to be lawful. For Wattes a Prieft (with

But

And

to kill the greatest Subject of England.

(faid he) why not the Queen herfelf?

Satisfaction there prefent, that his Crime should be clearly and fully represented, out of his own

Confession, which Parry acknowledged to be vo-1585: luntary, and prayed the Judges that he might Jan. 28. read it himself. But the Clerk of the Crown read both it, and also the Cardinal of Como's Letters, and Parry's own to the Queen, to Burleigh, and to Leicester; which he confess d to be the very Letters themselves. Yet did he deny that ever he was refolv'd to kill the Queen. Being now commanded to speak, if he had any thing to say, why Judgment should not be given a-gainst him, he gave a consused Answer, as if he were troubled in Conscience for the soul Fact were troubled in Confedence for the foul Face he had undertaken, I fee I muff die, because I bave not been constant to myself. Being will'd to declare more plainly what he meants, My Blood (laid he) be among fy ou. Sentence of Death being pronounced, he in a Fury cited the Queen to the Judgment-Seat of God. The fifth day after, he was laid upon an Hurdle, and drawn through the midst of the City to Westminster. At the Gallows, when he had made his Boafts how faithful a Preferver and Keeper of the Queen he had been, he faid he was never fully refolv'd in his Mind to take away the Queen's Life. Thus this vainglorious Man, not fo much as in the least com-He is exe- mending himfelf to God, fuffer'd the Death of a Traitor, by the Law, in the Court-yard of the great Palace at Westminster, where was then a full Affembly of the Estates of the Realm, met in Parliament.

In this Parliament fome there were, who, out of a Defire either of Innovation or Reformation, ftruck deeply at the Ecclesiastical Order, (tho the Queen had forbid it) by bringing in of Bills for Reftraining the Episcopal Jurisdiction in granting of Faculties, in conferring of Holy Orders, in Ecclefiaftical Cenfures, and in the Oath ex officio; and Proposing a new Oath to be taken by the Bishops, in the Chancery and the King's-Bench, viz. that they should act nothing contrary to the Common-Law of England: also and Non- requiring Residence from the Clergy, that every Refidents. Minister should be resident at his own Cure; and exclaiming as if the Church of England were defficute of able and learned Paftors, which without doubt had more learned Paftors at this pre-

Rejected Church, could finew. But the Queen, who had by the Q. a high Efteem of moderate Church-men, and milliked Innovators, as always changing for the * See the worse, * utterly rejected these Attempts, as ten-

Appendix ding to overthrow her Prerogative, and the fupreme Authority granted to her in Ecclefiaftical Affociati- matters. But the Affociation which I mention'd on fe:tled, before was now confirm'd by the general Confent and Approbation of all. And it was Enacted, 'That twenty four or more, of the Privy-'Council and House of Lords, to be deputed by the Queen's Commission, should make Inquisition after all fuch as should invade the Kingdom, raife Rebellion, or attempt to hurt or deftroy the Queen's Person, for or by whomsoever employ'd, that might lay Claim to the Crown of England. And that he for whom or by whom they should attempt the same, should be utterly uncapable of the Crown of England, deprived wholly of all Right and Title to it, ' and profecuted to Death by all faithful Subjects, if he should be judg'd by those four and twenty Men, to be guilty of such Invasion, Rebellion, or treasonable Artempt, and by publick

' Proclamation fo declared.

Laws also were made for Prefervation of the Queen's Person against all Jesuites and Popsish Priests who should ground any villanous Plots and Designs upon the Bull of Pius Quintus; to wit, That they should depart the Realm within for-ty days. That those who should afterward rety days.

turn into the Kingdom, should be guilry of o High-Treason. That he who should wittingly and willingly harbour, relieve and maintain them, should be guilty of Felony. (So they call Felony. all Capital Crimes under the degree of Treason.) 'That those who were brought up in Seminaries, if they return'd not within fix Months after ' Notice given, and fubmitted not themselves to the Queen, before a Bishop or two Justices, ' should be guilty of High-Treason. And if a ny fo submitting themselves should within ten Years approach the Queen's Court, or come within ten Miles thereof, their Submission should be void. That those who should by any means whatfoever fend or convey over any Money to Students in fuch Seminaries, should incur the 'Penalty of a Pramunire, (that is, perpetual L-Pranticular, and Lofs of all their Goods.) 'That if a-ure. ny of the Peers of the Realm, that is, Dukes, Marquesses, Earls, Viscounts, or Barons of Parliament, should offend against these Laws, he should be brought to his Trial by his Peers. That if any flould know of any fuch Jefuites or other Priefts abovefaid, lurking within the Realm, and should not discover them within twelve days, he should be fined and imprison'd at the Queen's Pleasure. That if any Man ' should be suspected to be a Jesuite or Priest as aforefaid, and not fubmit himfelf to Examina-' tion, he should for his Contempt be imprison'd till he did fubmit himself. That he who should fend his Children, or any others, to Semina-ries and Colleges of the Popish Profession, fhould be fined in an hundred Pounds of English Money. And that those who were so fent thither, should not succeed as Heirs, nor enjoy a-'ny Estates, which should any way fall to them: 'the like for all such as should not return home from the faid Seminaries within a Year, unless they did conform themselves to the Church of

With the Severity of thefe Laws (which notwithstanding feem'd necessary for the present time) the Papifts in England were very much terrify'd; and amongst them Philip Howard Earl Arundel of Arandel, the Duke of Norfolk's eldeft Son, in-intends fomuch as he purpos'd to fly the Land, left he to fly, should offend against them. This Philip had thro' the Queen's Grace and Favour been restored in Blood three Years before, and having foon after loft her Favour, through the fecret Accufations of fome great Perfons, had privily reconciled himfelf to the Popish Religion, living likewise a very auftere Life. Hereupon he was call'd once or twice before the Council, and clear'd himfelf of the matters objected against him; neverthelefs he was confined to his own House. After about fix Months, he had his Liberty again, and came to the Parliament: yet he withdrew bimfelf the first day from the Assembly, while the Sermon was preaching. The Parliament ri-fing, he, being now refolv'd to be gone, wrote water to a Letter to the Queen, (which notwithstanding the Q. he appointed to be deliver'd her after his Departure) wherein he made a long and fad Conplaint of the Malice of his potent Adverfaries.

' England. That if the Wardens or Officers of the Ports should permit any others besides Seamen and Merchants, to crofs the Seas, without

Licence of the Queen or fix Privy-Counfellors, they should be put out of their Places, and the Mafters of fuch Ships as carry'd 'em, fhould for-

' feit their Ships and Goods, and suffer Imprison' ment for a whole Year.

whereunto he was necessituted to give place, whilft they triumph'd over his Innocence. recounted the fatal Ends of his Ancestors, namely, his Great-grand-father, who was condemn'd without being heard; his Grandcuted.

Rills preferr'd againit Bithops,

Laws against Jefuites. & Priefts.

1787. Matters; and his Father, who (as be faid) was Ann.28. circumvented by his Adversaries, and never bare any hoftile Mind againft his Prince and Country. And added, That he for his part, left he should be the Heir of his Foresathers Inselicity, and that he might the better attend the Service of God, and provide for his Soul's good, hath quitted his Country, but not his Allegi-The E. of ance to his Prince. Before such time as this Arundel Letter was deliver'd, he was gone into Suffex; and being now ready to embark himself in an geo, and obfcure Creek, he was apprehended through the treachery of his own Servants and the discovery of the Mafter of the Veffel, and thrown into the Tower of London.

if father, who was beheaded for light and trivial

berland found thrad.

The F. of In the same Tower was Henry Percy Earl of Northum-Northumberland at this time kept Prisoner, a Man of a lively and active Spirit and Courage, (Brother to Thomas who was beheaded at York) which Henry was suspected to have plotted fecretly with Threchmorten, the Lord Paget and the Guifes, for invading of England, and fetting the Queen of Scots at Liberty, whom he always highly favour-In the Month of June he was found dead in his Bed, shot with three Bullets near his left Pap, his Chamber-door being barr'd on the infide. The Coroner's Inquest from the Neighbourhood impannell'd and fworn, according to cuftom, and having view'd the Body, confider'd the Place, found the Piftol with Gunpowder in the Chamber, and examining his Man that bought the Piftol, and him that had fold it, gave their Verdict, that he had kill'd himfelf. Day after there was a full Meeting of the Peers of the Realm in the Star-Chamber, where Sir Thomas Bromley Lord-Chancellor of England briefly declared, that the Earl had been engag'd in trai-terous Defigns against his Prince and Country, which when he found once to be difcover'd, he had laid violent Hands upon himself, being terrified with the guilty Conscience of his Offence. But to fatisfie the Multitude, who are always Caples of by Impri- prone to believe the worst in such cases, he commanded the Attorney-General and the Queen's fonment. Council, to shew plainly the Reasons why the Earl had been kept in Prifon, and the manner of his Death. Hereupon Popham, the Queen's Atthe North, fixteen Years before, flew'd out of the publick Records, 'That he had been called to his Trial about that Rebellion, and the De-' fign for the delivering the Queen of Scots; and that he had acknowledg'd his Fault, fubmitted himfelf to the Queen's mercy, and was fined 5000 Marks. But that the Queen (out of her Clemency) had not exacted one Farthing thereof; and after the Execution of his Brother for the same Crime, had confirm'd him in the Honour of Earl of Northumberland. he, notwithstanding all this, had engag'd him-self in new Designs for delivering the Queen of Scots, the conquering of England, and the destruction of Religion and the Queen. Mendoza the Spaniard had given notice to Throckmorton, that Charles Paget, under the counterfeit name of Mope, had fecretly confer'd with him in Suffex about these Matters; and that the Lord Paget had fignified the same things in a manner to Throckmorton. That the same also > of France. Then Igerton, the Solicitor-General, argu'd notably from Circumstances, and the Earl's extraordinary care to conceal the Buliness, that he > did appear by the Papers of Chreiston a Scottish

>
> Jefuit; and that Charles Paget had told the Same things to William Shelley, at his return out

was guilty thereof: Viz. 'That the Earl, when ? no Man in England could accuse him of these things but only the Lord Paget, (with whom Ann. 28. Throckmorton was very familiar) within few Days after Throckmorton was taken, provided a Ship by Shelley's means for Paget, wherein he went over into France. That when Throcksorton had begun to confess some things, the Earl remov'd from London to Patworth, and, fending for Shelley, told him, that he was fallen into danger of his Life and Effate, and pray'd him to conceal all, and to fend fuch out of the way as were privy to the Lord Pager's departure, and the coming of Charles Pager. Which was preferrly done; and he himlelf fent his Man afide whom he had employ'd to Charlet Pager. The Solicitor added, 'That while he was in Prison, he had, by corrupting his Keepers, often dealt with Shelley to understand what he had confess.d. That after Shelley had let him know by a Woman, which was fecretly employ'd as a Messenger betwixt them, that he could conceal things no longer; that their Conditions were not alike, for himfelf was to undergo the Rack, fo was not the Earl in respect of his Place and Quality; and had fent him in Writing what Pailages he had confestda the Earl fetch'd a Sigh, and forthwith faid, (as Pantin who waited on him in his Chamber confes'd) That he was now undone by Shelley's · Confession.

After all this the manner of his Death was re- Manner of lated, from the Evidence of the Inquest, the hisd shall Testimony of the Lieutenant of the Tover, some of the Warders, and Pantin his Servant: And thereupon it was concluded, that he had with his own Hands murder'd himself, out of a Fear left his Family should be attainted and utterly ruin'd. Certainly many good Men were much affected that fo great a Perfon died fo miserable and lunentable a Death; as well because Men naturally favour Nobility, as that he had acquir'd fingular Commendation for his Valour. What Sufficions the Fugitives mutter'd concerning one Bailiffe, that was one of Hatton's Servants, and a little before appointed to be the Earl's Keeper, I onit, as being a thing altogether unknown unto me, and I think it not meet to infert any thing upon mere Hearfays and Re-

Whence the Seeds of these Mischiess came Confedewhich were fown in England, Queen Elizabeth racy enwas not ignorant, who had understood that the by the Q. Guifes had now openly entred into a dangerous with the Conspiracy against the Protestant Religion, the Princes of French King, and herfelf. She on the other fide, Gamanya to procure a League amongst the Protestants for defence of their Religion, fent Sir Thomas Bodley to the King of Denmark, the Elector-Palatine, the Dukes of Saxony, Wittenberg, Brunswick and Lunenburg, the Marquis of Brandenburg, and the Landtgrave of Hesse; and amongst other things gave him Instructions to put the King of Den-mark in mind by the by, that it principally con-cern'd him to prevent the Attempts of the Guiser, confidering that they fluck not to challenge the Kingdom of Donmark for their Cousin the Duke of Lorain, as Grandton to Christiern II. King of Denmark by his Daughter. Neither did the Lorainer himself diffemble or disown the same, when not long fince he was a Suitor to Q. Elica beth for Marriage.

But into Scotland (left any Danger should break Likewife in upon England from thence as it were by the wan the back Door) the fent Sir Edward Wotton, to let the Kor Scars. King know how acceptable his Kindness towards her was, which he had declared of lare by Pa-

rick Gr.sy and the Justice-Clark; and moreover to | 1585. draw him to a League of mutual Offence and Ann.28. Defence, by flewing him the Dangers which one threaten'd the Protestant Religion; and to offer unto him, as if he were her Son, as large a yearly Penfion as her Father had allow'd her; (for the Revenues of the Scottish Crown were much leffen'd through the Negligence of the Regents) and to recommend unto him a Marriage with the King of Denmark's Daughter; as alfo earnestly to intercede in the Queen's Name for the Scots that flood exil'd in England, who she promis'd should be presently sent back if she found them guilty of the least Crime against the King.

The King Wotton found the King's Mind inclinable enough inclinable to fuch a League, (notwitstanding that Arran and fome of the French Faction labour'd to hinder it) and the States of Scotland, that so Religion might be secured, gave their Assent under their Hands to a Treaty concerning fuch a League; provided the Queen would pass her Royal Word, That she would not prejudice the King's Title to the Succeffion in England as long as he continued firm in Amity with her. But this Business was delay d and hinder'd by the Mur-der of Sir Francis Russel, Son to the Earl of Bedford, which Earl died himfelf also the next Day death hinders it.

How Ruf-

Ruffel's

For when Sir John Foster and Thomas Carre of Fernihurst, Wardens of the Middle Marches betwixt murder'd, the two Kingdoms of England and Scotland, had appointed a Meeting on the 27th of June about certain Goods unjustly taken away, and Security was given on both fides by Oath, according to custom, and Proclamation made, that no Man should harm other by Word, Deed, or Look, (as the Borderers (peak) the Scots came to the place of Meeting armed, in Battel-array, with Enfigns displayed, and Drums beating, contrary to cu-ftom and beyond expectation, being in Number about Three thousand; whereas the English were not above Three hundred. Scarce were the Wardens fat to hear the Complaints, when on a fudden, upon a Englishman's being taken pilfering, there arose a Tumult, and the Scots discharging a volley of Shot, flew Russel with some others, put the English to flight, and eagerly pursuing them the space of four Miles into England, ried off some Prisoners. Who was the Author of this Slaughter was not certainly known. The Who were English laid the fault upon Arran, now Chancellor of Scotland, and upon Ferniburft. The Queen press'd both by her Letters and Commis-fulpe&ted fioners to have the Murderers deliver'd into her Hands; inafmuch as Henry IV. King of England had formerly deliver'd up into the Hands of fames IV. King of Scots, William Heron and feven Englishmen, for killing Robert Carre of Chesford upon a Day of Meeting; and Morton the late Regent fent Carmichel a Scot into England for killing George Heron. The King protested his own Innocency in the matter, and promis'd to fend not only Ferniburst immediately into England, but the Chancellor too, if they could be convicted by clear and lawful Proofs to have premeditately infringed the Security, or procured the Murder. Femvick an Englishman accus'd Ferniburst of the Fact to his Face: He avoided it by a flat denial, because the other could produce no Scottissman for a Witness. For in these Trials on the Bor-Manner of ders, according to a certain Privilege and Cu-

Proof on from agreed upon amongst the Borderers, none theBorders but a Scot is to be admitted for a Witness against a Scot, and none but an Englishman against an Englishman; infomuch that if all the Englishmen which were upon the Place had feen the Murder committed before their Eyes, yet their Tefilmony had been of no value, unless some Scot- they should attempt nothing against his Person, or the tiflman also did witness the same. Arran was confined to Lis House, and Fernibursh was committed to Custody at Durdee, where alterwards he died: A stout and able Warrior, rea Fernibus A dy for any great Attempts and Undertakings, his death and of an immoveable Fidelity to the Queen of Scors and the King her Son; having been once or twice turn'd out of all his Lands and Fortunes, and banish'd the fight of his Country and Children, which yet he endur'd patiently, and, af-ter lo many Croffes falling upon him togo-ther, perfitted unflaken, and always like himfelf. Whilft the enquiry after this Murder was pretracted from Day to Day, and it was calmly de-bated, whether the yearly Money offer'd to the King under the Name of Aurei, has to be paid according to the English or French Account of Money, the Queen (who took with great Indig- Q. incentration Ruffel's Death and the breach of the Secu- fed at the rity, being perfunded by the Scots who were As-Murders ran's Advertaries, that he favour'd and cherish'd the Jesuits, and labour'd Tooth and Nail, both in France and Scotland, that the League might not he made with the English suffered by way of Connivence, the Scattish Fugitives, vice. Angus, Scattish and those who by their common Condition of Fugitives Banifiment were reconcild and made Friends feathers with him, namely John and Cludim Humilton, and affitt and Murre, Glamus, and the rest trut were Fulled edly the in England, to return into Scotland, fupplying em with Money to Suppress Arran. The Earl Bothwell, the Lord Humes, Humes of Divers

Coldingknoll, and others in Scotland, had promis'd join with them their Affistance beforehand; but especially them. Maxwell, lately made Earl of Morton, who was in hope to escape Punishment for a Rebellion which he had raifed in Anandale, if Arran were once fuppress'd. Yea and in the King's Court also Patrick Gry, a sharp and bitter Adversary of Arran's, Belend n the Justice-Clerk, and Mairland Lord-Secretary, were drawn by Wetten's Policy to fide against Arran.

The Exiles aforefuld upon their entring Scot- They put Land, fet forth a large Proclamation, wherein forth a they command all Men in the King's Name to Proclamated their helping Hand for defence of the truth of the Gofpel, for refeuing of the King from Their corrupt Counfellors, and for maintaining Amity Strength, with the English. Fankirk was the place appointed for Rendezvous, where they mufter'd Light

Arran (who by the King's command had kept himfelf confined at Kencil upon fulpicion of his murdering Russel) hearing hereof, posted to the King, and accused Gray as the Author of this

The King confents upon thefe Conditions: That thousand Men.

Vol. II.

Bridge.

Attempt, who fairly clear'd himfelf before the King. While Arran made all possible Preparation for defence of the Town, the Enemies were at hand ready to feale the Walls. He, knowing that his Head only was aim'd at, and fuspecting the Fidelity of his own People, (for he began now to be hated by many) withdrew himself fecretly with but one Man over the files, The rest foon after abandon'd the Town, and retir'd into the Castle to the King. They take The Fugitives prefently feize upon the Market- Sterlan. place, and make ready to attack the Caftle. The Kirgist feat Gray to demand the reason of their with earn coming. They answer, To submit themselves, and coming. They answer, In humily themselves, and most humbly to kiss the King's Hand. He offers hen reflitution of all their Lands and Goods, if they would depart quietly. They fend back word, that they little value their Goods and Lands in comparison of the King's Favour, and befeech him that they may be admitted to his Presence.

Life of fue's as he should name; nor feek to alter any thing in the Government. They vow to spend their 1585. thing in the Government. They vow to fpend their com.28. Lives for the King's Safety; and for alteration of Government, they proteft they never once thought of it. But they pray him that their Adverfaries and the Places of Strength in the Kingdom may be put into their Hands for their Security. A whole Day was fpent in Confultation about this matter: Yet Necessity compelling, confidering there was fo great a Multitude in the Caftle, and Victuals were fcarce, they were at length admitted to the King's Prefence. Forthwith the Earls of Montrofs, Crawford, and Rothes, They are reconcild Colonel Stuart, Downes, Arran's Brother, and others, are deliver'd into their Hands; Acran, who was fled into the Hebrides, is recall'd home; to the K. and themselves are pardon'd as good Subjects, and fuch as had deferv'd well of the King: Hamilton of Arbroth is made Governor of Dunbriton, Colding knoll of Edinborough-Castle, Angus of the Caffle of Tantallon, Marre of Sterlin, and Glames is made Captain of the King's Guard.

red themselves to the King of all those things that were feandaloutly and fulpiciously objected against them by their Adversaries, all the Proscriptions of all Persons whosoever, and for what Caufes foever, from the King's Inauguration to A general that very Day, were in an Assembly of the States Parvon. decreed to be for ever forgotten, (except those for the Murder of the King's Father, and those that were iffued against the Archbishop of Glafcow, the Bishop of Ross, and the Bishop of Dunblune) and with general confent of all, the King had free Leave and Authority given him to enter into a League with the Queen of England, and to appoint Commissioners for that purpose. Maxwell Only Maxwell abused this extraordinary Grace and Clemency of the King, who, having by the Man to be benefit of this general Pardon escap'd Punishcclebrated ment for a bloody Murder and Depredation committed against the Johnstons, was so bold and audacious, that, in contempt of the authority of the Laws, he commanded the Sacrifice of the Mass to be celebrated at Dunfreez, which had not been permitted in Scotland for these nineteen

Having now by their faithful Obedience clea-

Years past. For which he afterwards suffer'd Imprisonment the space of three Months. Neither was the neighbour Country of Ireland tice in this turbulent Time from the Storms of Rebellion Bourks in Rebellion. For when the rest of the Provinces of this Itle enjoy'd a firm and perfect Peace, there brake forth a grand Rebellion in Connaught, the Western-part of Ireland, occasion'd by the restless and unquiet Disposition of that Nation, and their hatred against Sir Richard Bingham their Governor, who was (as they complain'd) overtharp and rigid in his Government. He, when he faw the great Lords of Ireland exercise such heavy Tyranny over the filly People, that they durft acknowledge no other Prince but them, left nothing uneflay'd that he might reftrain this tyrannical Lordline's, and confirm the Queen's Authority amongst 'em, tho' he were every foot accus'd to the Queen and the Lord-Deputy, and render'd Odious for his Cruelty and Severity. Thomas Roe-Burk, of the noble English Family of Burgb, was the first that opposed him; and being summon'd to the Assizes in the County of Alaya, he refused to appear. The Governor diftembl'd the matter a while; but afterwards he commanded him and one or two turbulent Men more of that Family to be feiz'd on, left they thould break forth into Rebellion. Thomas died in light before he would be taken; Meilery and Theobald a Burgh were taken and hanged. And the Rebellion had been now suppress d in its very first breaking forth, had not fome Englishmen who were diffatisfy'd with the Governor, given fecret Notice to the rest of that Family to beware of the Governor, and by no means to come near Am. 28. him. They, upon this Encouragement, per-fuaded the Joyes and Clandonels, who were Men powerful in Followers and Adherents in that Tract, that the Governor would deal no better with them, but by little and little weaken and take away their Power alfo. And they fo handled the matter by their Friends, that the Lord-Deputy commanded the Governor to deal no more to roughly with that noble (tho' degenerate) Family, without his Knowledge and Approba-

Mean while, during the Governor's absence Break out in Twomend, (where he flew Mahen O-Brean, who again, was up in Commotion, and took his Castle) the Sons of Edmund a Burgh of Caftle Barry, and Richard the Son of Richard, (who for his wicked Deeds was furnamed by the Irifb, the Devil's Hook) gathering together a multitude of lewd Fellows, feiz'd upon two Castles in Lough-Mask, and fortify'd 'em: Out of which the Governor foon drove them in- Perfued to the Woods and Mountains, and commanded by the Go-Richard a Burgh, Brother to Thomas, who came vernor, in and humbly submitted himself, to be hang'd up as a Spy and treacherous Person. And when he had so closely pursued the rest, who wander'd and straggl'd up and down the Woods, that der'd and traggid up and down the woods, that feare any of 'em appear'd, the Lord-Deputy commanded him to purfue 'em no longer, but take Hoftages of 'em, and receive 'em into his riken Protection. Within a fhort time after, while the into Pro-Governor lay at Dublin, and Levies of Men were tection. making all over beland for the Low-Country War, they took up the Banner of Rebellion again, and They result the land of the standard of the land of the many that refus'd to ferve in the Low-Country belthe 3d Wars, as namely the Clangibbons, Clandonnells and time. foyes, join'd themselves with 'em in great num-And being now increased both in Number and Strength, they openly gave out, that (according to their ancient cuitom) they would have their Mac-William, that is, a principal Lord of Macthat House de Burgh chosen by a popular Election William to govern the Country; or elfe they would fend for fome other Head and Ruler out of Spain:

That they would not admit a Sheriff amongst em, nor appear at the Sethons or Affizes. Neither would they return to their Duty, tho' the Archbishop of Tuam, Birmingham Baron of Arbenry, and Dillon, being fent from the Governor, propounded reasonable Conditions to 'em; but began on a sudden to harass the Country Villages in the open Champain Country, burning and plundering all before em, and razing the Forts and Strong-holds. To the Hebridian Seas they fent John Iteleave and Walter Kittagb a Burgh, to Hebridian persuade and invite 'em to enter into Comanght Scott into with their auxiliary Forces, whilft there were Ireland. now but few Guiffon-Soldiers left in the Country, promiting them large Possessions is they would drive out the English, and affift the Rebels.

The Lord-Deputy hearing hereof, at length Governor commanded the Governor to march against the marchesa-Rebels, who, gathering his Forces together, fent to nitten the Earl of Clan-Richard, the principal Man of the House of a Burgh, and Birmingham, to treat with em about Peace: Which when they flatly refus'd to hear of, he put the Hostages to death, and without delay, (as knowing that nothing was more prejudicial to the English than a lingering War, and nothing more advantageous to the Irish) he and the Earl of Clan-Richard with the Horfe protected the Champain Country from the Depredations of the Rebels; and John Bingbam the Governor's Brother entring the Woods with the Foot, hunted them fo closely at the Heels from 1585.

Some of em exe-

of the place to place, driving away about 5000 Head of 1585. Cattel, (the greatest part whereof was shared a-Ann. 28. mongth the Soldiers Man by Man, according to the manner of the Country) that after forty Days or thereabouts, being grievously famish'd and spent for want of Food, they crept out of their lurking Holes, scarce knowing one another by their Faces, and humbly fubmitted them-felves, giving fresh Holtages. Only the Sons of Edmund a Burgh of Castle Barry (whom they had determin'd to make their Mac-William) persisted fubmit. in their Rebellion till their Father was taken and put to death, (having been found guilty by the Law for exciting his Children to Rebellion) and Hebridian his Lands confifcated. And now the Governor Scots in- had certain intelligence that 2000 Hebridian Scots, vade Con- under the command of Kittagh and Iteleave a Burgh, naught. were just ready to break into Connaught. These Scots, with an Army of Men haftily gather'd and pick'd up, and those Garison-Soldiers he had, he diligently chaced and hunted Night and Day through By-ways and difficult Passages with indefatigable Labour, while they one while lurked in woody Forests near Lough Earne, and another while fpent their time in marching forward and backward, winding this way and that way, and he at their Backs, in the Front, and on both Sides, conftantly watch'd their Metions, waiting a fit Opportunity to engage 'em. At the last he diffembl'd a Retreat, as if he were too weak for them; when they prefently marching on more confidently towards Ardanar upon the River Moin, proclaim'd themselves Lords of the Country. He being by his Scouts soon advertis'd of their March, found 'em near Ardanar, where they put themselves in Battel-array, advanced their Banners, and sounded their Bagpipes. He held them in play a while with light Skirmishes, still retreating till he had drawn em from the Bogs into the firm Land, and that all hisForces with great fecrecy were come together. Are ober. Then he charg'd 'em ftoutly, and having flain thrown many, made 'em give Ground. Shortly after his finall Shot charg'd 'em in the Front, and he himfelf with his Horfemen fet upon 'em fo courageously in the Flank, that he routed their main Battel, and forc'd 'em to take the River, where they were all flain and drowned but fourfcore, who fwam over into Tiraul, and fome who went the Day before another way to fetch in Booty, but were afterwards almost all siain by John Bingham and the Inhabitants of the County of Slego.

em their principal Leaders, Donel Cormey and Elexander Corrego, the Sons of James Mac-Corell, who had for a long time inlefted thefe Parts, allo those of the Heuse of Eurgh, which had drawn 'ent to this unhappy Expedition. Of the English few were slain, but many wounded. This was doubtless a notable Victory, and of great Confequence both at present and to suture Times, the Title of Mac-William in Connaught being here-Mac Wilby quite extinct, and the Infolency of the Islandliam's Title extinct Scots in Ireland suppress'd, which in former Times was fo intolerable, that to harbour 'em in Ireland was accounted no less than High-Treason, and Perott, to reftrain their Depredations, had formerly impos'd upon the great Lords of Ulfter a certain number of Soldiers to be train'd up and There were flain about 3000 Men, and amongst exercis'd for War.

Mean while the States in the Netberlands, being in great Diftress, consulted amongst themfelves whether they flould fly to the French King or the Queen of England for Succour and Protection; for they were both of them at Enmity with the Spaniard, but jealous of each other. Neither could the French endure to think that the English, nor the English that the French, their ancient Enemies, should be become had an I made more powerful by the addition of one Netherlands. Pruney, the French Ambaifador to the States, to divert on from applying to the Frgfill, alledgd, "temporal divert on from applying to the Frgfill, alledgd, "temporal of That the Frgfill were for temporal and formatted and profession them by means of the Ocean between auch profession, that they could not affelt them more size. Fraction ry Occation: That their way of Gevernment for the was harsh and not to be endured, for water cause they were in former Times ejaced out France, and were now in danger of loning tec-land: That the Succession there was doubtful, and whether Mary Queen of Scots, or James her Son fucceeded, the one, as well as the other, to establish and secure their own Affairs, would restore the Netherlands back to the Spaniards. But as for the French, their near Neighbourhood was convenient, their Government mild and gentle, and the Succession certain in the King of Navarre, a Prince of the same Profession with themselves.

They who favour'd the English argu'd the con- I ribe 'That the English were not at fuch a di- English trary: ftance, but that they might conveniently enough relieve them, and no Man hinder them. What the Government of the French was in Times paft in the Netherlands, may appear by Histories; and what it hath been of late, let Dixmayd, Dunkirk and Dendermond Speak, which were treacherously furprized, as likewise Bruges, Aloft, Newport and Antwerp, which were furiously and treacherously assaulted by them: And what their Fidelity hath been, which hath been so often oblig'd by Edicts, but still violated and broken, let their barbarous Massacres, committed in their Cities, witnefs. That the Succef-fion in England was fure and certain in King James, a Prince very well affected to the true Religion. Besides, the English were of the same Religion, and exact observers of the ancient League with Burgundy; that their Traf-fick had brought infinite Wealth into the Netherlands, and their Havens were very convenient for the Netherlanders. Nevertheless the States by an honourable Embaffy crav'd Aid and Protection of the French King, by whom they French were receiv'd with a kind of timorous Silence; reject 'em and, as well out of Jealoufy towards the English, as Hatred against the Spaniard, a long time put off with Delays; fo that at length they return'd home without speeding; and the States having fome hope upon account of the former Kindnets Incline to of the Queen of England towards them, refolv'd the Engl. to fly to her Protection.

Hereupon a Confultation was held in England, English whether they were to be received into Protection. deliberate Some were of opinion, that they were forthwith on it. to be receiv'd and affilted, left the Spaniard, having fubdu'd them, should from thence endanger England. There were also some who thought they were to be efteem'd as Rebels, and unworthy of Help, as having floaken off their Allegiance to their Prince. 'That the Spaniard had ance to their Prince. 'That the Spaniard had broken none of the Articles of his foyful Entrance, which was the Pretence they had used for their Rebellion, and casting off their Prince. But if he had broken them, yet was he not liable therefore to lofe his Principality. And the' fome think that Obedience is to be denied him for a time, till he have reform'd what hath been done amis; yet others think that by the Law of God, to which the Law of Man must give place, Princes are to be obey'd merely for Conscience sake, as Powers ordained by God. That God hath given them the Authority of Commanding, and left to Subjects the Commendation of Obeying. That good Princes are to be wish'd for; but whoso-Vol. II. SILZ

Nether landers confult about a Proteftor.

ever they are, they are to be born withal | land yet wavering) and the Spaniard's Power of 1585. 'That those Provinces were develv'd to the Spa-Ann. 28. ' ni.rd, not by popular Election, but by Right of Inheritance from his Ancestors, and the Donation of Emperors. Moreover that the Netherlanders themselves had received all the Privie leges which they enjoy from Princes; and had forficited the same again by their Treason, in formerly taking up Arms against their present Prince. That they who now intended to crave · Protection were not the States of the Netherlands, but most of them of the vulgar fort of Men, under the Pretence and Name of the States. These therefore held it the wisest States. These therefore held it the whett course, for the Queen to intermeddle no farther in the Netherlandish Affairs, but to strengthen and fortify her own Kingdom, to engage all her good Subjects daily more strictly to her by her Bounty and Clemency, to restrain the bad, gather Money, furnish her Navy with all fort of Provision, provide the Borders toward Scotland, with strong Garrisons, and maintain the ancient military Discipline of England, (as if the same were of late corrupted and adulterared by the Low-Country-War.) So would England become impregnable, and she on every side be secure at home, and a Terror to her Enemies. That this was the best way for those who had too powerful Neighbours to avoid and prevent War. For no Man would willingly provoke those whom he saw to be provided of Money and Strength, back'd with the Love of their Subjects, and ready and prepared to take Revenge. Great Indiferetion therefore it were, to fpend Money and Soldiers, which are, as it were, the vital Spirits of War, in a forein Quarrel, in behalf of other Princes, or indigent States, (and those Subjects to another) who will always be expecting fresh Relief; or else out of Necessity or Ingratitude, will at length provide for their own State and Security, and neglect their first Helpers. Whereof the English had hererotore had Experience in France, to their Coit, in the Quarrel of the Burgundian, and not long fince also in the Defence of the Protestants there. But they who were of this Opinion incurr'd great Difpleafure and Ill-will among the Military fort of Men, as Persons inclining to the Spaniard's Party, degenerate, and faint-hearted Cowards. The States Deputies, as foon as they had Ac-

cefs to the Queen, earneftly befought her that the would accept of the Government of the Confederate Provinces of the Netberlinds, and receive the People thereof, who were most unjustly and unworthily oppiered, into her Protection and perpenual Vallauge. The Queen heard 'em gracioully, but refused both their Government and Protection. Nevertheless, for the raising of the Siege of Antwerp, which was then closely prefs'd by the Prince of Parms, she agreed to fend 'em forthwith 4000 Men, for which Slus with the Ordnance and Ammunition in it should be deliver'd into her Hands as Caution. But whilft this was doing, Antwerp was yielded up on Composition, the River of Scheld having been fecured by brought into the City. After the Queen had feriously and carefully deliberates for fome time confider'd of things, and had throughly weigh'd the barbarous Cruelty of the Spaniards towards her Neighbours the Netherlanders, and their Hatred against England, and the Religion which she embraced; (for the Spiniard was certainly perfuaded, that the Netherlands could never be reduced to his Obedience, unless England were first conquer'd;) lest the War should be brought home to her own Doors, (Scotfuch ftrong Works, that no Relief could be should too far extend and increase in Countries fo near adjoining to her, and for Situation ic Ann 28. convenient both for translating the War into En gland, and for the Trade of Merchants, as well by Sea, as up and down the River Rbine; as alfo for prohibiting the carrying of all Provision for Shipping to the Enemy; which Countries were likewife provided of a firong Fleet, and flour and able Seamen, informach that if they were join'd with the English Fleet, the might early become Miftress of the Sea, and withal to rich and ftrong, that they had for a long time curbid their infulting Enemies, without forein Affi-ftance; as also, left they should put themselves under the Protection of the French: fhe refolv'd, that it was both Christian Piety to relieve the afflicted Natherlanders, Embracers of the fame Religion which she profess'd; and good Wisdom alfo to provide for the Safety of the People committed to her Charge, by preventing the pernicious Deligns of her Enemies; and that not out of any Define of Glory, but out of meer Necessity, for the Prefervation of her own and her People's Security. Hereupon she openly undertook the She takes Protection of the Netherlanders, whilst all the them into Princes of Christendom admired at such marily tection. Fortitude in a Woman, which durft, as it were, declare War against so puissant a Monarch : infomuch as the King of Sweden faid, That Queen Elizabeth had now taken the Diadem from her bead, and adventured it upon the doubtful bance of War. Betwixt her and the Confederate States these Conditions were agreed upon. 'The Queen Upon ' shall send the Confederate Provinces an auxili- what Con-ary Force of 900 Foot and 1000 Horfe, under ditions, a Governor-General, an honourable Person, and shall find on Pay during the War, which the States shall repay when a Peace shall be concluded; namely, in the first Year of the Peace, the Expences disburs d in the first Year of the War, and the rest in the sour Years next following. In the mean time, Flushing and the Castle of Rammekins in Walcheren, and the Isle of Briel, with the City and two Yorts, shall be deliver'd into the Queen's Hands for Caution. The Governors of these Places shall exercise no Authority over the Inhabitants, but only over the Garrison, who shall pay Excise and Impofitions as well as the Inhabitants. The faid Places, after the Money is repay'd, shall be reflored again to the States, and not deliver'd to the Spaniard, or to any other Enemy whatfo-ever. The Governor-General, and two En-glishmen whom the Queen shall name, shall be admitted into the Council of the States. The States fluil make no League with any, without the Advice and Confent of the Queen; neither shall the Queen, without the Advice of the States. Ships for the common Defence shall be riggd and fee forth, in equal Number, by both Parties, and at the common Charges, to be commanded by the Admiral of England. ' The Havens and Ports shall be open and free to both tides. With other Articles which are to be had in print.

In Memory hereof the Zealanders, transported with Joy, coin'd Money with the Arms of Zealand on one fide, namely, a Lion riting out of the Waves, and this Inscription, Luctor & emergo, that is, I struggle and get above Water; and on the other fide, with the Arms of the feveral Cities of Zealand, and this Motto, Authore Deo, Fawente Regind, that is, God being the Author, a Queen our Favourer. The Queen also hereup-here don fet forth a Book, * wherein she shew'd, that here in the shew'd, that here in the shew'd, that here in the shew'd, that here is the shew in the shew is the shew in the shew in the shew is the shew in the shew in the shew is the shew in the shew in the shew is the shew in the shew in the shew is the shew Leagues and Affociations had been made in for- * See the mer times between the Kings of England and the Appendix

Princes

Netheroffer them elves to the Q.

mifes 'em force Ailiftance.

loft.

The Q ferroutly of the matter.

Princes of the Netherlands, and the Cities thereof 1585: apart, for yielding one another murual Protecti-Ann. 28. on and Affiftance. Then she related the barbarous Cruelty of the Spaniards towards the miferable Netherlanders, and their wicked Contrivances against her, who had study'd so much to make Peace betwixt them, and had been the principal means to hinder those People from an absolute and total Revolt. Neither had she any other Intention now in fending Forces to their Aid, but only that the Netherlanders might peaceably enjoy their ancient Freedom, the and her Subjects their Security, and both Nations a free Trade and Commerce.

And withal, that she might not stay to expect

She fends out a fleet the War at her own Doors, but give the Spaniard to divert the Spani- formewhat to do abroad, she fent Sir Francis Drake ard.

as Admiral, and Christopher Carlisse as General of the Land-Forces, to the West-Indies, with a Fleet of 21 Ships, whereon were embark'd 2300 Vo-Engl. take lunteers, belides Seamen; who unexpectedly sur-$. 3-20. priz'd the Town of S. 7-20, in the Isle of S. 7-2priz'd the Town of S. Jago, in the Isle of S. Jago, near Cape Verd, the Town giving Name to the Island, and being situate in a low Valley: here with Peals of Ordnance they celebrated the day of the Queen's Inauguration, to wit, the feventeenth day of November. Having fack'd the ftay'd there a full Month.

Town, they found not the least Gold in it, but of Meal Wine and Oil great Quantities. The of Meal, Wine and Oil great Quantities. 14th day after they departed from that Coast, and many of them who had lain abroad in the open Air, were taken with a violent Difeater of the Ca- call'd a Calenture, and died thereof; which Difease is or linary in that unwholfom Air to Strangers, that come thither, and lie abroad in the Evening. On the first of January they arriv'd at Hispaniola, and about ten Miles from the City of Santo Domingo the Soldiers were landed in a fafe place, which was discover'd to them by a Spaniard whom they had taken; and there fetting themselves in Battle-array, they march'd towards the City; and having beaten back 150 Spanish Horse which made head against them, and put certain Musqueteers to flight which lay in Ambush, they enter'd pell-mell with them into the Domingo City at two Gates which look Westward, and at the fame time the Townsmen in great Fear ran all out of the City at the North-gate. glish march'd up in a Body to the Market-place near the great Church; and not being enough to defend fo large a City, they fortify'd that part of it with Bulwarks, and afterwards poffeft themselves of other convenient Posts in it: and being now absolute Masters of the City, they

> Townsmen offer'd but a small Sum of Money to redeem the Town, they began first to burn the > Suburbs, and then to fire and demolish the fair-

eft Buildings within the City itself, till such time as the Citizens redeem'd their houses with 25000

Ducats, which they could hardly make up a-mongst them. The Booty was not great, except

Cannon, Meal and Sugar. For only brais Money, Glaffes, and China-Diffes from the East-

the K. of Spain's Arms, and under them a Globe of the World, out of which iffu'd a Horse with his Fore-feet springing forward, with this Inscription, Non sufficit Orbis, that is, The World suffices not. Which was laugh'd at, and look'd upon as an Argument of the boundless Avarice and Ambition of the Spaniards, as if nothing

Indies, were in use and fashion there. Town-hall were to be fe n, among other things,

And because the

could fuffice them. From hence they fail'd to the Continent of America, and landed five Miles from Carthagena: and while Drake with his Pinnaces and Boats well mann'd in vain attempted the Haven of the City, which was defended by a Fort, and chain'd up, Carlifle, putting his Mon in Battle-art ty, led 'em in the dead of the Night all along the Shoar. A Troop of Hode thew d themselves only, and prefently retreated: whom Creliffe purlu'd till he came to a narrow Neck of Land, between the inner Road of the Haven and the Ocean, fenc'd from fide to fide with a Stone Wall, thro' which there was but one Pailage, and that scarce broad enough for a Cart to pass, and desended with Barricadoes and five Pieces of large Cannon, which were feveral times difcharg'd against the very Front of the Army, but in vain. Car-life knowing well how to avoid that Danger, by the Help of the dark Night, and taking Advan-tage of the ebbing Water, led his Men fomewhat lower, over the Sand, to the very Entrance of the Paffage, which the English manfully brake through, netwithstanding that two Gallies conftantly play'd upon the Flank of them with eleven great Guns, and three hundred Musqueteers from the faid inner Road. Then they soon mafter'd the Palifadoes, which the Enemy were fo careful as to fet up at the Entrance of every Street, putting the Spaniards and the Indians, who fhot poison'd and envenom'd Arrows at them, to Flight, and so became Masters of the Town; And Carwhere they stay'd six Weeks, compounding at thagenas last to spare the Town for 110000 Ducars, which were prefently paid, and fhared equally amongst the Seamen and Soldiers which had most need. Besides this they got but small Booty. For the Citizens, having Notice beforehand from Hifpsniola, had convey'd away all their richelt Treafure before their coming, to places more remote. The Calenture still raging amongst them, and daily leffening their Numbers, their Defign for the taking of Nombre de Dios was laid afide, and they fet fail homewards, by that Cape of the Isle of Cuba, which has its Name from Saint Antonio, where they took in fresh Rain-water out of the Ponds and Pits which they found. Then coasting along the Shoar of Florida they Theyburn

feiz'd upon two Towns, S. Anthony's and S. He- S. Antony's len's, both of them quitted and forfaken by the and s.

Spanish Garrifons; and burnt them. Afterwards holding on their Courfe along a defolate Coaft, Go to they lighted more coars. they lighted upon certain Englishmen, who had Virginia planted themselves in Virginia, so nam'd in Honour of Q. Elizabeth a Virgin, whom Sir Walter Raleigh, who was in great Favour with Queen Elizabeth, had of late fent thither for a Colony; a Man never fufficiently to be commended for the great Pains he took to discover remote Countries, and to advance the Glory of the English Navigation. To Ralph Line, their Captain, Drake offer'd all Kindness and Assistance, and a Ship or two with Provision of Victuals, also some Men, if he thought good to flay there, and profecute his Enterprize; if not, he proffer'd to bring him back into England. But whilft they were shifting the Victuals into those Ships, a violent Storm carry'd them away, and fo dispers'd the whole

Fleet, that they met not again till they came into England. Hereupon Lane and those who were Andbring planted there, being in great Penury and Want, the Cold and out of all Hope of Provisions out of England, by their Number also being much diminished, with one Voice befought Drake that he would carry them back again into their own Country, which he readily and willingly did.

And these Men, who were thus brought back, were the first that I know of, that brought into Tobacco England that Indian Plant which they call Tabacca first bot and Nicotia, or Tobacco, which they ufed againft in Ba-Crudities, being taught it by the Islims. Cer. gland-tainly from that time forward, it began to grow into great Request, and to be fold at an high

Take S.

Rate, whilft in a short time many Men every-1585. where, fome for Wantonness, some for Health dnn.28. fake, with infatiable Defire and Greediness suck'd vin the flinking Smoke thereof through an earthen Pipe, which prefently they blew out again at their Nostrils; infomuch that Tobacco-Shops are now as ordinary in most Towns as Tap-Houses and Taverns. So that the Englishmens Bodies (as this Plant, feem as 'twere to be degenerated into the Nature of Barbarians, fince they are delighted and think they may be cured with the lame things which the Earbarians use. In this Voyage things with the Earbarram are. In this voyage 700 Men were loft, and all of them almost of the Calenture. The Booty was valud at 60000 Pounds of English Money; 240 Brass and Iron Canon were gotten from the Enemy and brought home.

A new Paffage fought to the Eaft-Indses.

Booty.

Whilst these things were doing in America under the Torrid Zone, John Davis with two Ships, fet forth at the Charge of William Sanderson, (one that hath well deferv'd of Geographical Learning by fetting forth Globes) and other Londoners, fearched for a Pailage under the Frozen Zone, by the upper part of Amorica, to the East-India. He held his Coule Northward, and at 500 League, from the Southern Cape of Indiand, call d Missenbead, got fight first of the Coult of Greenland and its high Mountains cover'd with Snow; the Island being compass'd about as it were with an icy Bulwark for the breadth of two Leagues from the Land, fo that there was no access to it. Following therefore the Tract hereof, which winded full towards the West, and then towards the North, to the 64th Degree of Latitude; and having paffed the Ice, he fell upon certain flourishing green Islands, and found there People of an indifferent Senture, with finall Eyes, no Beards, and of a civi er Disposition than most of Northern People were. From hence he failed Northwestward, in a Sea without Ice, and at the 66th Degree of Latitude, discover'd a Land which by little and little extended itself to the West, with a Strait all the way of an equal Breadth; into which he entred, and fail'd about forty Leagues: But towards the end of August he fet fail homeward, full of hope to perfect the Discovery. The next Year after, he entred again into the fame Strait, fail'd eighty Leagues in it, and found that Sea every way full of feattering Islands, and in his return discover'd it to be very full of Fith. Hereupon this Voyage was undertaken the third time with two Ships to fifth, and another to discover the Passage; wherewith having paffed the 83d Degree in the same Strait, which he observ'd to be 40 Leagues wide, he return'd home.

In the mean time a Proclamation was fet forth A Proclato restrain the Covetousness of some private Men marion concern in England, who converted arable Lands and the ing Word richest pasture Grounds to the fowing of the Herb Hats, commonly call'd Wood, for the use of Dyers, to the great prejudice of Clothiers, and the Countrymen which fed on white Meats made of Milk. Whereupon they were forbidden to fow that Herb within eight Miles of any of the Queen's Houses, and within 4 Miles of Cities,

Market-Towns, and all other Towns where Clothing was ufed.

Barbary

Chao x.

Company of Mare

And for the more advantageous and gainful vending of English Cloths, Licence was granted to Ambrofe Earl of Warwick, and his Brother the Larl of Leiteffer, Thomas Starkey, Gerard Gore, and divers other Merchants of London, for the term of two Years, to trade with the Moors in the Ea-Rorn Parts of Borbary, to make good and repair the Latter they had before futtained in Africa; and all others were prohibited to trade upon those Coafts. These Merchants Muley Hamet the Xeriff took into his Protection.

In the beginning of this Year died Edward Clin- Ann. 28. ton, Lord-Admiral of England, who was created Earl of Lincoln by Queen Elizabeth in the Year of the E. 1572, and lies buried at Windfor, being fallly of Lincoln furnamed Figures in the Inscription of his Tomb. (Which I note, not to tax others, but left I be taxed myself.) Henry his Son succeeded him in the Earldom; in his Command at Sea, Charles Lord Effingbam, Lord-Chamberlain to the Queen. And in the place of Lord-Chamberlain fucceeded the Lord Hunfdon, Governor of Berwick, substituted in that Government some few Years fince in the room of Francis Ruffel Earl of Bedford. Which Francis (who was the fecond Earl of Bedford of this Family, and a true lover And of of Religion and Vertue) having furviv'd three of the E. of his Sons, Edward, John and Francis, fo that there Bedfird. remain'd but only one Son, William Lord Ruffel of Thornhaugh, and three Daughters, married to the three Earls of Warwick, Bath and Cumberland, died of a Gangrene the next Day after his Son Francis was flain (as I faid before) upon the Borders of Scotland, and lies entomb'd with his Father at Cheiney in the County of Buckingham. After him fucceeded Edward, his Grandson by his third Son Francis, being under Age.

Amongst these, tho' he were of less note, we And Dr. must not pass Richard Caldwell over in filence, Caldwell. who died this Year, being of Brazen-Nose-College in Oxford, and a Doctor of Physick. This Man merited well of the Commonwealth, by giving a Surgery-Lecture to the College of Phyticians in London, (which College was first founded by Thomas Linacre) and endowing it with a handfome Allowance; the Lord Lumley being admit-ted into a share of the Honour. He was buried in St. Bennet's Church not far from the place, and his Tomb adorn'd with the Sculpture of feveral Implements ufed by Surgeons.

At the latter end of this Year, the Earl of The E. of Leicester, tickl'd with an ambitious defire of Com- fent into mand and Glory, and being eafily perfuaded by Hollands those who fought their own Security and Power at Court more than his Honour, croffed the Seas into Holland, with the Title of General of the Queen of England's auxiliary Forces, and with fome kind of Command over the Admiral of England and the Queen's whole Fleet. He fet out with great Preparation and a fplendid Retinue, being accompanied by the Earl of Effex, the Lords Audley and North, Sir William Ruffel, Sir Thomas Shirley, Sir Arthur Baffet, Sir Walter Waller, Sir Gervafe Clifton, and other Knights, and a select Troop of 500 Gentlemen. At his departure, the Queen gave him in charge amongst other things, that he should not so much as think of any thing His Inwhich would not stand with her Honour, and structions. the Quality of the Place he bare; and that he should diligently inform himself what Garisons the States maintain'd, and by what means they did it, what way they went in raising and falling the Rates of Money, (for herein they furpals and are skill'd above all other Men) that fo the Soldiers might not receive their Pay at one rate, and spend it at another. She charg'd him to cut off and hinder all Supplies of Provision from the Enemy, to reftrain and curb the Pirats of Dunkirk; and most passionately and heartily she recommended to his care the Noblemen of those Parts, more especially the Prince of Orange his

The Nine and Twentieth Year of her Reign.

Children.

The Earl of Leicester arriving at Flushing was entertain'd by his Nephew Sir Philip Sidney, Governor 1585.

1586. of Zeland and Holland, with all manner of Ho-Ann. 29 nour, hearty Acclamations, triumphal Arches, Feaflings, and the like publick acknowledgments of their Deliverance. Being come to the Hague

Authority in Holland, in the Month of January, the chief Government and absolute Authority over the Confederate Provinces was given him by a Grant in Writing from the States-General, (as they call them) with the Title of Governor and Captain-General of Holland, Zeland, the United and Confederate Provinces. And now being attended with a noble Guard, faluted of all Men by the Title of Your Excellency, and footh'd up with Flatteries, as feated in the highest and most illustrious Degree of Honour, he began to take upon him as if he were a perfect King. But the Queen, taking it very ill that the States had confer'd fo large Honour on him, and that he had accepted it, check'd his Ambition, and on a fudden re-prov'd his swelling Pride by this one short Let-granted bim.

She expo-

O takes

it ill.

How contemptuoully you have carried your felf towards us, you shall understand by this with him. Meffenger, whom we fend to you for that purpose. We little thought, that one whom we had rais'd out of the Dust, and prosecuted with such fingular Favour above all others, would with fo great contempt have flighted and broken our Commands in a matter of fo great Confequence, and fo highly concerning us and our Honour: Whereof tho' you have but small regard, contrary to what you ought by your Allegiance, yet think not that we are fo careless of repairing thereof, that we can bury fo great an Injury in filence and oblivion. We therefore command you, that, all Excuse fer apart, you do forthwith, upon your Allegiance which you owe unto us, do whatioever our Vice-Chamberlain Heneage shall make known to you in our Name, upon pain of farther Peril.

And with In another Letter to the States-General she the States, thus expostulates with 'em: 'That they had to her Difgrace, and without her Knowledge, confer'd the absolute Government of the Confederate Provinces upon Leicester, her Subject;
whenas she had absolutely refus'd it herself, and by a publick Manifesto had declar'd to the whole World, that she intended only to relieve and fuccour her Neighbours in their Diffress, and no ways to take upon her the Sovereignty over them. She admonishes them therefore to turn Leicester out of that absolute Authority, whose Commission she had limited; not that she thought their Caufe unworthy to be favoured and affifted, but to provide for and fecure her own Honour, which she esteem'd more dear to her than Life itself.

They ex-

The States wrote back to her: 'That they were very forry they had incur'd her Difpleafure by granting absolute Authority to Leicesfer without her knowledge. They intreat her to be pacified, confidering the necessity thereof; foralmuch as fuch an Authority was necessary to be granted to one or other, to avoid Trou-bles and Diffensions. Neither indeed was the Authority fo great as the Word Abfolute might feem to import, confidering that the Principality itself, and the supreme Rule and Dignity of Dominion, remain'd wholly in the Peoples Hands. And to revoke the Authority already granted, were nothing else but to plunge the State of the Netherlands into extreme Dan-

Q pacifi'd.

By these Letters of the States, and the forrowful Lines of Leicester, who knew well enough how with Tears, and a pretended Trouble for vernor of the Place, and afterwards by the Cities what had pass'd, to reconcile the Favour of his of Zeland and Holland, with all manner of Homild Princes to himself, her Displeature by literaction, the and little vanished away, and was for-Amaza gotten.

Leicefer in the mean time receives all the Contributions of the Provinces, maketh Military Laws, and while he goeth about to impose new Payments upon all Traffick and Merchandize, procures himfelf great Hatred among the People. At this time the Prince of Parma, Governor of Grave be-the Netberlands under the Spaniard, belieged Grave fixed by (a Town of Brabent upon the River Mass) for fe-werd Months by Challe Court Mass) for fe-mard. veral Months by Charles Count Mansfield, who Votal Months by Courte Count Planguage, who had raised Works round about it. To relieve this Town the Earl of Leiceffer fent Count Hobento or Leiceffer Hollack, a German, and Sir John Norris General of fends to the English Foot: But as foon as they had begun to build a Fort as near the Town as they could, that from thence they might victual and relieve the Town, the Spaniards fell upon them, and beat them from their Work; but the English Companies coming prefently in, they were themfelves beaten back with great flaughter of their Men, feven of their Officers were flain; and of the English, Norris lightly hurt. Count Hollack fhortly after cutting through the Bank, and let-Supplies ting out the Waters, relieved the Town with Vi- put in it. duals and a fresh Supply of Men by Boats. As soon as the Prince of Parma himself was come, and had thunder'd a while into the Town with his great Ordnance, Van Hemart, Governor of the Town, a young Man, raw and unskilled in Surrens military Matters, not fo much as expecting an dec'd, Affault, compounded for his own and the Townsmens Lives, and furrender'd the Place; whilst in the mean time Leicester drove the Spaniards out of the Betave, (which is properly called Batavia) an Hland made by two Rivers, the Rhyne and the Jeicofter Wael, and near the Tol-buy's erected a ftrong drives the Sconce. For the delivering up of Grave, Hamit Spinards afterward fuffer'd Death, for an Example and One Be ure. Terror to others.

The Prince of Parma marched neve into Gel- A bold derland, and encamped before Venlo; where Skerk Adventure a Frieflander and Sir Roger Williams a Welfamin, two venturous Men, undertook a desperate Expicit, to break through the Enemy's Camp at Midnight, and enter into the City: And indeed, after the flaughter of some of their Enemies, they made their way as far as the Prince of Parma's own Tent. But being there repell'd, they retreated without effecting their Delign, yet not without Commendations amongst martial Men for their bold Attempt: And Venlo was shortly Venlo lot after furrender'd.

In the mean while the Lord Willoughby, Governor of Bergenopzoom, intercepted the Enemy's Provision of Corn; whilst in other Parts Sir Philiy Sidney, and Grave Maurice the Prince of Orange his Son, furpriz'd Axele, a Town of Flanders. Encourag'd with this Success, Sidney made an Attaken. tempt by Night upon Gravelin, being fed with Gravelin hopes and drilled on by some of the Garison, attempted but found himself deluded; and having lost some in van. few of his Men, flain by La Motte Governor of the Town, who had contrived the Plot, he escaped himself in safety with the rest. Sir William Pelham, General of the English Horse, the whilit ranged all over Bribant. From Venle the Prince of Parma took his march to Berk, garrison'd by Parma 1200 English under the Command of Colonel besieges Morgan, and laid fiege to it. To raife this Siege Berck. Leicester made haste thither : But when faw himfelf to be too weak in Men, ill provided of Victuals, no place of Retreat near, and the Enemy's Camp very strongly intrench'd and fortifid, to draw the Enemy from the fiege of it, he befleged Doesburg; and after he had with his Ordnance made a Breach in the Walls, and was rea-1586. dy to give an Affault, they came to a Parley, Ann.29 and the City was yielded into his Hands, before the Prince of Parma could be drawn from Berck Lescester to relieve it.

Duesburg.

But the Prince of Farma, 18a ing to Samply of Victuals to be convey'd thither. A fecond Convoy being diffracted thither in foggy Weather than the sample of the But the Prince of Parma, fearing the Lofs of ther, the English in the Fog lighted upon the Spaniards that had convoy'd it. Whereupon there happen'd a Skirmish. The English being charg'd A Fight with two or three Volleys of Shot one after an-Spaniards other, from a strong place of Advantage, flood their Ground, overthrew a Troop of Horse under the Leading of George Creffiae an Albanois, and took him Prifoner after he had been unhors'd by the Lord Willoughby, Hannibal Gonzaga with many others being flain. Of the English few Sir Philip were miffing: but Sidney, one of more Value than many others, having his Horfe kill'd under him, was fhot into the Thigh as he was mounting again, and died the 25th. day after, leaving behind him a great Miss of him amongst good Men. He died in the very Flower of his Age, having outliv'd his Father scarce four Months: for whom Leicester, his Uncle, at his Return into England, made a splendid Funeral after the military Fashion, at Saint Paul's Church at London. James King of Scots honour'd him with an Epitaph; both the Universities consecrated their Tears, and New-College in Oxford fet forth a most elegant Description of his noble Acts. These things, and sar more than these, his great Vertue, excellent Wit, most exquisite Learning, and tweet Conditions, defervedly merited.

Leicefter, though full of Sorrow and Heaviness

Zuphen Leicefter, though tun or some and attempted hereat, vigoroully affaulted the Sconces near Elford.

Zuephen lett bloched up.

Zutphen: and the better to force the Town, he took the Island in the River, and in it the principal Fort. Then fetting upon the leffer Fort, Valour of he took it through the Valour of Edward Stanley, Edward who, catching hold of a Spaniard's Pike wherewith he charg'd him, held it to fast, that by the same the Stanhe was drawn up into the Sconce: whereat the Spaniards were terrify'd, and in great Hafte and Fear quitted it. Leicester knighted Stanley for his Valour, gave him forty Pounds of English Money in hand, and a yearly Pension of one hundred Marks during his Life. The Night following, the Spaniards abandon'd the great Sconce, with all the Munition, and retired into Zutphen. Leieither thought it not good formally to bessege the same, which (it being now the Depth of Winter) he thought sufficiently block'd up by the Garrisons in the Towns round about it. For at Dewenter, within fix English Miles Northward, lay Sir William Stanley with 1200 Foot, English and Irish; in the Sconces of Zutphen next Devemer, lay Rowland York, with 800 Foot and 100 Horse; at Doesburg, within fix Miles Southward, lay Sir Folm Boroughs with 800 Foot and 200 Horfe; and to the Eastward were Garrisons put into Lo-chem, Sherenburg, and Dutecum.

Leicester, after he had quarter'd the rest of his Men in the Towns, and the Prince of Parma was departed farther off, return'd to the Hague, where he was received by the States, with these expo-The States stulatory Complaints: That the Money was ill ma-The State Hulatory Companies . Low to a torny and com-complisits mag d; That he liften do corrupt and destructive Com-apaint [els; That the English Companies were not full; That Leweller, forcin Soldiers had been levy d, without Consent of the States; That military Discipline was neglected, gons and Pioneers were taken up by Force, the Privileges of the Provinces difregarded and flighted, and new kind's of Contributions invented. Thefe things they pray him that he will prudently remedy in time.

He, being now minded to go over into England, puts them in Hopes of Redrefs, and gives them 🦳 fair Words. But when the Day came that he 1586. was to depart, he entrufted the Government of Ann 29. the Provinces to the Council of State; and the fame day privately made another Act of Referiction, referving to himfelf all the Authority over the Governors of Provinces, Cities and Forts; he also took from the Council of State and the Prefidents of Provinces their wonted Jurisdictions; and so fail'd over into England the 3d. day Hereturns of December. Thus went the English Affairs in home. the Netberlands all this Year.

But in England, Philip Earl of Arundel, who had now been Prisoner in the Tower a full Year, nad now been Prioner in the Tower a full Year, was accursed in the Star-Chamber, That be bed reliev'd feveral Priefts, contrary to the Laws; That be beld Correspondence, by Letters, with Allen and Parfons the Jestite, the Queen's Enemies; That be had publickly in Writing question'd the Justice of the Kingdom; and, That he had Intentions of departing the Realm mithout Lieence. The Earl protesting his Obedience to the Oween, and his Love to his Obedience to the Queen, and his Love to his Country, modeftly excus'd himfelf, by his Affection to the Catholick Religion, and his Ignorance of the Laws, and, confessing his Fault, Submitted himself to the Censure of the Bench; who fined him in ten thousand Pounds, and Im- The E. of prisonment during the Queen's Pleasure. But of Arundel these things I am to speak more fully in the Year fined.

At this time came over into England, from Fre- King of derick II. King of Denmark, Henry Ramely, Chan- Denmark cellor for German Affairs, in a military Equipage, mediates and attended with a Guard of Mufqueteers; who the Lemmade a large Declaration of the King's good made a large Declaration of the King's good Countries, Affection towards the Queen and the Peace of Christendom. For the procuring whereof with the Spaniard, he promis'd his best Assistance; less (as he faid) the Enemy of Mankind flould any longer water the Scot of War, which be had fown in the Netherlands, with the Blood of Men. The Queen heard him very graciously, had often Conference with him, entertaining the Man with fingular Courteile, and highly commended the King of Denmark's pious Affection. But she made him Answer by the Lord Burleigh Lord-Treasurer, Charles Howard Lord-Admiral, Henry Lord Hunston Lord Chamberlain, and Sir Francis Walfingham Secretary, 'That she defired nothing more than Queen's to embrace a Peace with her Neighbour-Prin- answer, ces, provided there was no Fraud in it: but well understanding the Attempts of the Spaniard against her, she could not but provide for her own Safety, the Defence of the true Religion of Christ, and the preserving of the Privi-' leges of her Confederate Neighbours inviolate. Much after the fame rate also was Answer given to Bodellan, whom the Prince of Parma had privily fent into England, to try if he could procure a Peace. In the mean time, fhe largely supply'd the K. She sup-of Navarre with Money, by Sir Horatio Pallavi- plies the cini, through whose Sides the Guissans struck at Nature of the Reform'd Religion in France. But there was with Monothing the was more careful and intent about, ney, than to establish a firm and lasting Amity be- she feeks than to ettaolin a firm and fatting Amily be-twixt England and Sectland, and to join them in a to hold League of mutual Defence and Officies, thereby to cut with the off all Hopes, not only from her forein Enemies, KorSecta, but also from the Queen of Scots herself, of any Towhat Assistance out of Scotland. For the suspected that intent. the faid Queen, being vex'd in her Mind, did harbour dangerous Projects and Designs in her Breast, since the time that those Conditions which fhe had offer'd were rejected, the Afficiation enter'd into, and she herfelf committed (as I said before) to the Custody of Sir Amias Powlet and Sir Drue Drury. And certain it is, as evidently lifter in

dently appears by the Adverfaries own Writings, 1586. that the festites on the one side, and the fugitive 1m. 29. Noblemen on the other fide, with different Affecross and Purpofes, fuggetted to her very dangerous Advice and Counfel. For the Jefuites, when they faw no hope remaining of restoring their Ad the Romish Religion, either by her or her Son, rice to the betook themselves to new Stratagems, and began Qof Scots, to forge a new and pretended Title to the Succession of the Kingdom of England for the Spa-niard, (whose Grandeur alone they labour'd to increase.) To this end they fent into England, (as Pafquier flays) one Samier, (if the Name be not counterfeit) a Man of their Society, to draw Noblemen and Gentlemen to the Spaniard's Party, and thrust her forward to her own Danger, by telling her, that if she were troublesom, neither she nor her Son should reign; and by exciting the Guises, her Kinsmen, to new Attempts against the King of Navarre and the Prince of Conde, that being engaged therein, they might not be at leifure to help her. But to conclude the League which was begun and now endeavour'd to be hinder'd by Defneval

Evench opposethe by Wotton, (but interrupted by Ruffel's Death, League with the

with the K.of Scots. Ambassador from France, and Corcellie, a Man of a turbulent and unquiet Spirit, who had of late been difgracefully turn'd out of England) Mr. Thomas Randolph was fent into Scotland, whose Dexterity in Scottifb matters was look'd upon as prudent and forunate, tho to the King he were not very acceptable, in regard of those Tumults which he had of late been the Author of in Scotland. Randolph propounded to the King the fame Conditions of a League, which Wotton had pro-He would pounded before. The King would have to be add to the added to them, and fet down in the Draught of former the League, the Articles touching the annual Penfion affign'd him, and about the not prejudicing him in his Title to the Crown of England. The Ambaifador, according to his Instructions, promis'd that those two Points should be provided for in a particular Article by themfelves, provided he would continue constant in maintaining Amity with England. The King also (out of his great Love to his Subjects) propounded farther, that the Scots might enjoy the fame Privileges and Immunities in England, which the English fliew'd him, that that could not be granted but by Act of Parliament, and that the Ethates of England would not easily yield to it; he deliberately and particularly gave his Affent to the Articles propounded, and commanded the fame to he imparted to the Nobility of his Reulm, that they might be confirm'd by their Subscriptions alfo, altho' the French Ambaffador endeavour'd to make him believe at first, that the Queen sought this League, not out of any Love or Respect to the King, but out of a just Fear, lest e'er long her Enemies which conspired against her should be too hard for her; and afterwards went about to terrify him with Threats, that the old Amity with the French, which had been fo highly bene ficial to the Scots, would be by this means dif-folved; and laftly, befought him, that nothing might be done herein, without the Advice of the French King. Is not terrify'd by the Fr.

But he could work nothing upon the King, who knew thefe to be nought but vain Scarecrows, either to hinder or delay the matter. For he knew, that by the late Confederacy with the Netherlanders, the English were very much strengthen'd. He gave therefore this ferious Answer, That he had put his Confidence in the Goode ness of God, and not in the Amity and Friendthip of those who were Enemies to God's Glo-'ry: and that it was as lawful for him to make a League with the Queen, without acquainting the French King, as for the French King to have made a League with the Queen, of late, without acquainting him. And though the Queen, being fomewhat sparing, fent him less Money than he expected, left the might be thought to buy the League, and gave him no express Affu-rance concerning the Succession: yet he, out of his Zeal to Religion, and his singular Affection and Inclination towards both her and the publick Peace, commanded both the League to be concluded, and (to fatisfy her) the Carrs also, who were suspected of Ruffel's Death, to be sent into England. But they fied away and efcaped, the day before they were to be fent.

Shortly after, in the beginning of June, there met at Berwick Edward Earl of Rutland, Williams Lord Evers, and Mr. Thomas Randolph, Commiffioners fent by the Queen of England; and Francis Earl of Bothwell, Robert Lord Bayde, and James Humes of Coldingknoll, Commissioners appointed by the King of Scots: who concluded a League of A League

frield Amity, (as they term'd it, the Word offenfroe of stricter not fo well pleasing the Scots) which follows in concluded,

' Whereas the Reign and Government of these Articles Princes has fallen into fuch uncertain and dan-thereo gerous times, wherein the Neighbour-Princes, who will needs be call'd Catholicks, acknowledging the Pope's Authority, do enter into mutual Leagues and Confederacies, for the rooting up and extirpating the true, pure and Evangelical Religion, not only out of their own Territories and Dominions, but also out of the Kingdoms of other Princes, and thereunto do bind themselves by faithful Vows and Promifes: Left those who profess the Evangelical Religion should feem to be less careful for the Defence and Protection thereof, than they who profess the Romish Religion are seriously labouring the Subversion of the same; the said Princes, for the greater Security of their own Perfons, upon whose Safety depends the Safety of all their People, and for the Prefervation of the true, ancient and Christian Religion, which they now profefs, have thought meet that a stricter Alliance and mutual Confederacy be fincerely enter'd into, than ever hitherto has been between their Majesties Progenitors. First therefore, to the end that this so necesfary and pious a Purpose and Intention of both Princes, in this troublefome State of Affairs, ' may be brought to its wish'd Effect, for the publick Good and the Propagation of the Evangelical Truth, it is covenanted, agreed and concluded, That the faid Princes shall, by this focial and facred League, provide for and en-deavour the Defence and Prefervation of the true, pure and Evangelical Religion, which they now profess, against all others whosoever, who shall enterprize, attempt or do any thing against either of them, in order to subverting the faid Religion; and that they shall use their and defend and govern their People under the faid ancient and Apoftolical Religion. Item, It is covenanted, accorded and concluded, That this focial League for maintaining and upholding the Christian and Catholick Religion, which at this time is embraced by both Princes, and by God's Bleffing received and countenanced through their Kingdoms and Dominions, fhall be a League both of Defence utmost Endeavour and Diligence, that the rest of the Princes who embrace the fame true Religion, may be brought to affociate with them in this fo holy a Purpofe and Confederacy, and with joint Forces maintain the true Wor-fhip of God in their Countries and Dominions,

1586. Ann. 29. and Offence againft all men whatever, who shall hinder or any ways go about to hinder the free exercise thereof in their Kingdoms and Dominions; all Treaties, Alliances and Consederacies whatsoever formerly entred into betwix either of them and the Disturbers or Adversaries of the said Religion, be they who they will to the contrary notwithstanding.

will, to the contrary notwithstanding.

And if at any time is stall happen that any prince or State whatsoever, of what Condition sover they be, shall invade or inset the Kingdoms, Dominions or Territories of either of the faid Princes, or any Part thereof, or shall any way hurt or injure their Majesties Persons or their Subjects, or attempt the faid things, or any of them, it is covenanted, accorded and concluded, That neither of these Princes, being certified from the Prince Invaded, or suffering such Injury or Hurt, shall at any time, openly or secreticly, directly or indirectly, give or afford any Aid, Counsel or Favour to the faid Invaders or Insestors, any Tie of Consanguinty or Affinity, Alliance of Amities or Confederacies formerly entred into, or hereafter to be entred into, notwithstanding: And this in what kind of Invasion soever it be, and by whomsoever it shall be made or attempted.

'It is agreed, accorded and concluded, That the aforefaid Princes fhall affil one another in manner as follows: That is to fay, the King of Scots, in case the Realm of England be invaded or insested by a forcin Power in those Parts thereof that are remote from the Kingdom of Scotland, shall, after demand made by the Queen of England, without delay, send 2000 Horse and 500 Foot, or any less number of Men, at the choice and demand of the said Queen; and shall cause the same to march, at the Queen's Charges, from the Borders of Scotland lying next unto England into any other

Part of England whatfoever. * Item, It is covenanted accorded and con-cluded, That if the Kingdom of England be invaded by any Man whatfoever in the Northern Parts, within 60 Miles of the Borders of Scet-land, then the most illustrious King of Scets, be sing requested and called upon by the most Serene Queen of England, shall cause to be gather'd, and shall without delay effectually gather, all the Power and Strength he can make, and shall join the same with the English Forces, and in hostile manner pursue and profecute the Invaders of the Realm of England, and all their Abettors and Favourers who foever, for the fpace of thirty Days together; and those Days being expired, if occation or necessity require, of more, even for as long time as the Subjects of Scotland have anciently been accustom'd, and at this Day in right are bound, to give their Service and Help for the Defence of the Kingdom of Scotland.

Lem, That when the King of Scots shall be certified by the Queen of England of any Invasion or other Disflurbance whatsoever in her Kingdom of Leland, he shall not only forbid the Inhabitants of the Country of Argyle, and the Isles and Places to the same adjoining, and of all other Parts of the Kingdom of Scotland whatsoever, to enter into the Kingdom of Scotland whatsoever, to enter into the Kingdom of Iral Lind, and effectually hinder em from entring; but also, whensoever it shall hereafter happens that the Inhabitants of any Part of the Kingdom of Scotland shall enter, contrary to the meaning and intent of this Treaty, with any extraordinary or unusual number of Men, in an hostile manner, into any Part of the Kingdom of Iral Lind, the said King, being certified by the Queen of fuch their Entrance, shall by publick Proclamation declare such Infesters and Disturbers who shall in an hostile manner harrasthat Kingdom, to be Rebels, Disturbers of the publick Peace and Traitors, and shall accordingly prosecute em as such.

Inom, That neither Prince shall for the time*

Item, That neither Prince shall for the time to come, aid, favour, fuecour or relieve any Trator, Rebel, or him that shall openly revolt from his Prince, or suffer them any way to be aided, succoured and relieved by others, or permit them openly or secretly to make their Abode in his or her Dominions; but shall each of them, from the time of notice or first demand made by the Prince from whom they have revolted, without delay or procrassing, deliver up, or cause to be delivered, the said Traitors or Rebels, according to the Agreements express in former Trevites betwixt us and our Predecessors, or at leastw. Secondary of their Dominions: And moreover, as long as the said Rebels or Traitors shall make just Abode in their said Dominions, shall make just Abode in their said Dominions, shall make just and due Satisfaction for all Injuries and Mischiefs which may be done by the said Rebels.

' Item, That for compounding and adjutting of all and every the Injuries and Controversites which have happend and arisen on the Borders, upon account of the Borders, or amongst the Borderers, from the time that the most Illustrious King of Seats first took the Government of the Realm into his own Hands, and for the space of four Years going next before the said term, the two Princes respectively shall within six Months after the concluding of this League, send able and fit Commissioners, well-affected to the Peace, surnish and empower'd with Instructions meet and sufficient for that purpose, to some convenient place on the Consines of both Kingdoms, who shall compound and determine all Causes and Controversies by an honourable and friendly Treaty and Agreement.

Lem, That neither of the faid Princes shall contract Amity, or enter into any League or Confederacy with any other Prince, State or Society of Men, to the prejudice of this prefent League and Union, without the express confent of the other Confederate Prince, by Letters of the faid Prince, subscribed with his own Hand, or fealed with his Privy Seal, first had and obtain'd.

Indicate of the firms, when either of them shall be duly requir'd by the Ambassadors or Commissioners of the other Prince for 0 do, shall both by their Oath and under their Great Seal, approve, consirm and ratific this facred League and Alliance; and moreover for the better strengthning thereof, shall, within a certain time to be appointed by the mutual Consent of both Princes, deliver or cause to be deliver'd, their Royal Instrument or Letters-Patents to the same purpose.

Rem, That all former Treaties of Amities, Contracts and Agreements, made betwixt the Predeceflors of the aforefaid Princes and their Kingdoms and Dominions, tho' they may feem to be antiquated and out of Date, shall still continue in their strength, force and vigour. As likewife, that this present Treaty of mutual Confederacy and stricter Amity and Alliance, shall in no fort derogate from former Treaties and Confederacies entred into by the faid Princes with other their Confederaces, or in any respect weaken or lessent the force and authority thereof, (the defence of the purer Religion, which the said Princes do now maintain and embrace in their Kingdoms, only excepted) in which Senfe and Latitude we understand and intend that this prefent League of Defence and Offence shall remain in its full thrength, firm and inviolate.

sand and

1586. 6 Ann. 29. 6

Item, That the King of Scots shall, when he ' arrives at the full Age of 25 Years, as foon as conveniently may be, approve and confirm the prefent Treaty, and cause it to be approv'd and confirm'd by a publick Astembly of the States of his Realm. And the fame also shall the Queen do and perform, and cause to be ' done and perform'd in Parliament, by the No-' bility and other States of her Kingdoms of England and Ireland.

coagaint a dangerous Confpiracy was discover'd against Q. Eliz. Q. Elizabeth the Oriental and Property of the Conference Q. Elizabeth; the Original and Progress whereof I will lay down as briefly as I can out of the voluntary Confessions of the Conspirators them-felves. In the English Seminary at Rheims, some there were who most religiously admiring and reverencing the Omnipotency of the Pope, believ'd that the Bull of Pius V. against Queen Elizabeth was dictated by the Holy Ghost. Thefe Men perfuaded themselves, and others that eagerly defired and itched after the Glory of Martyrdom, that it was a meritorious Act to kill fuch Princes as were excommunicated; and farther, that they were Martyrs who loft their Lives on that account. These things Gifford, a Doctor of Divinity, Gilbert Gifford and Holgeson Priests, impress d so deeply upon one John Savage, (a Bastard by report) a Man ready for any Underkill theQ. taking, that he willingly and readily vowed to kill Queen Elizabeth. At the same time they wrote a Book, (and that only on purpose to lull the Queen and Council fairly asleep in Security, conceal'd

Savage undertakes to

while they privately made way for their wicked conningly Deligns) wherein they admonified the Papitts in England not to attempt any thing against their Princefs, but to fight against their Adversaries only with the Weapons of Christians, viz. with Tears, Spiritual Arguments, daily Prayers, Watchfings and Faltings: And withat they fipread a falfe Rumor abroad by their Tale-bearers, that George Gifford, one of the Band of the Queen's Gentlemen-Penfioners, had fworn the Queen's Death, and in that respect had drawn a con-tiderable Sum of Money from the Duke of

Ballard

Ballard About Eafter, John Ballard, a Priest of the Se-goes from minary of Rheims, who had been visiting many to France. of the Papifts in England and Scotland, and feeling their Pulies, return'd into France in company with one Maud, Walfingham's Spy, (a notable A Deign to invade crafty Diffembler, who had egregiously deceived England the unwary Priest) and tamper'd with Don Bernardine de Mendoza, the Spaniard's Ordinary Ambaffador then in France; and with Charles Paget, a Man throughly devoted to the Queen of Scots, about invading England; judging it to be now a very fit time, whilft the Soldiery of England were abtent in the Netherlands; neither could they ever hope for a fairer Opportunity, forafmuch as the Pope, the Spaniard, the Duke of Guise, and the Prince of Parma, were all refolved to fet up-on England, thereby to divert the War from the Netherlands. And tho Paget demonstrated clearly, that it was in vain to invade England as long as Queen Elizabeth liv'd; yet was Ballard fent back again into England, having first been enfent back gag'd by Oath to procure Affiftance with all to Engl. speed to join with the Invaders, and to effect the Q. of Scots Liberty.

At Whitfuntide arriv'd in England this filken Prieft in Soldier's Habit, call'd commonly by the borrow'd Name of Capt. Foscu. At London he brake

the butiness to Anthony Bebington of Dethick in Derbyshire, a young Gentleman of good Birth, and 1586. rich, a Man of a ready Wit, and Learning above Aun. 29. most of his Years; who being devoted to the Henerts Romifb Religion, had a little before gone over with Bainto France, unknown, without Licence, and bington. grew familiarly acquainted with Thomas Morgan, one that retain'd to the Queen of Scots, and with the Bishop of Glascow her Ambassador. These two, by their continual extolling the heroical Vertues of fo great a Queen unto him, had put him into an affured hope of acquiring great Honours by her Service; which the ambitious young Gentleman foon laid hold on. They recommended him alfo, without his knowledge, by Lerters, to the Queen of Scots. For when he was return'd into England, he wrote feveral kind and respectful Letters to him. And from that time Morgan made use of his help in conveying I etters to her, till fuch time as the was committed to Sir Amias Powlet's keeping; for then the young Gentleman, perceiving the danger, gave over. To this Babington (Hay) Ballard brake the Bufiness aforesaid. He was flady of opinion, that the Invalion of England would fignifie nothing fine with to long as Queen Elizabeth lived. But when the delega-Ballard had told him, that she would not live He aplong, for Savage was now come into England, proves it, who had vowed to kill her; Babington was not but not fatisfied that fo weighty a Butinefs thould be entrusted to Savage alone, less he should sail of the it on. Enterprize; but rather to fix slout Gendemen, of which number he would have Savage to be one, that so he might not break his Vow. bington therefore contriveth a new Project for Invading the Realm by Foreiners, concerning the Havens where they should land, the Aid that should join them, the Delivering of the Queen of Scots, and the tragical Execution of the Queen, as he term'd it.

Whilft his Mind was wholly intent upon this Q.of Scott Bufiness, he receiv'd Letters by an unknown writes to Boy in a Cypher samiliar betwixt the Queen of Baba grass Scots and him, wherein the gently blamed him for his long Silence, and defird him to fend her with all speed a Pacquet of Letters come from Morgan, and deliver'd by the French Ambassador's

Secretary. Which he did, and withal by the fame Meffenger fent a Letter of his own unto her, wherein 'he excus'd his Silence, in regard His answ. he wanted Opportunities of fending any thing to her ever fince she was committed to the Custody of Sir Amias Powlet, a Puritan, a meer

Leicestrian, (as he call'd him) and a most bitter Enemy of the Catholick Faith. He relateth what Conference he had had with Ballard; informeth her that fix Gentlemen were made choice of to commit the tragical Execution 3 and that he himfelf with an hundred more would at the fame time fet her at Liberty. He pray'd her that the heroical Actors in this Bufinefs (for fo he term'd them) might have Rewards affign'd, or elfe their Polterity, if they bappen'd to perifh in the Attempt. To this 'happen'd to perish in the Attempt. To this Letter answer was made the 27th of July: 'B.zbington's most entire Affection to the Catholick Thereto77 Religion and to her is recommended and applauded: But he is advis'd to go circumspectly and wifely to work, viz. That the Affociation amongst them should be entred into upon pretence that they flood in fear of the Puritans. 'That there should be no Rising before such time as they were assur'd of forein Assi' stance. That some Disturbance should be raifed in Ireland while the Stroke was giving on this fide. That Arundel and his Brothers, and ' the Earl of Northumberland, should be wrought the Earl of Northumbersana, mount over to her Party; and, That Heftmorland, Party over to lit Trt2

80.4

1586. 'home. The way also for her delivery was Ann. 29. thus laid, viz. 'Either by overthrowing a Cart in the Gate, or fetting Fire on the Stables, or by intercepting her as she rode abroad for her Recreation in the Fields betwixt Chartley and St. fford. Lastly, Babington is commanded to pais his Word to the ix Gentlemen and the reft, concerning their Reward for their Ser-

Partnersin fpiracy.

He had now affociated to himfelf feveral Genthe Con- tlemen who were very zealous for the Romish Religion; amongst whom those of most eminent Note were Edward Windfore, Brother to the Lord Windsore, a young Man of a foftly Disposition; Thomas Salusbury, of a good Family in Denbighfhire; Charles Tilney, a Gentleman of an ancient House, the only hopes of the Family, and one of the Band of Gentlemen-Pentioners to the Queen, whom Ballard had lately reconcil'd to the Romillo Church, both of them young Gentlemen of comely Perfonage; Chidiock Tichburne of Southampconsety renounge; Contactor Leadurne 01 Suthang-ton; Edward Abington, whole Father had been Under-Trealurer, or (as they commonly call him) Cofferer of the Queen's Houfhold; Robert G. ge of Surry; John Travers and John Chanack or; Lancaktor; John Jones, whole Father was Yeoman or Keeper of the Wardrobe to Queen Many; Sawige, whom I have spoken of already; Barnwel, a noble Family in Ireland; and Henry Dun, Clerk in the Office of First-fruits and Tenths. One Polly also infinuated himself into their company, a Man who perfectly understood the Affairs of the Queen of Scots, a cunning Counter-feit and Diffembler, who is thought to have revealed all their Confultations from Day to Day 10 Walfirgham, and to have egged on the young Gentlemen in this desperate Undertaking, who were prone enough of themselves to what was bad; the Name, the Queen of Scots Secretary, had given them fecret Warning to beware of To these men Babington breaketh the Design,

Every aflign'd

them.

mans part but not all parts of it to every one of them. Ballard, Tichburn and Dun he sheweth his own Letters and the Scottish Queen's. Tilney and Tich-burn he persuaded to be Executors of the Mur-They at first refuse to imbrue their Hands in the Blood of their Princefs. Ballard and Babington labour to prove to 'em that it is lawful to kill Princes excommunicated; and if ever Equity and Juflice be to be violated, it is to be done for the Promotion of the Catholick Religion. Being hereupen with much ado perfuaded, they gave a kind of Confent. Abington, Barnuel, Charnet, and Savage, took the Oath readily and cheenfully cheerfully to commit the Murder. Salisbury could by no means be perfuaded to have his H and in killing the Queen, but voluntarily promis'd his Help for fetring the Queen of Scots at Liberty. Over and above those before-named, Babington pitcheth upon one Tichenor to make up the Crew, of whose Fidelity and Boldness he was well satisfied; but he was at prefent absent a great way off. Babington chargeth them not to acquaint any Man with the business, but upon an Oath of Secrecy first taken. The Conspira-Color fors met ever and anon to confer about these matcommens ters, either in St. Giles's Fields, or St. Paul's Church, or in Taverns, wherethey every Day banquetted and feafted, being puffed up with Hope of great Honours; now and then commending the Va-lour of those Scottish Gentlemen who had not long before furprized the King at Steelin; and of Gerard the Lugundian, who murder'd the Pr. of Orange. And to such a height of foolift Vanity they procooded, that they would need: have those men that were appointed to be the Affailines pictur'd to the Life, and Babington in the midst of them, with this Verse,

Hi mibi funt Comites, quos ipfa Pericula ducunt.

' Thefe Men are my Companions, whom very ' Dangers draw.

But forafmuch as this Verse pleas'd them not, as being too open and plain, they put instead of it,

Quorsum hæc alið properantibus ?

That is.

' To what end are these things to Men that hafiten to another purpose?

These Pictures (they say) were begun and privately shewed to the Queen, who knew none of them by their Favour, fave only Barmvel, who had often come to her about Butiness of the Earl of Kildare's, in whose Service he was employ'd; but being by other Tokens put in mind of him, the remember'd the Man very well. Sure it is, that when upon a time she walked abroad and faw Barnvel, she beheld him undauntedly, and turning herfelf to Hatton, Captain of the Guard, and others, the faid, Am not I fairly guarded, that bave not a Man in my Company that wears a Sword? For fo Barmwel himself related to the rest of the Conspirators, and shew'd them how easily she might have been made away at that time, if the Confpirators had been there in readinefs. Savage alfo affirm'd the fame.

Nothing now more perplex'd Babington, than Babington left the promife made of forein Aid should not careful for be perform'd. Therefore to make fure thereof, forein afhe refolv'd himfelf to go over to France; and to fiftance. that purpose to send Ballard privately before, for Heintends whom, by his Money, under a counterfeit Name, Ballard to he had procur'd a Licence to travel. And that France there might not be the least suspicion of himself, about it he insinuated into Walfingbom by means of Pally, les instances whom I spake of before, and earneitly befought willing him to procure him a Licence from the Queen ham, to travel into France, promiting to do her extraordinary good Service, in pumping out and difcovering the fecret Designs of the Lugitives in behalf of the Queen of Seuts. Walsingham commended the young Gentleman's Purpose, and was spromised him not only a Licence to travel, but bam cunalfo many and great matters if he perform'd what ningly dehe undertook. Yet did he linger and delay him, ceive the fifting out in the mean time, by his own and Deceiver, other mens Cunning and Diligence, the whole Plot, when they thought that the very Sun was Gifford a ftranger to it: But this he did principally thro; the Control of the C the Discovery of Gilbert Gifford a Priett.

This Gifford was born of a good Family at Chillington in the County of Stafford, not far from Chartley, where the Queen of Sects was Prisoner; and was fent about this time into England by the Fugitives, under the counterfeit Name of Lusen, the is into put Savage in mind of his Vow, and privately trutted to to lurk here as a Messenger to convey Letters convey betwixt them and the Queen of Scots: For fo Letters bedangerous was that Service, that they could draw twist the dangerous was that service, that they could draw what he retired the food fundle, nor the ford fundles and the Lumley, nor the Lord Henry Howard, nor yet golscott. George Shirley, to undertake it.

The l'ugitives, to make trial whether Gifferd would be faithful in the fafe conveying of their Letters, fent at first feveral blank Papers, made up like Letters; which when they found, by the Answers they receiv'd, to have been deliver'd, they then grew more confident of him, and fent frequently other Letters written in Cyphers con-

1586. Ann.29.

the Confpiracy.

ham

cerning their Bufiness. But Gifford, whether 1586 prickt in Conscience, or formerly corrupted with Ann.29 Money, or terrified with Fear, had before this come to Walfingham privately, informed what he was, and to what purpose sent into England, of-fering him his best Service in love to his Prince and Country, and promis'd to impart unto him all the Letters he should receive either from the Fugitives, or from the Queen of Scots. Walfingbam, laying hold on the Opportunity offer'd, entertain'd the Man kindly, fent him into Staf-ford/hire, and wrote to Powlet, that he should connive at the corrupting of one of his Men by Gifford. Powlet, unwilling that any of his own Servants should (as he said) become a Traitor by fuch diffembling, denied it; yet permitted him to corrupt a Brewer or fome fuch Man who dwelt hard by. Gifford with a few pieces of Gold foon corrupted the Brewer, who privately put in the Letters, and receiv'd Answers of them, through an hole in the Wall, which was ftopp'd with a loofe Stone; which Letters forthwith He fends all the Let-came to Walfingham's Hands by Messengers ready tess here on purpose to carry them. Walsingham open d ceives to them, wrote them out, found out the Cyphers Wallingby the fingular Art and Skill of Thomas Philips, and by the direction of Arthur Gregory fealed them ap again fo cunningly, that no Man could ever transcrib'd judge they had been open'd, and so fent them to l and fent as those to whom they were directed by the Superdirected ferriptions. Thus were intercepted those foremention'd Letters of the Queen of Scots to Babington, and his in answer to her, and another of hers to him, wherein was cunningly added (after opening) a Postfeript in the same Characters, defiring him to fet down the Names of the fix Gentlemen, (and it's likely other things too) also the Letters which were written the fame Day and Date to Mendoza the Spanish Ambassador, to Charles Paget, the Lord Paget, the Archbishop of Glascow, and Sir Francis Inglessield; all which were first copied out, and then sent over apprehen-ded,

Rallard

e plexi.

lard's

Policy.

Queen Elizabeth, as foon as the understood by thele Letters that so dreadful a Storm hung over her Head, on the one fide from her own Subjects at home, and the other fide from Strangers abroad, gave Command for the timely suppresfing of the Conspiracy, that Ballard should forth-with be apprehended. Him therefore they seiz'd on before he was aware in Babington's House, at the very Moment when he was ready to fet forward on his Journey for France. Hereupon Ba-Babington bington grew very much troubled and penfive, toffed with a thousand Uncertainties of an unrefolv'd Mind: And while his Thoughts ran now this way now that way, at length he be-took himself to Tichburn, and advis'd with him, what was best to be done. Tichburn's Counsel was, That the Conspirators should forthwith disperse themselves and fly. But Babington thought it the best course to send Savage and Charnock prefently to execute the Murder. But first, that they might get the better access, he thought good to provide Sawage of more handfom and courtly Apparel, and hereof he discoursed with them the same Day in St. Paul's Church. But presently his Mind alter'd, and, concealing the inward Anguith of his troubl'd Breaft, he press'd Walfingham (then absent at Court) by Letters and carnest Intreaties, that he might now at length have his Licence granted to travel into France; and withat folicited him for the delivery of Bal-

He fillicits for Railard, who would be of special Use and Service to him in the Bufiness he had undertaken. Waldelivery walfingfingham feedeth him with fair Promifes from Day to Day. That Bailard was apprehended, he layeth the blame upon Young, that fubtle Discoverer of Papists, and upon the Pursuivants; and, as it ~ were out of Love and Friendship, warneth Babington to beware of that kind of Men : And now Ann.29. he easily perfuades the young Gentleman to lodge in his House at London till the Queen had fign'd his Licence, and till himfelf could return to London, that they might have the more fecret and fecure Conference about Matters of fuch Moment and Confequence, and that there might no Suspicion arise of him amongst the Tugitives when he should come into France, upon account of his frequent repair to his House. In the mean time Sendamore, Walfingham's Man, was contmanded to have a diligent and watchful Eye up- Watchful on him, and to keep him company in all pla- Eye upon ces, under pretence of fecuring him from Pur- Batington fuivants.

Thus far had Walfingham spun this Thread alone, without acquainting the rest of the Queen's Council; and longer he would have drawn it, but the Queen would not fuffer it, Lest (as she faid herfelf) by not heeding and preventing the Dan-ger while she might, she should seem rather to tempt God, than to trust in God. A Note was therefore fent from the Court from Walfingham to his Man, that he should more strictly observe Babington. This Note being unsealed, was deliver'd so to him, that Babington, fitting at the Board next him, read it along with him. Hereupon his Con-He finks science accusing him, and suspecting that all was away. come to light, the next Night, when he and Scudamore, and one or two more of Walfingham's Men had fupped plentifully in a Tavern, he rose from the Board as if he intended to pay the Reckoning, and, leaving his Cloak and Sword behind him, made all the hafte he could in the dark to Westminster, where Gage changed Cloaths with him, who prefently stripped himself again in Charnock's Chamber, and put on Charnock's Cloaths; and immediately they withdrew into the sluck St. John's Wood near the City, whither also Barn-in Woods. well and Dun made their retreat. In the mean time they were publickly proclaim'd Traitors all over England. They were now fain to lurk in Woods and blind Corners; and having in vain tried to borrow Money of the French Ambaffador, and Horfes of Tiebhurn, cut off Babingran's Hair, difguifed and fullied the natural Beauty of his Face with the Rind of green Walnuts; and being hardly put to it by Hunger, they went to an House of the Bellamics near Harrow on the Hill, which Rellamies were furiously bigotted to the Romift. Religion. There were they hid in Barns, there were they fed, and cloached in rude Counfying their publick Joy by ringing of Bells, making Bonfires, and linging of Pfalms; infomuch as the Citizens were highly commended and thanked by the Queen for these Testimonies of their good Assection. The rest of the Conspirators were taken soon The walk after, most of 'em in places near the City; Sa-taken. lubury in Chefter, having his Horfe run through by those that purfu'd him, and with him Trevers, after they had Iwam over the River Wever. Jones was taken in Wales, who, being privy to the de-fign'd Invasion, had conceal'd them in his House after he knew them to be proclaim'd Traitors; and had horfed Salisbury in his Flight, and chan ged Cloaks with his Man, which was a Priest. They dif-Only Windfore was not to be found. Many Days cover all, were spent in examining of them, who cut one and imanothers Throats by their Confessions, and dis- peach one cover'd the whole truth of the business. All this while was the Queen of Scots and her Servants kept by Powlet, with to ftrict a Watch, and fo closely observed, that she was utterly igtry Habit. But the 10th Day after they were They are discover'd and brought to London, the City testi-taken.

Ann. 29. But as foon as these Conspirators were apprehended, Sir Thomas Gorges was fent to give her a brief Account thereof: which News he furprized her with, and that of fet purpose, just as she had Q of Scors taken Horse to ride a hunting. Neither was she led about permitted to return to the place of her Custody, but was led about (under a Shew of doing her Honour) from one Gentleman's House to anoher's, dwelling thereabours. In the mean time, Sir John Maners, Sir Edward Afton, Sir Richard Bagot, and Mr. William Waad, (who was lately fent into those parts, and wholly ignorant of the matter) by Authority granted them under the Queen's Warrant and Letters, committed Name Curle, her and Curle, her two Secretaries, to feveral Keep-Secretaries ers, that they might have no Conference either with one another, or with the Queen. And then breaking open the Doors of her private Clofet, fecured.

Her Cabi- they fent all her Cabinets wherein her Papers nets of were kept, feal'd up with their own Seals, to the papersfent Court. Then Powlet (as he was commanded) to the Q. feiz'd upon all her Money, left the fhould corrupt any body with Bribes, and pass'd his Word for the true reftoring the fame. Her Cabinets being fearch'd before Queen Elizabeth, there were found many Letters from Perfons beyond Sea, as alfo Copies of Letters written to feveral, Breviaries, and about fixty Indexes or Tables of private Cyphers and Characters; Letters also from fome English Noblemen to her, full of Expressions of Love and Respect. Which notwichstanding Queen Elizabeth diffembled and conceal'd in Silence, according to that Motto which she ufed, Video & taceo, that is, I fee, but fay nothing. But they having got some fort of Knowledge thereof, began from that time to flew themfelves deadly Adversaries to the Queen of Scots, lest they might feem to have savour'd her before. Now Gifford, having acted his Part thus far in this Scene, was fent away back into France, as if he had been banish'd hence; but first he lest behind him with the French Ambassador in England, an indented Paper, with Direction that he should deliver the Letters he receiv'd from the Queen of Scots, or from the Fugitives, to no other Perfon but him that should shew the Counterpart thereof; which Counterpart was privily fent by him to Walfingham. This Gifford, being return'd into France, was after fome Months cast into Prison Where he for incontinent and dishonest living; and being det mile withal suspected there of these things, he died milerably, freely confession motor of the Passages already mention'd, which were also found penn'd down in fome Papers he had by him in his Coffers.

Gifford fent back to France.

fpirators

The Con-On the 13th, of September, feven of the Conspirators were arraign'd, confessed themselves arraign'd, guilty, and were condemn'd of High-Treafon. The next day but one after, feven others were in like manner arraign'd, pleaded Not guilty, and fubmitted themfelves to be tried by God and the Country, as the manner is; who were all found guilty out of their own Confessions, and condemn'd. Pollie only of the Number, though he were privy to all the Bufmess, yet because he affirm'd that he had reveal'd feveral things to H'alfingham, was not arraign'd. On the 20th of the fame Month, (a Gallows and a Scaffold being fet up for that purpose in S. Giles's Fields, where they were wont to meet) the first seven were hang'd, cut down, their Privities cut off, their

and executed

Death,

were alive, and their Bodies quarter'd, not without more than ufual Cruelty. Behaviour Ballard, the Arch-plotter and Contriver of this Treaton, eray'd Pardon of God, and of the Q.

Bowels taken out before their Faces, while they norant of all these Occurrences, the they were if so be he had finn d against her. Babington (who commonly known and talk'd of all over England, beheld Ballard's Execution, without being in the beheld Ballard's Execution, without being in the 1586. least daunted, while the rest turn'd away their Ann.29. Faces, and sell to Prayers upon their Knees) ingenuously acknowledg'd his Offence. Being taken down from the Gallows, and now ready to be cut up, he cry'd aloud feveral times in Latin, Parce mibi, Domine Jesu; that is, Spare, or, Forgive me, O Lord Jesus. Savage broke the Rope, and fell down from the Gallows, and was prefently feiz'd on by the Executioner, his Privities cut off, and his Bowels taken out alive. Barnwell extenuated his Crime, upon the account of Religion and Confcience. Tichburne humbly acknowledg'd his Fault, and mov'd the Multitude > faid, be full e'er long in England. The next day, the other feven were drawn to the fame place, and fuffer'd the fame kind of Death; but somewhat more favourably, by the Queen's express Command, who detested the former Cruelty: for they all hung till they were quite dead, before they were cut down and bow-to Pity and Commiseration of his Cafe. As in like manner did Tilney, a Man of a modest Dif-position and comely Personage. Abington, a Man of a turbulent Spirit, fought to terrify them with

Menaces and Threats of Blood which should, he ell'd.

Salisbury was the first, who died very penitent, admonishing the Catholicks not to attempt to reftore Religion by Force and Arms. In like manner did Dun, who next follow'd him. Jones protested that he disturded Sulisbury from the Attempt, and utterly condemn'd Babington's proud and rash Headiness, and the Design for Invasion. Charnock and Travers, having their Minds wholly fix'd on Prayer, recommended themselves to God and the Saints. Gage extoll'd the Queen's great Grace and Bounty to his Father, and de-tefted his own perfidious Ingratitude towards his Princess, to whom he was so deeply engaged. Hierom Bellamy, who had conceal'd Babington, after he was openly proclaim'd Traitor, (whofe Brother was guilty of the fame Crime, and ftrangled himfelf in Prison) with Confusion and deep Silence brought up the Rear.

Thefe being thus executed, Name a Frenchman Queen of and Curle a Scot, who were the Queen of Scots Serts Se-Secretaries, being examin'd about the Letters, cretaries Copies of Letters, Notes and Ciphers, found in examin'd, the Queen's private Clofer, voluntarily acknowledg'd, and fubscribed to it, that the Letters were of their Hand-writing, as they were dictated from the Queen's own Mouth in French to Name, and translated into English by Curle, and so written in Ciphers. Neither did they deny but she had receiv'd Letters from Babington, and that by her Command they had written back to him to the fame purpose as I have before related. Whether sincerity these Secretaries were bribed to confess this, I of their cannot fay: Yet this appears out of fome Let- confession ters, that when Curle about this time claim'd Pro- suspected. mife of Walfingham, Walfingham tax'd him as unmindful of the extraordinary Favour he had done him, and told him he had confefs'd nothing but what he could not deny, because Name his Fellow justify'd it to his l'ace.

Shortly after was Sir Edward Wotton fent into French E France, to inform the King of the whole Ala- inform'd nagement of the Conspiracy, and to show him of all by the Copies of the Letters of the Queen of Scotts Queen. and others, attelled by the Depolitions of certain Noblemen of England, to justify the Truth there-of; that to the French King might fee into what great Dangers the Queen of England had been brought, by the Practices of Morgan, Charles Paget, and others in France.

And

~~ 1586. Ann.29. Different Queen of Scots.

And by

Souts, the Council were of feveral Minds and Opinions. Some thought that no new rigorous Courfe was to be taken with her, but only that flie was to be committed to closer Custody, whattodo because she was not the Author of the Mischief, but only accessary to it; as also because she was fickly, and not like to live long. Others were of Opinion, that for the Security and Prefervation of Religion, she was forthwith to be put to death, and that by Law. Leicester thought rather by Poison, and sent a Divine privately to Walfingham, to fatisfy him that it was lawful. But Walfingham protested he was so far from confenting that any Violence should be done to her, that he had of late crofs'd Morton's Counfel, who advisid that the should be fent back into Scotland, and put to death in the very Frontiers and Bor-ders of both Kingdoms. Then they differ'd in ders of both Kingdoms. what Law their Opinion, by what Law the flould be pro-the flould ceeded against, whether by the Statute of 25 be try'd. Ceeuca againt, whether by the Sattite of 2; Edward III, (whereby he is made guilty of Treefon, who shall compass or imagine the Destruction of the King or Queen, raise War in his or her Kingdom, or addree to his or her Exmins) or by the late Act of 2; Queen Elizabeth, whereof I have made mention before. At length it was carry'd by those who Refolv'd to try her thought she was rather to be try'd by this last by the late Act, as being made for this very purpose and oc-Act of casion, and therefore to be put in execution. To Treason. the end therefore that Process might be made, and Sentence pronounc'd, according to this Act made the last Year, against all fuch as should raife Rebellion, invade the Realm, or attempt any Violence towards the Queen, feveral of the Privy-Council and other Noblemen of England, fioners ap were made Commissioners, by the Queen's Pa-pointed to tent, for her Trial. Whose Names (because it may concern Posterity to know the Rank and Titles of the Noblemen of England) I have thought good to fet down out of the very Original, which runs thus in the ordinary Form of the Commiffion, and Commiffioners Names.

Commif-

try her.

Court. ' Elizabeth, by the Grace of God, of England, France and Ireland, Queen, Defender of the Faith, &c. To the most Reverend Father in Christ, John, Archbishop of Canterbury, Primate and Metropolitan of all England, and one of our Privy-Council; and to our trufty and well-beloved Sir Thomas Bromley Knight, Chancellor of England, and one of our Privy-Council; and allo to our trufty and well-beloved William Lord Burleigh, Lord-Treasurer of England, another of our Privy-Council; and also to our most dear Cousin William Lord Marquess of Winchester, one of the Lords of the Parliament : To our most dear Cousin Edward Earl of Oxford, great Chamberlain of England, another of the Lords of Parliament; and also to our most dear Coulin George Earl of Surewsbury, Earl-Marshal of England, another of our Privy-Council: and to our most dear Cousin Henry Earl of Kent, another of the Lords of the Parliament; and also to our most dear Cousin Henry E. of Derby, another of our Privy-Council; and to our most dear Cousin Edward Earl of Rutland, another of the Lords of the Parliament; and to our most dear Cousin Ambrose Earl of Warwick, Mafter of our Ordinance, another of our Privy-Council; and to our most dear Cousin Henry Earl of Pembroke, another of the Lords of the Parliament; and also to out most dear Cousin Robert Earl of Leicester, ' Mafter of our Horse, another of our Privy-Council; and to our most dear Cousin Henry Earl of Lincoln, another of the Lords of the Parliament; and also to our most dear Cousin Anthony Viscount Montague, another of the

And now, what should be done with the Q. of | Lords of the Parliament : And to our trusty and weil-belov'd (barles Lord Howard, our high Admiral of England, another of our Privy-Council; and to our trufty and well-beloved Henry Lord Hanfdon, our Lord Chamberlain, another of our Privy-Council; and also to our truffy and well-beloved Hinry Lord Abergavenmy, another of the Lords of the Parliament; and to our trusty and well-beloved Edward Lord Zouch, another of the Lords of the Parliament; and also to our trusty and well-beloved Edward Lord Morley, another of the Lords of the Parliament; and to our trufty and well-beloved William Lord Cobham, Lord-Warden of our Cinque-ports, another of our Privy-Council; and also to our trusty and well-beloved Edward Lord Stafford, another of the Lords of the Parliament; and also to cut trusty and well-beloved Arthur Lord Grey of Wilton, another of the Lords of the Parliament; and also to our trufty and well-beloved John Lord Lumley, another of the Lords of the Parliament; and also the Lords of the Parliament; and also the Parliament of the Lords of the Parliament. to to our trufty and well-beloved folin Lord Starten, another of the Lords of the Parliament; and to our truffy and well-beloved Willi. m Lord Sandes, another of the Lords of the Parliament; and also to our trufty and wellbeloved Henry Lord Wentworth, another of the Lords of the Parliament; to our trufty and well-beloved Lewis Lord Mordant, another of the Lords of the Parliament; and to our trusty and well-beloved John Lord Saint-John of Bletnesho, another of the Lords of the Parliament and also to our truity and well-beloved Thomas Lord Buckburft, another of our Privy-Council; and to our trufty and well-beloved Henry Lord Compton, another of the Lords of the Parliament; and also to our trufty and wen-beloved Henry Lord Chenry, another of the Lords of the Parliament: To our trufty and beloved Sir Frencis Knelles Knight, Treafurer of our Houfhold, another of our Privy Louncil; and alfo to our trufty and beloved Sir James Croftes Knight, Comptroller of our faid Houshold, another of our Privy-Council; and to our trufty and beloved Sir Christopher Hatten Knight, our Vice-Chamberlain, another of our Privy-Council; and also to our trusty and beloved Sir Francis Walfingham Knight, one of our principal S cretaries, another of our Privy-Council; and also to our trufty and beloved William Dawifin Esquire, another of our principal Secretaries, and of our Priny-Council; and also to our trutty and betoved Sir Ralph Sadler Knight, Chance for of our Duchy of Lancafter, another of our Privy-Council; and also to our trusty and beloved Sir Walter A'ildmay Knight, Chancellor of our Exchequer, another of our Privy-Council; and to our truity and beloved Sir zimias Powlet Knight, Captain of our Ille of ferfey, another of our Privy-Council; and to our trufty and beloved John Volley Efquire, our Secretary for the Latin Tongue, another of our Privy-Council: And alto to our trufty and beloved Sir Christopher Wray Knight, Chief Jetticer affign'd for the Pieas to be holden before us; and to our trufty and beloved Sir Elmand Anderson Knight, our Chief Jutlicer of Bench; Sir Roger Manwood Knight, ou chief Baron of our Exchaquer; Sir Thomas Gawdy knight, one of our Justicers affignd for the Pleas to be holden before us; and William Periam, one of our Justicers of the Bench, Greeting, &c. Then (not to write it all down verbatim) after the Recital of the Act made the last Year, thus it follows: Whereas fince the end of the Seffion of Parliament, viz. fince the ' first day of June, in the Twenty seventh Year of our Reign, divers things have been com-1506. pass'd and imagin'd, tending to the Hurt of Ann. 29) our Royal Person, as well by Mary Daughter and Heir of James V. King of Scots, and commonly call'd Queen of Scots, and Dowager of France, pretending a Title to the Crown of this Realm of England, as by divers other Persons, with the Privity of the said Mary, as we are given to understand; And whereas we do intend and refolve, that the aforefaid Act shall be in all and every part thereof duly and effectually put in Execution, according to the Tenor of the same, and that all Offences above said, in the Act above faid mention'd, as afore is faid, and the Circumstances of the same, shall be examin'd, and Sentence or Judgment thereupon given, according to the Tenor and Effect of the faid Act: To you, and the greater part of you. we do give full and absolute Power, Licence and Authority, according to the Tenor of the faid Act, to examine all and fingular matters computed and imagin'd, tending to the Hurt of our Royal Person, as well by the a-foresaid Mary, as by any other Person or Perfons whatfoever, with the Privity of the faid Mary, and all Circumstances of the same, and other Offences whatfoever abovefaid, in the Act abovefuid (as afore is faid) mention'd, and Act above his da and estated intending and all Circumstances of the same, and of every of them; And thereupon, according to the Tenor of the Act aforefaid, to give Sentence or Judgment, as upon good Proof the Matter thall appear to you. And therefore we com-" mand you, that you do at fuch certain days and places, which you or the greater part of you fhall for that purpose set and agree upon, diligently proceed upon the Premittes, in form a-forefaid, &c.

The greatest part of these Commissioners met on the 11th of October, at Fotheringhay-Caftle in Fotherin- the County of Northampton, feated upon the Bank gg-Caffe, of the River Nen, where the Queen of Scots was then in Cuthody. The next day the Commissioners sent to her Sir Walter Mildmay, Powlet and Edward Barker Publick-Notary, who deliver'd into her Hands Queen Elizabeth's Letters: which when she had read, with a Countenance becoming her Royal Dignity, and with a quiet and fe-Queen of date Mind, she thus deliver'd herself: It grieves to the Queen's

They

Scots an- ' me much that the Queen, my most dear Sifter, fwers ex- ' is mis-inform'd of me; and that I, after fo ma-'ny Years close Confinement in Prison, and my being grown lame in my Limbs, have lain wholly neglected, tho I have offer of o many reasonable Conditions for my Liberty. Tho I have given her full and faithful Notice of se-' veral Dangers that threatend, yet has no Credit been given to me, but I have been flill contemn'd and flighted, tho I be fo nearly ally'd to her in Blood. When the Affociation was enter'd into, and the Act of Parliament made thereupon, I forefaw that whatfoever Danger ' should happen, cither from forein Princes abroad, or from ill-disposed People at home, or for Religions fake, I must bear all the Blame, having to many mortal Enemies in the Court. Certainly I might take it very ill, and that not without just Reason, that a League has been lately made with my Son, without my Know-Jodge or Privity: But fuch matters I omit. As for this Letter, it feems thange to me, that the Queen thould command me as a Subject, to fundit myfelt to a Trial. I am an abfolute * Queen, and will do nothing which may be prejudicial either to Royal Majesty, or to other Princes of his Place and Rank or my Son. Why would be not yet fo für dejected, neither will brains or link under this my C damity. I refer myfelf to what I have formerly protested e before Bromley, now Chancellor, and the Lord 1586.

La-ware. The Laws and Statutes of England Ann.29. are to me altogether unknown; I am destitute of Counfellors; and who shall be my Peurs I cannot tell. My Papers and Notes are taken from me, and no Man dares appear to be my Advocate. I am clear from being guilty of any thing against the Queen, I have stirr'd up no Man against her, and am not to be charg'd bur upon my own Words or Writings, which I am ' fure cannot be produced against me. Yet can 'I not deny, but I have recommended myfelf ' and my Condition to forein Princes.

The next day Powlet and Barker return'd to her from the Commissioners, to let her know, that this Answer of hers was put in Writing, and to ask her, Whether she would own it, and stand to When she had heard it distinctly read, she acknowledg'd to be rightly and truly taken, and faid she would stand to it. 'But this (faid she) 'I have quite forgotten, which I would now have She adds to be added. Whereas the Queen writes that I to her am subject to the Laws of England, and to be Answer. ' try'd and judg'd by them, because I have liv'd under the Protection of them; I answer, that I came into England to crave her Aid and Assistance of the Aid and Aid an stance, and have been ever fince detain'd in Prison, so that I could not enjoy the Protection ' or Benefit of the Laws of England; nay, I could ' never yet understand from any Man what man-' ner of Laws those were.

chofen and deputed from amongst the rest of the Commissioners, together with Men learned in the Civil and Canon-Law. The Lord-Chancel- commif-

In the Afternoon came to her fome that were lor and the Lord-Treasurer justify'd their Atho- fioners adrity, by their Patent and Commission, and shew d vile her to that neither her Imprisonment nor her Prerogather Trial, tive of Royal Majesty could exempt her from answering in this Kingdom, with fair Words advising her to hear what should be objected aadvining her to near what mound be objected angainft her; otherwise they threaten'd, that by Authority of the Law they both could and would proceed againft her, tho she were absent. She answer'd, 'That she was no Subject, and rather she refer than account the she was th would fhe die a thousand Deaths than acknow- fuses. ledge herfelf a Subject, confidering that by fuch an Acknowledgment file should both wrong the Sublimity of Regal Majetty, and withal confess herfelf to be bound by all the Laws of 'England, even in matter of Religion. Never-theless she was ready to answer all things in a free and full Parliament: as for this Meeting ' and Affembly, it was (for ought fhe knew) de-' vifed against her being already condemn'd and ' forejudg'd to die) purpofely to give fome Shew and Colour of a just and legal Proceeding. She ' warn'd them therefore to look to their Confciences, and to remember that the Theater of ' the whole World is much wider than the King-'dom of England. Then the began to complain of the Injuries done her. But the Lord-Treafurer, interrupting her, began to reckon up Queen Elizabeth's Kindnesses towards her: namely, That the had punished divers who had opposed and deny'd her Title to the Crown of England; and had been a means to keep her from being condemn'd by the Estates of the Realm, for endea-vouring Marriage with the Duke of Norpik, for vouring Marriage with the Duke of the Rebellion in the North, and feveral other matters. All which when the feem'd to make little Efteen and Account of, they return d back to the reft of their Iellow-Commission oners. Within few Hours after they fent her by Fox let and the Solicitor the Contents of their Commillion, and the Names of the Commillioners that the might fee they were to proceed accord-

1586. Ann. 29.

1586 ing to Equity and Reason, and not upon any Ann. 29 cunning Niceties of Law, or take any extraordinary Courfe. She took no Exception against the Excepts gainft the Committioners, but objected strongly against the new Law, late-made Law, upon which the Authority of their Commission folely depended; as, that it was unjuit, devised of purpose against her, that it was without Example, and fuch whereunto the would never subject herself. She asked by what Law they intended to proceed? If by the Civil or Canon-Law, then (faid fine) you must fend for Interpreters of it from Pavia or Poictiers, or fome other forein University, for in England are none to be found fit for it. She added also, That it was manifest by the plain Words of the Queen's Letters, that the was already fore-judg'd to be guilty of the Crime, before the was heard; and therefore there was no reason why she should appear before them. She farther requir'd to be fatisfy'd touching some Scruples she had concerning feveral things in those Letters, which she had for her own Satisfaction confusedly and in hafte raken Notice of, but would not deliver them in Writing: For it flood not (fhe faid) with her Royal Dignity to play the Scri-

Touching this Matter, the formerly-deputed

Commissioners were fent unto her again; whom fhe told, that fhe did not well understand what those Words meant, Seeing she is under the Queen's Protection. The Lord-Chancellor answer'd, That it was plain to every one that understood any thing; yet was it not for Subjects to interpret what the Queen meaning was, neither were they Commissioners for that rend and purpose. Then the requir'd to have her Protestation, which she had formerly made, shewed and allowed. It was answer'd, That it had never been, nor now could be, allow'd, because it was prejudicial to the Crown of England. She asked by what Authority they would proceed? It was answer'd, By Authority of their Commission, and by the Common-Law of England. But (said she) ye make Laws at your pleasure, whereunto I have no rea-son to submit myself, considering that the English in times past resused to submit themselves to the Salick Authority and Law times pay regard to facini two would proceed by the Common Low of England, they would proceed by the Common Low of England, they flound produce Prefi-dents and like Coffer, frashmuch as that Law confifted much of Cafes and Custom. And if by the Canon Law, none else ought to interpret the same but the makers thereof. It was answer'd, That that they would prothereo. It was answer d, Ibst that they would pro-ceed neither by the Civil nor Canno Law, but by the Common Law of England: That it might neverthe-lefs be proved both by the Civil and Canon Law, that fle ought to appear before them, if the would not refufe to hear it. And indeed she refused not to hear it, provided (as she said) it were by way of Interlo-cution and Discourse, not Judicially.

After that the fell into other Difcourfes: 'That ' she never had any Thoughts tending to the Destruction of the Queen: That she had been provoked and incensed with several injuries and Indignities: That she should be a Stone of Offence to others, if the were fo unworthily handl'd: That by Nawe the had offer'd her best Affistance for revoking the Pope's Bull: That she would have justified her Innocency ' by Letters, but she was not allow'd to do it: And finally, That all the Offices of Kindness and Good-will which she had tender'd these ' twenty Years, had been rejected and flighted. While five thus wander'd from the Business by these Digressions, they recall'd her back, and prayed her to fpeak plainly, whether she would answer before the Commillioners, or not? She fion was founded upon a late Law made to in-trap her: That fhe could by no means away with the Queen's Laws, which the had good reason to suspect: That the had still a good Heart full of Courage, and would not derogate from her Progenitors the Kings of Scot-Land, by owning herfelf a Subject to the Crown of England; for this were nothing elle but openly to confess them to have been Rebels and Traitors. Yet the refused not to answer, provided the were not reduc'd to the Rank of a Subject. But the had rather atterly perifh than to answer as a criminal Person.

Elizabeth, answer'd: You are accus'd (but not per unless condemn'd) to have conspir'd the Destruction her to it. of our Lady and Queen anointed. You fay you are a Queen: Be it so: However in such a Crime as this, the Royal Dignity itless is not exempted from antwering, neither by the Civil or Canon Law, nor by the Law of Nitions, nor of Nature. For if fuch kind of Offences might be committed without punishment, all Justice would stagger, yea fall to the Ground. If you be Innocent, you wrong your Reputation in avoiding Trial. You protest yourself to be Innocent, but Q. Elizabeth thinketh otherwise, and that not without good Ground, and is heartily forry for the fame. To examine therefore your Innocency, the hath appointed Commissioners, honorable Perfons, prudent and upright Men, who are ready to hear you according to Equity and Fayour, and will rejoice with all their Hearts if you shall clear yourself of what you are charg'd with. Believe me, the Queen herfelf will be transported with Joy, who affirm'd unto me at my coming from her, that never any thing befel her that troubl'd her more, than that you should be charg'd with such Middemeanors. Wherefore laying aside the fruitsess claim of Privilege from your Royal Dignity, which now can be of no use unto you, appear to your Trial, and shew your Innocency; less by avoiding Trial you draw upon yourfelf a Sufpicion, and stain your Reputation with an eternal Blot and Afpertion. I refuse not (faid she) to answer in a full Par- she stands liament before the States of the Realm lawful- out, ly affembl'd, provided I may be declar'd the next in Succession; yea before the Queen and her Council, fo that my Protestation may be admitted, and I may be acknowledg'd the next of Kin to the Queen. To the Judgment of mine Advertaries, with whom I know all Defence of mine Innocency will fignific nothing, I will by no means fubmit myfelf. The Lord-Chancellor ask'd her, Whether she would answer, if her Protestation were admitted? I will never (faid she) submit myself to the late Law mention'd in the Commission. Hereupon the Lord-Treasurer concluded, 'We notwithstanding will proceed in the Cause to Morrow, tho you be absent and continue refractory. Examine your Consciences, (faid she) be tender of your Honour; God reward you and yours according to your fudgment upon me.

On the Morrow, which was the 14th of the Month, she sent for certain of the Commissioners, and pray'd 'em that her Protestation might be admitted and allowed. The Lord-Treasurer ask'd her, Whether she would appear to her Trial, if her Protestation were only received and entred in Writing, without Allowance? She yielded at last, but with much ado and an ill sheirconwill, left fhe should seem (as the faid) to dero- ent to gate from her Predecessors or Successors; but appear, was very desirous to clear herself of the Crimes objected against her, being persuaded by Hatten's Vol. II. Uuu Reafons,

She fcruples fome things in Letters.

She requi es to have her Protelta. tion admitted. She asks they'd

Jullifica herfelf.

al pear.

Reafons, which she had seriously weighed and 1586. confidered.

Court.

Soon after those Commissioners that were there affembl'd themselves in the Presence-Chamber.

Tre form affembl'd themselves in the Presence-Chamber was placed a ci Session At the upper end of the Chamber was placed a Chair of State for the Queen of England under a Canopy of State. Overagainst it, below and at fome diftance, near the Transome or Beam that ran crofs the Room, stood a Chair for the Queen of Scots. By the Walls on both fides were placed Benches, upon which fare, on the one fide the Lord-Chancellor of England, the Lord-Treasurer of England, the Lords of Oxford, Kent, Derby, Wor-cefter, Rutland, Cumberland, Warwick, Pembroke, Lincoln, and the Lord Viscount Montacute: On the other fide, the Barons Abergavenny, Zouch, Morley, Stafford, Grey, Lumley, Stourton, Sandes, Wentworth, Mordant, Saint-John of Bletneshoe, Compton and Chemps. Nigh unto thele fate the Knights that were of the Privy-Council, Sir James a Corfies, Sir Chriffopher Hatton, Sir Francis Walfingham, Sir Raiph Sadleir, Sir Walter wildang, and Sir Amias Powlet. Right before the Earls fat the two Chief-Juftices, and the Chief-Baron of the Exchequer; and on the other fide two Barons, the other Justices, Dale and Ford Doctors of the Civil Law: And at a little Table in the midst far Pophum the Queen's Attorney, Egerton the Queen's Solicitor, Gandy the Queen's Serjeant at Law, the Clerk of the Crown, and two

The ord-

When she was come in, and had placed her-Chancel- felf on her Seat, after Silence commanded, Bromforsspeech ley Lord-Chancellor, turning towards her, spake to her. briefly to this effect: The most Serene Queen Elizabeth being inform'd (not without great Grief and Trouboth being informal (not without great Grief and Trou-ble to her Mind) that you have confir at he Defivution of her Person and the Realm of England, and the Subversion of Religion, bath according to her Phice and Duty, less the might seem to neglect God, Herself and her People, and out of no Malice of Heart at all, ap-pointed these Commissioners to hear the Matters which shall be objected against you, and how you can clear yourself of them, and make your Innocency appear to the

Her Pro-

She then rose up, and faid, 'That she came into England to crave the Aid which had been promis'd her, and yet had she been ever since detain'd in Prison. She protested, that she was no Subject of the Queen's, but had been, and was, a free and absolute Queen, not to be constrain'd to appear before Commissioners, or any other Judge whatfoever, for any Caufe whatloever, but before God alone, the highest Judge; left the should derogate from her own Royal Majethy, the King of Seats her Son, her Successors, and other absolute Princes. Yer that the now appear'd personally, to resute and wipe off the Crimes objected against her. And hereof she prayed her own Attendants to bear witness.

The anfw.

The Lord-Chancellor, not acknowledging that any Aid had been promis'd her, answer'd, That this Protestation was in vain, for whosoever (of what Place, Quality and Degree soever he be) should offend against the Laws of England in England, he was subject to the said Laws, and was to be examined and tried by the late Act. The said Protestation therefore, being made in derogation of the Laws and Queen of England, was not to be admitted. The Commissioners nevertheless commanded, that as well her Protestation, as the Lord-Chancellor's Anfwer, should be recorded.

Her Prorecorded.

After the Commission was openly read, which was grounded upon the Act fo often already mention'd, she boldly and resolutely offer'd her Progainst the testation against the said Act, as made directly and purposely against herself; and herein she appeal'd to their own Consciences.

When answer was made by the Lord-Treasurer, 'That every Person in the Kingdon was 1586. bound by the Laws, tho' never fo lately made, Ann. 29. and that the ought not to speak against the The answ.; and that the Commissioners were refolv'd to proceed according to that Law, what Protestations or Appeals soever she interposed: She sub-She said at length, That she was ready to bear and missoher answer touching any Fast whatsoever committed against trial. the Queen of England.

Gandy now opening the Statute from Point to Process, Point, affirming that she had offended against the same; and hereupon he made an hittorical Discourse of Behington's Conspiracy, and concluded, That she knew of it, approved it, assented it, promited her Assistance, and show'd the way and means for effecting it.

She answer'd with a ftout Courage, ' That she deknew not Babington: That the never received neis what any Letters from him, nor wrote any to him: objected. That the never plotted the Destruction of the Queen; and that to prove any fuch thing, her Subscription under her own Hand ought to produc'd: That for her part she never so much as heard a word thereof: That she knew not Ballard, nor ever reliev'd him: But understanding by some that the Catholicks in England took many things very hardly, she had adver-tis'd the Queen by Letters of it, and befought her to take Pity on them: That divers who were utterly unknown to her had offer'd her their Help and Affiftance, yet had she excited or encouraged no Man to any unlawful Artempt; and being shut up in Prison, she could neither know nor hinder what they went

Hereupon it was urg'd out of Babington's Con-fession, That there had been intercourse of Letters betwixt her and Babington. She confes'd that there had paffed Letters betwixt her and many Men, yet could it not be thence gather'd that the was privy to all their wicked Defigns. She requir'd that her Superscription under her own Hand might be produc'd; and ask'd what hurt it were for her to demand the Letters again which had been kept from her almost a whole Year. Then were read the Copies of Babington's Letters to her, wherein the whole Conspiracy was contain'd.

As for these Letters (faid she) it may be that Babington wrote them, but let it be prov'd that I received them. If Bubington or any other affirm it, I say plainly, they lye. Other Mens Faults are not to be thrown upon me. A Packet of Letters which had been kept from me almost a whole Year, came to my Hands about that time, but by whom it was sent I know

To prove that she had receiv'd Babington's Letters, there were read out of Rabington's Confession the chief Heads of certain Letters which he had voluntarily confess'd that she had wrote back to him. Wherein when mention was made of the Earl of Arundel and his Brothers, and the Earl of Northumberland, the Tears burft forth, and she faid, Alas! what hath that noble House of the Howards endur'd for my fake? And prefently, having wiped away the Tears, she answer'd, That Bahaving bington might confess what he lift, but 'twas a flat Lye that she had contrived any such means to escape: That her Adversaries might easily get Ciphers which she her Adversaries might easily get Cippers who to be bad made use of to others, and with the same write many things forgedly and fally: That it was not likely she should make use of Arundel's Help, when she knew to be shut up in Prifors; or Northumberland's, who was so very young, and so her altogether unknown.

There were read also feveral things pick'd out of Savage's and Ballard's Confessions, who had onfessed that Babington communicated to them 1586. feveral Letters which he had received from the Ann. 29. Queen of Scots.

She affirm'd, 'That Babington receiv'd none from her; nay, that fine was very angry and offended with some who had secretly given her Advice concerning the invading of England, and had charg'd them to beware what they did.

Next was produced a Letter wherein Babingten's Plot was commended and approved. Here-of fhe defir'd a Copy, and affirm'd, 'That it came not from her, but haply might be written by her Alphabet of Ciphers in France. That fhe had used her best Endeavours for the recovery of her Liberty, as very Nature itself al-lows and dictates, and had folicited her Friends to get her Deliverance; yet to some, whom fhe lifted not to name, when they offer'd her their Help for her Delivery, she gave not the least Answer. Nevertheless she had a great desire to divert the ftorm of Perfecution from the Catholicks, and for this she had been an earnest Suitor to the Queen. For her part, fhe would not purchase the Kingdom with the Death of the meanest ordinary Man, much less of the Queen. That there were many which attempted dangerous Defigns withouther knowledge; and by a Letter which she had very lately received, she was ask'd pardon by some if they should enterprize any thing without her privi-ty. That it was an easie matter to counter-feit the Ciphers and Characters of others; as a young Man did very lately in France, who gave himself out to be her Son's base Brother. That she was also asraid this was done by Walfinghem, to bring her to her End, who (as she heard) had practis'd both against her Life and her Son's. She protested that she never so much as thought of the Destruction of the Queen: That she would gladly and freely rather lose her own Life, than that the Catholicks should be so afflicted and persecuted in Harred of her, and undergo so heavy Punishments for her sake. And here the Tears gushed forth abun-

But (faid the Lord-Treasurer) no Man that hath shewed bimself a good Subject, was ever put to death for his Religion: Some indeed have been for Treason, while they maintained and awached the Pope's Bull and Authority against the Queen. Tet I (laid she) have heard otherwise, and have read it also in Rooks fet forth in print. The Authors (replied he) of such Books as those write also that the Queen hath forfeited her Royal Dignity.

Walfingham, who found himfelf just before so openly taxed by her, took this Opportunity, and rifing up, protefted that his Heart was free from all Malice. I call God (faid he) to witness, that as a private Person I have done nothing unbeseeming an honest Man; neither in my publick Condition and Quaboneft Man; seether in my puotice Conatton and Sun-lity have I done any thing unworthy of my Place. I confest that, cut of my great Care for the Safety of the Queen and Realm, I have curionly endeavourd to fearch and fift out all Plots and Designs against the same. If Ballard had offer'd me his Assistance, I should not have refue'd it, yea I would have rewarded him for his P.iins and Service. If I have tamper'd any thing with him, why did be not discover it to save his

With this Answer (she said) she was satisfied. She prayed him ' not to be angry that she had spoken fo freely what fhe had heard reported; and that he would give no more credit to those that flander'd her, than the did to fuch as accus'd him. Spies (fine faid) were Men of doubtful and little Credit, who make flew of one thing, would not in the ican seneve that ever in had confenced to the user's Dettruction. And 1586. now again fibe burst forth into lears; I would Ann. over (filed fibe) make Shipwreak of my Soul, by configuring the Destruction of my dearest that the unique of the configuration of my dearest than the unique of the configuration of my dearest than the unique of the configuration of my dearest than the unique of the configuration of the c Sifter. It was answer'd by the Lawyers, that this should soon be proved by Witness . far in the Forenoon.

In the Afternoon, to prove this, was openly After produced the Copy of a Letter which barles or and Carle one of her owners a P. Paget had written, and Curle one of her own > cretaries tellified she land receiv'd, concern. Conference betwixt Mendoza and Ballard as the Defign for invading of implant, and fett ther at Liberty. This (she said) was nature to the the purple, and provided not that she had conferred to the Destruction of the Queen.

The Lawyers proceeded to prove farther, That she was both privy to the Conspiracy, and also actually conspir'd the Destruction of the Queen; and that by Bibington's Confession, and Bibington's by Letters that had passed between the rand lim, contains wherein he had call'd her his mess Dread and sever-setters. reign Lady and Queen. And by the way they took to her. Kingdom of England to the Spaniard fels'd that a Pricit came to her and faid, That if Her answson both should be excluded from the Institute. But the Prieft's Name she would not real. She added, That the Spaniard did Ly Claim to the Kingdon: of England, and would give place to no Title but

Then they press'd her with the Testimonies of Her See her Secretaries, Name and Curle, out of Babing-or ton's Confession, and the Letters and Answe's fe betwixt her and Babington; the entire credit of nies. which Proofs rested upon their fole Testimony, yet were rhey never brought face to face. 'Curle Sheeste' fhe acknowledg'd to be an honeft Man, but untra not a competent Witness against her. As for there cres Name, he had been for fome time a Secretary d.t. (she faid) to the Cardinal of Lorain, and recomor Fear, to give a falfe Testimony, for he had feveral times taken rash Oaths; and Curle was fo pliable to him, that at his beck he would write whatfoever he bad him. It might be (she faid) that these two might insert some things into her Letters which she never dictated to them: It might be also that such Letters came to their Hands, which notwithstand-ing she might never see. And then she brake forth into fuch Expressions as these: 'As well the Majesty as the Sasety of all Princes must fall to the Ground, if they depend upon the Writings and Teflimonies of Secretaries. I dicated nothing to them but what Nature prompted me to, that I might at last recover my Liberty. And I am not to be convicted but by mine own Words or Hand-writing. If they have written any thing prejudicial to the Queen my Sister, they have written it altogether without my knowledge, and let them bear the punishment of their inconsiderate Boldness. Sure I am, if they were here prefent, they would clear me of all blame in this case. And,

' if my Notes were in my Hands, I could answer particularly to these things. Whilft she was thus speaking, the Lord-Trea-furer charg'd her, that she had attentions to fend about her Son into Spain, and to convey her Title and conveying Claim in the Kingdom of England to the Sp.iniard. the Kingflander'd her, than file did to fuch as accus'd to him. Spies (file fail) were Men of doubtful diffuse of or convey; yet was it lawful fer her to give there and not to the fail and little Credit, who make thew of one thing, these things which were hers at her pleasure, and not to the and fipcak another; and desir'd him, That he to be accountable to any for what she tall.

Vol. II. U u u 2 When

She taxes Walfingbam.

Dities the Catholicks

walfing bam defends himfelf.

And

reforts

ters fent

with a complaint

When her Alphabets of Ciphers, which were 1586. fent over to Babington, the Lord Lodowick and Ann. 29. Fernibush, were objected to her out of Curle's Testimony; 'She denied not but she had written out many, and amongst others that for the Lord Lodowick, when she had recommended Ciphera the fent beyondhim and another to the Dignity of Cardinal, Her answ. and that (fhe trusted) without offence; fince it was as lawful for her to hold Correspondence by Letters, and to negotiate her Concernments with Men of her Religion, as for the Queen > gion. Then they again urged her closer with the Testimonies of N. we and Curle, which agreed to-gether. And she return'd her former Answers, or else contradicted their Testimonies by a star Denial; protefting again that she neither knew to do it with the Professors of another Reli-

Babington nor Ballard.

The Lord-Treasurer here saying, that she knew Morgen well enough, who had sent Parry over privately to murder the Queen, and that the had align d him a yearly Pension; the replied, That she know not whether Morgan bad so done, but Ow: sher the knew that Morgan had loft all for her fake, and allowing a Pention toMogan for was not bound to revenge an Injury done to the Queen by a Friend that had deserved for well at her hands : However she had endeavour'd to deter him from any such wicked Attempts. On the other fide, (faid she) I am fure Pensions have been allow'd in England to Pa-Penfions trick Gray and other Scots, Enemies both to myself and to my Son. The Lord-Treasurer answer'd: the Scots.

When the Revenues of the Kingdoms of Scot-land were by the Negligence of the Regents " much diminish'd and impair'd, the Queen conferr'd fomewhat out of her noble Bounty upon your Son the King, her near Kinfman.

Answers Afterwards were produced the principal Heads about Let of feveral Letters fent to Inglefield, to the Lord Paget, and to Bernardine de Mendoza, about forcin Affiftance. But when she had answer'd, That these things tended not to the Destruction of the Queen; to Paget, and if Fereiners endeavour d to let her at Liberty, it was not to be laid to her charge; and that she had several times plainly let the Queen know that she would seek to procure her own Releasment; the matter was put off till the next day following.

The next Day she insisted upon her former She pro-Protestation, and requir'd to have it recorded, tells again and a Copy thereof deliver'd to her; lamenting, That those so reasonable Conditions which she had many times propounded to the Queen were ftill rejected, even then when she promised to deliver her Son and the Duke of Guise's Son for ' Hostages, that the Queen or Kingdom of England should receive no Prejudice nor Detriment by her; by which she then saw herself quite out of all hope of obtaining her Liberty. But now she was most unworthily dealt withal, whilst her Honour and Reputation was called in question before ordinary Lawyers, who by wrefted Conclusions drew every Circumstance into a Confequence; whereas Princes anointed and confecrated are not subject to the same Laws that private Men are. Moreover, whereas the Power granted to the Commissioners was, to examine Matters tending to the Hurt of the Queen's Person; the Cause was now so handled, and Letters io wrested, that the Religion which the profess'd, the Immunity and Majesty of forein Princes, and the private Intercourse betwixt Princes, were called in question, and she herself made to stoop and descend beneath her Royal Dignity, and to appear as a Crimiand before a Tribunal-feat; and all this to no other purpose, but that she might be quite excluded from the Queen's Favour, and her own right to the Succession; whereas she only made 1586. a voluntary Appearance, to clear herfelf of the 1586. Matters objected against her, left she might similar feem to neglect the Justification of her own Honour and Innocency. She called also to their minds, how Queen Elizabeth herself was formerly brought into question about Wiat's Conspiracy, whereof notwithstanding she was perfectly Innocent; religiously affirming, That the fine wished with all her Heart the Safety of the Catholicks might be provided for, yet the defir'd not that it should be brought to pass by the Death and Blood, tho' but of one Man. For her part, she had rather act the Part of Hester than of Judish; make Intercession to God for the People, than deprive the meanest of the People of his Life. She expostulated; That her Enemies had divulged abroad that fhe was Irreligious. But time was (faid she) when I would have been instructed in the Protestant Religion, but some would not suffer me to be so, as if they cared not what became of my Soul. And now concluding; When ye have done all ye can (faid she) against me, and have excluded me from my Right, ye may chance fail of your Hope and Expectation. And withal making her Appeal to God, and to Appeals the Princes who were her Kinfmen, and again and prorenewing her Protestation, she prayed that there tests again might be another meeting about this Matter, and that an Advocate might be allow'd her to plead her Caufe, and that, feeing fhe was a Princefs, fhe might be believ'd upon the Word of a Prin-For it were extreme Folly (she faid) to fland to their Judgment whom she saw so evidently and notoriously to be arm'd with Prejudice against her.

To this the Lord-Treasurer answer'd: 'Where-Burghley's as I bear a double Person and Quality, one of answer.

a Commissioner, the other of a Counsellor, hear me first a few Words as I am a Commissioner. Your Protestation is recorded, and a Copy thereof shall be deliver'd you. Our Authority is granted us under the Queen's Hand and the Great Seal of England, from which there lies no Appeal. Neither do we come with Prejudice, but to judge according to the exact Rule of Justice. The Queen's learned Council do aim at nothing elfe but that the Truth may come to light how far you have offended against the Queen's Person. Full Power is given us to hear and examine the Matter, altho' you were absent; yet were we desirous you should be present, lest we might seem to have derogated from your Honour. We purposed not to charge you with any thing elte but what you were privy to, or have yourfelf attempted, against the Queen's Person. The Letters which have been read, were read to no other purpose, but to make out your Ot-Things relating to it, which are fo interlaced with other Matters, that they cannot be fever'd. The whole and entire Letters therefore, and not parcels picked out here and there, have been openly read, because the Circumstances do make appear what Things you dealt with Babington about.

Here the interrupted him, and faid, 'The She inter-Circumstances might be proved, but never the rup's him. Fact. That her Integrity depended not upon the Credit and Memory of her Secretaries, tho' flee knew 'em to be honeft and fincere Men. Yet if they had confest'd any thing out of fear of Torments, or hope of Reward and Impunity, it was not to be admitted, and that for just Reasons, which she would shew elsewhere. Mens Minds (she faid) are variously ' moved mov'd and led with Affections: and those Men would never have confess'd fuch things against her, but for their own Advantage or Hopes. Letters may be directed to others than those to whom they are written, and many things have ' been often inferted which she never dictated. 'If her Papers had not been taken away, and he had her Secretary with her, she could the eafilier confute the things objected against

1,35. 6 Ann. 29. 6

He proceeds.

But nothing (faid the Lord-Treasurer) shall be objected but fince the 19th. day of June: neither weard your Papers do you any good, feeing your Secretaries, and Babington himfelf, without putting to the Rack, have affirm d that you fent those Letters to Babington: which though you deny, yet whether more Credit be to be given to an Affirmation than to a Negation, let the Commissioners judge. But to return to the Matter: Committioners tange. But to return to the victors. This which follows I speak to you as a Counsillor. Miny things you have propounded time after time concerning your Liberty. That they have fail do succelt, in it long of you, or of the Scots, and not of the Queen. For the Lords of Scotland staty results to deliver the King in Hosage. And when the list Treaty was hollow. den concerning your Liberty, Parry was fent privately by Morgan, a Dependent of yours, to murder the Qucen.

Ab! (faid she) you are my Adversary. Yea, (said he) I am Adversary to all Queen Elizabeth's Adver-saries. But enough of these things: let us now proceed to Proofs. Which when the refused to hear; Yet we (faid he) will hear them. And I also (faid she) will bear them in another place, and defend myself.

Now were her Letters to Charles Paget read a-

Her letters again pro- gain, wherein she shew'd him that there was no other way for the Spaniard to reduce the Nether-landers to Obedience, but by fetting up fuch a Prince in England, as might be useful and serviceable to him : also her Letters to the Lord Paget, to hasten his auxiliary Forces for the Invation of England; and Cardinal Allen's Letter, wherein he call'd her his mift dread Sovereign Lady and told her that the Buineis was recommended to the Prince of Parma's Care.

the interpoics.

doced

As these Letters were reading, she interposed the following Expressions. 'That Babington and · her Secretaries had accused her, to excuse them-That the never heard of the Six Murderers; and that all the rest was nothing to the purpole. As for Allen, the held him for a reverend Prelate; and she acknowledg'd no other Head of the Church but the Bishop of Rome. . In what Rank and Quality the was had and reputed by him and forein Princes, she well knew; neither could she hinder it, if in their Letters impairs the Credit is they call'd her Queen of England. As for her the Credit Secretaries, feeing they had done contrary to of her Se- their Duty and Allegiance sworn to her, they cretaries. deferv'd no Credit. deferv'd no Credit. They who have once for-fworn themselves, tho' they swear the next time with never fo ferious Oaths and Protestations, ' are not to be credited. Neither did these Men think themselves bound by any Oath whatsoever in Court of Conscience, inasmuch as they had fworn Fidelity and Secrecy to her before, and were no Subjects of England. That Nave had many times written otherwife than she had dictated to him, and Curle wrote whatfoever ' Name bade him. But, for her part, she was willing to bear the Blame of their Miscarriage, in all things but what might lay a Blot and Stain upon her Honour. And haply also they confess'd these things to save themselves, suppofing that they could do her no Hurt by confelling, who they thought would be more fa-' vourably dealt withal, as being a Queen.

for Ballard, the never heard of any fuch Man, but of one Hallard, who had offer'd her his Service; which notwithstanding she refused, be-

Service to Walfingtom.
Afterwards, when fome fhort Paffages out of her Letters to Mendica (which Carle had confett again of himself to have written in Ciphers) were read, conveying and from thence she was charged as if she had the Kingle purpos d to convey her Right in the Kingdom to domtothe the Spaniard, and that Allen and Parfens lay now spaniard. at Rome, for that purpose; she, still complaining that her Secretaries had broken their Allegiance whereto they were bound by Oath, answer'd as follows: 'I being a clofe Prifoner, opprefi'd and Her 'languifhing with Cares and penlive Thoughts, Answer. 'and without all Hope of Liberty, no Probability appearing of effecting those things which many people expected by my means, who de-clined daily through Age and Indisposition of Body; it seemd good to some, that the Succellion to the Crown of England should be established on the Spaniard, or elie some English Ca-forein Help. The Solicitor put the Commissioners in mind what would become of them, their Honours, E-ftates and Posterities, if the Kingdom were so convey'd. But the Lord-Treasurer shew'd, that the Kingdom of England could not at all be convey'd, but was to descend by Right of Succession, according to the Laws; and ask'd her, if fhe tholick. And a Book was fent me to justify the Spaniard's Title; which not being approved of by me, I incurr'd Difpleasare with some Men. But now, all my Hopes in England being desperate, I am fully resolved not to reject had any more to fay.

She required to be heard in a full Parliament. or that she might in person speak with the Queen (who would, the hoped, have regard of a Queen) and the Council. And now rifing up with great Presence of Countenance, she had some Conserence with the Lord-Treafurer, Hatton, Walfingbam, and the Earl of Warwick, apart by themselves.

These things being done, the Court adjourn'd The Court till the 25th of October, to the Stur-Chamber at adjourn'd. Westminster. Thus far touching this Matter, out of the Commentaries and Memorials of Edward Barker, principal Register to the Queen's Maje-fty, Thomas Wheeler Publick-Notary, Register of the Audience of Canterbury, and other Persons of Credit, which were there prefent. On the faid 25th day of October, all the Commifficeners met, except the Earls of Strewbury and Warmick, who were both of them fick at that time. And after Naive and Curle had upon Oath, wivid voce, voluntarily, without Hope or Reward, avow'd, affirm'd and justify'd all and every the Letters and Copies of Letters before produced, to be true and real, Sentence was pronounced a Sentence gainft the Q_0 of $Sent_0$, and confirmed by the Seals pronounced and Subferiptions of the Commissioners, and recorded and the formation of the Sentence ded a sentence ded in these Words. Sy their unanimous Assents and Confents, they do pronounce and deliver this their Sentence and Judgment, at the Day and Place last above-recited, and fay, That fince the Conclusion of the aforesaid Selsion of Parliament, in the Commission aforesaid specify'd, namely, fince the aforelaid first day of in the 27th Year aforesaid, and before the Date of the faid Commission, divers Matters have been compass'd and imagin'd within this Realm of England, by Anthony Babington and others, with the Privity of the faid Mary, pretending a Title to the Crown of this Realm of England, tending to the Hurt, Death and Deltruction of the Royal Person of our said Lady the Queen.

the Royal Person of our land Lady one Calcal.
And also, that since the aforesaid first day of June, in the 27th Year aforesaid, and before the Date of the Commission aforesaid, the aforesaid

'forefaid Mary, pretending a Title to the Crown 1586 of this Realm of England, has compais and i-Mnn.29. magnid, within this Realm of England, divers 'Matters tending to the Hurt, Death and Defiruction of the Royal Perfon of our Sovereign Lady the Queen, contrary to the Form of the Statute in the Commiffion aforefaid specify'd. This Sentence (which depended wholly upon Credit of the Credit of the Secretaries, and they not the secre brought face to face, according to the first Act raise of the 13th Year of Queen Elizabeth) begot much Talk and various Difcourfe among the Pople, while fome thought them Parfons to be believed, and form among the property of any Credit. I ple, while fome thought them Perfons to be believed, and fome inworthy of any Credit. I Nure's have feen Nure's Apology to King James, writapology, the protestation he excurses lumiell, that he was neither the Author, nor Perfuader, nor the first Revealer of the Design that was undertaken; neither fail'd he of his Duty through Negligence or Want of Discretion: yea, that he did that day stoudy oppose the principal Articles of Accusation against his Lady and Mistress. Which notwithstanding appears not by the Records.

The same day a Declaration was published by the declared commissioners and the Judges of the Land, That the state of the faid Sciences did nothing decogate from James King prejudical.

the laid Sentence did nothing derogate from James King of Scots in his Title and Honour; but that he was in the Jame Place, Degree and Right, as if the Jaid Sentence had never been pronounced.

A Parlia- Some few days after, a Parliament was holden

the Sen-

mentheld at Histories, begun by a deputative Commission granted by the Queen to the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Lord-Treasurer, and the Earl of Derby, and that not without former Precedents. In Trains which Parliament the Profeription of the Lord proferror Peret Chirles Pages, Sir Francis Infelial, Francis The American Authory Babington, Thomas Salisbury, Edward Vines, Chidiock Tielburne, Charles Tilnoy, and the cell of the Conspirators, was confirmed.

Elvi rd Vines, Childock Tichburne, Charlet Tilney, and the icit of the Confpirators, was confirmd, a see the interference of the Confpirators, was confirmd, a see the interference of the Realm, having by their Pathaneat Votes approv'd and confirm'd the Sentence given pation for a Pair against the Queen of Seats, did with unanimous fication of Alient prefent their Petition to the Queen, by the Hands of the Lord-Chancellor, wherein they instantly beforght her, that, for the Prefervation of Christ's true Religion, the Quiet and Security of the Realm, the Preservation of the Queen's Person, and the Safety of themselves and their Posterity, the Sentence given against Mary Q. of Scots, according to the Law, might be publish'd. Their Reasons were drawn from the Dangers that threaten'd Religion, the Queen's Perlon, and the Realm, by means of her, who having been bred up in the Popish Religion, and sworn a Confederate in the Holy League, for the Extir-pation of the Protestant Religion, had now for a long time arrogated to herfelf the Kingdom, while the Queen liv'd, whom, as being Excom-municate, she held it lawful to do Mischief to, as far as lay in her Power, and to take away her Life a thing meritorious; one who had over-thrown and ruind feveral flourishing Families in the Kingdom, and cherish'd all the treasonable Defigns and Rebellions in England. To spare her therefore were nothing elfe but to spill the People, who would take all Impunity in this cafe very much to Heart, and would not think them-Telves discharged of their Oath of Afficiation, unless she were punish'd according to her Deserts. Lastly, they call'd to her Remembrance, how fearful the Examples of God's Vengeance were upon King Saul for sparing Agag, and upon King Ahab for sparing the Life of Benbadad. These things the Estates of the Parliament urged to The Queen, with great Majetty both of Countenance and Speech, answerd to this purpose: 1586.

So many and so great are the unmeasurable Ann.29.
Graces and Benefits bestow'd upon me by the Almighty, that I mult not only most humbly Chenker acknowledge em as Benefits, but admire em as Answer.

Miracles, being in no fort able to express em.

' Miracles, being in no fort able to express 'em. And the none alive can more juffly acknowlege ' himfelf bound to God than I, whose Life he has ' miraculoully preserv'd from so many Dangers: 'yet and I not more deeply bound to give him
Thanks for any one thing, than for this which I will now tell you, and which I account as a Miracle; namely, That as I came to the Cnown with the hearty Good-will of all my Subjects, ' fo now, after twenty eight Years Reign, I perceive in 'em the fame, if not greater, Affection towards me; which should I once lose, I might perhaps find myfeli to breathe, but never could I think that I were alive. And now tho my Life has been dangerously shot at, yet I protest there is nothing has more griev'd me, than that one who differs not from me in Sex, one of ' like Quality and Degree, of the same Race and Stock, and so nearly related to me in Blood, should fall into so great a Misdemeanor. And fo far have I been from bearing her any Ill-will, that upon the Discovery of some treasonable Practices against me, I wrote privately to her, ' that if she would confess and acknowlege them by a Letter betwixt her and me, they should be 'wrapp'd up in Silence. Neither did I write ' this with a purpose to intrap her; for I knew * already as much as the could confets. And even yet tho' the matter be come thus far, if she ' would truly repent, and no Man would under-' rake her Cause against me, and if my Life alone depended hereupon, and not the Safety and Welfare of all my People, I would (I proteft unfeignedly) willingly and readily pardon her. Nay, if England might by my Death obtain a more flourishing Condition and a better Prince, I would most gladly lay down my Life. For, for your fakes it is, and for my People's, that I defire to live. As for me, I fee no fuch great Reason (according as I have led my Life) why I should either be fond to live, or fear to die.
I have had good Experience of this World: I have known what it is to be a Subject, and I now know what it is to be a Sovereign. Good Neighbours I have had, and I have met with bad; and in Trust I have found Treason. I have bestown Benefits upon Ill-deservers; and where I have done well, I have been ill-requi-While I call to mind thefe ' ted and spoken of. things palt, behold things prefent, and look 'forward toward things to come, I count them happiest that go hence soonest. Nevertheless against such Evils and Mischiess as these, I am arm'd with a better Courage than is common in my Sex; fo as whatfoever befals me, Death shall never find me unprepar'd.

And as touching these treasonable Attempts, I will not so far wrong my self, or the Laws of my Kingdom, as not to think but that she, having been the Contriver of the said Treassons, was bound and liable to the ancient and former Laws, tho' the late Ach had never been made; which notwithstanding was in no fort made to prejudice her, as divers who are inclined to favour her have imagined. So far was it from being made to intrap her, that it was rather intended to forewarn and deter her from attempting any thing against it. But seeing it had now the Force of a Law, I thought good to proceed against her according to the same. But you Lawyers are so curious in scanning the nice Points of the Law, and proceeding according to Forms, rather than expounding and interpreting the Laws themselves, that if your way were observed, the must have been indicted in Staffordshire, and have holden up her Hand as the Bar, and have been try'd by a Jury of Twelve Men. A proper way, for looth, of trying a Princes. To avoid therefore such Ablastics, I thought it better to refer the Example 1 to the Bar, and have been try'd by a Jury of Twelve Men. A proper way, for looth, of trying a Princes. To avoid therefore such Ablastics, I thought it better to refer the Example 1 to the Bar, and the Bar of the weights a Cause to a sleep the should enter the Relation of the weights as a close found of the weights as a close to a close the should enter the Bar of the staff mination of fo weighty a Caufe to a felect Number of the noblest Personages of the Land, and the Judges of the Realm: and all little enough. For we Princes are fet as it were upon Stages in the Sight and View of all the World: the least Spot is foon spy'd in our Garments, the smallest Blemish presently observ'd in us at a great Distance. It behoves us therefore to be careful that our Proceedings be just and honourable. But I must tell you one thing, that by this last Act of Parliament, you have reduc'd me to fuch Straits and Perplexities, that I must resolve upon the Punishment of her who is a Princess to nearly ally'd to me in Blood, and whose Practices against me have so deeply affe-And the with Grief and Sorrow, that I have willingly chosen to absent myself from this · Parliament, left I should increase my Trouble by hearing the Matter mention'd; and not out of Fear of any Danger or treacherous Attempts against me, as some think. But I will now tell you a farther Secret, (tho' it be not usual with me to blab forth in other cases what I know.) It is not long fince thefe Eyes of mine faw and read an Oath wherein some bound themselves to kill me within a Month. Hereby I fee your Danger in my Person, which I will be very careful to prevent and keep off.

£ (0

Ann.29. 6

'The Affociation you enter'd into for my Safety I have not forgotten, a thing I never fo 'much as thought of, till a great Number of 'Hands and Seals to it were shew'd me. This 'has laid a perpetual Tie and Obligation upon ' me, to bear you a fingular Good-will and Love who have no greater Comfort than in your and the Commonwealth's Respect and Affection towards me. But forafmuch as the Matter now in hand is very rarely exampled, and of greateft Confequence, I hope you do not look for any present Resolution from me: for my manis, in Matters of less Moment than this, to deliberate long upon that which is but once to be refolv'd. In the mean time, I befeech Almighty God, fo to illuminate and direct my Heart, that I may fee clearly what may be belt for the Good of his Church, the Prosperity of the Commonwealth, and your Safety.

And that Delay may not breed Danger, we will fignify our Resolution to you with all Conveniency. And whatever the best of Subjects may expect at the Hands of the best Princes, that expect from me to be perform'd to the full.

them to find out

Come other Expedient.

On the 12th day after, when she had through-She prays ly weigh'd the Matter in her Mind, being di-ftracted with doubtful Cares and Thoughts, and as it were in some Conflict with herself, what to do in fo important a Business, she fent the Lord-Chancellor to the Upper House, and Puckering to the rest in the Lower House, adviling them to enter anew into the serious Confideration of fo weighty an Affair, and to find out a more pleafing Expedient, whereby both the Queen of Seers Life might be fpared, and her own Security provided for.

After long and ferious Deliberation, judging that both the Welfare and Detriment of the Prince concern'd all the Subjects, they unanimoufly concurr'd again in their former Opinion; and that for their Reasons, The Queen's Safety

Life, and would not yet acknowlege her Fault. As for a furer Guard, stricter Custody, Bends, Oath, and Hostages, they esteem'd them all us nothing worth, be-cause if the Queen's Life were once taken away, all cause if the Queen's Life were once taken away, all these would presently vanish. And if she should depart the Realm, they fear d less she should presently take up Arms and invade the same. These Realons the Lord-Chancellor, and Prekering Speaker of the Lower House.

kering Speaker of the Lower House, explain'd and open'd more at large, pressing hard that the Sentence might be put in Execution: because, as it were Injustice to deny Execution of the Law to any one of her Subjects that should demand it; so much more to the whole Body of her People of England, unanimously and with one Voice humbly and instantly suing for the same. The Queen answer'd as sol-

' Very unpleasing is that Way, where the Set- Her Reply ting out, Progress and Journeys End yield no-

'thing but Trouble and Vexation. I have this ' day been in greater Conflict with myfelf, ever I was in all my Life, whether I should speak, or hold my peace. If I should speak, fpeak, or hold my peace. If I should speak, and not complain, I shall dissemble: if I should be filent, all your Labour and Pains taken were in vain: and if I should complain, it might · feem a strange and unusual thing. Yet I con-· fefs, that my hearty Defire was, that fome other means might have been devised, to pro-· vide for your Security and my own Safety, than this which is now propounded. So that I canonot but complain, the not of you, yet to you, fince I perceive by your Petition, that my Safety depends wholly upon the Ruin of another. · If there be any that think I have foun out the time on purpose to get Commendation, by a feeming Shew of Clemency, they do me Wrong undefervedly, as he knows who is the Searcher of the most fecret Thoughts of the Heart. Or · if there be any that are perfuaded the Commiffioners durst pronounce no other Sentence for fear they should thereby displease me, or feem to fail of their Care for my Prefervation, they 'do but burden and wrong me with fuch injurious Conceits. For either those whom I put 'in Trust have fail'd of their Duties: or else they acquainted the Commissioners in my Name that my Will and Pleafure was, that every one fhould act freely, according to his Conscience; and what they thought not fit to be made pub · lick, that they should communicate to me in private. It was of my favourable Inclination towards her, that I defired fome other way ' might be found out, to prevent this Mischief. But fince it is now refolv'd, that my Security is desperate without her Death, I find a great cruel towards fo great a Princess.

I have, fince I came to the Government of this Realm, feen many defamatory Libels and Pamphlets against me, taxing me to be a Ty-rant. Well fare the Writers Hearts; I believe their Meaning was to tell me News. And News indeed it was to me to be branded with the Note of Tyranny. I would it were as great ' News to hear of their Wickedness and Impiety.

Reluctancy and Trouble within me, that I,

who have in my time pardon'd fo many Rebels,

wink'd at fo many Treafons, or neglected 'em

by Silence, should now feem to shew myself

' But what is it which they will not venture to " write

1586. 6

write now, when they shall hear that I have given my Consent, that the Executioner's Ann.29. 'Hands fliould be imbrued in the Blood of my nearest Kinswoman? But so far am I from Cruelty, that, tho' it were to fave my own Life, I would not offer her the leaft Violence: neither have I been fo careful how to preferve my own Life, as how to preferve both hers and mine: which that it is now impossible to do, I am heartily troubled. I am not fo void of Sense and Judgment, as not to see my own Langer before my Eyes; nor fo indifcreet, as to sharpen a Sword to cut my own Threat; nor fo egregiously careless, as not to provide for the Safety of my own Life. This I confider with mytelf, that many a Man would hazard his own Life to fave the Life of a Princefs: but I am not of their Opinion. These things have I many times thought upon ferioufly with myfelf.

· But fince fo many have both written and fpokin against me, give me leave, I pray you, to tay fomewhat in my own Defence, that ye may see what manner of Woman I am, for whose Safety and Prefervation ye have taken fuch extraordinary Care. Wherein as I do with a most thankful Heart differn and read your great Vigilance; fo am I fure I shall never requite it, had I as many Lives as all you together. When first I took the Scepter into my Hand. I was not unmindful of God the Giver, and therefore I began my Reign with fecuring his Service, and the Religion I had been both born in, bred in, and, I truft, fhall die in. And tho' I was not ignorant how many Dangers I should meet withal at home, for my altering Religion, and how many great Princes abroad of a contrary Profession would in that Respect bear an hostile Mind towards me : yet was I no whit difmay'd thereat, knowing that God, whom alone I ey'd and refpected, would defend both me and my Caufe. Hence it is that fo many Treacheries and Confpiracies have been attempted against me, that I might well admire to find myfelf alive at this present day, were it not that God's holy Hand has still protected me beyond all Expectation. Next, to the end I might make the better Progress in the Art of Ruling well, I had long and ferious Cogitations with myself what things were most worthy and becoming Kings to do: and I found it absolutely necessary that they should be completely furnified with those prime capital Vertues, Justice, Temperance, Prudence and Magnanimity Of the two latter I will not boust myself; my Sex does not permit it, they are proper to Men. But for the two former and less rough, I dare fay, (and that with-out Oftentation) I never made a Difference of Perfons, but high and low had equally Right done them: I never preferr d any for Favour whom I thought not fit and worthy: I never was forward to believe Stories at the first telling; nor was I fo rath as to fuffer my Judgment to be forestall'd with Prejudice, before I had heard the Cause. I will not say but many Reports might haply be brought me, too much in favour of the one fide or the other: For a good and a wary Prince may fometimes be bought and fold, whild we cannot hear all ourfeives. Yet this I date fay boldly, My Judgment (as far as I could understand the Cafe) ever went with the Truth. And as Alcibiades advised his Triend, not to give any An-' fwer till he had run over the Letters of the whole Alphabet; fo have I never used rath and fudden Refolutions in any thing.

And therefore as touching your Counfels and Confultations, I acknowlege 'em to have been 1586. with fuch Care and Providence, and so advan-Ann. 29. tageous for the Preservation of my Life, and to proceed from Hearts fo fincere and devoted to me, that I shall endeavour what lies in my Power, to give you Caufe to think your Pains not ill-bestow'd, and strive to shew myself worthy of such Subjects.

And now for your Petition, I defire you for the prefent to content you felves with an An-fwer without Anfwer. Your Judgment I condemn not, neither do I mittake your Reafons: but I must defire you to excuse those thought-ful Doubts and Cares, which as yet perplex my Mind; and to rest satisfy'd with the Profession of my thankful Efteem of your Affections, and the Antwer I have given, if you take it for a-ny Answer at all. If I should say I will not do what you request, I might fay perhaps more than I intend: and if I should fay I will do it, I might plunge myself into as bad Inconveniences as you endeavour to preferve me from : which I am confident your Wifdoms and Difcretions would not that I should, if ye consider the Circumstances of Place, Time, and the Manners and Conditions of Men.

After this the Parliament was prorogued.

About this time were the Lord Buckburft and Notice of Beale fent to the Queen of Scots, to let her know the Senthat Sentence was pronounced against her; and tence githat the fame was approv'd and confirm'd by Au-Queen of thority of Parliament, as just and lawful, and Scots, the Execution thereof inflantly defired by the Parliament, out of a due Regard of Juffice. curity and Necessity: and therefore to persuade her to acknowlege her Offences against God and the Queen, and to expiate them before her Death by Repentance; letting her understand, that as long as she liv'd, the Religion receiv'd in England could not be secure. Hereat she seem'd to tri- She hears umph with a more than wonted Alacrity, giving it with God Thanks, and rejoicing in her Heart, that Joyfhe was taken to be an Instrument for the re-establishing of Religion in this Island. And earnestly fhe befought, that fhe might have a Catholick Priest allow'd her, to direct her Conscience, and administer the Sacraments unto her. A Bishop and a Dean, whom they commended to her for this purpose, she utterly rejected, and sharply tax'd the English Nation, faying, That the English bad many times put their own Kings to death; no marwel therefore if they now also shew their Cruelty upon me, who am issued from the Blood of their Kings.

The Publication of the Sentence was flay'd for fome time by the Intercession of L'Aubespine the French Ambassador: but in the Month of December, through the earnest Instance of some Courtiers, it was publickly proclaim'd all over sentence the City of London, the Lord-Mayor, the Alder-proclaim'd men, and principal Officers and Citizens being prefent, and afterward throughout the whole Realm. In this Proclamation the Queen feri-oully protefted, that this Publication was extorted from her, to the exceeding Grief of her Mind, by a kind of Necessity, and at the earnest Prayers and Intreaties of both Houses of Parliament: tho' there were some that thought this to proceed from the Art and Guife of Women, who, though they defire a thing never fo much, yet will always feem rather to be confirain'd and forced to it.

The Publication of this Sentence of Death be- She tak's ing made known to the Queen of Scots, so far it with a was she from being dismay d thereat, that with a composed fertl'd and steadfast Countenance, lifting up her Spirit. Eyes and Hands towards Heaven, fine gave Thanks to God for it, And tho fine were by Craves certain Favours.

mg ber

Fo. her.

1585. Dignity and Royalty, and made no more ac-Ann. 29. count of than the poorest Woman of the meanest Condition; yet she endur'd it with great Patience of Mind. And having with much ado obrained leave of him to write, she by a Letter fent to Queen Elizabeth the 19th of December endeavour'd to clear herself 'from all hostile Ma-She writes clice against her; and thanked God for the Sento Q Ehz. ctence of her Condemnation, who was now ' pleafed to put a period to her woful and lamentable Pilgrimage in this Life. She prayed her that for the Kindnesses and Favours tol-' fhe might be beholden to herfelf, and to none elfe, (for from those zealous Puritans, who now bare the chief fway in England, she could expect no good). First, That when her Adverfaries were glutted and fatiated with her innocent Blood, her Body might be conveyed by her Servants into fome Holy Catholick Land to be buried; fhe would willingly into France, where her Mother's Soul refted in peace. For in Scotland the Sepulchers of her Ancestors were violated, and the Churches either demo-" lish'd or profan'd; and in England, among the ancient Kings, the common Progenitors of them both, fhe could have no hope to be interr'd with Catholick Rites and Ceremonies. So might her Body at length reft in peace, which as long at it was joined with the Soul could never find any rest or quiet. Secondly, (in regard she feared the secret Tyranny of That she might not be put to Death in private without Queen Elizabeth's knowledge, but in the fight of her Servants and others, who might give a true Testimony of her Faith in her Obedience toward the Church, and her Christian Departure, to prevent those false Reports which her Adversaries might otherwise throw out and asperse her with. otherwise throw our and alperie her with. And, Thindy, That her Servants might freely and peaceably depart whither they pleafed, and enjoy thofe Legacies which she had bequeath them by her Will and Testament. These things with most earnest Prayers she intrested of her in the Name of Jesus Christ, by their near Kindred, by the Soul and Memory of Hemy VII. the common Progenitor of them both, and by the Royal Dignity which she had both, and by the Royal Dignity which she had born. Then she complain'd, That all her Regal Ornaments were taken from her by command of fome of the Council, by which she suspected that their Malice might break forth to greater matters. She added, That, if they had shewed her Letters and Papers which were taken from her, fairly and without any Fraud, it might * have plainly appear'd by them, that there was no other cause of her Ruin, but the Over-carefulness and Solicitude of some for Queen Elizabeth's Safety. Lastly, She earnestly befought her, that she would write back a few Words to her touching these matters with her own Hand.

Powlet her Keeper divested of all the Badges of [

Whether this Letter ever came to Queen Eli-Variety of zabeth's Hands, I cannot fay. But divers Dif-Opinions courfes were raifed about this Affair, according to the feveral Affections and Dispositions of Men; to say nothing of the Declamations and Excla-mations of the Churchmen on both fides, who for the most part are very siery and vehement.

for the most part are very nery and venement. Some indifferent Censurers there were, who thought she was too sharply dealt withal, and had hard meature, in reyard she was a free and ab-foline Princess, and bad no Superious but God along. They find, 'She was Queen Elizabeth's very near the control of the sharp with the s Kinfwoman, who had also by Henry Millmore made her a large Promise, on the Word of a Prince, of all Courtesse and kind Hospitality, as foon as fhe was arriv'd in England, being thrown out of her Kingdom by her Rebels; and yet on the contrary had kept her still in a Prison, and violated the sacred Rights of Hospitality: That she could not be otherways re- Ann. 29 puted than as a Prisoner taken in War; and it was always lawful for fuch as were taken Prifoners in War, to use what means they could to work their own Safety and Liberty: That the could not commit Treason, because she was no Subject; and Par in parem non habet putestatem; that is, Princes of equal Degree bave no Power or Sovereignty one over another; and thereupon the Sentence of the Emperor against Robert King of Sicily was disannull'd, because he was no Subject of the Empire: That Ambaifadors, who are Princes Servants, if they confpire against the Kings to whom they are fent in Embasly, are not to be charg'd as guilty of Treason, much less Princes themselves; and, That the Purpose or Intention is not to be punish'd, unless the Effect follow. Moreover, That it was athing never heard of that a Prince should be subjected to the Stroke of an Executioner. Alfo, that the was condemn'd contrary to the Law of God, the Civil Law of the Romans, and the Common Law of England; year contrary also to the first Act of Parliament made in the 13th Year of Queen Elizabeth, by which it is enacted, That no Man is to be arraigned for intending the Destruction of his Prince's Life but by the Testimony and Oath of two lawful Witnes-ses to be produced face to face before him; whereas in this Trial no Witness was produced, but she was over-born with the Testimony of her Secretaries, who notwithstanding were absent from the Trial. Much more arguing also there was about the Credit and Validity of the Testimony of Servants, Prisoners and Domesticks. And that Saying of the Emperor Hadrian was commended: Testibus non testimonie credendum; Witnesses, not witnesses, are to be believed.

These Men farther mutter'd and complain'd,

That Spies and Emissaries were employ'd, by crafty Diffimulation, counterfeit Letters, and other cunning Devices, to circumvent her. (being a Woman easily to be wrong'd and a-bus'd, and very desirous of her Liberty) to fish out her fecret Counfels, and to encourage and put her on to dangerous Defigns, which never would have entred into her Thoughts, if she had been kept with that care as was requilite, and fuch cunning Fellows had not been privately fent to her on fet purpose to intrap her. That in all Ages it hath still been ordinary with great Courtiers, to thrust forward those whom they hate, even against their Wills and Inclinations, to such Attempts as shall bring them within the compass of Treason, and treacherously to plunge the suspectional incoment, if once imprisonal into investigate Ponnecent, if once imprisonal into investigate Ponnecent. if once imprison'd, into inextricable Dangers.
Others there were who took her 'not to be a free and absolute Queen, but a titular Queen only, because she had resign'd her Kingdom, and when she first came into England had put herself under the Protection of the Queen of England; after which, as by carrying herfelf her, well she enjoy'd the benefit of the Laws; so by Misdemeanor she was subject to the Equity and Justice thereof, according to that Rule of the Lawyers, He deserveth not the benefit of the Law who offendeth against the Law. Otherwise, better were the Condition of a forein Prince, if he might do what he lifted in another Prince's Kingdom, than his that reigneth never fo well. They reputed her also to be a Subject, tho' not originally, yet pro tempore, because two absolute Princes with Regal Authority cannot be in the fame Kingdom at one time. That it was a receiv'd Opinion of the Learned in the Laws, A Xxx 1586. The Expedition) is but a private Perfon, and there-don. 29. The connection confer Honours, nor exercife any Royal-'ty. Moreover, That the by her Middemeanors had loft merum Imperium, her absolute and just Power and Sovereignty; and that fuch as are Subjects by their Abode only and place of Habitation, might commit Treason. As for her kindred; That no Kindred is nearer nor dearer than our Country: Our Country is to us as another God, and our first and greatest Parent. another God, and our him and general value.

And as touching the promifed Offices of Civility and Hofpitality, That they could not privilege her to offer Wrongs and Mifchiefs afterward with Impunity: That those Promifes were to be understood, things continuing in the fame flate, and not altered. He which shall afterwalds commit a Crime deferves not to enjoy the Security which was before promis'd him. Sacred indeed are the Laws of Hospitality, but more facred are the Laws of our Country. That Princes, as well as the Pope, do never bind their own Hands. And all Men are more ftrongly tied and engaged to the Commonwealth than to their own Promifes. And for her being dealt withal as a Prisoner taken in the Wars, they alledg'd, out of I know not what Author, That only fuch Prisoners of War are to be spared, from whom we need to fear no dissur-bance of the Pence; others not: And, That a Prince buth Power and Jurissiction over another Prince that is has Equal, whenever that other Prince makes himself subject to the Judgment of his Equal, either by express Words, or private Contract, or by trespossing within the Jurisdiction of his Equal. That the Pope repeal'd the Emperor's Sentence against Robert King of Sicily, because the Fact was not committed within the Emperor's, but within the Popes, Territories. That Ambasiadors are by the Law of Nations privileg'd in respect of the necessity of their Embassy to be free from 'Violence; but so are not Kings that shall attempt Mischief and Disturbance in another King's Dominions. Again, That in case of Treason the Purpose and Intention is to be punish'd, though it never be brought to Effect; and that to attempt the Death of the Prince, yea to know of fuch an Attempt and conceal it, comes within the Compass and Guilt of Treason. That many Kings have been condemn'd and put to Death, namely, Rhescuporis King of Thrace by Tiberius, Licinius and Maximi anus by Constantine the Great, B.rnard of Italy, and Conradine of Sicily, &c. And, to conclude, (which is instead of a thousand Arguments) That the Sasety of the People is the supreme Law; and no Law is more sacred than the Safety of the Commonwealth. That God himfelf hath given and ordained this Law, That all things which are good and profitable for the 'Commonwealth, should be accounted just and lawful. Yea, that the very Popes, not fo much for the Publick as their own Security, have put to death feveral Ecclefiaftical Princes: As Boniface VIII. caused Celestine V. after his deposing from the Popedom, to be put to death, fearing fleft for his singular Piety he should be called again to the Papacy; and Urban VI. caused five Cardinals to be fowed up in Sacks and thrown into the Sca; others he beheaded; and the Bodies of two he commanded to be dried in an Oven, and carried about upon Mules for a ter-tor to others. Farthermore, That her Secretarie, were not to be accounted of as Servants; and that domeltick Evidences were to be ad-' mitted concurning those things that were done privately and feeretly at home. That it was a more Nicety to make question, whether those Accusers that were voluntarily fworn, and

King out of his Dominions (except it be upon a war- 'themselves accessary to the Crime, were to be brought face to face to maintain their Accusa- 1586. tion in criminal Cases. To be short, That Ann. 29. ' there was no great and notable Example extant which did not carry with it fome Colour and Appearance of Injuffice. These things and the like to these we then heard familiarly bandied to

> In the mean time the King of Scots (fuch was her Son his fingular Piety toward his Mother) laboured makes all that possibly he could by William Keith to fave for her, her Life, and omitted nothing that became a most dutiful and pious Son, and a prudent King: some But without any Success at all; for the Scers Seess la-were ent into Factions amongst themselves, and bour the more there were in the Interest of Queen Elizabeth than of the captive Queen: Infomuch that fome of them fecretly folicited Queen Elizabeth by Letters to haften her Execution: And the Scottish Clergy, being commanded by the King to recommend his Mother's Prefervation to God in their Prayers at Charch, peremptorily refus'd to do it; fuch was the matred to the Religion which she profess'd. Nevertheless the King, as he had before by frequent Meffages and as frequent Letters made Intercellion for her to the Queen; fo now by repeated and more importu-Queen; to now by repeated and more important Letters and Meffages he again folicited for her. Wherein he complaind, 'That it was great 'Injuffice and Indignity, that the Nobility, 'Council and Subjects of England should give Council and Council Council Sease that was Sentence against a Queen of Scots, that was also descended of the Blood-Royal of England: And no less Injustice to think that the States of England can by Authority of Parliament exclude the true and undoubted Heirs from their Right of Succession and lawful Inheritance, (as fome for a Terror now and then threatned). He fent also Patrick Grey and Robert Melvin, to let the Queen know, 'That out of his fingular Love and Friendship he could not believe but flie, who had by her Vertues, and especially by her Clemency, purchased herself all over the World fo renowned a Name, free from all blot and imputation of Cruelty, would ftill preferve the fame, and not by any means stain it now with the Blood of his dear Mother, who was of the fame Regal State and Condition, of the fame Blood, the fame Sex with herfelf, and whom (forafmuch as he was bound in Confeience to have a pious and religious Care of his Mother's Life) he could not forfake, or leave to the Cruelty of those who had now for a for long time gaped after his Destruction as well as his Mother's.

In other Letters to her, after he had at large declared with what thoughtful Care and Anguish of Heart he was perplex'd about fo weighty a Business, which nearly concern'd and touch'd him in regard both of Nature and Honour, and into what Straits and Hazard of his Reputation amongst his own People he should be plunged, if any Violence should be offer'd to his Mother; out of an inward sense of Sorrow and his filial Affection, he propounded to Queen Elizabeth thefe things following to be feriously weighed and confidered by her: 'How much it concerfined him in Honour, who was both a King and fine an absoflute Princefs, should be put to an infamous Death by her who was fo nearly allied and engaged to her both in Blood and League of Amity? Whether by the Law of God there could be any just Proceeding by Law against those whom God hath appointed to be his fupreme Ministers of Justice, whom he hath called Gode on Earth, whom he hath anointed, and once ' anointed, buth forbidden to be touch'd, and will not fuffer 'em to go unpunish'd that shall do them Violence? How strange and monftrous a thing it would be, to fubject an abfolute Prince to the Judgment of Subjects? How prodigious, if an absolute Prince should be made fo dangerous a Precedent for the profaning and vilifying her own and other Princes Diadems? And moreover, What fhould drive her to this Rigor and Severity? Honour or Profit? If Honour, the would purchase more Honour by sparing her; for so would she, with eternal Commendations of her Clemency, oblige unto her by this Favour both himfelf and all the Princes of Christendom, whose Affections otherwise she could not but alienate from her, with the lofs of her Fame, and incur the brand of Cruelty. And if Profit were the thing that mov'd her to it, it was to be confider'd whether any thing were profitable which was neither just nor honeft. He concluded with this Request, That his Ambassadors might bring him back such an Answer as might befeem a most religious Queen to give, and not be unfit for a King and a loving Kinfman to receive. But his Ambaffador unfeafonably mingling Threatnings with Entreaties, they were not very welcome; and indeed after a few Days were dismiss'd with small hope of succeeding in what they came

The King

1586. Ann. 29.

French intercedes by his Amhaffa. dors.

Bellieure's

Reafons

for the

Monfieur Pompon de Bellieure, who was fent from the French King upon this Occasion, having got access to the Queen in company with L'Aubespine a Chasteau-neuf the Ordinary Ambassador, and briefly signified with what contrary Affections the French King was diffracted, on the one fide out of his fingular Refpect towards her, and on the other fide by reason of the strict Alliance betwixt him and the Queen of Scots, propounded these and the like Considerations in Writing several times to the Queen in her behalf.

' That it very much concern'd the most Chriftian King of France, and all other Kings, that a Queen, a free and absolute Princes, should Q.ofScots c not be put to death.

That the Queen's Safety would be more endanger'd by the death of Queen Mary, than it would be by her Life : That if she were deliver'd our of Prison, she would probably at-tempt nothing against the Queen, being now in a fickly Condition, and having but a fhort time to live.

' That altho' fhe had laid Claim to the Crown of England, she was not to be blam'd for it, but it was wholly to be imputed to her young and tender Years, and to bad Counfellors.

That she came at first a Supplicant into Eng " land; and therefore having been unjuftly detain'd, she was now at length to be either ran-fom'd, or mercifully dealt withal. Moreover, That an absolute Prince was not to be call'd in question; which made Tully say, So unusual a thing is it for a King to be put to death for any Crime, that before this time it was never so much as beard

That if the were innocent, the was not to be panish'd; if guilty, she was to be spared. For this would turn to far greater Honour and Advantage, and would be recorded eternally as an Example of the English Clemency. the Story of Porfenna in this Cafe was to be remember'd, who fnatch'd the right Hand of Mutius Scavola out of the Fire, and fet him at Liberty, tho' he had confpir'd his Death.

'That it was a prime Rule and Precept for well-governing, To be fparing of Blood: That blood criefi for Blood: That to use the Extremity of Rigor towards her could not but feem a cruel and bloody part.

That the French King would do his best to repel and frustrate the Attempts of all Men whatfoever who should offer Violence to the Queen: And, That the Guifes, the Queen of Seas near Kinfmen, would engage themselves to do the like by Oath and Covenant under their Hands; who, in case the should be put to Death, would take it very hardly, and haply not leave her unreveng'd. Lastly; They required that she might not be proceeded against according to so rigorous and extraordinary a Sentence; otherwise the French King could not but rake very great Displeasure thereat, howfoever other Princes should happen to refent it.

To thefe Reasons Answer was made from Point to Point in the Margin as followeth.

That the Queen of England trufted the most Answers, Christian King of France would have no less a Regard and Respect for her than he had for the 'Queen of Scots, who had practifed the Destruction of an innocent Princess, her near Kinf-woman, and a Confederate with the French King. That it was expedient and necessary for Kings and Commonwealths, that wicked Attempts (especially against Princes) should not go unpunish'd.

'That the English, which acknowledge the Sovereign Authority of Queen Elizabeth only in ' England, could not acknowledge two supreme free and ablolute Princes in England at one ' time; or account any other Ferfon whatfoever equal to her in England as long as she lived. Neither indeed did they fee how the Queen of ' Scots, and her Son who at prefent reigneth, can be reputed both at one time for supreme and ' absolute Princes.

'Whether the Queen's Safety would be expofed to greater Danger upon her being executed, depended upon future Accidents and Contingencies: The States of England, upon fetingencies: the Attack, thought otherwise. 'There would never be Occations wanting for bad Attempts, efpecially when the matter was 'now come to that pass, that the one had no hope of Safety unless the other were ruin'd; and this ' Saying they might call to mind, Aut ego illam, ' aut illa me; Either I must toke away her Life, , or she will take away mine. The shorter the time to come of her Life was, the sooner and ' more eagerly would the Conspirators haften the ' Queen's Danger.

That the Title which she claimed to the " Crown of England she would not yet renounce, and therefore the was with good Reafon de-' tain'd in Prifon, and fo to be detain'd (tho' fhe came a Supplicant into England) till fhe had renounc'd the fame. And the Crimes which the ' had committed fince fhe was a Prifoner she ought 'to fuffer for, whatever were the cause of her ' first casting into Prison.

That the Queen had formerly most graciously ' spared her Life, when by unanimous Consent of the States she was condemn'd for a Rebellion raifed about an intended Marriage between her and the Duke of Norfelk; and to spare her again were but unadvised and cruel picy. That gain were but industried and effect pity. That no Man was ignorant of that Saying of the Lawyels, A Min offending in another's Territory, and there found, is purified in the place of his Offence, without regerd to his Dignity, However or Privilege. And that this was both juiling to by the Laws Seveni of England, and by the Examples of Licinius, Princes Robert King of Steily, Bernard King of Italy, Comput to radius, Elizabeth Queen of Hungary, Jan Queen of Mangles, and Deforences; for whom Tully pleading, faid, It was no unjust thing that a King should ' be found guilty and put to death, tho' it were not Vol. II. XXX2 u/ual.

"1586. "figlt touching a King's forfeiture of Life and Effect.

Ann. 29. "Which thing the' it be not unjult, especially when thy

Life is in danger from him, yet is it so unusulat,

'That she ought to be punish'd, having been found guilty upon a just and legal Trial; considering that what is just, the same is honest; and what is honest, is also profitable and expedient.

'That the Story of Forfenna fuited not with the present Case; unless a Man should imagine a numerous Combination of Men to have laid wait for the Queen's Life, and should thereupon perfuade her to fet the Queen of Scots at Liberty without any Hurt, out of a fear of 'em, and with fome regard to her own Honour, but none to her Safety, as Porfenna difcharged Mustius after he had affirmed that Three hundred like himfelf had confpir'd and vowed his death. Moreover, Mutius attempted this against Porfenns in a just and declar'd War; and when Mu-* this was let go, Porfenna verily perfuaded himfelf that all the Danger was over: But the cafe here is quite otherwife.

That Blood indeed is to be fpar'd, but it must be innocent Blood: This God hath commanded. True it is indeed, that the Voice of innocent Blood crieth for Blood; and this can France, both before and fince the Maffacre at e Paris, well witness and testine.

That Death that is justly inflicted, cannot feem bloody; as neither is Physick, prepared duly and as it ought to be, eiteemed vio-

That howfoever the Guifes, the Q. of Scots Kinfmen, might take the matter, yet it highly concern'd the Queen to regard rather the Safe-ty of herself, the Nobility and People of Eng-Land, (upon whose Love and Affection she whol-Iy depended) than the Displeasure of any whofocver. That the matter was come to that pafs, that what was faid of old concerning two Prinsees, Corradine of Sicily and Charles of Anjou, might now be spoken of two Queens, it might now be truly said, The Death of Mary is the Life of Elizabeth, and the Life of Mary is the Death of Élizabeth.

'That the French King's or the Guises Proe mifes could not fecure the Queen and Realm, much lefs make Satisfaction for her Life, if the fhould be made away

'That the French King could neither difcover onor hinder fecret Plots against himself at home; much less was he like to hinder those against the Queen of England: For Treafon is plotted in fecret, and therefore hard to be prevented. If the Fact were once committed, what would it avail to claim their Promises? How should an incomparable Prince's Death be made amends for ? And in fo fad and woful a Con-fution of all things, what Remedy could be found for the languithing Commonwealth?

'That the Obligations and Oaths of the Guifes were of finall value, who judged it meritorious to kill the Pope's Adverfaries, and could very eafily procure Difpensations for their Oaths. And what Englishman, if Queen Elizabeth were flain, and the Queen of Scots of the House of Guife advanc'd to the Crown, durft accuse them of Murder? And if any should accuse them, could they thereby make her alive again?

And the Ambaifadors in calling this a rigo-rous and extraordinary Sentence, have fpoken rathly and unadvifedly, (forafmuch as they have feen neither Process nor Proofs) and have 6 more that ply than is fitting taxed the States of the Realm of England, Men eminent for their Nobility, Vertue, Prudence and Piety: Yea, they have very inconfiderately uttered fuch 1587. Words in the French King's Name, as if they defend the States of the Land. The Englishmen use not to be terrified by the Frenchmens Threats from taking Courses to secure their own Tranquillity. when they in the mean time could direct them no proper way to avoid the inftant and threat-' ning Dangers.

The Thirtieth Year of her Reign.

1587.

While these things, either out of Hatred or French Affection, were curiously and copiously argued Embattaaccording to Mens apprehensions of Things, the Q's L' Aubespine the French Ambatfador Leiger in Eng- Death. land, a Man wholly devoted to the Guifian Faction, supposing it the best way to provide for the captive Queen's Safety and Prefervation, not by Arguments, but by underhand Practices and Artifices, tampered about taking away Queen Eli-zabeth's Life (at first more closely) with William with Stafford a young Gentleman, and ready to catch stafford at new Hopes of Advancement, whose Mother about it. was one of the Queen's honourable Bed-chamber, and his Brother at that time Ambaffador Leiger in France; and afterwards more plainly and openin France; and atterwards more planny and open-ly, by Trappy his Secretary, who promised him, it he would effect it, not only infinite Glory and a vaft deal of Moncy, but also special Favour with the Pope, the Duke of Guise, and generally with all the Catholicks. Stiffind, as detesting the Fact, refus'd to do it; yet recommended one Moody, a noble Bravo, one ready for any Mif- and with chief, as a Man who for Money would without Mode, doubt refolutely do the Business. This Moody lying then in the common Gaol of London, Stafford gave him to understand that the French Ambatfador would very gladly speak with him. He answerd, He was very ready so to do in case he were once out of Prison: In the mean time he defir'd that Cordalion, the Ambassador's other Secretary, with whom he was well acquainted, might be sent unto him. The next day Trappy was fent, accompanied by Stafford. Trappy, after Stafford was removed a little afide, conferreth with Moody about the best way of killing the Queen. Moody propounds either to do it by Poifon, or by a Bag of Gunpowder of 20 Pounds weight to be put under the Queen's Bed, and fe-cretly fired. These two ways pleased not Trappy, cretly fired. These two ways pleased not Trappy, who wished that such another resolute Fellow eould be found as that Burgundian who murder'd the Prince of Orange.

These things were soon after reveal'd to the Stafford Queen's Council by Stafford. Whereupon Trappy, diritending fudden y to go for France, was ferz'd u. upon; and being question'd touching these Matters, confess'd what I have said. Upon this the Ambashador himfelf was sent for the 12th of Ja-muary to Cecil's House, white he came in the E-tor and vening; where were prefent, by the Queen's told of it. appointment, Cecil Lord Burgbley Lord-Treasurer of England, the Earl of Leicester, Sir Christopher Hatton Vice-Chamberlain to the Queen, and Davision one of her Secretaries. They let him know, that they had fent for him to inform him for what reason they had apprehended Trappy his Secretary as he was going for France: And they acquainted him with all things particularly which Stafford, Moody, and Trappy himfelf had confess, and commanded them to be call'd in to witness the same to his Face. The Ambastador, having heard all the Story with great Impatience and a frowning Countenance, now rofe up and faid, That he, being the King's Ambalfador, would not hear any Accufation to the Prejudice of the denies it.

Ann 30 pri nather, and against the trivillages of anneal-1507, Inder. When it was answerd, That they were not Ann 30 produced at Accusers, but that he might see these things not to be fright and pretended, and that he himself might have liberty to charge statister dust Felshood, he was facisfy id. As soon as Staffard was brought The Am- in, and began to fpeak, he interrupted him, rai-baffador ling upon him, and affirming that Stafford was the first Man that propounded the matter; and that he had threaten'd him, unless he would defift, to send him bound Hand and Foot to the Queen; but yet had spared him out of his singular Love to Stafford's Mother, Brother and Sifter. Stafford, falling upon his Knees, deeply protested upon his Salvation, that the Ambaffador first propounded the matter to him. The Ambassa dor being now more vehemently moved, Stafford was commanded to withdraw, and Moody was not brought in.

Is reprimanded.

Whether an Amballador ought to reveal Treaton againft a Prince.

And when Eurleigh had gently reproved the Ambailador, as confcious or accessary to the plotting of fo foul a Fact, both by his own Words and Trappy's Confession; he answerd, Altho be had been accossing to it, yet seeing he was an Ambassador, he ought not to discover the same to any, but the King his Muster only. When Burleigh reply'd, That if it be not for an Ambassador to make any such Discovery when a Prince's Life is by wicked Contrivances brought into Danger, (which notwithstanding is a thing controverted) yet it is the Duty of a Christian to repel and binder such Injuries, and that where the Safety not only of a Prince, but also of any private Christian, is concern'd. This he firongly deny'd, and withal told him, how a French Ambassador not long since in Spain, having Knowlege of a Design against the King of Spain's Life, discover'd it not to the King of Spain, but to the King his Master, and was therefore commended by the King and his Council. But Burleigh gravely advised him to beware how he committed Treason any more, or forgot the Duty of an Ambailadour, and the Queen's Clemency, who should not by punishing a bad Ambassador prejudice the good: and that he was not acquitted from the Guilt of the Offence, tho' he escaped the Punishment.

This and nors fet Sculsa

By means of this Attempt, fuch as bare a mortal Hatred against the Queen of Scots took occa-And to ftrike the fion to haften her Death. against the greater Terror into the Queen, (knowing that Queen of where a Man's own Safety lies at Stake, there Fear excludes all Pity) they caus'd false Rumors and terrifying Reports daily to be spread all over England: viz. That the Spanish Fleet was already arrived at Milford-Haven; That the Scots were broken into England; That the Duke of Guife was landed in Suffex with a frong Army; That the Lucen of Scots was escaped out of Prison, and had raised an Army; That the Northern Parts were up in Rebellion; That there was a new Conspiracy on foot to kill the Queen, and fet the City of London on Fire; yea, That the Queen was dead; with other such like Stories, which Men either crafty for their own ends, or really fearful, are wont to feign to themfelves, and to make worfe, out of a natural Propenfity they have to cherish and increase Rumors, which Princes lightly credulous do eafily entertain.

With fuch Scare-crows and affrighting Arguments as thefe, they drew the Queen's wavering and perplex'd Mind to that pass, that she sign'd a Warrant for putting the Sentence of Death in Execution. And one of the principal Perfuaders to it (as the Scots report) was Patrick Gray a Scot, fent purposely by the King of Scots to disfluade the Queen from putting his Mother to death; who many times buzz'd into the Queen's Ear that Saying, Mortua non mordet, that is, A dead

Woman bites not.

Yet she, being a Woman naturally flow in her s Resolutions, began to consider in her Mind, 1587-whether it were better to put her to death, or to Ann. 30. fpare her. Against putting her to death these things had great Weight: Her own innute Cle considers mency, less the should feem to shew herself the matter cruel to a Woman, and that a Princel's, and ferioully. her Kinfwoman; Fear of Infamy with Poste- Dangers if rity in after-Hiftories; And imminent and cer- the thould tain Dangers, as well from the King of Scots, be execu-who would now be advanced to a Step higher ted. who would now be advanced to a Step higher with the form the Catholick on his Hopes of England, as from the Catholick or Princes and desperate Men, who would now adventure upon any thing. On the other side, if the should spare her, the forestaw that no less Dangers threaten'd her. The Noblemen that Dangers threaten'd her.

had given their Sentence against the Queen of spared, Scots would endeavour underhand to get into Favour with her and her Son, not without manifest Hazard to herself; The rest of her Subjects, who had been so careful for her Suscept, feeing fhe had frustrated their Pains and Care. would take it very ill, and for time to come neglect her Preservation; Many would turn Papists, and entertain greater Hopes, when they should see her preserv'd as it were by Fate to a Probability of enjoying the Crown; The Jefuites and Seminaries, whose Eyes are upon her only, seeing her fickly, and fearing that she would not live long, would leave no means untry'd to haften Queen Elizabeth's Death, that fo their Religion might be restored. The Courtiers also continually suggested to Courtiers her these things following, and the like: Why pressor fhould you spare her, when she is guilty and cution.

' justly condemn'd, who, tho' she subscribed to Their the Affociation for your Safety, yet prefently Reasons

after refolv'd unmercifully to ruin you who were altogether innocent, and by deftroying you to deltroy Religion, the Nobility, and People? Clemency and Mercy is a Royal Vertue, but not to be extended to the mercilefs. Let the vain Shew of Mercy give place to wholfome Severity. Have a care that your unfeafonable Mercy and Favour involve you not in the greatest Misery. It is Commendation enough of your Clemency, to have spared her once: to spare her again were nothing else but to pronounce her guiltless, condemn the Parliament of Injustice, encourage her Favourers to haften their wicked Defigns, and difcourage your faithful Subjects from their Care for the Commonwealth. Religion, the Commonwealth, your own Safety, the Love of your Country, the Oath of Affociation, and the Care of Poftenity, do all with their joint Prayers befeech you, that the who endangers the Subversion of all these may forthwith be put to death: and except they may prevail, Safety itself will never be able to fave this Commonwealth; and Historians will leave it recorded to fucceeding Ages, that the bright Sun-shine and glorious Days of England under Queen E-lizabeth, ended in a toul, cloudy and dark Evening, yea, in an eternal Night. Posterity will blame us for lack of Wildom, that could forefee thefe Mischiefs, (which adds to the Misery thereof) and yet could not prevent them; and will impute the Mass and Heap of future Calamities, not fo much to the Advertaries Malice, as to the groß Carelefness of these Times. The Life of one Scottish and Titular Queen ought not to weigh down the Safety of all England. In fo important a matter there ought to be no Delay; for Delay brings Danger: nor any space of time allow'd to Plotters of Mifchief, who will now have their last Refuge and Recourse to bold Attempts, fince besides Impu-

Bity

a Scot.

nity they will be in hope of Reward for their | Labour. He that doth not what lies in his power to avoid Dangers, doth rather tempt God than truft in God. The Mifchiess which Ann.20, 6 threaten from Foreiners, the Caufe being once taken away, will be all taken away with it; neither can they do England any Harm but by Whatfoever mind or power the Pope hath to hurt us, will fall to the Ground with her. The Spaniard can have no just cause to be offended, who for his own Security put to death his only Son Charles, and now for ambitious Ends layeth wait for the Life of Don Antonio of Portugal. The French K. most religiously maintaineth Amity with England, and him it highly concerneth that by the timely death of the Q. of Scots the Hopes of the Guifians should be quashed, who, prefuming upon the expected future Power of their Kinswoman, do at Present insolently insult over their King. The king of Scots indeed may by the force of natu-ral Affection, and out of a respect to his Honour, be deeply troubl'd for his Mother: But his Wisdom will carry him rather to expect the Succession of things themselves leifurely and with Security, than to be over-hafty in compaffing them with Danger. And the nearer he is to the height of his Hope, the farther will forein Princes be from affifting him; it being a thing usual with them by any means to hinder the growing Power of another. They produced also Examples at home in our And by They produced allo Examples at nome in Examples own Country, (for whatever is done by Examples own Kings of ple is done more excufably) how the Kings of England for their own Security have carried themfelves toward their Kinsmen and Competitors; namely, Henry I. toward Robert his eldest Brother; Edward III. or rather his Mother, toward Edward II. Henry IV. toward Richard II. Edward IV. toward Henry VI. and his Son the Prince of Wales, and toward his own Brother George Duke of Claand toward his own brother Veerge Blace of Clarence his young Son; and Henry VIII. toward De la Pool Earl of Suffelk, Margaret Countefs of Salibury, and Courtney Marquis of Exeter: All which were for light Caules (if their Faults be compared with hers) taken off. And not only did the Courtiers use these Persuasions with the Queen, but some Preachers also with more Bitterness than was fit, and some of the vulgar fort, (either out of Hope or Fear) more faweily than became 'em, exercis'd their Wit at their pleafure upon this Subject.

In the midft of these doubtful and perplexing Her doubtful Thoughts, which fo troubl'd and flagger'd the Queen's Mind, that flee gave herfelf wholly over to Solitariness, fate many times melancholy and mute, and frequently fighing, mutter'd this to herfelf, Aut fer, aut feri; that is, Either bear with her, or fmite her; and, out of I know not for her

Orders a

Changes

what Emblem, Ne feriare, firi; that is, Strike, left thou be ftricken; fle deliver'd a Writing to Davison, one of the Secretaries, figned with her own Hand, commanding a Warrant under the for her Execution Great Seal of England to be drawn up for the Execution, which should lie in readiness if any Danger chanced to break forth in that time of Jealousie and Fear; and commanded him to acquaint no Man therewith. But the next Day, while Fear feem'd to be afraid of her own Coun-fels and Deligns, her Mind changed, and fine commanded Devision by William Killegrear that the Warrant should not be drawn. Devision came her mind too late. drawn and under Seal already. She was fome-what mov'd at it, and blam'd him for making fuch hafte. He notwithflanding acquainted the Council both with the Warrant and the whole matter, and easily perfuaded them, who were apt to believe what they defir'd, that the Queen had commanded it should be executed. upon without any delay, Bec's (who in respect of TheCoun-Religion was of all others rhe Queen of Stats cithen a most bitter Adversary) was sent down, with one away paior two Executioners, and a Warrant, wherein vately. Authority was given to the Earls of Shrewshury, Kent, Derby, Cumberland, and others, to fee her executed according to the Law; and this without any knowledge of the Queen at all. And tho' she at that very time told Davison that she would take another Courfe with the Queen of Seers, yet did not he for all that call Beale back.

As foon as the Earls were come to Fotheringhay, they, together with Sir Amias Powlet and Sir Drue Drury, to whose Custody she was committed, came unto her, told her the cause of their co-ming, reading the Warrant, and in few Words admonished her to prepare herself for Death, for the was to die the next Day. She undauntedly and with a composed Spirit made this Answer: Q of Scott I did not think the Queen my Sifter would have confer-preparet ten to my Death, who am not subject to your L.w and beself to ten to my Deato, who am not judget to your c.m and wer furification: Eut feeing her pleafure is fo, Death shall the, be to me most welcome: Neither is that Scul werthy of the high and everlassing Jays chove, while Body c, most endure one Stroke of the Executioner. She prayed endure one Stroke of the Executioner. She prayed them that she might have Conference with her Almoner, her Confessor, and Milvin the Master of her Houshold. For her Confessor, it was flatly denied that he should come at her; and the Her Con-Earls recommended to her the Bishop or the session de-Dean of Peterborough to comfort her; whom the nied her. refuling, the Earl of Kent, in the heat of his Zeal for the Reformed Religion, turning to-wards her, brake forth into these Words amongst other Speeches; Tour Life will be the Death of our Religion, as convariousle your Death will be the Life thereof. Mention being made of Bubington, fine conflantly denied his Conspiracy to have been at all known to her, and the revenge of her Wrong she left to God. Then enquiring what was become of Nave and Carle, she asked, Whether it were ever heard of before, that Servants were suborned and accepted for Witnesses against their Mafter's Life. When the Earls were departed from her, the commanded Supper to be haften'd, that the might the better dispose of her Concernments. She fupped temperately and fparingly, as her manner ufually was. Being at Supper, and fpying her Servants, both Men and Women, weeping and lamenting, the conforted Her Car-them with great Courage and Magnanimity, tage tre-bad them leave mourning, and rather rejoice wide her that she was now to depart out of a World of Servants. Miseries. Turning to Eurgein, her Phylician, Miferies. Turning to Longon, the fire asked him, Whether he did not now find the force of Truth to be great? They fay (queth she) that I must die because I have plotted against the Queen's Life; yet the Earl of Kent tells me, that there is no other cause of my Death, but that they are af aid for their Religion because of me. Neither hath my Offence against the Queen, but their Fear because of me, drawn this End upon me, while some under the colour of Religion and the Publick Good, aim at their own private Respects and Advantages. Towards the end of Supper she drank to all her Servants, who pledg'd her in order upon their Knees, mingling Tears with their Wine, and begging Pardon for their neglect of their Duty; as she also in like manner did of them. After Supper she perused her Will, read over the Inventory of her Goods and Jewels, and wrote down the Names of those to whom she bequeathed every Particular. To fome the diffri-

1587.

The Sheriff calls

buted Money with her own Hand. To her Con-1587. fellor she wrote a Letter, that he would make 2nn, 30. Intercession for her to God in his Prayers. She wrote also Letters of Recommendations for her Servants to the French King and the Duke of Guife. At her wonted time the went to Bed, flept fome Hours; and then awaking, spent the rest of the Night in Prayers.

The fatal Day now being come, which was the 8th of Fibruary, she dressed herself as gorgeously and curiously as she was wont to do upon Festival-Days; and calling her Servants together, commanded her Will to be read, prayed them to take their Legacies in good part, for her Ability would not extend to giving them any greater matters. Then fixing her Mind wholly upon God in her Oratory or ordinary place of Prayer, with Sighs, Groans and Prayers the begged his Divine Grace and Favour, till fuch time as Thomas Andrews, Sheriff of the County, acquainted her that the must now come forth. And for her to forth she came with State, Countenance and Pre-Execution fence majeftically composed, a chearful Look, and a matron-like and modest Habit; her Head cover'd with a Linen Veil, and that hanging down to the Ground; her Prayer-beads hanging at her Girdle, and carrying a Crucifix of Ivory in her Hands. In the Porch fhe was received by the Earls and other Noblemen, where Melvin her Servant falling upon his Knees, and pouring forth Tears, bewailed his hard Hap, that he was to carry into Scotland the woful Tidings of the unhappy Fate of his Lady and Miftrefs. She thus Her words comforted him : Lament not, but rather rejoice; to Melvin thou shalt by and by see Mary Stuart freed from all her Cares. Tell them that I die constant in

' my Religion, and firm in my Fidelity and Af-' fection towards Scotland and France. God forgive them who have thirsted after my Blood as 'Harts do after the Fountain. Thou, O GOD, who are Truth itself, and perfectly and truly understandest the inward Thoughts of my Heart, knowest how greatly I have defired that the 'Kingdoms of England and Scotland might be uni-ted into one. Commend me to my Son, and anue him that I have done nothing which may 'be prejudicial to the Kingdom of Scotland; admonish him to hold in Amity and Friendship with the Queen of England; and fee that thou

' do him faithful Service.

And now the Tears trickling down, she bade Melvin several times sarewel, who wept as falt as Then turning to the Earls, fhe pray'd 'em, 'That her Servants might be civilly dealt with-' al; That they might enjoy the Legacies she had bequeathed them by her Will and Testament; 'That they might stand by her at her Death, and might be fent back into their own Country with Letters of fafe Conduct. The former Requests they granted; but that they should stand by her at her Death, the Earl of Kent shewed himfelf fomewhat unwilling, fearing fome Superstition. 'Fear it not (faid she) these harmless Souls defire only to take their last farewel of " me. I know my Sifter Elizabeth would not have denied me fo fmall a matter, that my Women should be then present, were it but for the Honour of the Female Sex. I am her near

Kinfwoman, descended from Henry VII. Queen-Dowager of France, and anointed Q. of Scots. When she had faid thus much, and turned her-felf aside, it was at last granted that such of her Servants as the fhould name thould be then prefent. She named Melvin, Burgoin her Phylician, her Apothecary, her Surgeon, two Waiting-women, and others; of wnom Melvin bare up her Train. So the Gentlemen, two Earls and the Sheriff of the County going before her, the came to the Scaffold, which was built at the upper end of the Hall; on which was placed a 1787. Chair, a Cushion, and a Block, all cover'd with Ann 30. black Cloth. As soon as she was fet down, and she comes Silence commanded, Reale read the Warrant. She to the heard it attentively, yet as if her Thoughts were scatted. taken up with somewhat else. Then Fletcher Dean of Peterborough began a long Speech to her touching the Condition of her Life past, present, Pallares and to come. She interrupted him once or twice bely as he was fpeaking, praying him not to trouble him the Dark felf, protesting that she was famly fixed and resolved in offerer the ancient Carbolick Roman Religion, and for it was brough. ready to fied her last Blood. When he earnestly per- &c. fuaded her to true Repentance, and to put her whole Truft in Christ by an affured Faith; she answer'd, That in that Religion she was both born, bred, and now ready to die. The Earls said they would pray for her: To whom the said, That she would give them hearty Thanks if they would pray with ber; but to join (she said) in Prayer with you who are of another Profession, would be in me a heimous Sir.

Then they appointed the Dean to pray: With whom, while the Multitude that flood round about were praying, she sell down upon her knees, and holding the Crucifix before her in her Hands, prayed in Latin, with her Servants, out of the Office of the Biessed Virgin Mary. After the Dean had made an end of praying, fhe in the English Tongue recommended the Church, her Son, and Queen Elizabeth, to God, Her 1ste befeeching him to turn away his Wrath from this Words. Island; and professing that she reposed her hope of Salvation in the Blood of Christ, (lifting up the Crucifix) she called upon the celestial Quire of Saints to make Intercession to him for her ; She forgave all her Enemies, and kiffing the Crucifix, and figning herfelf with the Crofs, the faid, As thy Arms, O Chrift, were spread out up-on the Cross, so receive me with the stretched-out Arms of thy Mercy, and forgive my Sius. Then the Ex-cutioners asked her Forgiveness, which she granted 'em. And when her Women-fervants had taken off her upper Garments, (which she was eager and hafty to have done) wailing and lamenting the while, she killed them, and figning them with the Crofs, with a chearful Countenance bade them forbear their womanish Lamentations; for now she should rest from all her Sorrows. In like manner turning to her Men-servants, who also wept, she signed them likewise with the Crofs, and fmiling, bade 'em farewel. And now having covered her Face with a Linen Handkerchief, and laying herfelf down to the Block, the recited that Pfalm, In thee, O Lord, do I trust, les me never be confounded. Then stretching forth her Body, and repeating many times, Into thy bands, O Lord, I commend my Spirit, her Head was taken off at two Stroaks; the Dean crying out, So let Queen Elizabeth's Enemies perifb; the Earl of Kent answering, Amen, and the Multitude fighing and forrowing. Her Body was embalmed, and ordered in a decent and fitting manner, and afterwards interr'd with a Royal Funeral in the Cathedral-Church of Peterborough. A pompous Obfequies was also perform'd for her at Paris by procurement of the Guifes, who, to their great Com-mendations, perform'd all the highest Offices of Kindness to their Kinswoman both alive and dead.

This lamentable End had Many Queen of Scott, Her Chais Daughter to James V. King of Scots, Great rusher and grand-daughter to Henry VII. King of England, Commens by his eldest Daughter; in the fix and fortieth Year of her Age, and the eighteenth of her Imprisonment. A Lady fix'd and constant in her Religion, of singular Piety towards God, invincible Magnaphinty of Min Willom above her cible Magnanimity of Mind, Wildom above her Sex, and admirable Beauty; a Lady to be rec-

To the Earls in behalf of her Ser.

Vanis.

kon'd in the Lift of those Princesses, who have Ann.30. While yet an Intlant, flo was earneflly defir'd by

Homy VIII. King of England, for his Son Prince

Edward; and by Homy II. King of France, for Francis the Dauphin; both of them ftriving who should have her to his Daughter-in-law. At five Years old, she was convey'd into France; and at fifteen, marry'd to the Dauphin. She was Queen of France a Year and four Months. After the Death of her Husband, fhe return'd into Sealand, was marry'd again to Henry Stuart Lord Darly, and bare James, the First Monarch of Great-Britain. By Murray her base Brother, and other her prograteful and ambiting Sphiede. the was much ungrateful and ambitious Subjects, fhe was much tof d and disquieted, depos'd from her Throne, and driven into England. By some Englishmen, who were careful for preserving their Religion, and providing for the Queen's Safety, the was (as indifferent Cenfurers have thought) eircumvented; and by others, that were defirous to restore the Remiss Religion, thrust forward to dangerous Undertakings; and overborn by the Testimonies of her Secretaries, who seem d to be bribed and computed with Money. Near her Tomb this Epitaph following was let up, but foon after taken away.

An EPITAPH.

MARY Queen of Scots, a King's Daughter, the King of France's Widow, the Queen of England's Kinswoman and next Heir, a Princess accomplished with Royal Vertues and a Royal Soul, having many times (but in vain) demanded the Privileges belonging to a Crown'd Head, is, by barbarous and tyrannical Cruelty, extinEt; who was the Ornament of our Age, and a Light truly Royal; and by one and the same wicked Sentence is both Mary Q. of Scots doom'd to a natural Death, and all furviving Kings, being made as Common-People, are subjected to a civil Death. new and unexampled kind of Tomb is here extant, wherein the Living are inclosed with the Dead: for know, that with the Sacred Ashes of Saint Mary here lies violate and prostrate the Majesty of all Kings and Princes. And because (Reader that travellest this way) the inclosed Remains of Royalty do most sufficiently admonish Kings of their Duty, I say no more.

Inflance dence.

By this so lamentable a'Fate of this great Prinof Divine cets appear'd most conspicuously (as some under-Provi- standing Persons have observed) the wise Dispofition and Ordering of the Divine Providence. For those things which both the Queens, Elizabeth and Mary, most of all defired, and in all their Councils propounded to themselves, were hereby attain'd. Queen Mary (at the said just hereby attain'd. before her Death) defined nothing more ardently, than that the divided Kingdoms of England and Scotland might be united in the Person of her dear Son: and there was nothing which Queen Elizabeth with d for more earneally, than that the true Religion might be preferred in Da-gland, together with the Safety and Security of f the People. And that the high and great God 1587. granted them both their Prayers, England now Ann. 30. fees with unexpected Felicity, and most joyfully acknowleges the fame.

As foon as the Report was brought to Queen Q. Eliz. Elizabeth's Ears, who little thought of fuch a much ext thing, that the Queen of Scots was put to death, when told the heard it with great Indignation, her Coun, of her the heard it with great Indignation, her Coun- Death. tenance alter'd, her Speech falter'd and fail'd her, and through exceffive Sorrow the stood in a manner aftonish'd: infomuch as she gave herself over to paffionate Grief, putting herfelf into Mourning Habir, and fhedding abundance of Tears: her County of flarply rebuk'd, and commanded Reprinted to the com them out of her sight, causing them to be examined to appear and be Council. try'd in the Star-Chamber. And as foon as Grief would give her leave, she wrote this following Letter in hafte, with her own Hand, to the King of Scots, and fent it by Robert Cary.

' My dearest Brother,

Excufes herfelf by Letter to

I would to God thou knewest (but not that the King thou felteft) the incomparable Grief my Mind of Scots. 'is perplex'd with, upon this lamentable Acci-' dent, which is happen'd contrary to my Meaning and Intention, which, fince my Pen trembles to mention it, you shall fully understand by this my Kinsman. I request you, that as God and many others can witness my Innocence in this matter, fo you will also believe, that if I had commanded it, I would never deny it. I am not fo faint-hearted, that for Terrour I should fear to do the thing which is just; or to own it when it is once done: no, I am not fo base nor ignobly minded. But as it is no base nor ignobly minded. But as it is no Princely Part, with feign'd Words to conceal and diguise the real Meaning of the Heart; so will I never diffemble my Actions, but make onake them appear in their true and proper Co-lours. Perfuade yourfelf this for Truth, that as I know this is happen'd defervedly on her 'part, so if I had intended it, I would not have 'laid it upon others: but I will never charge 'myself with that which I had not so much as a 'Thought of. Other Matters you shall under-' thand by the Bearer of this Letter. As for me, 'I would have you believe, there is not any which loves you more dearly, or takes more Care for the Good of you and your Affairs. If ' any Man would perfuade you the contrary, you may conclude he favours others more than you. God preferve you long in Health and Safe-

Whilst Cary was upon his Way with this Letter, Davison was brought into the Star-Chamber before Davison certain Commissioners chosen for that purpose: try'd. namely, Sir Christopher Wray Knight, Chief-Justicer in the King's-Bench, who for that Occasion was made Lord Privy-Seal; the two Archbishops of Canterbury and York; the Earls of Worcester Cumberland, and Lincoln; the Barons Grey and Lamley; Sir James Croftes, Comptroller of the Queen's Houthold; Sir Walter Mildmay, Chancellor of the Exchequer; Sir Gilbert Gerard, Mafter of the Rolls; Sir Edmund Anderson, Chief-Justicer at the Common-Pleas; and Sir Roger Manwood, Chief Baron of the Exchequer. Before these Commillioners, Popham, the Queen's Attorney, charged Davison with Contempt towards the Queen's Majetty, Breach of his Allegiance, and Negled of his Dury, in that, Whereas the Queen Histimes (according to her imnate Clemency) never intended that the Queen of Scots, the conclored a, hould have been put to death, for Caufes helt known to herfelf alone, and not to be fearch'd into by others, nor could by any means

means be perfuaded to confent thereto, either by the E-1587. states of the Realm, or by the repeated Instances and Ann. 30. Reasons of the Council; notwithstanding that she had, for preventing of Dangers, commanded a Warrant for her Execution to be drawn up, and committed it to Davison's Trust and Secrecy: He nevertheless, being her Swarn Secretary, forgetting his Allegiance and Duty, and the secretary to the secretary to puts the and in Contempt of her Majefly, contrary to what the Queen had commanded him, had acquainted the Coun-cil therewith, and put the Warrant in Execution, with-out her knowing any thing at all of it.

Davison, according to his singular Discretion, answer'd fedately, with great Presence of Mind, His answ. 'That he was very forry, that in fo just a Cause concerning the Queen of Scots, and the Senconcerning the Queen of Scotts, and the Schretere given againft her, a Sentence of all others the most weighty and serious, he should now again trouble the Commissioner; and that, if not with the Lofs, yet at least with the Impairing, of his Credit, which to him was as dear as a statistic feel beauty. all things elfe. But most heavily of all he took it, that he was charged to have offended contemptuously against her Majesty, who by how much she had been the more gracious and bountiful to him, and he the more engaged to her for her fingular Favours, fo much the more heinous might his Offence feem. If he should confess himself guilty of the Crimes objected against him, he should wrong his own Reputation, which was more precious to him than his And if he should contest with the Queen Life. in his own Defence, he should do that which was unbesitting the Obedience of a Subject, the dutiful Behaviour of a Servant, and the Faith and Place of a Secretary. He protested before God and the Commissioners, 'That he had done 'nothing in this matter wittingly and willingly, but what he had perfuaded himfelf was the Queen's Will and Pleafure, wherein if he had wrong'd himself either through Ignorance or Negligence, he could not but be exceedingly troubled at it, and be ready patiently to undergo the Commissioners Censure.

As to Particulars, he affirm'd, 'That when the Queen blamed him for making fuch Hafte to get the Warrant under the Great Seal, she gave fome Signification, but no express Command, that he should keep it in his own Hands. Neither does he believe himfelf to have offended against his Trust of Secrecy, seeing he never fpoke a Word of the Business to any but the Council. Whereas he recall'd not the Warrant after the Queen had told him that she had changed her Refolution, he affirm'd, That it was agreed by all the Council, that it should be presently sent away, and Execution done 'lest the Commonwealth or the Queen should receive any Hurt.

Hereupon Egerton, the Queen's Solicitor, began to press Davison with his own Confession, reading a Piece thereof. But Davison pray'd him to read the whole, and not Parcels pick'd out here and there: but he had rather (he said) is should not be read at all, because there were containd in it some Se-crecies not sit to be divulged abroad; saying withal, That as he would not contest with the Queen, so could be not endure, that his Modesty should prejudice the the not entane, that his Aloaety planta prejudice the Truth and his own Integrity.

Gaudy and Puckering, Serjeants at Law, now charged him home and fharply, that he had craftly abufed the Wifdom of the Queen's Council, and that by the Confession of Burleigh Lord-Treasurer, who doubting whether the Queen had absolutely resolved to have Execution done, Davison confidently affirm'd it; as he likewise did to the reft that subscribed the Letters for the manner of the Execution. Davison here pray'd the Queen's learned Council, with Tears running down his Cheeks, that they would not urge the matter any farther, but remember that he would not 1587-contest with the Queen, to whose Conscience, and the Anna Commissioners Confuse, he whosh submitted himself.

Manwood, in the first place, made an histori-Judges cal Relation touching the Queen of Scots, be-Centure ginning from her Ulurping the Arms of England of him. n her tender Age, quite down to Babington's Confpiracy; commended and approved the Sentence given against her, according to the Law; extell de Queen's Clemency, which because Davison had inconsiderately prevented, he centured him to be fined in Ten Thousand Pounds, and imprison'd during the Queen's Pleasure.

Then Anderson argu'd, that he had done the thing which was just, tho' he had not done it after a due and just manner: otherwise he thought him to be no bad Man.

Of the same Opinion was Gerard.

Mildmay (having first declar'd with what mature Deliberation, and ferious Gravity, the Trial against the Queen of Scots was managed, and by how earnest Intreaties and Obtestations of the People, Queen Elizabeth was perfuaded to publish the Sentence) made use of that place of Scripture against Davison, The heart of the king is in the hand of the Lord; and therefore no Man, much lefs an Officer and a Servant, ought underhand and deceitfully to prevent Princes of their Purpose; without whose Knowlege and Con-lent nothing was to be done, especially in matters of fo great Importance as is the Death of a Princefs. He clear'd him of Malice, but tax'd him with Unskilfulness in State-Affairs, and condemn'd him of Rashness and too much Haste in preventing the Queen's Intention. And that Men of his Place and Rank might not for the future dare to commit the like Offence, he agreed in Opinion with the reft, concerning his Fine and Imprisoment.

Croftes blanted him for his Unadvisedness in revealing things which ought to have been conceal'd; confidering that Princes, what they impart to one of their Council, that many times they do not let the rest know of.

The Lord Lumley was of Opinion with the Judges, that the Sentence was justly pronounc'd against the Q. of Scots. But he affirm'd withal, That never in any Age was there fuch a Contempt against a Prince heard or read of, that the Queen's Council, in the Queen's Palace, in the Council-Chamber near the Queen, who was, as it were, President of the Council, should resolve upon a matter of such Consequence, without her Advice or Knowledge. when both they and Davison might have had fo easie Access to her. Protesting, that if he had but one only Son, and he were in the same Fault, he would censure him to be severely punish'd. But being persuaded of the Man's ingenuous and honest Intention, he would inflict no heavier Punishment upon him, than the rest had done before.

After him follow'd the Lord Grey, who in a Grey's fer Speech, as being enflamed with a religious Defence Zeal, thus sharply deliver'd himself: *Davison of hims. (faid he) is charged to have demean'd himfelf contemptuoully towards the Queen, and that Contempt is aggravated with these Circumstances; That he has caus'd the Queen of Scots to be put to death, has divulged certain Secrets, and conceal'd from the Queen the fending away of the Warrant. But what Queen was it whom he caus'd to be put to death? Even she from whom, as long as she liv'd, Dangers daily threa en'd our Religion, our Queen, our Commonwealth, and every particular Man of us; and by means of whom, though fhe be Vol. II. Xyy now Χуу

He 's prest own Confeifion.

I now executed, we are at this day put to this 1587. Trouble. So that he who has deliver'd England finn.30. from fo great Dangers may feem worthy rather to be honor'd and esteem'd. I do not take him to have reveal'd Secrets, who imparted the Bu-finess to no other than the Council and Ma-· nagers of the weightieft Affairs, whom it specially concern'd to know fuch Matters; and the Queen herself had already acquainted one or two of them with the thing. If Davison have offended, he is most to be blamed for this, that when the Queen was entring upon a new Ree folution, he did not let her know that the Warrane was not already fent away. But he, without question, was divided in doubtful and per-· plex'd Thoughts, whether he were best venture the Queen's Favour, by fending away the War-rant without her Knowlege, or by recalling it endanger the Queen's Safety anew. Who re-· members not how turbulent a time it was, and what frighting Rumours were spread abroad in all places? If any Violence had then been offer'd to Religion or the Queen, or her Life had · been taken away while the Warrant was in his Hands, should not he have born the Blame of cit? should not we ourselves, our Wives and Children, have fallen violently upon him? flould we not have imbru'd our Hands in his · Blood? fhould we not have curs'd his Indifcretion to the Pit of Hell? and should we not, to his eternal Infamy, have erected a Monument of his Inconfiderateness, engraven with Letters of Blood? Whatsoever either Punishment or Fine ye lay upon him shall not displease me; but to be fure he shall never, with me, lose the * Efteem of a good and honest Man. things Grey continu'd to press copiously, eloquently, and boldly.

The three Earls concurr'd with the rest touching Davison's Penalty; but concerning his Reputation, with Grey.

Davison's

Requeft,

The Archbishop of York reason'd theologically concerning his Difobedience proceeding from the Blindness of his Understanding, and Corruption of his Mind.

The Archbishop of Canterbury approv'd the Fact, commended the Man; but the Manner and Way of doing it he utterly condemn'd.

Wray, Lord Privy-Seal, having fummarily repeated the Opinions of the Commissioners, confirm'd the Penalty inflicted : and withal fignify'd, that albeit the Queen had been offended (and that not without just Cause) with her Council, and had left them to Examination; yet now she forgave them, and withal acknowledg'd, that they had been very careful and diligent in their Actions and Counsels for the Prefervation of Religion and the Common-wealth, and for preventing of all Dangers.

Davison pray'd the Commissioners to be a means to the Queen, not for the honourable Office of Scretary which be formerly held, one for his Liberty, nor the Abstances of his Fine, but that he might be referred to her Faxenr. Which nowithflunding he never recover'd, tho' she sometimes relieved his Wants.

Thus was Davison, a Man of good Ingenuity, but not well-skill'd in Court-Arts, brought upon the Court-Stage, on purpose (as most Men imagin'd) to act for a time this Part in the Tragedy; and foon after, the Part being acted, and his Stage-actire haid afide, as if he had fail'd in the last Act, he was thrust down from the Stage, and, not without the Pity of many, shut up a long time in Prison.

What was done publickly against Davison I have said already: but how he excused himself on his own Credit, and out of an Apologetical Discourse of his to Walfingham.

1587. of the French and Scettifh Ambassadors, of her Riperious Montana Monta Warrant for executing the Sentence against the logy for Queen of Scots: when I had deliver d it, she himself, fign'd it readily with her own Hand: when the had fo done, the commanded it to be feal'd with the Great Seal of England; and in jesting manner faid, Go tell all this to Walfingham, who is now fick; altho' I fear be will die for Sorrow, when be hears it. She added also the Reasons of her deferring it fo long; namely, left flue might feem to have been violently or malicioufly drawn thereto, whereas in the mean time fhe was not ignorant how necessary it was. Moreover she blamed Pearlet and Drury, that they had not eas'd her of this Care; and wish d that Walfingham would feel their Pulfes touching this matter. The next day after it was under the Great Seal, she commanded me by Killegrew, that it should not be done: and when I had inform'd her that it was done already, the found fault with fuch great Hafte; telling me that in the Judgment of some wise Men, another Course might be taken. I anfwer'd, that that Course was always best and fafest which was most just. But fearing lest fhe would lay the Fault upon me, (as she had laid the putting of the Duke of Norfolk to death upon the Lord Burleigh) I acquainted Hatton with the whole matter, protesting that I would not plunge myself any deeper in so great a Business. He presently imparted it to the Lord Eurleigh, and the Lord Eurleigh to the rest of the Council; who all confented to have the Execution haften'd, and every one of them vow'd to bear an equal Share in the Blame, ' and fent Beale away with the Warrant and Letters. The third day after, when, by a Dream which she told of the Queen of Seats Death, I perceiv'd that fhe waver'd in her Refolution, I ask'd her, Whether she had changed her Mind? She answer'd, No; but another Course (faid flie) might have been devisid: and withal flie ask'd me, Whether I had receiv'd any Answer from Powlet? Whose Letter when I had shew'd her, wherein he flatly refused to undertake that which flood not with Honour and Juffice; fhe, waxing angry, accused him and others (who had bound themselves by the Afficiation) of Perjury and Breach of their Vow, as those that had promis'd great Matters for their Prince's Safety, but would perform nothing. Yet there are (faid fhe) who will do it for my fake. But I shew'd her how dishonourable and unjust a thing this would be; and withal into now great Danger she would bring Fowlet and Drury by it. For if she approved the Fact, she would draw upon herself both Danger and Lishonor, not without Cenfure of Injustice: and in the difallow'd it, fhe would utterly undo Men of great Defert and their whole Posterity. And afterwards the gave me a light Check the fame day that the Queen of Scots was executed, because she was not yet put to death. How high a Difpleafure foever against Davi-fon, and how great Grief Queen Elizabeth either conceiv'd or pretended, for the Death of the Queen of Scots, cottain it is that the King of Kof Scots Scots, her only Son, who respected his Mother execution. with the greatest liety that could be imagin d or lytroufound in a Son, took exceeding great and hearty Grief, mixt with deep Dupleafure, at the fame, and very much lamented and mourn'd for her. For he did not think that Queen Elizabath, in rein private, take here a compendious Account up- | gard of the mutual Love betwixt them, and the League

1587. would have neglected all the Intercessions and Refuses

Ann. 30. Mediations of Princes, and brought his Mother, ~ a Princess of equal Majesty with herself, and so nearly ally'd to her in Royal Blood, under the Hand of a base Executioner. Robert Cary, the Cary En- Lord Hunsdon's Son, who was fent out of England tranceinto Sectland. to excuse the Queen, and lay all the Fault upon her Council and Davison, he suffer'd not to enter into Scotland, scarce would give him the Hearing by another, and with much ado receiv'd the Letters which he brought. He revoked the Commission of his Ambassador in England, and breathed nothing but Revenge. For there wanted not some that went about to perfuade him, that the Princes of Christendom would never suffer fo great an Affront done to the Royal Majesty

League of thricter Amity but lately contracted

Indignation of the Scorci.

Divers Counfels fugg-ited to the K.

and to the Name of Kings, to escape unreveng'd.

The Estates of Scotland, who were now assembled in good number, profess'd that they were ready to spend both their Lives and Fortunes in Revenge of his Mother's Death, and the Defence of his Title to the Crown of England, and that they could by no means brook this Injury, done not so much to the King, as to the whole Nation of the Scots. There were fome who perfuaded the King to defire an Affiftance of Shipping from the King of Denmark, whose Daughter he now fought in Marriage, against the Crown of Others, addicted to the Popish Reli-England. gion, advised him that he should rather join with the Spaniard, the French King, and the Pope; by which means he might eafily possess himself of England. Above all things, that he should give no Credit nor rely upon the Protestants of England; for they now ruled all, and fecretly plotted his Destruction; using that Saying against them, He will not spare the Son, who has destroy'd the Mother. Others there were, who privately advised him to declare himself openly for neither Party, but to hold both Papifts and Protestants in suspense. For if he stood openly for the Protestants, all the Papitts of Europe would level their Defigns against him, as their Mark to shoot at, and would erect another Prop and Buttress for themselves in England, which would prove dangerous and prejudicial to him. There were also fome, who perfuaded him to maintain a ftrict and religious Amity with England, not to hazard his certain Hopes upon the uncertain Chance of War, and to be firm and constant to himself in the receiv'd Religion; wherein if he once waver'd, he fhould neither get himfelf Friends, nor tid himself of Foes. These things Men persuaded him, every Man as his private Advantage led The Kings him. The King, being a wife Prince, and ap-wildom prehensive above his Years, consider d all things feriously with good and long Deliberation by himself alone, and advised also with some few others, using no Haste in the Business, which is always blind, but a mature and due Considera-

Q Eliz-

to pacify

him.

tion. But Queen Elizabeth throwing all the Blame upon Davison, and the unadvised Credulity of endeavors her Council, fought to assuage his Grief by little and little, lest unseasonable and sudden Confolarions might more irritate him; and waited till his Sorrow were leffen'd by longer Time, and would fuffer itself to be easilier dealt withal. And when the perceiv'd that the French eagerly excited the young King to avenge his Wrongs, fearing left by their cunning Wiles and his own boiling Heat to take Revenge, he might be drawn away from the Protestant Religion and the Amity of the English, the bent herself with all her Art and Skill to pacify his exulcerated and already alienated Mind by all poffible means not unbefeeming a Princels.

By her Favourers therefore in Scotland, and (fhortly after by the Lord Hanfdon Governor of Bowick, the propounded these things following sins. 30 to be considered by him. 'First, of how dangerous Consequence it would be for him to break for her for out into a War against England for this Reason, doingwhen all the Estates of England had judg'd the late Proceeding most necessary for the Safety of the whole fliand, and also in itself just. Secondly, Whether he were able to undertake such a War, since England was never better provided of Marrial Men, Forces and Wealth; and Scotland never weaker, as having been exhausted by Civil-Wars. If he reiv d upon forein Aid, how hardly and too late he might obtain it, his Mother's Condition might teach him, who so often crav'd it in vain. And if he should obtain any, what Success could be hope for? fince England, joining with the Fleets of Holland and Zealand, fear'd not the Attempts of the most potent kings of Europe. In the French King or the Spaniard what Confidence could he put? fince his own Power being once increas'd by the Addition of England, would oppose all their Designs; and his Religion is directly contrary to their Profession, that they cannot aid him without Damage to themfelves. Neither would the French King be well contented to fee the King of Scots made stronger by the Addition of England, left he should then profecute anew the ancient Title of the English in France, or affift the Guifes his Kinfmen, who now aim at the Kingdom of France. As for the Spaniard, he will, without Question, serve his own Ambition, considering that he boasts himfelf to be the first Catholick Prince of the Blood-Royal of England, and of the House of Lancaster, tho' falsly. In which Respect certain Jesuites and others went about, even in the Queen of Scots Life-time, to advance him to the Crown of England by Election, as the meetest Man to restore the Romish Authority in England, preferring him before his Mother and himself. Yea, they began also to persuade the World that she intended to bequeath the Kingdom of England by her last Will and Testament.

to adhere to the Protestant Religion. What these things tend to, and what Assiftance may be hoped for from the Spaniard, let the King consider. And withal, if he revolt from the Religion he has been bred up in, with how great Ignominy he shall plunge his own Soul into eternal Perdition, and all Britain into Ruin and Destruction. Besides, he must confider with himfelf, if he purpose Revenge, whether the Estates of England, who gave the Sentence against his Mother, would not quite exclude him also by a new Sentence from his Title of Succession: whose Love he may eafily purchase by yielding to Necessity, and bridling the Paffions of his Mind, (feeing that which is done cannot be undone) and may in due time peaceably enjoy the most flourishing Kingdom of England; and in the mean time may live in Security, and be thought by all indifferent Men, to have fufficiently discharged his Honour, confidering that while time was he omitted no Duty of a most pious Son toward his Mother. And let him really perfuade himself this, that the Queen of England will most lovingly and kindly esteem of him as her Son, and bear a motherly Affection towards him. These things she caus'd to be inculcated into the King of Soils Ears: and to put him out of doubt that his Mother was put to death without her Privity and Intention, the determind to fend him the Sentence against Dawifun, tellify'd Vol, II. Xyy 2 by

to the Spaniard, in case her Son should continue by the Subscriptions of all the Commissioners, yea and by the great Seal of England; and ano-Ann.30. ther Instrument likewise (the more to pacify him) under the Hands of the Judges of England, affirming, That the faid Sentence against his Mother would not in the least hurt or prejudice his Title to the Succession.

Drake Sent to di-

With these and such like Reasons, while she gently footh'd the King, she fent Drake (to prevent the War which she faw threaten'd her from Spanard, the Spaniard) with four of her capital Ships and fome others to the Coast of Spain, to surprize and destroy his Shipping in the Havens, and intercept his Provision. Drake, entring into the Port of Cades, chafed fix Gallies (which made head against him) under the Forts; and sunk, perform'd took or fired about an hundred Veffels wherein was great store of Munition and Victual, and amongst them a great Gallion of the Marquis of Sancta Cruce, and another of Raguse laden with Merchandize. From thence returning to the facred Promontory, called Cabo Saint Vincent, he crea rromontory, called Cabo Saint Vincent, he affaulted three Forts, and took 'em by Composition; and firing the Fishermens Boats and Nets all along the Coast, came to Castais at the Mouth of the River Taya, where he challenged the Marquis Smêla Cruce to fight, who not once so much as moved against him, but suffered him freely to fivel the Coast and the their Schmitzfreely to spoil the Coast, and take their Shipping without Interruption or Molestation. From thence setting sail towards the Isles of Azores, he lighted by chance upon a very great Merchant Ship, call'd a Carack, richly laden, and named the Saint Philip, returning from the East-Indies, and eafily mafter'd it. Which Accident the Seamen on both fides, in regard of the Name of Philip, interpreted to prefage fome Difafter to Philip of Spain. Sure it is that from this short Expedition great Advantages redounded to the English. For the Spaniards, having sustained so great a loss of Provision and Munition for War, were constrained to give over their design for invading of England this Year; and the English ever after of England this Year; and the English ever after that time more courageously adventured upon those huge Castle-like ships, which before they were afraid of; also they so fully understood by the Merchants Papers the rich value of the Indian Merchandizes, and the manner of trading in that Eastern World, that they afterwards set up a Eastlandia gainful Trade and Trassick thither, establishing Company. a Company of East-India Merchants.

Cavendiff At the fame time, in another Part of the fails round World, Thomas Cavendiff of Suffolk, (who two the World Years before fet fail from England with three Ships) paffing the Straits of Magellan, fired many petty Towns of the Spaniards upon the Coasts of petty Towns of the Spaniards upon the Coasts of Chili, Feru and New Spain, took and pillaged nineteen Merchant Ships, and amongst them a very rich Ship of the King's near Callifornia, and returning home this Year by the Philippine, the Moluccaes, the Cape of Good Hope, and Saint Helena, with a rich Booty and great Glory, as being the second after Magellan who failed round about the World. The Particulars of this Voyage if any Man defire, let him repair to the English Voyages exactly described in three Volumes by Richard Hackluit.

Stanles ond Tork Traitors.

As Drake and Cavendish at this time purchased themfelves great Fame and Commendations; fo two other Englishmen, William Stanley and Rowland Tork, procured themselves the difgraceful and infamous Note of Traitors. This Tork was a Londoner, a Man of a loofe and diffolute Behaviour, and desperately Audacious, samous in his time amongit the common Bullies and Swaggerers, as being the first that, to the great admiration of many at his Boldness, first brought into England that bold and dangerous way of Fencing with the Rapier in Duelling; whereas the English till that time used to fight with long Swords and Bucklers, 1587. firsking with the edge, and thought it no part of Anna, or a Man either to push or strike beneath the Girdle. This York, having received I know not what Injury at Leicester's hands, fled, and ferved a while under the Spaniard in the Netberlands; but at length was reconcil'd, and made Governor of a Fort near Zutphen. But scorning at his Heart to put up the former Difgrace, he foon contriv'd to be reveng'd; for being bribed with Money, he not only betrayed the Place to the Enemy, but also drew Stanley, who had ferved with fingular Fidelity and Valour in the Irifh War, to be Partner with him in his Treachery, affirming with feveral Oaths and Protestations, that by the Con-fessions of the Conspirators he was charged to be guilty of Babington's Plot, and was forthwith to be fent into England to be hang'd; and perfuaded him to betray Deventer, a strong and wealthy City to the Spaniards, contrary to his Oath taken to Leicester and the States. But confidering at last the notoriousness of his Offence, he satisfied himfelf in his Confcience against the imputation of Treason, in that he had restor'd the Place to the true Lord and Owner, which had been kept from him by Rebels; and, being a rank Papitt, he foon after fent for Priests to instruct his Rene toon after tent for Pretits to instruct his Re-giment, confishing of Thirtreen hundred English and Irish, in the Popish Religion, giving our that this should be a Seminary Regiment of Soldiers, to defend the Romish Religion by their Swords, as the Seminary Priests did by their Writings. And indeed, for this purpose Allen, who was not long after made Cardinal, not only dispatched Priests to him with all exwedition, but for forth a Book to him with all expedition, but fet forth a Book alfo, wherein, according to Pius V.'s Bull against Queen Elizabeth, he commended the Treafon, and excited others to the like Perfidiousness, as if they were neither bound to ferve nor obey an excommunicate Queen. But mark with what Succefs.

The Spaniards for York and Stanley together by Their the Ears. Took they poison'd, and rished his reward. Goods. His Body was three Years after digged up by the States, and hanged upon a Gibbet, where it rotted, Stanley and his Regiment were removed out of Deventer, and posted from place to place apposed to Purpose and States. to place, exposed to Dangers, and for far neg-lected, that fome of emperish d milerably for lack of Food, and some ran away one after another. Stanley himself, in hope of Reward for his Service, went into Spain, and offer'd his farther Service for invading of Ireland; but he was neither receiv'd with that Honour he expected, nor was any Credit given unto him; for the Spaniards (they fay) have this Proverb, A Traiter may have fome Honour done him, but never any Credit gi-ven him. And now he found too late that he had in the first place betray'd himself.

These Traitors procur'd Leicester ill-will among the Consederate Netherlanders, because the Traitors were still very intimate with him; and also to the whole English Nation, whom therefore those who were more free and lavish of their Tongues reproached and feandalized, till it was forbidden by Proclamation. But the States in a long Letter to the Queen, accus'd Leicester of ill Thestates governing the Commonwealth in matters of Mo- accuse ney, War and Trade; and to his Restriction and Leicester. easie Credulousness they imputed all Damages receiv'd by such kind of Traitors. The Queen received by finch kind of Traitors. The Queen for examining and compounding of the Matter, and to found their Inclinations touching a Peace to examin with the Spaniard, Cent Thomas Sackvil Lord Buck- and com-burft, (lately made one of the Privy-Council in pound Leicefter's absence) Norris and Bartholomew Clerk, Matters.

who faithfully managed thefe Matters.

whereas Buckburft's officious Diligence feemed to I 1587- tend to the intrapping of Leicester, Leicester's Dif-Ann. 30- pleasure against him and settl'd Favour with the Queen prevailed fo far, that Buckburft at his return was confin'd to his House forseveral Months. Sluys being afterward befieged by the Prince

Leicester to relieve

The States of Parma, Leicester was fent for out of England by the States to relieve it. This Town being furioufly batter'd with 17000 great Shot, and a large Breach made, was defended a while by Sir Roger Williams, Sir Francis Vere, and Captain Nicolas Bafkerville, with a Garison of Walloons and English, with great Commendations for their Valour; but at length they were forced to furrender it. when Leicester, who was drawn near to succour them, being too weak for the Enemy, was fain Slays loft, to retire. And fure it is the States would not allow him a fufficient Army, who referv'd to themselves in reality that great Power which they had conferr'd upon him in Name and Words only. And he himfelf difdain'd to be subject to private Men of meaner Quality under the notion of States, who pretended to carry the fame Authority over him their Governor, which Charles V. held over his Governors of the Netherlands. Hereupon brake forth first Grudges, then open Enmities, on both fides; and far greater, after he once begun to mention a Peace with the Spaniard: For they could not endure to hear of the name of Peace, as a thing contrary and pernicious to their Deligns. But when he perceiv'd his Authority daily to be flighted and contemned among them, he betook himfelf to more fubtle and crafty Counfels, and attempted to bring Leiden and other Cities under his power. But being with the loss of some Men frustrated of his Leicester Hope, and having caused great Discontent, he was called home again into England by the Queen, resign'd his Government, and left the free Adhome. ministration of the Provinces to the States, being derided by those that envied him, and the Title of His Excellency, which of all Englishmen he was the first that ever used, exploded and hissed off of HisEx- the Stage.

The Title cellency. He diftri-dals a-call'd

At his departure he privately distributed amongst some whom he had drawn to his Faction butes Me- certain Medals or Tokens made in Gold, on the one fide whereof was his own Picture; and on mongithis the other fide a Flock of Sheep, fome Sheep straying, and a Dog ready to go away looking behind him. Near the Dog was, Invitus desero, that is, Unwillingly I forfake; and near the Sheep, the Unibankful. And no doubt but he had it in his Head to usure the Government. But these People have by their Policy and Wisdom not only retained their ancient Freedom, both against the Power of the Spaniards, who have the knack also to fight with Gold and other Arts, and the wily Subtilties of the French and English, and the crafty fox-like Fetches of the Prince of Orange; but also have incredibly increased the same, by means of the favourable Inclination of their Neighbours towards them: And (which is more strange) whereas other Nations are impoverish'd by War, they are the only Men that thrive and are enrich'd thereby. Grave Maurice of Nassau, Son to the Prince of Orange by Anne of Saxony, Daughter to Maurice that heroical Elector, being chosen in twenty Years of Age, was by the States made Governor in Leicester's room, over the United and Maurice of NasTau his room.

Confederate Provinces; and Perceptine Lord Willoughby was made General of the English Forces in the Low-Countries by the Queen. Both which the Leicefrian Faction put to much Trouble. For the Leicester's Garitons of Gertruydenberg, Nacrden, Worcom, Huef-Faction den, and especially Medemblike, being addicted to the English, as if they had sworn Allegiance to railes Se-

the Queen, raifed Tumults and Seditions. And Sir William Ruffel, Governor of Fluffring, having drawn to his Party those of Armuyden and Gampvere, was suspected by the States, who were very full of Jealousie and Mistruit, as if he had a fulpetted design to reduce the Isle of Walcheren under the power of the English. And this Suspicion was increated by the coming of the Admiral of England; who the labour'd to make up the matter, yet they, mildoubting themselves, bewray'd their Suspicion and Jealousie, both publickly, by coining Money with two Earthen Pots fwimming in the Sea, (according to the old Fable) and wittily inscribing, Si collidimur, frangimur, that is, If we knock togesher, we are broken in pieces; and also privately, by Letters to the Queen. Who being very careful of them, and not neglecting herfelf as foreseeing the Dangers by means of the Spanish Q Elica Fleet now threatning her, commanded the Lord quetacl.
Willoughby to reduce the fedicious People under their Obedience to the States: Which he, together with Grave Maurice, happily effected.

Leicester being return'd, and smelling that there was an Accufation framed against bim by Buckburst and others for ill managing of Affairs in Holland, and that he was to be fummoned before the Council, cast himself down privately at the Queen's Feer, and with Tears craved her Protection; befeeching her, That whom she had sent forth with Honour at his sirst departure, she would not now receive with Disgrace at his return; and whom she had raifed up from the Ground, she would not now bring alive to his Grave. And with such statering Speeches he fo mollified el e Queen's offended Mind, that her noble Dispersive abated, and the received him into Grace and Favour. Infomuch as when he was expected the next Day to come to his Answer, he took his Place in the Council, and did not kneel at the upper end of the Table, as the manner is; and when the Secretary began to read the Heads of his Acculation, he interrupted him, complaining that he was injuriously dealt withal in his absence, for that his publick Commission was rettrain'd by private Instructions; and fo appealing to the Queen, he avoided the whole weight of the Accufation, not without the fecret Difpleature and Indignation of his Adverfaries.

This Year, in the Month of January, departed The death Into lear, in the Month of Jamery, departed James and this Life Henry Nevil Baron of abergavenny, Great of the Grandfon to Edward Nevil, who in the Reign of Laber-Henry VI obtain'd his Title in right of his Wife, the only Daughter and Heir of Richard Beauchamp, or De bello campo, Earl of Worcester, and Baron of Abergavenny. By which Title, when the only Daughter of this Henry, the Wife of Sir Thomas Pane Kt. claim'd the Title of Baronels of Abergavenny, there grew a remarkable Suit for the Title betwixt her and the next Heir-Fale, to whom the Caftle of Abergavenny was bequeathed by Will and Testament, and the same Testament confirm by Act of Parliament.

There died also at this time, and all in the of the Month of April, four other Persons of honoura- Dutchess ble Note amongst us; viz. Ann Stanhope Dut- of Somerchefs of Somerfet, being ninety Years of Age, jet. formerly Wife of Edward Seimour, Duke of Somerset, and Protector of England; who by her womanish contending with Katharine Pirr Queen-Dowager of King Henry VIII. for Precedence of Worth and Dignicy, was the cause of great Bustles in the Family of the Seimours, while the was perfuaded by Dudley Earl of Warwick, who plotted the Ruin of this noble and potent House) that she, being the Protector's Wife, ought not to bear up the Train of the Queen-Dowager, who was married to the Protector's Brother, or to give her Place: Sir Ralph Sadleir,

Chancellor

Chancellor of the Dutchy of Lancafter, a Man 1587. famous for fo many and great Employments for dim. 20. the State, and the last Knight Banneret of Eng-Lad, to which Dignity he was raised at Musselbo-Satier.

Bromley. Lind, under fixty Years of Age, a famous LawAnd the E. yer: And the 6th Day after, Edward Earl of Rusof Rusland, land, whom the Queen had design to be his Successor, being the third Earl of the House of Manours, a profound Lawyer, and a Man accomplish'd with all polite Learning, leaving behind him one only Daughter, Elizabeth, Wife to William Cecil Grandson to the Lord-Treasurer Burgh-

Chancel-

the fifth

beand.

Sir Christopher Hatton, a Man in great Favour madeLord with the Queen, of a Courtier was made Lord-Chancellor; which the great Lawyers of Eng-Land took very great Distaste at. For, ever since Churchmen were deny'd this Preferment, they had with fingular Commendations for their Equity and Wildom born this highest Place of gowned Dignity, which was bestowed in old time for the men part upon Churchmen and Noblemen. But Hatton was advanced to it by the cunning Court-Aits of some, that by his absence from Court, and the trabletome discharge of so great a Place, which to y thought him not to be able to undergo, his Favour with the Queen might flag and grow leis. Les executed he the Place with the and Jullice

Sir John Perot being this Year called home out out of Ireland, deliver'd up his Charge, leaving By framia all things in a peaceable Condition, to Sir Wil-he fifth ham Fitz-Williams, having first brought in fuch as Deputy of were any way fulpected, to deliver Hostages for their Fidelity, and that our of hand, left, if they took Deliberation, they might feem to fludy a Revolt: The most Suspicious of all he providentrally apprehended and committed to Custody, and put the rest in mind of their Allegiance towards their Prince in these doubtful Times; who, because of his Love towards the Irish Nation, readily and willingly hearken'd unto him therein.

Till this time (that I may digrefs a little) the Englishmen had very easie Wars in Ireland, 800 Foot and 300 Horfe were held an invincible Army. Rindslyb with 600 Englift early difconfitted O-Neal with 4000 bift. Collier, in the Year 1571, with one lingle Company defeated a Thoufund Hebridians in Comanght. Three hundred Horfe Hebridians in Connaught. Three hundred Horse overthrew the Butlers with a great multitude of Rebels. And (to omit other like Inflances) two Companies of Foot won in one Day above twenty Caltles from the Irish. But after they were by Peror's command exercifed daily at home, taught to use their Weapons, and discharge their Guns at a Mark, that fo they might be the more ready for Service against the Hebridians, and had afterwards been bred up in the Netherland-War, and learned the ways of Fortifications; they then groupl'd the English (as we shall after see) with a more difficult War.

The One and Thir tests Year of ber Reign.

The Ad-noable

4-2-466

Now we are come to the Year of Christ One thousand five hundred eighty and eight, Videly an Aftronomer of Koningshorg, above an Lundred Years before foretold would be a Year of Menders; and the Germon Chronologers prefa-The Lamours or Wats, which before were but flight and heall, Legan now to grow greater and greater dairy. And now the Reports were no long a uncertain, but the univertal belief of all Men carried it for certain truth, that a most invincible A mada was rigged and prepared in 1588. Spain against England, and that the fumousest dnn.31.

Captains and expertest Leaders and Soldiers were fent for out of Italy, Sieily, yea and out of America, and feveral English Fugitives, had of late called back into Spain.

the Spaniard to his former delign for the Conquest of England, which had been interrupted by the space of ten Years before by the Portugal Wars; earnestly exhorting him, 'That seeing God had' blessed him with such exceeding great Blessings ' and Benefits, Portugal with the East-Indics and many rich Islands being united of late to his Dominions, he in like manner would perform fomewhat which might be pleafing and acceptable to God the giver of fo great good things, and befeeming the Grandeur and Majetty of the Catholick King. But nothing could there be more acceptable to God, or more befeeming For what him, than to propagate and enlarge the Church Reasons. of God. That the Church of God could not be more gloriously nor more meritoriously propagated, than by the Conquest of England, and replanting the Catholick Roman Religion, and abolishing Herefy there. This War (they fay) would be most just, not only because it was necessary, but also because it was for the Maintenance of Christ's Religion; in regard that the Queen of England, being excommunicate, perfifted contumacious against the Church of Rome, supported his Rebels in the Netberlands, annoyed the Spaniards by continual Depredations, furprized and facked his Towns in Spain and America, and had very lately put the Queen of Seots to death, violating thereby the Majcity of all Kings. And no lefs profitable would this War be than it was just. For fo should he add unto his Empire those flourishing Kingdoms, extinguish the Rebellion in the Low-Countries, which was kept alive as it were by the Breath it had from England, fecure his Voyages to and from both Indies, and lessen his yearly Expences for Convoying his Indian Fleets forward and backward. And for a ready Proof hereof, they fuggefted, That the English Navy was neither for Number nor Bigness of Vetfels, nor for Strength, comparable to that of Spain, especially the Portugal Fleet being now added to it : That England had no Forts nor Defences; that it was unprovided of Commanders, Soldiers, Cavalry and Munition, bare of Wealth and Friends; that there were many in all Parts of the Realm addicted to the Romish Religion, who would prefently join their Forces with his.

Briefly, that so great was the Strength of the Spaniard both by Sea and Land, and so matchless the Valour of the Spaniards, that no Man durst oppose him; so that they did confidently affure themselves of his Victory. Moreover, that now an Opportunity was as it were offered him by God himfelf, whilft he had no ground to fear any thing either from the Turk, having lately concluded a Truce with him: or from the French, who were now embroil'd in a Civil War. They made him believe alfo, That England was eatier to be conquer'd than the Netherlands; in respect it was a shorter and convenienter cut from Spain to England, namely by a free and open Sea; but to the Netherlands, a longer and more difficult, by a Sea for a great part of it narrow and pent, and lying over-against England. Also, That the Low-

Countries were as it were a continued Bulwark, fortified every-where with fo many Cities and Caftles; but England with none at all: So that it was an catic matter for them to pierce pre-

For the Pope, fome religious Perfons in Spain, By whom tion.

1588. ' well as they had done of late into Portugal. And Ann. 31. lastly, out of that military Axiome, That it is not good leaving an Enemy at our Back; That the ' English therefore, being inveterate Énemies to Spaniards, must necessarily be first conquer'd, upon whose Affistance the Netherlanders relying, had fo long a time fultain'd the burden of the War, and without whom they could not lon-ger fubfilt. So as England being once conquered, the Low-Countries must of necessity be sub-

Confultathe manvafion.

These things being thus disposed, and the bution about finess resolv'd on, they enter into serious Consultation about the best way and manner of invading ner of In. England. Don Alvares Baffano, Marquis of Sancta Cruce, to whom was committed the principal Charge and Conduct of the Armada, was of opinion, that first of all some Port-Town in Holland or Zeland fhould unawares be furprized by the Prince of Parma's Land-Forces and some Spanish Ships fent beforehand, where the Spanish Fleet might have fafe Harbour and a Place of Retreat, and from whence it might conveniently attempt the Invasion; considering that the Fleet could not ride fafely in the unquiet British-Sea, where the Winds often changed, and wherein the Tides were especially to be observed. With him agreed in opinion the Prince of Parma, who urged this Expedition tooth and nail. Others difliked this Project, as being a thing Difficult, full of Danger, requiring long Time, much Labour, great Expence, and the Success thereof like to be un-certain; adding, That it could neither be done fecretly nor at unawares, but would easily be prevented by the English. These Men were of prevented by the English. These Men were of opinion, that England might easier be won with the fame Charge; and that the Victory would be certain and fure, if a well-provided Army from Spain and the Low-Countries were landed by a powerful Navy at the Themes-Mouth, and London, the chief City, furprized by a fudden Affault. This feemed to them very easie to be effeeted, and therefore all concurr'd in this Opinion, that it was forthwith to be put in execution. Of these notwithstanding some thought it meet that War should be first proclaim'd by an Herald, and that to good and wise Purpose, as they thought; both to remove Suspicion and Jealoufy out of the Neighbour-Princes Minds, and also to force the Queen to call in forcin Forces to her Alfishance; hoping that they (according to the usual Infolency or Mercenaries) would mutiny and fpoil the Country, and that she thereby weund procure the ill-will of her Subjects, and all things would run into Confusion in England. But this was not hearken'd to by those who were puffed up and eager with Confidence of their own Strength; for they held it sufficient to recommend the Caufe, the Armada and Army, to the Pope, and to the Prayers of the Catholicks to God and the Saints; and fet forth a Book in print for a Terror, wherein the whole Preparation was particularly fet down; which verily was fo vait throughout all Spain, Italy and Sicily, that the Spaniards themselves were amazed at it, and named it The Invincible Armada

The Invincible Armada.

Preparation in the Latte Countries.

The Prince of Parma also in the Netherlands, by the King of Spain's command, built Ships, and many flat-bottom'd Boats, each of them big enough to carry thirty Horses, with Bridges fitted to em: Mariners he hired from the Eastern Parts of Germany, prepared Files shapen'd at the nether end, armed with Iron, and hooked on the fides, and provided twenty thousand Barrels, and an infinite number of Faggots; and in the Sea-Towns of Flanders he had an Army in readi-

fently into the very Bowels of the Land, as | nefs of 103 Companies of Foot, and 1210 Horfe, amongst which were -or English Engitives, who 1500. of all others were least esteemed. Neither was Ann 31 Stanley, who had the Command of them, nor Westmortand, nor others who offered their Service odious. and Countel, once heard; but for their Unnaturalness to their Country they were debarr'd from all Accefs, and as most inauspicious Per-sons worthin and with Detestation rejected. Pope Sixtus V. alfo, that he might not feen to be wanting to the Caufe, fending Cardinal Allen, Helpfron the Pope, an Englishman, into the Law-Countries, renewed the Bulls declaratory of Pius V. and Gregory XIII. excommunicated the Queen, dethroned her, abfolved her Subjects from all Allegiance, and publish'd his Crois'ido in print, as it were against Turks and Infidels, wherein, out of the Treasury of the Church, ne granted plenary Indulgences to all that gave their Help and Affiliance. Whereupon the Marquis of Burgoew, of the House of Aufria, the Duke of Peffrana, zimadaus of Sa-voy, Vefpafian Gonzaga, John de Medicis, and ma-ny Noblemen from all raits, lifted themfetves voluntarily for this Enterprize and Expedi-

> Queen Elizabeth on the other fide, that the Preparatimight not be taken unprovided, prepared with cosin all Diligence imaginative as flrong a Fleet as the England could, and all things necetify for War. And for Design herfelf (who was of a quick Judgment in diffuser cerning Mens Natures and Diffusion is, and ever then most happy when the made har own free Choice, and trutted not to the Recember defined by the country of dations of others) alligned moth excellent liden to every particular Place and Charge. The com- By Sea. mand of the whole Fleet she gave to Charles Lord Howard of Effingham, Lord-Admiral of England; of whose fortunate Conduct she had a very great Perfuasion, and whom she knew, by the sweet-ness of his Behaviour and bravery of his Conduct, to be skilful in Sea-matters, wary and provident, valiant and courageous, industrious and active, and of great Authority and Esteem among? the Seamen of her Navy. Him she fant early to the Western Parts of England, when Drake, whom she appointed Vice-Admiral, joi. d him. The Lord H.nry Seimour, fecond Son to the Duke of Somerfet, the commanded to lie upon the Coaft of the Low-Countries with 40 Ships, English and Netherlandille, and to take care that the Prince of Parma put not out to Sea with his Forces. fome there were who earnestly persuaded her to expect the Enemy's coming, and to welcom him with a Land-Battel, according as had ocen refolved in the Reign of Henry VIII. when the

For Land-Service there were disposed along By tands the Southern-Courts 20000 Men. Bendes which, two Armies were raifed of choice well-diffuncin'd and experienc'd Men; the one under the Command of the Earl of Leicefter, confiding of 1000 Horse and 22000 Foot, which incamped at T.l-bury, not far from the Thanes Mouth; if read Enemy was fully refolved to fet first upon Loules) the other under the Leading of the Lord Hundden, confifting of 34000 Foot and 2000 Horie, to guard the Queen's Person.

Arthur Lord Grey, Sir Francis Knolles, Sir John Confult Norris, Sir Richard Lingham, and Sir Roger Wil- how belt liams Knights, and excellent Soldiers, were made to oppose choice of to confult about the best way of ma-naging the War at Land. These Men thought good, that the most convenient Landing-places for the Enemy, as well out of Spain as out of the Low-Countries, should be well manned and fortified, namely, Milford-Haven, Falmouth, Plymouth, Portland, the Ifle of Wight, Portfinouth, that open at home.

Peace in

Coast of Kent which we call the Downs, the Thames 1588. Mouth, Harwich, Tarmouth, Hull, &c. and that Ann. 31. the Train'd-Bands all along the maritime Counties should meet in Arms upon a Signal given to defend the said Parts, and do their best to prevent the Enemy's Landing. And if the Enemy did land, to lay all the Country waste round a bout, and to spoil all things that might be of any use to them, that so they might find no Food but what they brought with them on their Shoulders. And to buffe the Enemy night and day with continual Alarms, fo as to give them no Rest: but not to put it to the Hazard of a Battle, till more Commanders with their Companies were come up to them. Of which Commanders they nominated one in every Shire to have the chief Command and Conduct. I think it needless to relate particularly what inland Shires they affign'd to aid this and that Coast, what Numbers, what Arms, and what manner of Fight they ... ced upon. In this troublefom Seafon, fome beat it many Andahout the Papifls times into the Queen's Head, that the Spaniards abroad were not fo much to be fear'd, as the Papills at home; for the Spaniards would not attempt any Hostility against England, but upon Considence of Help from them; and that therefore, for better Security, the Heads of that Party were, upon some Pretence or other, to be taken off; alledging the Example of King Henry VIII. when the Emperor and the French King, by the Infligation of the Pope, were ready to invade England; for as foon as he had put to death the Marquess of Exetor, the Lord Montacute, Edward Nevil, and others, whom he fulpected to favour their Enterprize, their Expedition presently was dash'd. But the Queen, disliking this as cruel Counsel, thought it sufficient to commit fome of the Papilts, and those not of the chief, to Cuftody, at Wisbeach in the Fens. having her Eyes and Mind every way, fhe by frequent Letters excited and quicken'd the Parliament, who were not affect the while. Sir William Fitz-Williams, Lord-Deputy of Lecland, flee directed what he should do. The King of Scots the put in mind by her Friends in Scotland, and by Meffengers, to be very wary of the Papifts and K of Scars the Spanish Faction. But he, not ignorant how Abacitys great a Tempett and Destruction hung over his gainst the head, was of his own accord forward and careful, and, according to his continual good Affection to the same Dation and the format of the same Dation and the format has a few and the same Dation and the format has a few and the format of the same Dation and the format has a few and the format of the format of the format of the few and the format of the format of the few and the few and &ion to the true Religion and the Queen, had already refused to give Audience to the Bishop of Dumblane, (who was fent from the Pope) and had procured a Confederacy to be enter'd into by the Protestants of Scotland, for relifting the Spaniards: and he himself marching in Person with an Army into Annandale, forced Maxwell's Camp, who, contrary to his Faith given, was return'd out of Spain into Scotland, and favour'd the Spaniard's Defigns, took him and threw him into Prifon, declared the Spaniards Enemies, and made Preparation against them with great Chearfulness and Alacrity.

Amidst these great Preparations for War by Treaty of both Parties, Projects for Peace are not quite laid afide. Two years before, when the Prince of Parma had confider'd with himself how difficult tne mean a matter it would be to bring the Low-Country-War to an Iffue, as long as it was cherish'd with daily supplies from the Queen, had dealt feri-oully by Letters, with the Help of Sir James a Confice, one of the Privy-Council, a Man very defirous of Peace, Andrew van Loe, a Netherlanand others, that there might be a Treaty of Peace, he being impower'd thereto by the king of Spain. The Queen fearing left this were done policickly underhand to break off the Amity betwixt her and the Confederate Provinces, and to allure them cunningly to the Spaniard, de- 1588. ferr'd the matter a while. But now, to divert Ann.31. the War which threaten'd on both fides, fhe refolv'd to treat of Peace, but with the Sword in her Hand: neither indeed was the Prince of Parma against it.

In the Month of February therefore, Commiffioners were fent into Flanders, viz. Henry Earl of Derby, William Brook Lord Cobbam, Sir Fames & Croftes, Comptroller of the Queen's Houshold, Valentine Dale and John Rogers, Doctors of Law: who being received in the Prince's Name with all Courtely and Civility, fent Dale prefently to him, to understand his Mind about the Place of Meeting, and to fee his Commission from the King of Spain. He appointed the Place near O. hend, not in Ofend, ittelf, which was now held by the English against the King: and as for his Commission, he promis'd it should be shew'd 'em when they met. But he wish'd they would ha-ften the matter, left any thing should happen in the mean time which might hinder the Treaty But Richardot faid plainly and exprefof Peace. ly, that he knew not what might be attempted in the mean time against England. Not long after, Rogers was fent to the Prince by the Queen's express Command, to understand for certain, whether there were any Defign for invading of England, as he and Richardot seemd of late to give Hints of. He affirm'd, that he never had the least Thought of invading England, since he defired the Negotiation might be halfned; and was fomewhat angry with Richardot, who deny'd that any fuch Words had fallen from him.

On the 12th day of April, there met with the English Commissioners in Tents near Oftend, Count Aremberg, Champigny, Richardot, Maes a Doctor, and Garnier, fent as Commissioners from the Prince of Parma; who voluntarily gave the English Commissioners the Precedency and upper Hand both in going and sitting. They affirm-Hand both in going and fitting. They affirm-ing that the Prince had fufficient Power and Commission to treat of a Peace, the English pro- English pounded, that a Truce might first be concluded Proposals damageable and prejudicial to the Spaniard, (who hiards Answers of maintaining a nower had been at the Charge of maintaining a powerful Army for now full fix Months) in cafe a Peace fhould not be agreed upon. The English infilled, that a Truce was promis'd before they came into the Low-Countries. They on the other fide acknowledg'd that a Truce was promis'd fix Months before, but not accepted; and that it was not in the Queen's Power to make a Truce for the Hollanders and Zealanders, who daily at-tempted Acts of Hostility. The English urged that the Truce might be general, for all the Queen's Dominions and the Kingdom of Scotland. They refused to grant it for any more than four Towns only in the Netherlands, which were in the Queen's Hands; that is to fay, Oftend, Flushing, Bergen-op-Zoom, and Brill; and that only during the Treaty and twenty days after; and upon fuch Terms, as it should be lawful in the mean time for the Queen of England to invade Spain, and for the Spaniard to invade England our of Spain and the Low-Countries.

Whilft the time was spent and squander'd away from day to day, in arguing about the Truce and the Place of Treaty, which at length was appointed to be at Borbourg, Sir James Croftes, out of his fingular Affection to Peace, made a Journey to Bruffel, without acquainting the rest of the Commissioners, and there propounded certain Articles in private; for which he was afterwards, upon Leicester's Accufation, imprison'd; tho' in the Judgment of the rest of the Commis-foners, to the Spamards.

Their

Anfwer.

fioners, the faid Articles were not to be mislik'd: 1588. but Commissioners must not pass the Limits of Ann. 31. their Commission. At last, when the English Commissions could by no means get from them that there should be an absolute Cessation of Arms, nor see the Prince of Parma's Commission to treat of Peace, they propos'd these things follows: lowing.

Other Proposals

'That the ancient Leagues betwixt the Kings of England and the Dukes of Burgundy might be renew'd and confirm'd. That all the Netherc Landers might fully enjoy their Privileges, and ferve God with Liberty of Conscience. That ' ferve God with Liberty of Conscience. the Spaniards and forein Soldiers might be re-' mov'd out of the Netherlands, so as neither the Netherlanders, nor the bordering Countries, might have cause to fear them. Which things if they might be granted, the Queen would condescend to reasonable Conditions concerning those Towns in the Netherlands, which she then had in Possession, (that it might appear that it was not for her own Advantage, but for the necessary Defence as well of the Netherands as of herself, that she had taken up Arms) provided the Money which was due to her from thence might be repay'd.

They answer'd, 'That there would be no

Difficulty in renewing the ancient Leagues, when they fhould once come to a friendly Conference together about the same. That there was no Reafon why forein Princes should take Care of the Netherlanders Privileges, which were most freely and bountifully granted not only to the Provinces and Towns that were reconciled, but even to those also which were reduced by Force of Arms. And for forein Soldiers, they were retain'd upon urgent Necessity, as long as Holland, England, and France were in Arms. As for those four Towns, that had been taken from the King, and the Repayment of the Money which the Queen had expended, the Spaniard might in Reason demand as many thousands of Ducats to be repay'd him by the Queen, as he had disburs'd upon the Low-Country-War, from the time that she sirst fupported the revolting Netberlanders, and took them into her Protection.

Expostulation with Parma 2hout a Book of Allen's.

About this time Dale, by the Queen's Command, went to the Prince of Parma, and mildly expostulated with him about a Book lately set forth by Cardinal Allen an Englishman, wherein he exhorted the Nobility and People of England and Ireland to join with the Spanish Forces under the Conduct of the Prince of Parma, to execute the Sentence of Pope Sixtus Quintus, publish d already by Bull, against the Queen of England, whereby she was declared an Heretick, Illegitimate, and tax'd of Cruelty against Mary Queen of Scots, &c. and her Subjects commanded to aid the Prince of Parma against her. (And indeed there were a great Number of these Bulls and Books printed at Antwerp, to be difpers'd all over England.) The Duke deny'd 'that ever he faw any fuch Book or Bull, neither did he under-take any thing upon the Pope's Account; but his own Prince he must obey. As for the Q. of England, he had so high an Esteem of her for her Royal Vertues, that next to the King his Mafter he honour'd her above all, and defired to do her Service. That he had perfuaded his King to condescend to this Treaty of Peace, which would be more advantageous for the En-'glish than for the Spaniards. For if the Spaniards be overcome, they will foon repair their Loss; but if you (taid he) be once vanquish'd, your Kingdom is quite lost by it. To whom Dale reply'd, Our Queen is provided of Strength sufficient to defend her Kingdom; and you yourfelf in your Wif-dom may judg, that a Kingdom cannot eafily be won e by the Fortune of one Battle, feeing the King of Spain 1588. has not yet been able, after so long a War, to recover Ann. 31. his ancient Inheritance in the Notherlands. Be it so, (said the Duke) these things are in the Hand and Disposal of the Almighty.

The Commissioners continued their Proposals,

Answers and Replies to one another, and still spun as it were the same Thread over again.

The English urging that a Toleration of Religi-Other on might be granted to the Confederate Provin- Demands ces, at least for two Years; it was answord, As of the Enthe Spaniard demanded it not for the English Catho-Spaniards licks, so they boyed the Queen was so prudent as not to Answers and Conscience of the Spaniards define any thing which should be against the Honer, Oath and Conscience of the Spaniard. When they demanded the Money due from the States of Brabant; they answer'd, That it was lent without the King's Knowlege or Leave : but when the Accounts were eaft up, how much the Accounts were eaft up, how much the King had dishurs'd about the War, it would foot be known who had most due to them. With such Answers on the state of the sta Answers as these they dally'd with the English, till the Spanish Fleet was come upon the Coult of England, and the Thundring of the Ordnance was heard from the Sea. And then they receiv'd a fafe Conduct from the Prince of Parma, (who had in the mean time drawn down all his Forces to the Sea-fide) and were honourably conducted by his Commissioners to the Borders' near Calais. Thus came this Treaty to nothing, which at first Treaty was begun by the Queen (as the wifer fort have broke off. thought) to divert the Spanish Fleet; and continu'd by the Spaniard, purpotely to surprize England at unawares and unprovided. So as they feem'd on both fides to fow the Fox's Skin to the

The faid Spanish Fleet, being the best furnish'd Spanish with Men, Munition, and all manner of Provi- Armada, tion, of any that ever the Ocean faw, and call'd by the arrogant Name of Invincible, confifted of 130 Ships: In which were 19290 Soldiers, 8350 Mariners, 2080 Galley-Slaves, and 2630 great Ordnance.

Don Alphonso Perez de Gusman, Duke of Medina Its Com-Sidonia, had the principal Command thereof; manders. (for Don Antonio Columna, Duke of Paliano, and the Marquess of Sancta Cruce, to whom this Command was formerly defign'd, died both of them while the Fleet was rigging) and under him John Martinez de Recalde, an experienced Sea-

On the 29th of May, the Fleet fet fail out of It fets hit the River Tayo, and while it bent its Course towards the Groyne in Gallicia, it was totally featter'd and dispers'd by an hideous Tempest, so Isdispers, that with much ado it met again together fome few days after, at the Grome and other Harbours thereabouts: three Gallies being convey'd into France, by the Policy of David Gwinn an English Slave, and the Treachery of the Turkish Rowers. It was reported to be so weather-beaten and distress'd, that the Queen was verily perfuaded that this Fleet was not to be look'd for this year; and Secretary Walfingham wrote to the Lord-Admiral to fend back four of the biggest Ships, as if the War were now at an end. The Lord-Admiral did not easily believe it, and therefore humbly defired that nothing might be raffily credited in fo weighty a matter, and that he might retain the Ships with him, tho' it were at his own Cost and Charges. And taking the Benefit of a favourable Wind, he fet fail toward Spain, to furprize the Enemy's weather-beaten Ships in their Harbours. When he was not far from the Coast of Spain, the Wind came about into the South, and he thereupon (who was commanded to defend the Coast of England, fearing left with the same Wind they might arrive in England un-1588. discover d) return d to Plymouth.

With the same Wind the Duke of Medina fet Ann. 31. fail with his whole Fleet from the Groyne the 12. Parso day of July, according to the Account of the Sea again day of July, according to the Account of the Sea again derice Telle before into the Low-Countries, to address Telle before into the Low-Countries, to advertife the Prince of Parma of the Coming of the Fieet, and to tell him what was best to be done. For he had Orders to join with the Prince of Parma's Forces and Shipping, and to conduct 'em under the Protection of his Fleet into England, and withal to fend the Land-Forces afnoar at the Thomes-Mouth. And now will I give a brief Account, out of the most credible Relations, as well of the Spaniards as of our own Countrymen, what was done every day in this Expedition, that the Truth may the more plainly appear.

On the 16th day there was a great Calm, and a thick Fog till Noon: then the North-East Wind blew very strongly, and prefently after the West-Wind, till Midnight, and then the East-South-East-Wind; infomuch as the Spanish Fleet being difpers d thereby, was hardly gather'd together again till it came within Sight of England English on the 19th day. Upon which day the Lord-Fleet puts Admiral of England, being certainly informed by Florning, the Captain of a Pinnace, that the Spanish Fleet was enter'd into the British Sea, (which the Seamen ordinarily call the Channel) and was feen near the Point call'd the Lizard, tow'd out the English Vicet into the main Sea, not victiout great Difficulty, the Wind blowing stiffly into the Haven, but indeed with fingular Dihence and Industry, and with admirable Alacricy of the Seamen, whom he encouraged at > mon Soldiers in the doing of it in perfon.

> The next day the English discover'd the Spanish > Fleet with losty Turrets like Caffles, in Front > like a Half-Moon, the Wings thereof spreading out about the Length of Seven Miles, failing very flowly, tho' with full Sails, the Winds being as it were tired with carrying them, and the O-cean groaning under the Weight of 'em; which they willingly fuffer'd to pass by, that they might chafe them in the Rear with a fore-right Wind.

their Halfer-Work, affifting them and the com-

On the 21th of July, the Lord-Admiral of England, fending a Pinnace before, call'd the Defi-if. Fight. ence, denounced War by discharging her Ordnance; and preferrly his own Ship, call'd the Ark-royal, thunder'd thick and furiously upon the Admiral (as he thought) of the Spaniards, (but it was Alphonso de Leva's Ship.) Soon after, Drake, Hawkins, and Forbiffer play'd flourly with their Ordnance upon the hindmost Squadron, which was commanded by Recalde, who labour'd all he could to ftay his Men from flying to the main floct, till fuch time as his own Ship being much batter'd with Shot, and now grown unferviceable, he was fain himfelf, with much ado, to remeat thicher alfo. At which time the Duke of Aledans gather'd together his Fleet, which was this way and that way; and, hoifting more Sail, held on his Courfe with what Speed he could. Neither could he do any other, feeing he could. Neither could he do any other, feeing both the Wind favour'd the English, and their Failty of Ships would turn about with incredible Celerity to charge, wind, and tack about again. And now had they maintain'd a fmart Fight for the fpace of two Hours, when the Lord-Admiral thought not good to continue it any longer, because 40 of his Ships were not yet come in, being scarce got out of the Haven. the Night following, the S. Katharine, a Spa-ph Ship. having received much Damage in the kight, was brought into the midth of the Fleet, in order to be repair'd; and a vaft Ship of Bif- c cay, belonging to Oquenda, and having the King's 1588. Treafurer on board, was defignedly fet on Fire, Ann. 31. by fome Gun-powder laid for that purpose by a Dutch Gunner, who had receiv'd fome ill Treat-ment: But the Flame was happily extinguish'd by fome Veffels that came in feafonably to its Relief; among which a Galleon (the Mafter of her Don Pedro de Valdez) fell foul of another DonPedro Ship, and fprung her Foremast; so that being de Valder left behind, by Reason the Night was so dark, taken.

and the Sea ran fo high, that no Succour could come to her, fie was taken by Drake, who fent Valdez to Dartmouth, and diffributed the Cash found in her, as a Booty to his Men. Drake was order'd to carry a Lantern that night, but fail'd to do it, having at the fame time in chafe Five German Merchant-Men, which he took to be Enemies. This occasion'd almost all the English Fleet to lie by, because they could not discover the Light; nor did he or the rest of the Fleet get Sight of the Lord-Admiral, till the next Evening following; for he, with two Ships more, viz. the Bear and the Mary-Rose, flood after the Spanish Flect, all the Night before. The Duke from this whole day in diffosing his Fleet into the best Order, and commanded Alphonso de Leva to bring the first and the last Squadron together; then he appointed every particular Ship his proper Station, according to the Platform agreed on in Spain, and made it Death for any one to abandon his Poft. Glieb an Enfign was dispatcht to the Prince of Parma, to acquaint him with the State of the Navy; and Oguenda's Ship was turn'd loofe to Sea, her Cargo being first taken out and disposed of into other Vessels: The veand carry'd into Weymouth-Harbour. On the 23th of this Month, the Spaniards, very fame day she was taken by the English, with Oquenda's about 50 Sailors, wretchedly bruis'd and burnt, hiptaken, ry early in the Morning, took the Advantage of a Northerly Wind, and bore down upon the English, who foon tack'd about and stood Westward. Both Fleets strove hard for some time to get to the Windward, and then prepared for the Engagement. It was managed with Confusion enough, and various Success. The English on the one hand refcu'd fome Ships of London, that were furrounded by the Spaniards; and the Spaniards on the other as bravely brought off Recalde, when he was in equal Danger. The great Guns on both fides rattl'd like fo many Peals of Thunder; but the Spiniards Shor flew for the moth part over the Heads of the English, without do-ing Execution; Cock being the only Englishman that died bravely in the midt of his Enemies in a Ship of his own. The Reason of this was, that the English Ships being far less than the Enemy's, made the Attack with more Quickness and Agility; and when they had given a Broadfide, they prefently sheer'd off to a convenient Distance, and levell'd their Shot so directly at the bigger and more unwieldy Ships of the Spa-niards, as feldom to miss their Aim; though the Lord-Admiral did not think it fafe or proper to L. Admigrapple with them, as fome advifed, with much talks Care, more Heat than Diferetion; because that the Enemy's Fleet carry'd a considerable Army within their Sides, whereas ours had no fuch Advantage. Besides, their Ships far exceeded ours in Number and Bulk, and were much ftronger and higher-built; infomuch that their Men having the Opportunity to ply us from fuch lofty Hatches, must inevitably deftroy those that were obliged, as it were, to fight beneath them : And he easily forefaw likewife, that the Damage and Difgrace of a total Defeat would weigh much heavier than the Advantage of a Victory, should he happen to

ompass it; fince, if he were vanquish'd, 'twould | 1588. much endanger the Safety of the whole King-Ann. ; I. dom; but if he got the better, he could obtain no more than the naked Credit of putting a Fleet to Diforder, and barfling an Enemy.

On the 24th day of the Month, there was a Ceflation on both fides, and the Lord-Admiral fent fome of his fmaller Veffels to the nearest of the English Harbours, to fetch a Supply of Powder and Ammunition; then he divided the Fleet into four Squadrons, the first of which he commanded himself, the second he committed to Drake, the third to Hawkins, and the fourth to Forbijher. He likewife fingled out of the main Fleet fome fmaller Veffels to begin the Attack on all fides at once, in the very dead of the Night; but a Calm happening spoil'd his Design.

On the 25th, being S. James's Day, the Saint

Different

Accounts

Anne, a Galleon of Portugal, not being able to keep up with the Fleet, was taken by some En-3d. Fight. glish Ships, and Leva with Don Diego Telles Enriques attempted to refeue her with 3 Galeaffes; but were fo warmly received by the Lord-Admiral himself, and the Lord Thomas Howard in the Golden-Lion, who by reason of the Calm, had their Ships tow'd along with Boats, that the Galleon was got off, with much ado, and not without fome Lofs. However from that time the Galleon affes durst not venture any new Engagement. The Spaniards reported, 'That the English did at the same time miserably batter the Spanish Ad-' miral who lay in the Rear, with their great Guns, and that they came fo near her, as to ' flay many of her Men and shoot her Main-Mast by the board; but Mexia and Recalde came up seasonably enough to beat off the English; That after this the Spanish Admiral, with the Affistance of Recalde and others, fell upon the English Admiral, who made his Escape, by the Advantage of the Wind's chopping about. That the Sp. niards from that time gave over the Chase, and keeping on their Course, dispatcht a Messenger to Parma, to desire him to join the King's Armada with his own Squadron as soon ' as possible, and to send withat some great Shot for the use of the main Fleet. This was altogether a Secret to the English, who give this Account of the matter : 'That they tore down the * Lantern from one of the Spanish Ships, robb'd another of her Bowsprit, and did a considerable Damage to a third: That the Nonpareil and

" the Mary-Roje held a fmall Fight with the Spaniards, and that fome other Ships retriev'd the Triumph, when the was in great Danger. Thus have we very different Accounts of the fame Action, from those who were present on the spot, and made their Reports, every Man, according

The next day, the Lord-Admiral knighted the to his own Observation.

Knights created at Sea.

Lord Thomas Howard, the Lord Sheffield, Roger Townsend, John Hawkins, and Martin Forbisher, in Consideration of their good Service; and a Refolution was taken not to attack the Enemy from that time forward, till they came to the British, or the Streights of Calais; where the Lord Henry Segmour and Sir Will. Winter expected their Thus the Spanish Fleet sail'd forward Arrival. with a fair and foft Gale at South-West and by South; and the English chased them close at the Heels; but so far was this Invincible Armada from alarming the Sea-Coasts with any frightful Ap-Noblemen prehenfions, that the English Gentry of the younger fort enter'd themfelves Volunteers, and taking leave of their Parents, Wives, and Children, did, with incredible Chearfulnefs, hire Ships at their own Charge; and, in pure Love to their Country, join'd the Grand Fleet in vaft Numbers; among't whom were the Earls of Oxford, Northumberland, and Cumberland, Thomas and Robert Cecil, Henry Brooke, Charles Blunt, Walter Raleigh, William Hatton, Robert Cary, Ambrole Willoughby, Thomas Gerard, Arthur Gorges, and Several Ann. 3 others of good Quality.

On the 2-th of this Month, the Spanish Fleet came to an anchor before Calais; their Pilots Stanfo having acquainted them, that if they ventured Flet are thousand any farther, there was some Danger that the choir. force of the Current might drive 'em away into the Northern-Channel. Not far from them came likewise the English Admiral to an anchor, and lay within shot of their Ships. The English Fleer consisted by this time of 140 Sail; all of 'em Ships of force, and very tite and nimble Sailors, Ships of force, and very the and minors and easily manageable upon a Tack. But However, the main brunt of the Engagement lay not upon more than 15 or 16 of 'em. The Spainards, as they had frequently done before, prefit the Duke of Parma by one Messenger after another, Prince to fend away forty Fly-boats, without which Panas, they could not well engage the English, by rea-fon of the unweildy Bulk of the Spanish Vesticls, and the Lightness and Activity of the English. They intreated him likewise, with great Earnest-ness, to pur aboard his whole Army, which the Spanish Fleet would be fure to guard, according to the Resolutions already taken, till it was landed in England. But it feems he was not ready, and fo could not answer their Summons. His flat-bottom'd Boats, which were fram'd for the Channel, were all leaky, his Provisions not ready, and his Sailors, who had been hitherto kept together against their wills, had made a shift to give him the flip, and get away. Besides, several Men of War belonging to Holland and Zealand, block'd up the very Month of the Harabours of Dunkirk and Newport, from whence alone he could put to Sea; and so well were they straightful the more could be to sea; and so well were they straightful the season. furnish'd with great Guns and small Arms, that he could not possibly get from Shoar, without running a very palpable Hazard of his Life. How-ever, being a stout and experienc'd Soldier, he left no Method unattempted, out of an eager Defire of affilting towards the Conquest of England.

baffl'd all his Attempts, and dash'd the forward Hopes of the Spaniard all at once: For, by her Fireships Majefty's Orders, the Lord-Admiral got ready lent a eight of his worft Ships the very Day after the more the Somiards came to an Anchor and having he Speniards. Spaniards came to an Anchor; and having beflow'd upon them a good plenty of Pitch, Tar and Rolin, and lin'd 'em well with Brimflone and other combustible Matter, they sent 'em before the Wind, in the dead time of the Night, under the Conduct of Young and Prowfe, into the midst of the Spanish Fleet: The approach of which was no sooner discover d by the Spaniards, and the prodigious Blaze which the Fire made all the Sea over, but they suspecting that these Fire-Ships were big with other Engines of Slaughbesides the destructive Element that shew'd itself without, began to raise a most hideous Clamour, Cut your Cables, and get up your Anchors! and in a panick Fright put to Sea with all the Confusion and Precipitancy imaginable. One of the Fleet (a large Galleafs) having broken her Rudder, floated up and down before the Wind; and the next Day making for Calais in a very pi-teous Plight, the at last struck upon the Sands,

But Queen Elizabeth, by a wife Precaution and after a smart, long and doubtful Engageand after a inart, long and doubtful Engagement, was taken by Amia Prefon, Thomas Gerard, A Gallalá and Haney. The Captain of her, D.n. Hugo de taken. Moscada, being first slain, and the Soldiers and Mineads Rowers, either drownd or put to the fivord; slain, the English pillagid a great quantity of Gold which she had on board, and the Ship and Guns fell to the Governor of Calais.

Vol. II. Zzzz

The

and Gentlemen ioin the Flect.

The Spaniards reported, that the Duke, upon the approach of the Fire-Ships, order'd the whole

Ann.31. Fleet to weigh Anchor and fland to Sea, but that when the Danger was over, every Ship

flould return to her Station. This is what he did himself, and he likewise discharg'd a great Gun as a Signal to the reft to do as he did: port however was heard but by very few, by reason their Fears had dispers'd 'em at that rate, that fome of 'em ventur'd out to the Main Ocean, and others fail'd up the Shallows of Flan-

ath En-

In the mean time Drake and Fenner play'd briskgagement. ly with their Canon upon the Spanish Fleet, as it was Rendezvousing over-against Graveling. They were not long after join'd by Fenton, Southwell, Beefton, Cross, Riman, and, in a little while, by the Lord-Admiral himself, the Lord Thomas Howard, and the Lord Sheffield. The Duke Leva, Oquenda, Recalde, and the rest, got clear of the Shallows, with much ado, and ftood the Brunt, as well as they could, but had the better part of their Ships miferably torn, and in feveral places shot through. The Galleon St. Matthew, under the Command of Don Diego Piementelli, (as she came to the relief of Don Francisco de Toledo in the St. Philip, which had receiv'd great Damage from Seimour and Winter's shot, and after being driven almost as far as Oftend, had been as roughly treat-St. Philip s. Philip ed by the Zelanders, and was at length made a mad sr. Matthew Prize by fome Ships of Flushing) was at last taken taken. herself, and the whole Spanish Fleet closely Ply'd and in great Diffress for the space of an whole

On the last Day of the Month, the Wind blew hard at North-West early in the Morning, and the Spanish Fleet attempting to get back again to the Streights of Calais, was driven toward Zeland. The English then gave over the Chace, because, in the Spaniards opinion, they perceiv'd 'em making hafte enough to their own Destru-ction. For the Wind lying at the W. N. W. Point, could not choose but force 'em on the Shoals and Sands on the Coast of Zeland. the Wind happening to come about in a little time to S. W. and by W. they went before the Wind, and having got off the Shoals, in the E-vening a Council of War was held: The general Resolution was to return into Spain by the Northern Channel; for they wanted many necessary Provisions, especially great Shot; their Ships were wretchedly torn and batter'd, and they had no Hopes at all that the Prince of Parma would come and join them. Being now therefore clear The Span of Danger, in the Main Ocean, they fteer'd mardilly Northward, and the English Fleet renew'd the the coming up of the English; fo that 'twas gene-

North-

ward.

Tilbiny.

rally thought their Fleet would tack about and return home. About this time Queen Elizabeth was pleas'd to Q. Eliz. visits her take a view of her Army and Camp at Tilbury; and as fhe rode through the Troops drawn up on Camp at both fides of her, fometimes with a martial Pace and Posture, at other times more like her Sex and herself. 'Tis scarce to be thought what a Spirit of Bravery she infus'd into the Officers and Soldiers by her Prefence and Direction.

Chace after them. Now and then the Spanish

Fleet flacken'd their fail, and feem'd to tarry for

On the very Day the last Engagement was between the two Fleets, the Prince of Parma, having paid his Addresses our Lady of Hall, came to Dunkirk, tho' fomething of the lateft; for which reason the Spaniards receiv'd him in a very reproachful manner, as if out of fome by-regards to Queen Elizabeth, he had on purpote flipt fo fair an Occasion of doing Wonders for the Service of his Country. The Duke, to appeafe this Storm, punish'd those who had the 1588. charge of Victualling his Fleet; tho in the mean time he could not but fecretly laugh at the faw- Ann.31. cy and infolent Brags of the Spaniards, whom he had heard talking at this vain rate, 'That where ever they turn'd their Sails, a most certain Victory waited upon their Courfe; and that the English would not have courage enough to look em in the Face. And 'tis certain, that Don Bernardine de Mendoza was fo ridiculous as to print a lying Poem in France, which proclaim'd the Triumph before the Victory was obtain'd. However, to block Parma up Parma, so that he might not get out of Dun-blockt up kirk, the Lord-Admiral order'd the Lord Henry at Dun-Seimour and the Dutch to keep a very first Eye kirk upon the Coast of Flanders, whilst he himself purfued the Spaniards on the other fide of Edinborough-Frith, anciently called Bodotria. For fome Sufpicions there were, that they design'd to betake themselves to the King of Scots, who was already provok'd to an high rate, for his Mother's Death. Certain it is, that Ashby, the Queen's Ambassa-Offers dor in Scotland, the better to keep him in Temper, made made him, this Month, very confiderable Offers, the K of wiz. That he should be created a Duke of Eng-Sociand. land, with a yearly Salary of 5000 Pounds to maintain the Title: That he should have a Guard maintain'd at the Queen's charge, besides some other Advantages. Whether this was done out of private Humour or by publick Authority, I can neither tell, nor will stand to examine in this place: However the blame lay at his door, and the Propositions were never made good.

But the Spaniards having now laid aside all the Thoughts and Hopes of returning to attempt the English; and pecciving their main Safety lay in their Flight, made no stay or stop at any Port whatever. And thus this mighty Armada, which had been three whole Years fitting out, and at a vast Expence, met in one Month's time with se-veral Attacks, and was at last routed, with a vast Slaughter on their fide, and but a very few of the English missing, and not one Ship lost, except that small Vessel of Cock's, it happening that the Enemy's Shot flew too high to do the English Ships any great damage. When therefore the Ships any great damage. When therefore the Spanish Fleet had taken a large compass round Britain, by the Coasts of Scotland, the Oreades and fuffered as many Wrecks and Blows, and all the Inconveniences of War and Weather, it made a fhift to get home again, laden with nothing but Shame and Difhonour. This occasion'd the coining of feveral kinds of Money and Medals, fome Medals in memory of the Victory, with the Device of a coind in Fleet flying under full fail, and this Inscription, memory Venit, vidit, fugit; i. e. It came, it saw, and fled. Victory.

Others were stamped in Honour of the Queen, with Fire-Ships, and a Fleet all in Hurry and Confusion, with this Motto, Dax Famina Fasti; i. e. A Woman managed the Design. Certain it is, that several of their Ships perish d in their Flight, being cast away on the Coasts of Scotland and helmid, and that above 700 Soldiers were cast on shoar in Scotland, who by the Prince of Parma's Mediation with the King of Scots, and with Q. Eliz. Permission, were sent over about a Year after into the Low-Countries. As for those who had the ill Fortune to be drove upon the Irish

Shoar, they met with the most barbarous Treatment; for some of 'em were butcher'd by the wild Irish, and the rest put to the Sword by the Lord-Deputy; who fearing that they might join with the Irilh Malecontents, and observing that Bingham, Governor of Comnaught, treated them with more Gentleness than he had several times order'd him to do, upon their furrender, he forthwith dispatch'd Fowle, Deputy-Martial, to 1588. execute his Orders; who first dislodg'd 'em from Am. 31. the places where they lay conceald, and then executed about 200 of them. But this Rigor the Queen condemn'd and complain'd of as too ex-However the rest being terrify'd by this way of Proceeding, tho they were fick and half famish'd, yet chose to trust themselves to their returns

Spaniards blame the Prince of Paima.

Thanks to God.

flatter'd Barks, and the mercy of the Seas, and fo were many of 'em a Sacrifice to the Waves. The Spainersls, who got fafe home, laid their Difparagement on the Prince of Parma's Negligence, and in fome meafure on the too nice Obsequiousness express'd on their side in making a fcruple of receding in the least from their In-ftructions: For their Orders ran, not to make any Attempt before the Prince of Parma's Fleet had join'd theirs, and there was not an inch of diferetionary Liberty lodg'd in their Hands; had things been manag'd at another rate, they made their Boasts that the English Fleet could never escape being seiz'd in their Harbours. And in truth it became a Dispute among Persons skill'd in the Discipline of War, whether Orders were not to be sacredly observed, whatever the Issue prov'd, lest otherwise Authority should lose its Force, and its proper Fruit too, Obedience? 'Twas likewise controverted, whether upon urgent Ocasions, Men might not qualify or en-large their Commissions, or suit em to the prefent Exigency, according as fresh Accidents arose, lest otherwise good Occasions were let slip, and matters of importance quite dash'd through an unseasonable Neglect. The King of Spain, for his part, bore the Defeat with a Patience that became him; and being lentible there was a Pro-vidence in it, he order a general Thankfgiving all over his Kingdom, to God and the Saints, that it was no greater; and shew'd moreover a K.of Spain most extraordinary Tenderness in the Relief of the diffress'd Soldiers and Seamen.

Queen Elizabeth did likewife appoint a publick Form of Prayer and Thankfgiving to be used So did Q. Eliz. throughout the whole Kingdom, and she was pleas'd to pass herself in a triumphant manner, and with a most splendid Retinue of Noblemen and others, through the Streets of London, which on this Occasion were hung with blue Cloth; (the City-Companies being drawn up on both fides the Way with their Banners) fhe was carried in a Chariot with a pair of Horfes (Coaches being at that time but little in use) to St. Paul's Church, (where the Standards and Colours taken from the Enemy were hung up) and there she re-turn'd Thanks to God, and heard a Sermon proper to the Occasion.

The Lord-Admiral had a Pension fettl'd on him for his great piece of Service, and he and his Officers had the Honour of being contider'd by the Queen as Persons born for the Preservation of their Country. She was likewife pleas'd to use the freedom of saluting the other Com-She commanders by their Names, whenever they happen'd to come in her fight, in confideration of their high and particular Merits; (a Reward as glorious as they were capable of defiring) and for the poor and difabl'd Scamen, on those she beflow'd handfom Penfions. The Learned both at home and abroad congratulated this happy Victory with transports of real Joy, and express the triumphs of their Hearts in Poems wrote in all Languages upon this Subject.

Publick

This general Satisfaction receiv'd a farther in-Joy aug-mented by crease on Sir Robert Sidney's return out of Scotland, who affured the Queen, that the King of Scots Sir Robert ftood firm to her Interests, and would defend and affert those of the Protestant Religion. This Gentleman was fent over to him, when the Spanish Fleet lay Cruifing on the Coasts of Error tain, on purpose to Compliment him for his Respects towards the Queen, and to return him Am ;1. Thanks on that account, as likewife to acknowledge his generous and cheerful Adhesion to the common Cause; and to give him assurance of the like Assistance on her Majesty's part, should the Spaniards attempt to land in Scotland. He was moreover to remonstrate to him, how eagerly the King of Spain thirsted after the acquisition of all Britain, and what Diligence he had used with his Holiness to get him excommunicated, and by that means to deprive him at once of the pre-fent possession of the Crown of Scotland, and of his Title likewise to that of England in Reversion. Nor was he to conceal the menacing Exprellions thunder'd out against him by Mendoza and the Pope's Nuncio, and that he could not therefore arm himself with too much Precaution against the Arts and Machinations of the Papilts in Seotland. At this I cannot but mention by the by a pleasant Remark of the young King, viz. A pleasant That he expected no other Favour at the Spaniards Saying hands, than what Polyphemus promifed Ulyffes, of the That when he haddevoured all the reft, he would referve K of Score bim for the last morfel.

in you to the morest.

Nor did the death of Leicester (however fadly The E, of the Queen refented it) put any ftop to the cur-Leicester rent of the publick Joy, who died on the 4th of death. September, on his way to Killingworth, of a continued Fever. He was the fifth Son of John Duke of Northumberland, and one of the Privy-Chamber to King Edward. Queen Mary restor'd him and his Brothers and Sisters to their Blood and Privilege, and made him Mafter of the English Ordnance at the Siege of St. Quintins: And in Queen Elizabeth's Reign, (who lov'd him at fuch a rate, as if a fecret Conjunction of their Planets had form'd as mysterious a Sympathy between their Souls) he was made Mafter of the Horse, His Titles honourd with the Orders of St. George and St. Mi- and Places chael, chosen one of the Privy-Council, made Lord-Steward of her Majesty's Houshold, Chancellor of the University of Oxford, Ranger of the Forests on this side the River Trent, Lieutenant and Captain-General of the English Forces in the Low-Countries, and this Year advanced to be General of the English Forces against the Spaniards : Nor did he in the last declension and period of his Life, drop the Hopes of new Honours and Advancements, by the accession of the high Character of acting as the Queen's Lieutenant in the Government of England and Ireland. Nay, this he had so far securid, as that the Letters-Patents were already drawn; but Burghley and Hatton put a flop to the matter, and the Queen faw in time the great hazard of intrulling fo large a share of her own Prerogative into the Hands of a single Perfon. He was reputed a most complete Courtier; His Char was a Person of exact Neatness, a generous Par racter. tron of Arts and Arms, and one that knew how to nick a Juncture and manage a Turn to his best advantage. Besides, he was of a Temper pleafant and popular, very shy and referved to his suspected Enemies, had in his youthful Days been very Complaitant to the Ladies, and when he grew almost past it, express'd a strange Fondness for Marriage. But as he preser'd those two great Subjects of Envy, Power and Greatness, to folid Vertue; so did he of course draw upon himfelf the Malice and Reproach of inferior Persons, and could not avoid the Infults of libelling Pens. and infamous and false Restections, even when he seem'd to be Fortune's and his Queen's chief Favourite. In a word, the Crowd carefs'd him in publick with flattering Commendations, but in private they used quite another Language.

mends her Officers.

And whereas he was a Debtor to the Crown, his 1588. Effects were dispos'd of at a publick Sale: For Am. 11 however gende the Queen might shew herself Ha Goods what was owing to her Treasury.

Parma befieges

The Prince of Parma, tho he had loft his aim of making a Descent into England, yet that he Begenof- might purchase some degree of Honour with that powerful Army which had been rais'd against England, and that he might at the fame time open a Paffage into Zeland, and fecure Brabon from hostile Incurions, he laid fiege to Bergen upon the River Zome, a Town of Brabant, which Nature had fortified by an happy Situation, and Art by strong Works round about, and which had a Garifon in it consisting of English for the most part. But this Project was likewise defeated by the timely Vigilance of the Lord Willoughby, and the flout Refiftance of the Garifon: For tho during the heat of the Siege, there arose as vain a Diffention between them, some adhering to Sir William Drury, who was made Governor of the Town by the General, the Lord Willoughby; and fome fiding with Morgan, who had receiv'd the fame Commission from the Queen's Hands. Neverthelets they buried their Differences in the common Safety, and by feveral brave Repulfes, frequent Sallies, and other well-apply'd Arts of War, made a shift to give the Enemy such a warm Entertainment, that Four hundred of them being kill'd outright, taken Prisoners, or drowned, (the fame Pertons having been trapann'd by Grimftene and Redhead, who pretended themselves Revolters by specious O ths and fair Promises, into a Buiwark of the Town) the Prince of Parma quitted all his Hopes of Blocking up the Harbour or Winning the Town; and so the Winter approaching, and Provisions growing scarce, he Beaks up e'en broke up the Siege, after it had been carried the Siege on for two Months. And that true Courage might not want its due Reward or Diffinction, the L. Willoughby conferr'd the Honour of Knighthood on Sir Francis Vere, whose Fame commenc'd from this Siege; as also on Sir Thomas Knolles, Sir Nicolas Parker, and Sir John Pooly, in regard to their good Conduct and Biavery. The Infor-

ency of

Now was England haraisd, not only with forein Wars, but diffurb'd with Schismaticks, those Differers, domestick Enemies; (for War is always the Nurse and Midwise of Church-Consusions) and certainly there never was a time, when the Difcipline of the Church was run down with fuch a fawcy Pertness, and the Authority of her Officers fo rudely and basely insulted. For the Q. refusing (as indeed the was confiftent, and always the fame) to liften to any Changes in Religion, or encourage those new Modellers, whose Defign she believed to be no other, than to wound her Royal Prerogative through the Sides of the Hierarchy, fome who had a profound Veneration for the Geneva-Platform of Church-Difcipline, imagin'd there was no furer or nearer way for erecting it in England, than by loudly railing against the English Forms and Rites, and rendering the Names of Bishop and Prelate as odious as they could, to the Common-People. Sourilous Their first Estay therefore was, to put out scru-Pamphlet rilous Pamphlets against Church-Order and Pre-agament lacy; the Titles whereof were Martin-mar-Pre-Church of late, Minerals, Diotrephes, A Demonstration of Disci-tingland. pline, &c. These Libels were stuffed with such an Heap of feandalous and virulent Abufes, that the Authors of them appear'd rather to have learnt their Language from Billing/gate, than to foeak the Senfe of any Chrislian Community: Yes it forms Powy and Udall, the chief Scribblers, were of the Ministry; and another of 'em, Job Torockmorton, was a Man of Learning, and Mather of a very facctious and fatyrical Vein. Their grand Patrons and Abettors were Sir Ri. Knightly and Wigfon, Persons in other respects sober and 1588. pious, but drawn into the Party by some In-Ann. 31. flruments, that were to make a private Market by them. However the Knights had a pretty round Tine taid on them in the Star-Chamber; but the Archbishop of Canterbury was so generously good-natur'd as to procure a Remission of it at her Majesty's Hands.

Whilst these Engines were employ'd in railing Presbyte. at the Church of England Liturgy, and bringing tians be-the Geneva-Model into its Place, fome of their thew Affociates took the Boldness to practife it in pri-themselves vate Affemblies, in spite of the Laws and Conflitution; nay they went fo far as to hold Synodical Conventions, and draw Presbytery into a Scheme. On this account were Tho. Carrwright, Edmund Snape, Andrew King, Budlow, Payne, and fome others of the same Religious Brotherhood, call'd before their Superiours; but some of the Party, glowing with a fond Zeal for their Teachers, endeavour'd to refcue them from the hands of Authority. With what a ffrange Petulancy and fullen Haughtiness these Congregational Teachers managed themselves, maugre all the Tenderness and prudent Forbearance of the Archbishop, I leave to the Observation of Eccle-stastical Writers, whose proper Province it is. By this time, that black Storm which threaten'd from the Spanish Quarter, was happily blown over; but some Remains of it seem'd to have been diffipated thorow Ireland and Scotland; tho' the most violent Tempest of all blew from England, and fell afterwards upon Spain, as shall be shewn anon. For Ireland, the Troubles and Commotions which fprang up there, did in some meafure owe their Rife to the Mif-conduct of the Lord-Deputy Sir William Firz-Williams, amongst other Causes, who made too ftrict Searches, and Theberigorous Demand of those Wrecks of Spanish a Rehelli-Goods, which were cast ashoare; and on that on in Ireaccount went fo far as to commit some Persons land.

to Prifon, as Favourers of the Spaniards. Daniel Rogers, who was fome time ago fent in- An Emto Denmark, to condole the Death of Frederick II. bally inro and to fettle the same good Correspondence with Demnark his Son and Succeffor, began his Negotiation with the Regents of the Realm, with these Proposals: 'That no Dimes might be permitted to affift the Enemy against the Queen of England. That no Arrelts of Ships might be allow'd within the Streight of Denmark (call'd the Sound) for private Mens Faults. That the Ifland Fishing-Trade, which was, by the ancient Treary, to be renew'd by a fresh Grant, every ' feven Years, might not be stopp'd or prevented on any new Defign or Pretence whatever. That the English should pay no Customs within the Sound, except on their Return from the Baltick, and that in the usual Coin of Denmark. That the Owners of Ships should not suffer any Detriment, through the ill Dealings of the feveral Masters and Pilots. That all Bales of Cloth might be free from any Impost upon 'em, and that the Custom call'd Last-gelt might be ' remitted to the English. But in respect of the King's Minority, the Dispatch of this Business was deferr'd till another time; for the Danes were at prefent out of humour with the English, for failing into Ruffir, not through the Sound, but by the Coatts of Norway, Finnack, Laplant, Scrickfunia, and Rimmin. But Born Theodorides who fuecceded Theodore Joannides in the Empire of Ruffia, who died about the beginning of this Year, did all he could to countenance and en- Ruffiant courage the English; and omitted no good Offi- kind to ces, which might ingratiate and recommend him the Engto the Queen of England.

LLIZ-

ELIZABETH,

Anno 1589.

Queen of ENGLAND.

BOOK IV.

The Two and Thirtieth Year of her Reign.

H E Spiniards, after the unhappy and differaceful Difappointment of their Expedition against England, to patch up the Repuration they had loft, and to keep the English from attempting a Descent on any Part of the Spanish Dominions, they took up a new Resolution of invading England by the way of Scotland: And in the Conduct of this Secret, the principal Agent employ'd by them was Robert Bruce a Prieft, with Chreicton and Hayes, both Jesuits, who found no difficulty in bringing over to their sides the Earls of Huntly, Arrol, and Crawford, Men bigorted to the Romish Persuasion, as likewise Bothwel, the Son of John Prior of Coldingham, the natural Son of Fames the fifth King of Seats, a Man of unfleady Principles, with a great many more. The fubitance of the Plot was, That they should in the first place seize on the Person of the King and then bring in a forein Power to Re-effablish the Romish Religion, and invade England in pre-tended Revenge of the Queen of Sost Death The Arguments used for summoning the Mob-together, where of this fort: 'That the King was kept in Cuftody against his own Consent by the Lord-Chancellor Mainland, and the English Party: That the English, who had lately took off the King's Mother's Head in a very unwarrantable way, were at that very time levying Forces to destroy the Scotch Nobility: That on the other fide, they took up Arms as the King's own Defire and Solicitation, to fee him free from his Jaylor, the Chancellor, and their Country from that Ruin that threaten'd it. The King being one Day gone an Hunting, received the very fame Day Meffages, one upon the heels of another, That Bathwel on the one hand appeared with feveral Troops raised from the Borders; and Hearly on the other, with a very powerful Army from the North. Hereupon a Proclamation was iffued out, to declare them Traitors; and the King's faithful Subject-were fummon'd in, all that were above 16, and under 60. This for frighted Bothowel, that his Gang forfook him, and himfelf flunk home as well as he could: But Huntly proceeded fo far as to feize Glamis, the Captain of the King's Guard, letween whom and himfelf there was a most invictorate professid Enmity. Queen Elizabeth, who judg'd the English equally concern'd with the Scots, to quash this Attempt of the Spaniards, used all possible Arts with her Friends in Scotland that her Coin or good Sense could supply, to induce the King to put As 1,32, an end to these Disorders. He was very sensible of his Danger, and marched to encounter Huntly; who being arrived as far as the Bridge on the River Dee, with a potent Army, and hearing of the King's approach, fet Glamis at liberty, and retir'd to his own House called Strathbolgy, fituated amongst the rocky Mountains; whither being closely purfued by the King, who endur'd the Patigue of the March, the Want of Provifions, and the Inclemency of the Seafon, beyond Huntl's what night be expected from to green an Age; taken, he first offer'd to surrender himself, provided his Life and Estate might be secure, and not long after yielded on Discretion when he found no Conditions were like to be offer'd him. King, without hearing one Word of Apology, commanded him to Prifon; but foon ofter order'd his Release; and to the great commenda-tion of his Clemency, was pleas'd to pardon both him and his Adherents, upon their humble Sub-

The very same Month these Things were acting in Scotland against the Spanish Paction there, was Philip Howard, Earl of Arundel, (who was, as I have faid, fent to the Tower three Years before on sufficion of being too well inclin'd to Spain') arraign'd in Westminster-Hall, and tried by his Peers, before Henry Earl of Derby, who was created Lord-High-Steward of England on this particular Occasion.

The Perfons fummon'd to attend this Trial, Arunders were these following Peers.

William Creil Lord Burkigh, Lord High-Treafurer of England. William Lord Marquels of Winchefter.

Edward East of Oxford, Lord Great-Chamberlain of England. Henry Earl of Kent.

Honry Earl of Julia. Henry East of Pembroke. Edward Earl of Henfords

Henry Larl of Lincola. The Lord Hundon. The Lord Willoughby of Eresby.

The Lord Marky. The Lord Cook on

The Lord G ...

The Lord Darry of the North;

tions in Scotland.

Commo-

1584. Pm Ann. 32.

1589. Ann. 22.

The Lord Sands. The Lord Wentworth. The Lord Rich. The Lord Willoughby of Parham. The Lord North.
The Lord St. John of Bletnesho.
The Lord Buckhurst. The Lord La-Ware. And The Lord Norris.

Being order'd to hold up his Hand, he did fo, and moreover used this Expression, Behold here a clean Hand, and an honest Heart! his Impeachment were much the same with those Heads of mention'd before, An. 1586. viz. That he held his Charge. a very strict Intimacy and Correspondence with Cardinal Allen, Parlons the Jefuite, and o-ther Confpirators, who attempted the Ruin of their Prince and Country, by thirring up Forei-ners and the Queen's natural Subjects to bring in Popery, to the total Destruction of both: 'That he had engaged by Letters convey'd by Weston, alias Burges, a Priest, to affist the said Cardinal in advancing the Catholick Cause, and to that purpose had defign'd to withdraw privately out of the Kingdom: That he was privy to the Bull of Sixtus Quintus, which dethroned the Queen, and made over her Dominions to the Spaniard: That, when he was a Prisoner in the Tower, he had caus'd Mass to be faid for the happy Success of the Spanish Armada, and had himfelf composed a special Prayer on that occasion. Being demanded to answer, Whether he was Guilty, or Not Guilty? he turn'd himfelf to the Court and Judges, and made these Challenges one after another, Whether such a Number of Articles might havefully be put into one and the same Impeachment? They answer'd in the Affirmative. Then ment: I ney answer a in the Ammattee. Then he demanded, Whether Prefumptive Arguments here any Weight in an Indictment? He was answer'd,

That he might except againft them as far as he pleas'd.
Another Demand was, Whether he could fland accusid of those things charged to be Treason in the 13th of Quene Elizabeth, after the Time limited in the said Att? They then promis'd him, be should not be try'd upon any other Law or Act of High-Treafon, but an ancient one of Edward III. In the last place, he demanded, If that were a fair Indictment, which faild groffy as to Circumflances both of Place and Time?

The Angine was The Act of the A The Answer was, That these things signify'd little, the Matter of Fact were proved. After this, being Not? he answerd, Not Guilty, and submitted himfelf to God and his Peers; but defired them to spare his Memory, which was impair'd by his Imprisonment, and ill Health, and not to overcharge it with too much Variety.

Puckering, the Queen's Serjeant at Law, open'd the first Part of the Charge, viz. That Cardinal Allen having engagd with the Jefuites and others, against his Prince and Country, upon which account he was banish'd the Kingdom; yet he the faid Earl had kept up a Correspondence with him by Letters, and had expresly written to him to advance the Catholick Interest, which by a fair and modest Construction, was a plain inviting of him to invade England. The Earl made Answer, That all he intended by it, was the Promotion of that Faith, by the Accession of new Profelytes. Popham, the Queen's Attorney-General. savery and to prove, by the Confessions of Savage, Throckmorton, and Babington, that this could not possibly be understood of a free Convertion upon the Strength of Argument; but of a publick Invation by Force of Arms. Shuttlearoub, a Serjeant at Law, made it appear out of the Jefuites and Seminary Priefts, on what Defigns they were fent into England: That they 1589-were Traitors he prov'd from the Earl's own Ann. 22. Words; who, upon the Hearing of Valonger's Cause in the Star-Chamber, in relation to a scandalous Libel of his, said publickly, That an hear-ty Papist could not but be as thorow a Traitor. But for all this Men of this very Principle were a-mong the Earl's greatest Intimates. 'Twas urg'd moreover, That he had espous'd the Faith of the Romish Church, and became of Consequence a Subject to the Romish See; but this he flatly deny'd, and demanded that any Evidence might be produc'd to prove him a profess'd Catholick. He acknowledg'd indeed, that he had in fome Inflances made Burges his Confessor; whereupon it was debated, That none were admitted to the Sacraments of the Church of Rome, but such as were reconciled to her Doctrine and Worship ; but he was admitted by Gratley a Priest, and therefore a Papist before, at least in his Heart. This Popham labour'd to prove from his own Letters, and that he intended likewise to withdraw beyond Sea; That he was an absolute Creature of Cardinal Allen, and conform'd entirely to his Measures; for which he was guilty of High-Treason. He then produced Gratley's and Morgan's Letters to the Queen of Scots, and made from thence this Inference, That the Earl ow'd his Change in Religion more to Sourness and Spleen, than to Conscience and Conviction. Then was produced an Emblematical Piece found in the Earl's Cabinet, which had on one fide an Hand shaking a Serpent into the Fire, with this Motto, If God be with us, who shall be against us? And on the other, a Lion Rampant, without Claws, and with this Inscription, Tet a Lion. He moreover added, That the Earl designing to quit the Kingdom, was perfuaded by the Cardinal to alter his purpose, as being a Person likely to do the Church of Rome more Service by his Stay in England, than his Departure thence: That in a Letter to the Queen, the Earl had reflected fe-verely on the Justice of the Laws, in reference to the Sentence of Death denounced against his Grand-father and Father: That the Queen of Scots had recommended him to Babington, as the great Patron of the Catholick Interest: That Al-len had own'd that the aforesaid Bull was procured by the Applications of a Person of Figure in England; which could be no other than the because no one Nobleman besides, was so intimate with Allen as himfelf, and whom therefore Allen must needs know to be ill-affected to his Country, by what he had heard pass before, in the Star-Chamber. Then were read also the Confessions of the Lord William, the Earl's Brother, with those of his Sister the Lady Margaret, and his own Letters when he had Thoughts of leaving the Kingdom. And this gave occasion to magnify the Queen's Clemency afresh, who would not fuffer him (at that very time) to be examin'd on an Article of Treason, but barely on a Point of Contempt. To these Charges the Earl answer'd in the gross, 'That as for the Pi-étture, 'twas a Trifle presented him by his Man: That indeed he had promis'd to affift the Cardinal in the Promotion of the Catholick Faith. but never at the Expense of his Prince and Country: That what he had written in relation to the Sentence of his Grand-father and Father, was extant upon Record, and fo any one might read it: That he was not at all concerned in what the Cardinal or the Queen of Scots might write about him, fince he flood clear as to Fact: That it was impossible to restrain o-ther Mens Pens: That he had indeed some Deprofith, a Sericant at Law, made it appear out or it the Form of the Proclamations put out against figure of acting under the Prince of Parma, in the Form of the Proclamations put out against figure of acting under the Prince of Parma, in the Form of the Prince of Parma, in the Form of the Prince of Parma, in the Form of the Prince of Parma, in the Parma of Parma, in the Parma of Parma, in the Parma of Parma

the Wars abroad, fince the Rigour of the Laws 1589. ' against Catholicks made it not safe for him to Ann. 32. ftay at home: That the Attorney had managed the Letters and Confessions, at the same rate ' that Spiders do Flowers; that is, fuck'd all the Poifon out of them; but he, for his part, was able to extract out of them something more useful, might he be permitted to see 'em. Then were read Allen's Letters to the Cucen of Scots, with those of the Bishop of Ross, about invading England, that very Year he delign d to quit it; and the Bull of Sixtus Quintus, and feveral Remarks made on Allen's Memorial to the English, printed at Antwerp, the Year before. He was likewise charged with having assumed this Title, Philip Duke of Norfolk, which was found among his Papers; and it was Allen's Advice, that he should in some degree mend his Time things were brought against him as Convictions of Treason before his Imprisonment. Eg run, the Solicitor-General, having fumm'd up and repeated the Particulars of the Charge proceeded upon a threefold Distinction a sime, viz. fore the Arrival of the Spanish Fleet; at the inflant of its Coming; and after it hea: And that he had been guilty of Treason since his Confinement: Before the Fleet appear'd he . had been guilty of Treafon, in withing it happy Success; when it was arrived, in making a Form of Prayer stable to his Withes, and causing the Mass of the Holy Gnose to be said, and a Course of Devotions to be used for a Hours together: And then when the Fleet was gone, in lamenting its Defeat, with all the Marks of an extraordinary Sorrow; as if he had fix'd his laft Hope, and beft Confidence, in the Spanish Armada, which was fitted out with a delign to ruin his Prince and Country. These Particulars were all made out against him by Sir Tho. Gerard Knt. Will. Shelley, condemn'd for Trea-Son Ann. 1586, Bennet a Popish Priest, and some other Prisoners. He then mutter'd in a broken and imperfect kind of Tone, That the Prayers he made, and the Masses he perform'd, were in order to deprecate a Massacre he had heard was defign'd against the Catholicks. Gerard's Evidence he roundly deny'd; and as he adjured him to declare nothing but the Truth, and represented before him the dreadful Solemnity of the last Day, he fo terrify'd and scared the Evidence, that he hardly was able to fpeak one Word to the purpose. Bennet's Attestations he endeavour'd to invalidate, as being a Man of a tarnish'd Reputation, and who had contradicted himself in his Confessions. The rest he tax'd as Persons impeach'd, and Prisoners, and Men likewise of a loose and prossigate Character; who were far from deferving Credit, and who might be sufpected to have the Liberty of using his Conversation, with a Defign to enfnare him in the Querks of the Law. Having receiv'd a Check for this, as too indecent and bold a Challenge upon the Evidence for the Queen, at the Solicitor's Motion, an ancient Law of Richard II. was read, whereby it was declared, that the Crown of England was under the Command of none but God alone, and that the Bishop of Rome had no man-ner of Authority over it. It now growing towards Night, and nothing being produced farther against him, the Earl was order d to with-draw: He threw himself wholly upon the Judgment of his Peers, protefting his Obedience to the Queen, and heartily praying they might come to fuch an Isfue, as might be most for the Glory of God, the Safety of the Queen, and the Integrity of their own Honour and Confeience. They then went afide, and held a Debate, which lasted an Hour, and in Points of Law they confulted the Opinion of the Judges and Serjeants. Being return'd to their Seas, the Clerk of the Crown demanded of ordem, Whether the Earl were Guilty or Wor? At which every one of em, pusting his Hand to his Breaft, as the Custom E. of Awas, declar'd upon his Honour and Confeience, that he was Guilty. Then being ask'd it he had cond.m'J. any thing farther to fay, why Sentence of Death should not pass upon him? he only said the same Words which his Father had done before him, in the fame Place, God's Will be done. Sentence being pronounced, he defired Leave to speak with his Wife, and that he might fee his young Son, who was born fince his Confinement; that he might have the Liberty to speak with his Stew-ards, who had the Accounts of his Estate, and that his Debts might be discharged: He likewise humbly defired the Queen would take his young Son into her Favour and Patronage. Then the Lord-Steward brake his Staff, the Badge of his Place; and the Earl was carry'd back to the Tower, the Ax being carry'd before him, with the Edge towards him. There were a great many, that most heartily lamented the untimely Fall of this young Nobleman, (for he was not above 3; Years of Age at the molt) and as many on the other fide were ready to cry up the Queen's Wildom and Caution, who by this E-xample had ftruck a kind of Terror into the more powerful Part of the Remijh Faction. The Queen after all gave him his Life, and was well His Life is er agh fitisfy'd in having leffen'd the ower of spired. . co i derable a Man, and one who was fo great a Bulwark of the Catholick Caufe. When the had thewn this Example of Terrour

at home, to make herfelf equally fear d abroad. and purfue the Victory which Providence had given her over the Spaniards; the Queen conceiving it to be born more fafe and honourable to attack the Enemy, than to fland in Affault from them, suffer da Fleet to put to S. a., upon an Ex. An Expedition against Spain. This Sir John Nova and dition as Sir Francis Drake did generously and frankly undertake, at their own and fome other private Mens Charge, and with very little Expence to the Queen's Purfe, except the fitting out of a few Men of War; for indeed they were fully convinced that the Power of Spain lay racher in common Fancy and Opinion, than in any real Strength they were Matters of. The Agreement On what between them was this, That whatever Prizes they took, should be shared among em by a fair at whose and equal Dividend. But it happen'd that there came not in fo many to this Expedition, 's was expected. The States added fonce Ships, aithothey were at p efent difpiens'd with the English, because Wingheld Governour of Gertruydenburgh, and the English Gerriton of that Place, had be-tray'd the Town to the Spaniard. The Fleet was teckend to count of 12000 Soldiers and 1500 Sailors. Don antonio, the 1 dard, Prior of Crato, with a few Portuguese, join'd em; for he, it seems, laying Claim to the Grown of Spain, by a popular Election, (for by the Laws of that Kingdom Baftards are not excluded) had made the English mighty Promises, hoping, we may suppose, to recover the Kingdom, by the Help of these Forces, the Revolt of the Portugue, from the Spiniard, and the Affiltance of Muley Himet

In April they fail'd from Plimouth, and arrived five days after at the Greyne in Gallicia, (call'd by Grone the Antients Flavia Brig mum) without any Op- attack'd, position whatever. In their Passage towards the lower Town they receiv'd fome Damage by fe-veral Shot, which play'd on them from an huge Vessel and two Gallies in the Harbour; till they were obliged to quit their Station, through the King of Morocco.

Aaaa Vol. II.

warm Salues of fome great Pieces planted on | Penich'a, a Town of Portugal, and became Masters 1589: the Shoar. The day following, they made Ann 32- an Affault on the lower Town in three Places at the fame time, Unton and Been affifting the Attack from the Land, with 200 Men, and Siar Richard Wingfield and Sampson with 500 on the o-They were at first roughly receiv'd by the Enemy, and once or twice beat from the Walls, as they attempted to scale them; but the other Forces made their way into the Town in the mean time, with little or no Loss. The Spaniards prefently threw down their Arms, and got away, by the nearest and best known Avenues. to the upper Town. They that were in the great Ship made a shift to get ashoar, having sirst let her on fire: She burnt two days together, and most of her Guns being too full charged, burft in pieces with a most frightful Noife. Ammunition and Provision lodg d there, for a new Expedition against England, were carry'd on board the English Ships.

Hig! er Town af-faulted in

From thence they march'd to the upper Town, which Sir John Norris observing to be lituated on a Rock, not capable of mining, except in one Place; he order'd a Mine to be dug there, and on the other fide made a Breach in the Walls with his great Cannon, refolving to florm it on both fides at once : But it prov'd fruitlefs, by reason the Lire broke out of the Mine on the Outlide of the Walls. The Pioneers then carry'd on the Mine father under the Walls; and fetting Fire to the Powder, blew up one Part of the Bulwark, which felling fome time before the other Part which falling fome time before the other Part tork, mained feveral of the English with the Fail. The rest, seared by this unexpected Accident, for sook their Commanders; whilst on the other i.de, they who made the Attack at the Breach, wanting a fecure Footing, because the Rubbish gave way under them, were obliged to retire with a confiderable Lofs. About this time, Norra received a most certain Intelligence, that the Conde di Andrada had got Spaniards its Relact.

joins the

fome Forces together at the Bridge of Burges, and that the Conde Altimira was upon his March with fome Recruits; and that they intended to benege the English in the lower Town, or to cut off their Retreat to their Ships : He, supposing it the best way to prevent them, march'd against them with Ten Companies. The Van was commanded by Edward Norris and William Sidney; the main Bedy by Noris limself, with Medkerck a Durel man; and the Rear by Henry Noris, Huntley and Brett. The Spaniords attack d'em on this fide Are beat, the Bridge; but being beaten back by the Courage of the English, they quitted their Lines, and a free and case Passage over the left the English River; who purfu'd them so hotly, that they fled in the utmost Consulton, and were slain 3 Miles together. After this the English burnt and plunder'd the Villages; and in two days returned again to their Ships, without any Diffurbance. As they failed for Fortugal, the Wind happening Enotified to be in their Teeth, Robert Earl of Effect fell in with them. He was a young Gentleman, who partly from a Thirst of Giory, partly out of Hatred to the Spaniards, and Pity to Don Antonio, had quitted the Pleafures of a Court, to try his Fortune at Sea, without the Outen's Leave or Approbation, and had look'd out for the Fleet a long time. He could never hope to gain the Queen's Confent to this Expedition; because she was mighty averse from suffering any Persons of the first Quality, to run so great an Hazard: However, he statter'd himself with the Honour of commanding in chief, by reason several of the Colonels and Captains had been obliged to his Bother for their Preferment. The second day after, the Sea being very rough, they arrived at

